V. 49. to ſmite] To exerciſe any kinde of cruelty on his fellow-ſervants (by virtue of his authority) for whoſe good and welfare he was put into that office, which therefore he ought to have had the more care of, 1 Pet. 4. 10.

with the drunken] If he give lewd example of luxury and intemperance, making him ſcandalous, his miniſtery leſſe effectual, and the very doctrine he preacheth deſpicable, ſo cauſing the name of God to be blaſphemed.

V. 50. when he looketh not for him] Of which (day) he thought not, ſaith the Syriack interpreter : the judgements of God are not ſo much as in the thought of the wicked : they cry, peace, peace, till ſudden deſtruction come upon them, then are they the moſt dejected men of the world. See 1 Samuel 28. 20. and Daniel 5. 1, 2, 6, 7.

V. 51. cut him aſunder] διχοτομήσει αὐτὸν, cut him in two pieces; either by renting his ſoul from his body; or body and ſoul caſt out of Gods bleſſed preſence, divided him from the elect to damnation. See on Luke 12. 46.

CHAP. XXV.

Verſe 1. THen] The evangeliſt proſecutes the concluſion of Chriſts laſt ſermon, concerning his glorious and ſudden appearance to judgement, and our duty in watching, leſt that day finde us unprepared, or unfaithful in our duties : then, in the day of Chriſts coming, mentioned Chap. 24. 51.

the kingdom of heaven] The Chruch in this world, Greg. hom. 12. in Evang. as Matth. 13. 41. or the condition of men in the Church of God.

virgins] The cuſtome then was to make marriage feaſts in the night : the bridegroom uſed to come with a choice company of young men, which were called the children of the bridechamber, chap. 9. 15. certain virgins of the acquaintance or kinred of the bride, uſed to go meet the bridegroom, attending him unto the wedding houſe: to which cuſtom Pſal. 45. 14. alludeth; ſhe ſhall be brought unto the king, in raiment of needle work; the virgins her companions that follow her ſhal be brought unto thee: by virgins here are ſignified pure ſouls, as 2 Cor. 11. 2, 3.

which took their lamps, and went forth] They carryed them forth (as the cuſtome then was) lighted for the ſervice of the bridegroom and his train; in which there was both ſolemnity, and accommodation of light for the company paſſing by the way.

V. 2. Five of them] He ſaith not this to intimate that there were as many wiſe or good men, as wicked which are truly fooliſh : the whole world (unregenerate) lieth in wickedneſſe, 1 John 5. 19. but he ſimply noteth the difference, in an equal condition; in which all Chriſtians alike, profeſſe their hope of ſalvation by Chriſt, and their expectation of him to judge the living and the dead : yet among theſe there is much difference, ſome truely believe, ſome are hypocrites : ſome profeſſe in words onely, but not in heart, having a forme of Godlineſſe, but denying the power thereof : they confeſs they expect a judgement; but live as if they thought in their hearts, there were no God to call them to account. See Pſal. 14. 1. &c. none but the fooliſh can think, and do thus; or hope to impoſe on Gods all-ſeeing juſtice : but they are wiſe, who truely fear God, and endeavour to ſerve him faithfully (Pſal. 111. 10.) though there are but few ſuch.

were wiſe] So ſhewed they themſelves ſuch, in providing timely for their preſent employment.

were fooliſh] Theſe ſhewed themſelves ſuch, in neglecting the main, for which they were called, and came together : ſuch are they, who profeſſing faith in Chriſt, yet prepare not themſelves againſt his coming, For as Auguſtine ſaith, de verb. Domini ſerm. 23. theſe are not qualeſcunque animæ, ſed tales, quæ habent catholicam fidem, & habere videntur bona opera in Eccleſia Dei, not every, or any ſoul, but ſuch as have (or profeſſe) the Catholique faith, and ſeem to have good works in the Church of God. In his 120. epiſtle to Honoratus, he interpreteth this ſomething neerer, of men (alienâ laude lætantibus, & propter ipſam inanem laudem, non propter conſcientiam ſuam; ubi illis teſtis eſt Deus, bona operantibus) rejoycing in others praiſing them, and doing good, not for their conſcience ſake, where God is their witneſſe, but for vain praiſe of men.

V. 3. took their lamps] By which is repreſented, profeſſion of faith and ſanctity.

but no oyl] Beſides that which was burning, and ſpent ere the bridegroom came, verſe 8. that is, they had no good works of faith, (charity and ſanctity) without which faith is dead, and inactive. See Galat 5. 6. James 2. 26. ſo Jerom on this place ſaith, they have no oyl, who ſeem to confeſſe the Lord with like faith : ſed virtutum opera negligunt, but neglect good works.

V. 4. oyl in their veſſels] In their lamps : the meaning is, they prepared to meet Chriſt, with faith, repentance, and charity; which is, (as Jerom ſaith) lumen indeficiens, a light which ſhall never fail, or go out : See 1 Corinth. 13. 8. faith ſhall end in enjoying, but charity ſhall be perfected, not ended in heaven : this oyl then is that which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, 2 Corinth. 1. 12. the teſtimony of their conſciences : this is to carry oyl with them, not to buy of thoſe that ſell, that is of flatterers, Auguſtine ep. 120. who do good, ut laudetur Deus, that God may be praiſed.

V. 5. while the bridegroom tarried] It was not a little time, inter priorem & ſecundum adventum Domini, Jerom, between the firſt and ſecond coming of the Lord Chriſt : Chriſts coming muſt be expected with holy patience, Habak, 2. 3. Mora ſponſi pœnitentiæ tempus eſt. Hilar. can. 27. the bridegrooms tarrying is the time of repentance.

all ſlumbred] Some died (as Jerom interpreteth) others after long attendance, and expectation, began to be poſſeſſed with ſecular cares, diſtracting their thoughts from a preſent watch, and looking for Chriſt; ſo Auguſtine ep. 120. which ſlumber, elect and reprobates are in ſeverall degrees, ſubject to. Good men are at ſome times ſomewhat more negligent than they ſhould be; but they alwayes keep a good conſcience, and an heart prepared, in ſome good meaſure to receive Chriſt, Acts 23. 1. and 24. 16. 2 Corinth 1. 12. Cant. 5. 2 their ſecurity is but of infirmity, and their eſtate was made ſure before; the carnal and worldly have, at beſt, but the lamps of profeſſion, and want the oyl and ſubſtance of religion, that is, the power thereof, 1 Tim. 1. 5. 2 Tim 3. 5.

V. 6. at midnight] Subitò quaſi intempeſtâ nocte, & ſecuris omnibus, ſuddenly, as in the ſtill of the night, Jerom, Euthymius, becauſe he will come ἀνέλπιστος, unexpected, as Theophylact ſpeaketh : or as Hillary can. 27. cunctis ignorantibus, in a time which none knows; Chriſt will come when he is leaſt looked for : as the bridegroom came at midnight, later than the uſuall manner was.

a cry made] This is generally underſtood, by Chryſoſtome, Theophylact, Euthimius, Jerom, Hililary, &c. of the voice of the Arch angel, and the trumpet of God, to awaken all, even thoſe who are in the graves, and depths of the ſeas, of which John 5. 29. 1. Theſ. 4. 16. 1. Cor. 15 52. which is moſt certainly true: but this circumſtance relateth alſo to the cuſtom, and accommodation of the parable: and in the ſubſtance of the matter, we may underſtand this noiſe, to be alſo the voice and importunity of them, who exhort, and admoniſh us to prepare, and meet Chriſt.

the bridegroom cometh] Chriſt cometh : ſo will he do by his divine providence and comforting ſpirit to call us hence at our death and day of judgement.

V. 7. trimmed their lamps] Which is to be underſtood of the wiſe virgins, the fooliſh carried onely dead lamps, without that which Chriſt commanded, chap. 5. 16. an alluſion to Exod. 30. 8. 2 King. 9. 30.

V. 8. gone out] Or going out, which in the temple ſhould not be, Exod 27. 20. the moral whereof was, we ought to perſevere in faith and ſanctity, chapter 24. 13. Revel. 2. 10. Coloſ. 1. 23. Hebr. 3. 14.

V. 9. not ſo, leſt there be not enough for us and you] Not fearing the failing of their own ſtore, as if they were uncertain of their own ſalvation, but becauſe (as Jerom ſaith) neque poſſunt in die judicii aliorum virtutes, aliorum vitia ſublevare, in the day of judement, the vertues of the one cannot relieve the vices of the other : See Ezek. 14. 14. & 18. 20. ſo ſaith Auguſtine ep. 120. Non deſperanter, ſed humiliter dictum eſt, it is not (by them) ſpoken deſpairingly, but humbly; for who can ſo preſume on his own conſcience, that he can be certain, that it can ſuffice him in Gods judgment, except the merciful God iudge in mercy, not the rigour of juſtice, in which none can ſtand? Pſal. 143. 2.

go ye rather] Not that the juſt ſhall ſend the wicked at the day of judgment to purchaſe grace: but it ſhewes that they who neglect to get it here, have no meanes left to get any then: ſo Elijah mocks the prieſts of Baal. 1 Kings 18. 27.

buy] Iſaiah 55. 1. Revel 3. 18. This word ſeemeth here inſerted, only for the accommodation of the parable.

for your ſelves] Every one muſt be ſaved by his own faith, Rom. 1. 17. Rom. 14. 12. 22. Gal. 6. 4.

V. 10. while they went to buy] This is ſpoken to ſhew us, that (as there was no manna to be found on the ſabbath) ſo ſhall there be no place for repentance and good works in death: and that the faithful onely, who in a careful watch, continually expect the coming of Chriſt, ſhall be ſaved. See Job 14. 14. Luke 12. 37.

the doore was ſhut] They who neglect Gods cal, and are not ready when he cometh, ſhall be ſhut out of the gate of mercy, Pſal. 95. 11. here life is gotten or loſt to eternity. They that were ready with their lamps burning, that is, with faith and good works, as Auguſtine forecited, interpreteth, went into eternal joy with Chriſt, the reſt were ſhut out.

V. 11. Lord, Lord] Chap. 7. 22. & 25. 37.

open to us] To wit the door of mercy: receive us alſo.

V. 12. I know you not] Chap. 7. 23. the Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. but he will not own thoſe in judgement, who will not own and obey him now, when he offereth mercy. Admirable is the power of faithful prayer, and timely repentance; but as Jerom ſaith, quid prodeſt, voce invocare, quem operibus negas? what availeth it to invocate him with thy voice, whom thou denyeſt in thy works? See Pſalm 50. 15, 16. Eſaus too late tears ſhew us the danger of deferring repentance and converſion unto God. See Hebr. 3. 13, 15. 2 Corinth. 6. 2. Eccleſ. 12. 1.

delivered unto them his goods] Put them into ſeveral offices, and places for the good of his Church, Epheſ. 4. 11. 12.

V. 15. five talents] Of a talent. See 1 Chron. 22. 14.

according to his ſeveral ability] According to the skil and wiſdom in dealing which was given them, 1 Corinth. 12. 7. according as he knew they had knowledge to mannage that which was entruſted to them: this δύναμιν, the Syr. interpreter giveth, juxta facultatem ſuam. Jerom, ſecundum propriam virtutem, that is, as his ſelf interpreteth, pro accipientium viribus, according to the abilities of the receivers: who yet conſidereth not in his ſervants, ſo much lucri magnitudinem, the greatneſs of the gain, as ſtudii voluntatem, the willingneſſe of their care and endeavour. Proſper noteth well here, de vocat. Gent. l. 2. c. 8. he gave according to their proper abilities, ſed non ſecundum proprium meritum, but not according to their proper merit. In the one, two, or five talents, we muſt underſtand the diverſities of Gods gifts, which are not all conferred on any one man. See Epheſ. 4. 11. 1 Cor. 12. 7. 11, 29. Rom. 12. 6. 1. Cor. 4. 2.

V. 16. traded with the ſame] Was laborious in his calling, according to his gifts.

made them other five talents] Encreaſed his gifts by uſing them to the benefit of others, and did twice ſo much good, as before his imployment. See 2 Tim 1. 6. the power and fruit of Gods graces in us, is in their uſe to his glory, and the gaining of ſouls to Chriſt: he ſhall be judged a faithfull ſervant, who ſo employeth them. See Rom. 15. 15, 16. ſuch were the Prophets and Apoſtles.

V. 17. likewiſe he that had received two] He means thoſe who are of meaner gifts and meaſures of grace, (as were, and are the ſucceeding miniſters of Chriſt, not aſſiſted, as the Apoſtles with infallibility of ſpirit) who have not that admirable evidence of ſpirit, and largeneſſe of heart; yet of a meaſure which God maketh ſufficient to gain ſouls; theſe are alſo accepted of God as faithfull ſervants, if they do, as Peter ſaid, as every one hath received the gift, even ſo miniſter the ſame one to another, as good ſtewards of the manifold grace of God, 1 Peter 4. 10. if they who are of mean gifts, be faithfull and diligent, God accepteth their will and endeavour.

V. 18. digged in the earth] Importing thoſe Miniſters, who for ſhame, ſloth, or fear, will not exerciſe the gifts they have: or any other, who receive Gods grace in vain: againſt which the Apoſtle exhorts, 2 Corinth. 6. 1. which concerneth both teachers, and hearers.

V. 19. a long time after] In the end Chriſt will come and call men to accompt; meaning in the general, from Chriſts aſcenſion into heaven, unto his coming again to judge: this time hath already been more than 1614. years: in particular, the life of man, the remainder whereof is very uncertain.

cometh and reckoneth with them] Chirſt will certainly come again to judge every man: therefore it behoveth us to live, as every hour expecting him: he will call every one to a ſtrict account, how we have imployed his gifts: how carefull ought we to be, how we uſe our time; health, ſtrength, underſtanding, offices, or authority? theſe all are our maſters talents, and he wil once bring us to an account of their improvement.

V. 20. other five talents] See on verſe 16. The Hebrew talent of the Sanctuary, conteined an hundred Hebrew pounds, whereof every one was ſixty ſicles or ſhekels: a ſhekel was about half an ounce in weight, and in value about four groates, or denarii, at which rate, it amounteth to 400. pound, but the common Hebrew talent was about half ſo much. Some ſay the talent of ſilver was 375. pound ſterling, but the talent of gold 3750. pound, See notes on 1 King. 20. 39. 2 King. 23. 33.

V. 21. over a few things] In a ſmal charge, Luke 16. 18.

over many] I will prefer thee: as men do ſervants whom they have found faithful. See on Chap. 24. 47.

into the joy of thy lord] Come and receive the fruit of my bounty, the reward of thy fidelity. See verſe 34.

V. 24. which had received one talent] He is alſo called to account, as well as they that had received more talents, that no man may think to be excuſed from giving account by the meanneſſe of his place or parts.

that thou art an hard man] He would (as hypocrites, and evill ſervants uſe to do) tranſmit the fault from himſelf to his maſter: one of Adams ſons, Geneſ. 3. 12. but indeed, God is (as Auguſtine ſaith well Armentario, ep 45.) benignus exactor, non egenus: & qui non creſcit ex redditis, ſed in ſe creſcere facit redditores: a bountiful exactor, not a needy: and who encreaſeth not by things rendered to him, but who encreaſeth the renderers in themſelves.

V. 25. Lo thou haſt that is thine] Chap. 20. 14.

V. 26. His lord anſwered] By this anſwer he ſignifieth that they have no excuſe for their ſloth, who ſuppreſſe Gods gifts and ſpend their time unprofitably, or that murmur, and lay their defects in duty on Gods providence; whereas it is moſt true which Proſper ſaith, de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 1. nec damnati juſta querimonia, nec juſtificati verax eſt arrogantia, ſi vel ille dicat non meruiſſe ſe pœnam, vel iſte aſſerat meruiſſe ſe gratiam; neither is the complaint of the damned juſt, neither the arrogance of the juſtified veritable; if either he ſaith, he hath not deſerved the puniſhment, or this affirm that he hath deſerved grace.

thou wicked and ſlothful ſervant] By theſe ſharp and yet well deſerved reproofs, that appears, which Proſper ſaith, de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 8. that not onely, de non ſervato, ſed de non aucto munere damnabuntur; for that men have not kept, but becauſe they have not encreaſed the gift, they ſhall be condemned.

thou kneweſt] Were it as thou ſayeſt, thou ſhouldſt have been the more careful to pleaſe me: and art now the more unexcuſable by thine own confeſſion, chap. 12. 37. Luke 19. 22.

V. 27. to the exchangers] Such as kept banks, to take mens moneys, and make profit thereof for them: the meaning is, thou oughteſt to have committed it to the hearers who bringing forth fruits, would have rendred me the intereſt of good works: ſo Jerom, Chryſoſtome, Hilary, Euthymius, and others, underſtand here by uſury.

V. 28. take therefore the talent from him] God juſtly takes away his gifts, from thoſe that abuſe, or make no good uſe of them: underſtand this of thoſe gifts or graces which are common to elect and reprobates; as gifts; or parts of nature, or art, office, charge, &c. for the gifts and graces of regeneration are ἀμεταμέλητα, Rom. 11. 29. ſuch as God never repenteth of, or recalleth, ſee John 16. 22. God ſometime taketh away that which therein men ſeem to have, Luke 8. 18. when by pulling of their vizards, he diſcovereth their hypocriſie; making it appear to the world, that their pretences to faith and good works, were but ſemblances and falſe ſhadows of things which had no being and give it unto him which hath ten] Not that the elect ſhall have or receive any good from the reprobate: but becauſe their reward in heaven ſhall be ſo great; as if the happineſſe which ſeemed due to all others, in mans judgement muſt accrew to them, and be put on their accompt.

V. 29. for unto every one] Chap. 13. 12. Mark 4. 25. Luke 8. 18.

he ſhall ſeperate them] This ſeparation of good from bad, is ſet out by a ſimilitude of fanning, chap. 3. 12. of the tares, chap. 13. 30. of the draw net, chap. 13. 48. here by parting the ſheep and goats, that ſignifieth the elect and reprobates; the flock of Chriſt, his Church (Luke 12. 32) in this life, is like the flock at Padan Aram, Geneſ. 30. 32. ſpeckled and ſpotted (ſee Judg. 12. 23.

12. 23. 2 Pet. 2. 13.) but in the life to come, they ſhall be as a flock of ſheep which go up from the waſhing (Cant. 6. 6.) without ſpot or wrinckle——holy and without blemiſh : Epheſ 5. 27. here, tares and wheat grow up together. Matth. 13. 30. but in the worlds harveſt, the day of judgement, they ſhall be parted.

V. 33. ſheep on his right hand] Right hand and left imply good and bad, Eccleſ. 10. 2. or bleſſing and curſing as Gerizim bare ſouthward, which is on the right hand, when you look to the ſun-riſing, (that was the mountain of bleſſing, Deut. 27. 12.) and Ebal on the north, (that was the mountain of curſing ib. verſe 13) which is on the left hand.

come] Draw neer to me : be not afraid of my majeſty. The word δεῦτε, come, is here a word of ſingular favour and love, graciouſly inviting the elect to the full fruition of eternal bleſſedneſs, in their conjunction with Chriſt, and participation of his immence goodneſſe, ſo Chap. 11. 28. δεῦτε πρός με, come unto me, ſuch words Jehu once ſaid to Jonadab, 2 King. 10. 15, 16. when he took him up to him into his charet, is thy heart right as my heart ? δεῦρο μετ' ἐμοῦ come with me.

V. 35. for I was an hungred] Chriſt taketh that which is done for his poor ſervants, as done unto himſelf: and this reward of mercy, is not for their own ſakes, or merit of the giver, but as they are members of Chriſt : and becauſe Chriſt will juſtifie theſe by faith, which worketh by love and charity.

ye gave me meat] We need none other arguments to incite us to give to the poor ſaints, if we underſtood and firmly believed this one: he that giveth to an hungry ſoul (which is a ſervant of Chriſt) food; feedeth Chriſt in that alms.

V. 36. naked, and ye cloathed me] In ſe aſſumit bonas operationes noſtras, ad hoc, ut præſtet nobis retributionem bonorum ſuorum, Irenæus. l. 4. cap. 34. he taketh on himſelf our good works, that he may yeild us a retribution of his goods: he accepteth what we do for the poor, as done to himſelf, not that he wants, but à nobis propter nos fieri vult (ſaith the ſame) he will have us to do it for our own ſakes : neither may we look hereon, as meritorious works of men. but as being the certain fruits and effects of true faith, apprehending his merits, by which we ſhall be ſaved : which being his gift, Epheſ. 2. 8. he doth but crown his own gifts in us : ſo true is that of Bernard : meritum meum miſeratio Domini eſt : my merit is Gods mercy : as likewiſe that which Proſper ſaith, de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 1. Neminem indebitè damnans, neminem debitè liberans; noſtra plectens cum punit noxios, ſua tribuens cum facit juſtos, condemning no man unduely, freeing or acquitting no man duely (or according to his deſerts) puniſhing that which is ours, when he correcteth, giving that which is his own when he juſtifieth or maketh men righteous. Conſider you oppreſſours, if they ſhall be damned, who fed not, and clothed not Chriſts poor, what hope of pardon have you, who take their bread from their mouths, and their clothes, and all temporall comforts from them : conſider you merciful to your comfort, that whatſoever you have done for Chriſts poor. you have done for Chriſt, who is not unfaithful to forget the labour of your love.

V. 37. the righteous] Thoſe whom he called bleſſed, verſe 34. now he calls righteous, for God will make all them righteous here, whom he intends to make bleſſed hereafter, Luke 14. 14. Revel. 20. 6.

when ſaw we thee, &c.] In thine own perſon : theſe anſwer as thoſe, whoſe left hand knew not what their right hand did, chap. 6. 3. the holy ever think humbly of their own works : and ſuch ſhal be that bounty of Chriſts rewarding, that the receivers ſhall admire it as incomparably more than due to them.

V 40. unto one of the leaſt &c.] Gr, unto one of theſe my brethren, which are the leaſt; that is, which are leaſt ſet by in the eyes of the world. It is a greater token of love, to do good to his, for his ſake, when he is abſent, than to do it to him, if he were preſent : and that which is done to a mean Chriſtian for his ſake, ſhall be rewarded as well, as that which was done to an Apoſtle, chap. 10. 41 42. for Chriſt here counteth the meaneſt Chriſtian, as well as the moſt excellent, his brethren.

V. 41. Depart] Chap. 7. 23. Pſalm 6. 8. to be deprived of Gods bleſſed preſence, is a chief part of the miſery of the damned. Depart, ſignifieth not an abſolute going from Gods preſence, for he is omnipreſent, none can go from his preſence, no, not when they go to the damned in hell. See Pſalm 139. 7, 8, 9. Amos 9. 2, 3, 4. Hebr. 4. 13. but this is ſpoken in oppoſition to that, verſe 34. come ye bleſſed; ond to command them away to the place of execution of Gods juſt judgement.

into everlaſting fire] Incorruption, and immortality ſhal be even to the bodies of the wretched caſt-awayes, ſo that nec ipſi æternam pœnam finiant, nec ipſos conſumat immortalis pœna, ſed puniat, Proſper de vit. contemplat. c. 3. neither ſhall they end their eternal puniſhment, neither ſhal immortal pain conſume, but ſtill torment them. See on verſe 46.

V. 42. ye gave me no meat] They that feed not the poor ſhall go to hell; what torments ſhall be to them, who by fraud, violence, or any whatſoever pretence, take away from them, and undo, and beggar them and theirs ?

V. 43. ſick and in priſon, and ye viſited me not] If they ſhall be damned (whatſover an impious world think or ſay to the contrary) who neglected to comfort the ſick, and the priſoners; how dreadful and heavy ſhall their judgement be, who afflict the ſervants of Chriſt, caſt them into priſon, or with heavy exactions take from them their means of comfort ? there remaineth yet one way for them to eſcape the ſevere, and otherwiſe inevitable wrath of a juſt God ; that is, by true and timely repentance ; which is not onely in ſaying, God be merciful to me; but in reſtitution, and preſent repairing thoſe whom they have injured or oppreſſed, after the example of Zacheus, Luke 19. 8, 9. and the converted jaylor, Acts 16. 30, 31, 33 34 who brought Paul and Silas out of the dungeon, and waſhing their ſtripes which he had given them, ſet meat before them, and wherein he could comforted them.

V. 44. When ſaw we thee, &c.] See on verſe 37. The ſcope hereof is to ſhew, that what ever the damned ſhall plead in judgement for their juſtification or excuſe before God nothing can hold : as here, they might poſſibly think and in mans judicature, it might have much availed to clear them in point of not relieving Chriſt, it being manifeſt, that they never ſaw him, neither lived neer that age of Chriſt on earth; but in Gods judgement it can nothing help them which have neglected to releive the poor, for whom God offereth himſelf a ſurety, Prov. 19 17. and concerning whoſe relief he giveth many commands, Deut. 15. 7, 8. &c. See Pſal. 41. 1. Iſaiah 58. 7.

V. 45. to one of the leaſt] Let all oppreſſours now take to heart theſe words, which, will they nill they, they ſhall hear in their judgement : the injuries which are done to the leaſt, meaneſt, or pooreſt ſervant of Chriſt (however men deſpiſe, or judge them evil, it skilleth not) he taketh as done to his own ſacred perſon, See Acts 9. 4. becauſe then, the wiſeſt of the ſons of men are not able to determine, who are Chriſts : Gamaliels grave counſell, is moſt neceſſary for them Acts 5 38. Refrain from theſe men and let them alone, leſt happily ye be found even to fight againſt God.

V. 46, Theſe ſhall go away] See Dan 12 2. John 5. 29. Rev. 14. 11. & 20. 11. no appeal, traverſe, or writ of errour can be admitted in this Supreme Court of Gods juſtice, they ſhall go away not as men acquitted or enlarged, but as chained priſoners compelled. See chap. 13. 42. 50. they ſhall go away as Corah, Dathan and Abiram, and that which appertained to them, Numb. 16. 31. &c. hell opening her mouth and ſwallowing them up quick : in this dreadfull ſpectacle, the elect ſhall ſee the ſeverity of God toward reprobates, and his clemency to themſelves, Rom 11. 22. ſaving them, as a firebrand pluckt out of the burning, Amos 4. 11.

into everlaſting puniſhment] Which, verſe 41. he calleth everlaſting fire, in other places, hell, Gehenna, the worm which dyeth not, the lake burning with fire and brimſtone, extream darkneſſe, where ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth : certainly the moſt intenſe torments of body and ſoul, hopeleſſe, helpleſſe endleſſe : behold the end of ſinne, ſpecially oppreſſion and cruelty.

but the righteous into life eternal] Theſe ſhall go with Chriſt into heaven : in this life elect and reprobates are mixed together, like the tares and wheat, chap. 13. the ſeparation ſhall be in the day of judgement; the reprobate ſhall live alſo, but to eternall puniſhment : to theſe (ſaith Auguſtine de ſpir & anim. cap. 56. mors eſt ſine morte, finis ſine fine) death is without death, and the end without end. (See on verſe 41.) but the elect ſhall live in an endleſſe, changleſſe, full, ſecure, aud unſpeakable happineſſe, eternally filled with joy and glory.

CHAP. XXVI.

Vereſe 1. WHen Jeſus had finiſhed] All the forementioned ſpeeches concerning the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and his glorious coming to judgement.

he ſaid to his diſciples] They only were now with him; to whom he would reveal the inſtancie of his paſsion; to enform them that he layed down his life for the elect; & foreknowing that which ſhould befall him, he went willingly to Jeruſalem to do his Fathers will, concerning which he here enformeth them, to prevent the ſcandal, which might otherwiſe have dangerouſly ſhaken their faith, if they ſhould have conceived his ſufferings, fortuitous, compulſory, and involuntary. Which doctrine, though it was for the preſent, but like new-ſowed ſeed under clods, no growth thereof yet appearing; it did, after the reſurrection of Chriſt, ſpring up to maturity of faith and confidence in them, and thoſe who ſince believe in that; therein appeareth the voluntary ſacrifice for the remiſſion of ſins, and his admirable victory over death, which he ſo willingly encountered.

V. 2. You know] Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 1. John 13. 1. for Chriſt had often foretold them of his death. See on chap. 17 22. The time and day when the Paſſeover was to be kept, all the Jewes well knew, it being poſitively determined by the law of God. Exod. 12. 3. 6. &c. and they might have known that his paſsion prefigured (as in other legal ſacrifices, ſo ſpecially in the Paſcal lamb. John 1. 29. 1 Cor. 5. 7. Heb. 13. 11, 12.) was near.

Paſſeover] It was requiſite that Chriſt whom the Paſcal Lamb repreſented ſhould be offered up at that feaſt. See on Luke 22. 1. and undoubtedly, is was by the divine providence of God, that the ſacrilegious prieſts and elders of the Jewes, who had ſo often ſought occaſions of putting Jeſus to death ſhould not, at any other time finde it, than at this ſolemnity of the Paſſeover: that he then ſuffering might actually ſhew, that he was indeed that Lamb of God, which taketh away the ſins of world, John 1. 29. to the end, that now the legal ſhadowes might ceaſe, in the exhibition of him, and the work by him to be performed for the accompliſhment of our redemption, which had been long before promiſed and prefigured: ſo were the legal ceremonies fulfilled in their change; and ſo it appeareth that the Paſſeover was not only appointed to remember them of their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage; but to aſſure the faithful of a greater, and more happy one, from the ſpiritual Pharaoh, and his heavie-handed task-maſters, ſin, and death eternal.

V. 3. Then aſſembled] As John 11. 47. ſheweth the cauſe of this their convention; becauſe the people more and more flocked to him daily: and Caiphas counſelled to deſtroy him, as if he could no otherwiſe be overcome than by death; in which was indeed the moſt glorious victory of Chriſt and the elect: the general advice was, not at the feaſt, leſt the people ſhould tumult; yet here it appeareth, that nothing was diſpoſed by them, but by the divine hand of God; no, not ſo much as the time of his paſſion: they who propoſed only to kill Jeſus, judged another time more ſeaſonable, but God, who appointed hereby both to redeem the elect, and to ſtrengthen their faith concerning the ſame, appointed this very time for Chriſts paſsion.

Caiphas] See on Luke 3. 2.

V. 4. by ſubtilty] They durſt not take him by force for fear of the people. δόλῳ, by ſome treachery, not openly and by force of armes, but ſecretly, the people not knowing, nor Jeſus (as they conceived) ſuſpecting any ſuch thing, they did not now conſult and adviſe whether they ſhould apprehend and kill him, but might do it ſo, as not to be ſeen in it.

and kill him] By the power and authority of the Roman Preſident, which they thought their ſafeſt way, Acts 3. 16.

V. 5. Not on the feaſt day] That is, of the Paſſeover, for that muſt be ſpent in holy duties: after that the Galileans to whom he is ſo much known, will be gone home againe: this reſolution they changed, when Iudas preſented them a ſooner opportunity, by his offering to deliver Chriſt unto them.

V. 6. Now, when Ieſus] Mark 14 3. John 11. 1. this ſtory was before the aſſembly of the prieſts; for it was ſix dayes before the Paſſeover, John 12. 1. and the aſſembly was but two dayes before, verſe 1. 3. but it is ſet after, becauſe it was the occaſion of Iudas repairing unto the Prieſts.

of Simon the leper] Who had been a leper; if he had been ſo ſtill, Chriſt would not have eaten with him, contrary to the law: it may be he had been healed by Chriſt, and now made him a feaſt, as John 12. 2. and as Matthew did after his calling to be an Apoſtle. Mark 2, 14, 15. Luke 5. 29. Iohn nameth the woman who anointed our Saviours feet, which Matthew and Mark omit, and theſe mention the name of the man, which Iohn omitteth; Iohn ſaith ſhe anointed his feet, Matthew and Mark ſay the head: both were anointed; for the ointment being ſo abundantly poured on his head, ſome ran down to his feet, when he ſtood up, or roſe up from table; or ſhe might ſucceſſively anoint both his head and feet. See on John 12. 3. See Pſal 133. 2.

V. 7. a woman] Mary, ſiſter of Lazarus, John 12. 3. of divers who anointed Chriſt, See If. Cauſab. exerc. 14. n. 17. & ib. n. 26.

an alabaſter box] Theſe boxes kept ointment without corruption, as ſome ſay. See hereof Plin. N. hiſt. lib. 36. 8. and lib. 13. 2.

of very precious oyntment] μύρȣ βαρυτίμȣ, ointment of an heavie price, that is, πολυτίμȣ. So the Syriack סגי דמיא ſaggi demio, of great price. See verſe 9.

on his head] As they uſed to do to welcome their friends, and chief gueſts, Luke 7. 47. Pſal. 23. 5. See on verſe 5.

V. 8. his diſciples] One of them, to wit, Judas who bare the bag, John 12. 4, 6. See like phraſe, chap. 27. 41. with Luke 23. 39. or it may be others might ſecond Judas in it.

this waſte] Unneceſſary ſpending of precious ointment.

V. 9. and given to the poor] Under a pretence of charity to the poor, he clokes his own covetous, and theeviſh affection, who would have been filching ſome part thereof, for his own private uſe, had ſuch a ſumme come into his hands. See John 12. 6. though the other diſciples, if they ſeconded him therein, might ſpeak ſimply, and mean well to the poor.

V. 10 why trouble ye the woman] We ought not raſhly to condemn all that we think not orderly or reaſonably done. chap. 7. 1.

ſhe hath wrought a good work] Chriſt, the moſt abſolute pattern of temperance, defendeth this expence, in reſpect of the circumſtances, not to draw it into a common example of waſte: doubtleſſe Mary was moved to this extraordinary work, by a ſecret inſtinct of the Spirit of God, making her confident to perform this office: Chriſts teſtimony was a ſufficient aſſurance to her, of Gods acceptance of her work, though the perverſe condemned it: never any good wanted ſome adverſary to calumniate it: let the impious world (which liketh nothing, but its own) uſe their liberty of raſh judgment; it ſhall be happy for us, if God appear for us. See Iſaiah 50. 7. 1 Cor. 4 2. Rom. 8. 33.

V. 11. For ye have the poor] Deut. 15. 11. ye ſhall alwayes have occaſion to do good to the poor: but this is the leaſt office of love and piety, wherein ſhe can ſhew her gratitude to me, who ſhall very ſhortly be taken from you.

V. 12. for my burial] For a preparation to my burial. Mark ſaith, chap. 14. 8. ſhe is come, aforehand, to anoint my body to the burying: for this reſpect Chriſt accepted it, that in this ſign, they might, as in the figure, learn, that his ſepulchre ſhould breath out the ſweet ſavour of life and ſalvation to the elect. See John 12. 7. alſo, anointing the dead (then in uſe. Mark 16. 1. John 19. 40.) was no idle ceremony, but a token of their hope and aſſurance of the reſurrection from the dead.

V. 13. whereſoever this goſpel] The Syriack hath, this my goſpel: the goſpel in general, not only this part thereof: thus he confirmed what he had ſaid before: Mary was ſo far from being blameworthy, that the memory of this act of piety, ſhall live to all ages: true and happy applauſe, is not from men, who many times, miſtake, but God who will ſet a juſt price on the Saints works, however men undervalue them. See Rom. 2. 29. 1 Cor. 4. 5. 2 Cor. 8. 18.

in the whole world] This made much for the conſolation, and confirmation of the diſciples (that Chriſt here, not obſcurely intimateth their ſucceſſe in preaching the Goſpel, not only in Judea, but all the knovvn vvorld) as alſo of us, vvhoſe calling and ſalvation Chriſt intended before, and in his paſſion.

there ſhall alſo this] He gently taxeth their raſh cenſure of Maries fact; and for that they had not his future kingdom in a due eſteem: as if he had ſayed, you think it much which is thus beſtowed on me; but my kingdom ſhall be glorious through the world (Iſaiah 11. 10) you cenſure her love and beneficence; but the odour thereof ſhall not only fill this houſe of Bethany, but the whole world, in which her memory ſhall be honoured.

for a memorial of her] The memory of ought done for Chriſt, or any of his, God will not ſuffer to periſh, Pſal. 112. 6. the memory of the juſt is bleſſed, Prov. 10 7.

V. 14. Then one of the twelve] Mark 14. 20. Luke 22. 3. What ſociety of men ſhall we finde free from traytors, when the holy family of Jeſus hath a Judas?

Iudas Iſcariot] See on chap. 10. 4. and on Luke 22. 3. and John 6, 71.

went to the chief Prieſts] He undertook the betraying of his Maſter, not ſolicited by them, but offering himſelf to this imployment. See Luke 22. 4. he knevv that they hated Chriſt, and would gladly deſtroy him, ſo that he ſhould be ſurely welcome to them with this offer: ſo eaſily fall they into mutual complyance, who are led by one, and the ſame ſpirit: Satan was entred into Iudas, John 13. 27, 30. the Phariſees were filled with the devilliſh ſpirit of envie and malice, James 3. 14, 15. Mat. 27. 18. to them therefore he goeth, confident of a market: of chief Prieſts, ſee Mark 14. 1. and chap. 27. 1.

V. 15. What will ye give me, &c?] So miſchievous a root of evill, is covetouſneſſe (1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.) That it will eaſily ſet Chriſt himſelfe to ſale. This unhappy wretch vvill make up his thieviſh hope of gain, vvhich he promiſed himſelf, or would have had for the precious ointment, out of the ſale of his holy maſter: nor doth he ſet any definite price; but ask an indefinite one; as one vvilling at any rate to part vvith his intereſt, putteth the price to the buyers pleaſure.

and I will deliver him] This vvas Satans maſter-piece on Judas, vvhom he had as his liege-man: to make the traytour hang himſelf, vvas much to perſvvade a ſelf-loving caitif to, but the juſt judgement of God on the traytour: on Satans part principally evill, in that he did not ſooner put him on to ſelf-execution, vvhich at laſt muſt be ſo; on Iudas part, in all this action the only appearance of good (there is nothing good in ſin, but the juſt puniſhment thereof) but to make himſelf a brand of hell-fire, the moſt unhappy, and moſt damnable traytour that ever breathed Gods ayre, by ſelling an holy Jeſus (the ineſtimable, matchleſſe price of our redemption) at ſo poor a price, ſets off to admiration, the malice of Satan, and the impudent preſumption of the covetous traytour. The ſale of Ioſeph but the ſellers conſcience, with ſad remorſe at laſt. (See Gen. 42. 21. and 44. 16.) God will certainly find out all unrepented wickedneſſe, ſpecially ſuch: they ſold a brother, not the Lords anoynted: Slaves are ſold, not Lords. Remember Lots wife, ſaith our Saviour, Luke 17. 32. remember Iudas, you that think it lawful gain by any ſale; take heed of covetouſneſſe, it will make thee willing to betray Chriſt; and ſo not much more innocent, than if thou didſt.

thirty pieces of ſilver] See chap. 17. 9. So much as a ſlave was valued at; Exod. 21. 32. See how mean accompt Iudas makes of his Maſter.

V. 16. from that time] From the time that he had contracted with the high-prieſts for the treaſon.

he ſought opportunity] Luke 22. 6. Expreſſeth it; that he was to deliver him ἄτερ ὄχλου, without the multitude, in their abſence, or without ſtirring them, without tumult, when the multitude might not know of it, who were wont to follow him. Sometime when he was private, onely with his diſciples: which as Origen notes, he did by finding opportunity of night, and his being with his diſciples only in the garden at Gethſemane, without the city; he greedily longed to perform his wicked undertaking, that he might have his money, promiſed him, verſe 15.

V. 17. the firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread] That is, of the Paſcal ſolemnity, during which no leavened bread might be had, Exod. 12. 19, 20. to wit, on the fourteenth day of Niſan, on which, preparation was made; for the eating of the Paſcal Lamb the night enſuing, Exod. 12. 6. 18.

V. 18. to ſuch a man] They are taught how to find him, Mark 14. 13, 14. Luke 22. 10, 11.

my time is at hand] The time of my death.

V. 20. When the even was come] Mark 14. 18. Luke 22. 14. John 13. 21. The Evangeliſt noteth the time preſcribed by the law to eat the Paſſeover, Exod. 12. 6. Levit. 23. 5. Deut. 16. 6. thou ſhalt ſacrifice the paſſeover בערב bahareb, 70. ἑσπέρας, in the evening, that is, between the two evenings, or before it was dark. ערב harab, properly ſignifieth mixed; ſo here it may be ſpoken of the mixture of light and darkneſſe; the end of the day, and beginning of night, in a doubtful twilight, to ſhew us, how Chriſt our Paſſeover fulfilled the law.

he ſate down with the twelve] ἀνέκειτο, it ſignified ſuch a poſture, as fitted that ſolemnity; ſo Æmelius Portus, the interpreter of Suidas giveth κεῖμαι, jaceo, or ſitus ſum; ſo Thucidides ſaith, the city κεῖσθαι καλῶς, to be well ſituate; ſo is ἀνακεῖσθαι uſed alſo; ſome interpret this ἀνέκειτο here, he ſupped or eat the Paſſeover, and the Syriack uſeth a word here סמך of the ſame value with the Hebrew סמך, ſemach, which in the firſt ſignification importeth, innixus fuit, he leaned, (as here in the firſt inſtitution on the ſtaffe which he was to have in his hand) and ſo alſo incubuit. But by the general conſent of the learned in thoſe rites, that poſture mentioned Exod 12. 11. as the ſprinkling of the lintels and door-poſts with the blood of the Lamb, appertained only to that one night, in which Iſrael was to come out of Egypt in haſte; and was not to be continued after their ſetling in Canaan; ſo that there appeareth not any neceſſity to conclude, that Chriſt adminiſtred the Paſſeover ſtanding, and afterwards ſate down to the ſecond courſe, or common ſupper, as if this ἀνέκειτο related onely to that poſture; ſome learned Divines are here of one opinion, and ſome of another.

with the twelve] Here appeareth the admirable impudency of this blinde traytour; who after he had ſold his Lord, cometh again to preſent his ſervice; and to ſit at table with him; poſſibly he hoped that Chriſt knew it not (though he had formerly ſeen ſo many experiments of Chriſts omniſcience) or he might think, that for his admirable meekneſſe, he would not reveale it; ſo preſumptuous are wicked men; ſo merciful and long-ſuffering Chriſt, who well knowing Judas from the beginning, yet permitted him to communicate with him, and his holy Apoſtles: yea, ſaith Auguſtine ep. 163. Eleuſio & Felici, he ſuffered his betrayer, (who had already received his price) to remain amongſt the innocent, uſque ad ultimum pacis oſculum; which (had there been any prejudice to the holy, by his ſociety,) he would never have permitted.

V. 21. one of you ſhall betray me] Seeing the impudency of Iudas; who having conſpired with his enemies, and contracted for the price of his blood, yet durſt boldly preſent himſelf to this holy ſacrament, he thought good to forewarne his diſciples, by diſcovering the traytour; that by ſtriking a terrour into his conſcience, he might lead him to repentance, or leave him unexcuſable to the ſeverity of Gods juſtice; one of you my diſciples; this was to render, and declare the treaſon the more deteſtable; he could have named him at the firſt; but thus he revealed the treaſon, and concealed the traytour, untill his incorrigible impudency enforced a detection of the perſon alſo.

V. 22. they were exceeding ſorrowful] That he muſt die now, that by treaſon, that by one of them, none but Iudas knowing who the traytour was.

every one of them to ſay] Or, ſaid each one of them, verſe 74.

is it I?] Every one fearing, that himſelf might be within the compaſſe of others ſuſpicion: and deſirous that Chriſt pronouncing for him, might before the reſt of the diſciples, acquit him of their jealouſie.

V. 23 he that dippeth] Or hath dipped, Pſalm 41. 9 one of them that now eateth with me, as Mark 14. 20. Luke 22. 21.

V. 24. The Son of man goeth] Out of this world, or he ſhall be put to death.

as it is written of him] His death with the remarkable circumſtances thereof, and the means, by treaſon, was all foretold by the former Prophets, Luke 24. 26. 44. Iſaiah 53. 4, 5, 7, 9. 12. Pſal. 41. 9.

but woe unto that man] He cannot hurt me, but he will make himſelf eternally unhappy.

good for that man] God will glorifie his juſtice in puniſhing him, but it had been better for himſelf, that he had never had any being.

V. 25. which betrayed him] Judas who awhile after betrayed him, and was now plotting it, verſe 16.

thou haſt ſaid] Thou haſt ſaid the truth: compare verſe 64. with Mark 14. 62.

V. 26. as they were eating] Before they removed from the table: for it is not likely, that Chriſt would mixe the Lords Supper with the Paſſeover: and it is ſaid Luke 22. 20. 1 Cor. 11. 25. of the cup, that he took it after ſupper, that is, after the Paſcal ſupper.

Jeſus took bread] 1 Cor. 11 23; 24.

bleſſed it] Many Greek copies have εὐχαριστήσας, giving thanks. Chriſt minding forthwith to fulfill the promiſes of the Old Teſtament, inſtituteth a new covenant, with new ſignes; and conſecrates them with prayer to God, conſiſting, partly of praiſe and thanksgiving to God his Father, verſe 27. and partly of petition for a bleſſing upon the elements, as Luke 9. 16. and yet, the bread and wine are changed, not in nature, but in uſe: for they become undoubted tokens of Chriſts body and blood, by his own inſtitution, that faith may find what to lay hold on, both in the word, and in the elements.

this is my body] Either by a trope called Metonymia, one name is put for another; the bread is called Chriſts body, becauſe it is a ſigne thereof: or by a figurative enunciation, the bread is ſaid to be his body, becauſe it repreſenteth his body, truly and properly ſo termed; as the rock is ſaid to have been Chriſt, becauſe it repreſented Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. 4. both in effect come to one, the phraſe being Sacramental, and of common uſe in ſpeech of ſignes and reſemblances, either ſacred, or other: Gen. 17. 13. and 40. 18. and 41. 26, 27. Exod. 12. 11. Matth. 13. 38. Revel. 17. 9. 12. 15. 18. See on Luke 22. 19.

V. 27. the cup] To wit, with the wine in it, verſe 29.

gave thanks] As verſe 26. the prayer which then he uſed, conſiſted, as before, of two parts; it is called ſometimes by the name of the one part, a thankſgiving; as here; ſometimes by the name of the other part, a bleſſing, as 1 Cor. 10. 16.

drink ye all of it] They then which take away the Cup from the people, do not according to Chriſts inſtitution of the ſacrament, to be received of all in both kindes, which they then ſtrictly obſerved.

V. 28. this is my blood] The wine in this cup is a ſeale of the covenant ratified in my blood, which ſhall be ſhed ſhortly, to procure new legacies for many. See Exod. 24. 8. See here verſe 26.

of the new Teſtament] Whereby the inheritance of eternal life is given as a legacy to all true believers, or of the new covenant.

which is ſhed] That ſhall ſhortly be ſhed, for his blood was not yet ſhed. See the like phraſe, chap. 3. 10. See on Luke 22. 20.

for many] Nor for you alone, but for many others. See John 17. 20.

for the remiſſion of ſins] To ſatisfy Gods juſtice for their ſinnes, that in mercy, through the merits of Chriſt he may forgive them, who could make no ſatisfaction for themſelves, Rom. 3. 25. 26. Epheſ. 1. 7.

V. 29. I will not drink henceforth] This is the laſt ſolemne meal, or feaſt, that I ſhall make with you on earth: but I ſhall converſe vvith you after my reſurrection for a time, and to all eternity in a nevv ſpiritual vvay, in heaven.

till I drink it new] In a nevv kind, after my reſurrection: the main thing here intended, is an expreſsion of the heavenly joy.

V. 30. an hymne] Or Pſalm: when they had made an end of their other ſolemn ſinging; which, ſome think, vvas of theſe ſix Pſalms, Pſalms, Pſal. 112. and 113. and 114. and 115. and 116. and 117. it may be, ſome other.

to the mount] Tovvards it; for Gethſemane lay betvveen the brook Kidron, and mount Olivet.

V. 31. Then] About that time; for the vvords immediately follovving ſeem by Luke and John to be ſpoken in the houſe.

all ye] Mark 14. 27. John 16. 32. my diſciples vvho hitherto, vvithout ſcandal adhered to me, profeſſed and preached the Goſpel, as on occaſion I commanded, doing great works in my name, yet novv you vvil be offended becauſe of me, and thoſe things vvhich ye ſhall ſee me ſuffering: you vvill forſake me, and flye for fear, and diffidence in that I have told you concerning my reſurrection from the dead.

for it is written] That ſhall not fail vvhich is vvritten of me: it was ſuch a ſpeech, as may be proverbially uſed: when the ſhepherd is ſmitten, the ſheep are ſcattered.

I will ſmite the ſhepherd] Zech. 13. 7. Chriſt here (as John 10.) compareth himſelf to a ſhepherd, in whoſe paſſion the diſciples ſhould be ſcattered for fear.

V. 32. I will go before you] This he ſaith to comfort them; his ſmiting ſhould be but for a ſhort time? but he ſhould quickly go before them again, like a ſhepherd before his flock, Mark 14. 28. and 16. 7.

V. 33. yet will I never be offended] Peter truſted overmuch in his own ſtrength, which is a dangerous confidence,

V. 34. before the Cock crow] John 13, 38. his morning crow to break of day, Mark 13. 35. or crow thrice, as Mark 14. 30. for Peter denied him once before the firſt cock-crovving, and thrice before the ſecond, Mark 14. 68. 72.

thou ſhalt deny me] Thou that art now more forvvard in promiſing, than the reſt, ſhall yet not only be offended at me, but alſo utterly deny me, that ever thou kneweſt me.

V. 35. Though I ſhould die with thee] Peter meant no leſſe: but was not yet well acquainted with his ovvn infirmity, likewiſe alſo ſaid all the diſciples] Leſt they ſhould ſeem inferiour to Peter in love and duty, in affection or fidelity: they equall him in words, though not altogether in their failing: they were all vvarned as vvell as Peter, in the general of their being ſcattered, yet vvere thus confident; therefoore Chriſt leaveth them to the experience of their ovvn diſability.

V. 36. then cometh Jeſus] Mark 14. 32. Luke 22. 39.

Gethſemane] The valley of fatneſſe, neer mount Olivet; like that, by Lebanon, Iſaiah 28. 1. 4. or an oyl-preſſe, as ſome interpret the name; or the paſture of butter, as others; hovvſoever the name ſeems to import a rich and fat ſoyl. See Geneſ. 27. 28, 29. Chriſt is not taken in the city, leſt the people ſhould reſcue him: nor in the day time; but in the night, and in a ſolitary place, to vvhich he vvas retired.

ſit ye here] See the like, Gen 22. 5.

V. 37. Peter and the two ſons of Zebedee] vvho had been in private vvith him, to ſee his divine povver and glory, (to arm them againſt any ſcandal to be taken at his ſufferings) to vvit, at the raiſing of Iairus daughter from the dead, chap. 9. and in his transfiguration on the mount, chap. 17.

very heavy] This ſhevvs the truth of his humane nature; in that he feared death, and felt ſo much ſorrovv at the approach thereof; but the reaſon chiefly vvas, becauſe it brought with it a deep ſenſe of his Fathers wrath, againſt ſin, and ſinners; for whom he was now to ſuffer, and become a ranſome.

V. 38. My ſoule is exceeding ſorrowful] Thus he expreſſeth the grievouſneſſe of his approaching paſſion for ſinners, in whoſe place he ſtood a ſurety, that they might afterward reſent his admirable love to the elect, and preach the ſame to the edifying of others: as alſo to ſtirre them up to an holy ſympathy.

and watch with me] He ſaith not, watch and pray for me, as if he had need of their prayers, or meditation; but to expreſſe a common danger (whereof he had warned them verſe 31) leſt themſelves ſhould enter into temptation, which he ſaw now imminent over them.

V. 39. fell on his face] Mark ſaith, he proſtrateth himſelf, in effect it is the ſame; Luke ſaith, he kneeled on the earth, it may be ſo firſt, and after proſtrated; all is to expreſſe a vehement and ardent humility in prayer; for which the moſt humble poſture is beſt, as to acknowledge God, the Lord of body and ſoule; ſo is it the more apt to ſtirre up our ſelves and others to fervency of ſpirit, which is the life of prayer: Look on Jeſus in this poſture, you unreverend profeſſors of faith in him; how wretched an impudencie do you expreſſe, while with unbended knees, and zealeſſe hearts, you petition him, now ſitting at the right hand and glory of God the Father, careleſly ſitting? The Lord Jeſus in the dayes of his fleſh kneeled, and proſtrated himſelf on the earth, and are you too good to bend the knee to him in prayer, who deſcended ſo low to ſave you?

let this cup paſſe from me] A kind of expreſſion which the Hebrews uſed, to ſignifie Gods wrath, and mans afflictions in the execution thereof, under the ſimilitude of a cup. See chap. 20. 22. See on Luke 22. 42. he ſaith, if it be poſſible; that is, as Auguſtine lib. 3. de Conſenſ. Evang. c. 4. interpreteth; if it be thy holy will: the ſame epiſt. 121. Probæ noteth; that God giveth to ſome in anger, and denieth others in mercy: he gave the Iſraelites quails, Numb. 11. he gave the devil that which he deſired and begged, leave to enter into the ſwine (Luke 8. 32.) Theſe things are written, leſt any ſhould think highly of himſelf, that he is heard, in that which it had been good for him not to have obtained: and leſt any ſhould deject himſelf, or deſpaire of Gods mercy, if he be not heard in ſomething which he petitioneth for; quo accipiendo affligatur atrocius vel à proſperitate corruptus, penitùs evertatur, ib. c. 14. in receiving whereof he ſhould be more heavily afflicted, or (corrupted by proſperity) quite overthrown: we know not what to pray as we ought. Rom. 8. 26. the ſafeſt way is to learn of our Saviour, not as I will, but as thou wilt: not what I would in my humane infirmity, but what thou wilt, and knoweſt beſt in thy divine will, and wiſdom.

V. 40. findeth them aſleep] Here is an example of mans infirmity, in duties moſt important; ſpecially in ſorrovv, or any other vehement perturbation of minde. See on Luke 22. 45.

and ſaid unto Peter] Who had promiſed and proteſted ſo much before: with him he reproves the reſt: to ſhevv the moſt confident, how unable they are, of themſelves, to reſiſt temptation; and conſequently, what need they have to watch and pray.

one hour] If ye cannot watch with me one hour, how much leſſe would you be able (as you profeſſed) to ſuffer death for, or with me?

V. 41. Watch and pray] See chap. 24. 42. This watchfulneſſe is not ſo much from ſleep, as carnal ſecurity, but now he bids them take heed of both theſe; neither is it enough to watch to diſcover the dangerous approaches of the enemy, but we muſt alſo implore the merciful aſsiſtance of the Lord, that we may be able to withſtand.

that ye enter not into temptation] That ye be not tempted: becauſe they were drowzie in his great conflict, he awakeneth them to a ſenſe of their own hazard: as if he had ſaid, except you watch and pray (however confident you are of your own ſtrength) a fearful ſtorm of temptations will endanger your faith: this is that he ſaid to Peter, Satan hath deſired to winnow you. Luke 22. 31. therefore Peter afterwards, thus endeavoured to ſtrengthen his brethren: be ſober and watch, &c. 1 Pet 5. 8. he ſaith not ye ſhall be overcome; but ſheweth the means by them to be uſed, that they may not be overcome, which is not in their own ſtrength, but Gods aſsiſtance.

the ſpirit indeed is willing] You have through Gods grace, a good will; but the corruption of fleſh and blood much hindreth; by ſpirit, he meanath that affection which was guided by the holy Ghoſt, the regenerate part: by fleſh, he meaneth the remainder of corrupted nature: he remembreth them of the one, leſt they ſhould deſpair; and of the other, leſt they ſhould preſume on their own ability, and ſo be overcome in their ſecurity; theſe two Paul expreſſeth. Rom. 7. 18. 23.

V. 42. If this cup] Since this cup may not be avoyded. See on verſ. 39.

thy will be done] This is the voyce of one reſting on Gods will. See chap. 6. 10. Acts 21. 14. Thus Chriſt taught us, both by precept and example, to ſubmit our wills and deſires, to Gods good pleaſure: this he ſaith, not that his will differed, or was contrary to the will of his Father, for as Gregor. Nazianzen. ſaith orat. 36. ὡς μία θεότης, οὕτω καὶ θέλησις, as the God-head is one, ſo alſo is the vvill of God; but for that the vvill of the aſſumed nature was ſubject to humane infirmity, vvithout ſin; vvhich therefore (even in that it vvould not have ſuffered, as man) yet ſubmitted it ſelf to the vvill of God, by that abundance of the ſpirit which dwelt in him bodily. Coloſ. 2. 9. whereby he alſo obeyed to the death. Phil. 2. 8. willingly: for, as Proſper noteth (ſentent. ex Auguſtino) nemo invitus benè facit, etiam ſi bonum eſt quod facit: no man unvvillingly doth well, though that be good which he doth.

V. 43. and found them aſleep again] Being oppreſſed with ſorrow, as Luke expreſſeth it: this ſheweth the neceſsity we have to watch and pray, ſeeing our very dangers make us dull and unmindful to call on God: ſo both in joy and ſorrow, Satan layeth his ſnares: ſo frail are vve after many vvarnings, in the midſt of greateſt hazards vve are apt to forget our ſelves.

V. 44. prayed the third time] As 2 Cor. 12. 8. Leaving us an enſample of perſeverance in prayer.

ſaying the ſame words] Which yet, nothing detracted either from the ſubſtance, or efficacy of his prayer: this vvas no vain repetition (vvhich he forbade. Chap. 6: 7.) but an invincible, and unwearied fervency of ſpirit. See Luke 22. 44.

V. 45. Sleep on now] Infirm fleſh and blood is ſtill like it ſelf, hardly amended by any admonitions: therefore he telleth them, ye may ſleep now; or ye will have little liſt to ſleep anon, whether I awake you or no, your enemies will awake you though my admonitions have not yet: this is Gods uſual method, where words prevail not, afflictions muſt.

into the hands of ſinners] To the power of the Roman ſouldiers. See Acts 2. 23. Gal. 2. 15. So God ſtill afflicteth and correcteth his children by the wicked; yea, and by Satan himſelf. Rev. 2. 10.

V. 46 Riſe, let us be gone] Let us go meet them: Chriſt offered himſelf willingly to be taken, that in ſuffering willingly, he might make ſatisfaction for the wilful fall of man: this ſheweth the effect of his prayers, and a new ſupply of ſtrength, and his victory over that fear and infirmity of fleſh and blood, with which he had wreſtled; he now willingly meeting with his enemies, and his paſſion, and offering up himſelf a voluntary oblation (as was prefigured. Exod. 35. 5. 21. 29.) ſo ſaith he, not let us flye, but let us go hence. John 14, 31. that is, to meet with the armed band, which he knew were then coming to take him.

V. 47. While he yet ſpake] Mark 14. 43. Luke 22, 47 John 18. 3.

Judas one of the twelve came] For he was their leader and captain, of thoſe who came to take Chriſt, for he only of them all, knew the place which Jeſus frequented, John 18. 1, 2. Luke 22. 47. he was awake to betray Chriſt, vvhen the reſt vvere aſleep: it is the miſery of ſecure fleſh and blood; the righteous (too ſecurely meaſuring others by their own ſhadovvs, and confident in the goodneſſe of their cauſe) are not ſo vigilant for good, as the wicked are for evil: ſo good men ſleep while theeves and murderers watch to pillage and deſtroy them: the willing ſpirit is infirm, vvhile ſleepleſſe malice is patient of any labour or hardſhip to accompliſh its deſigne.

with him a great multitude] He had the place of an Apoſtle, to lead men to the faith of Chriſt, but he leadeth them to deſtroy Chriſt; what is, or ever was vvorſe, than the beſt things corrupted? you ſee vvhoſe diſciples they are, vvho lead multitudes, againſt Chriſt and his truth.

with ſwords and ſtaves] To take him by force, as they uſed to apprehend malefactours, verſe 55. and to keep him from reſcue.

V. 48. gave them a ſigne] Becauſe many of them knew him not, and others might be miſtaken in the night.

whomſoever I ſhall kiſſe] In effect he ſaith, whomſoever I ſhall familiarly ſalute: for in ſuch ſalutes, they were wont to kiſſe. 1 Sam. 10. 1. & 20. 41. 2 Sam. 14. 33. & 15. 5. & 19. 39. Exod. 18 7. Acts 20. 37. 2 Sam 20. 9. Luke 7. 45. Rom. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 1 Theſ 5. 26. 1 Pet. 5. 14. So that Judas is not ſaid to have named him, but to give a ſign of friendſhip, that he might under that ſemblance play the traitour; how vainly impudent are ſinners, hoping to impoſe on God? Jeſus foreſaw all this, and diſcovered it.

V. 49. haile Maſter] χαῖρε ῥαββὶ, it was an uſual form of ſalutation which the Hebrews expreſſed by שלום לך ſhalom lecha, or שלום לך ſhalom lach. Jud. 6. 23. & 19 20. 1 Sam. 25. 6. 1 Chron. 12. 18. Exod. 18. 7. they asked each other לשלום to peace, or of peace, and each others welfare; the 70. give it καὶ ἠσπάσαντο ἀλλήλους; they ſaluted each other: the Greek, here tranſlated to the letter, ſignifieth rejoyce: which the Latines interpret, ſalve, as we ſay, God ſave you; ſo this traytor, in words wiſheth Chriſt's proſperity, joy, and ſafety, as in general, ſo poſſibly he would be underſtood concerning the peeſent danger of his enemies; as if he had been none of their company: ſo impudent is he, that he bluſheth not to lie againſt ſo evident a truth; of him may be ſaid that is written, Pſal. 55. 21. The words of his mouth were ſmoother than butter, but war was in his heart ----and he calleth him Maſter, whoſe Magiſtery he not only acknowledgeth not, but openly contemneth, by leading up an armed company to apprehend him as a malefactor.

V. 50. Friend wherefore art thou come?] He upbraideth not his perfidiouſneſſe, but with all mildneſſe inviteth him to repentance: thus ſtiling him, he ſaith not what he was, but what he ſhould have been; or what he ſeemed, but was not: nor asketh he the cauſe of his coming, as not knowing it, for he had before detected him; but as openly reproving him; as if he had ſaid, thou haſt confederated with mine enemies to deſtroy me; thou haſt forſaken my ſervice, and the fellowſhip of theſe my Diſciples; wherefore comeſt thou to us again? what haſt thou to do here? by theſe like queſtions, he would recall the traytor to confer with his own conſcience: I know thee well, and thy intention; conſider, and be aſhamed of thy treaſon, by ſo much more deteſtable, by how much more vailed with ſemblance of love.

laid hands on Jeſus] God ſo permitting, that thereby the work of our redemption might be accompliſhed in his death and paſſion: he is taken, that we may be delivered.

V. 51. One of them] Namely Peter; and the ſervants name was Malchus, whoſe right ear was cut off. Joh 18. 10.

drew his ſword] Miſunderſtanding Chriſts words. Luke 22. 36. 38.

V. 52. Put up again thy ſword] Thou art no Magiſtrate to right me, nor am I to be defended by the ſword, who could have obtained twelve legions, an army of Angels to fight for me and reſcue me, verſe 53. but he came into the world not to fight, but to dye for ſinners, if Chriſt would not have Peter, being a private man, ſtrike with a ſword in defence of his own ſacred perſon wronged and ſo highly injured, what do they who uſe the ſword in unjuſt quarrels, and without juſt calling?

for all they] Gen. 9. 6 Rev. 13. 10. He meaneth all they who kill, being not called thereto by the ordinance of God, either by a general warrant, as the Magiſtrate; or ſome ſpecial command from God, as 2 Kings 9 7. all ſhall periſh who ſmite for private revenge: he ſpeaketh not of the publike Magiſtrate, who beareth not the ſword in vain; nor doth he ſo limit the puniſhment of murderers to the ſword, as if none periſhed otherwiſe: the main is to ſhew, that God, who hath determined to maintain humane ſocieties, will commonly make them exemplary in this life, who are deſtructive to others: rarely doth a murder go unpuniſhed here. See Pſal. 55. 23.

V. 53. Thinkeſt thou] This is the ſecond reaſon whereby Chriſt repreſſeth Peters endeavour ſo to defend him: he had no need of mans defence, who was now to die for mans redemption: cannot I deſtroy my enemies by my word which gave them life? have I not innumerable companies of Angels ready to defend me, if I would give them commiſſion ſo to do? See Auguſtin. Honorat. epiſt. 120 c. 11.

twelve legions] The Roman army conſiſted ordinarily of twelve legions: ſuch an army of Angels could Chriſt have had: or it is a definite number for an indefinite; more than twelve, importeth an infinite number See Dan. 7. 10. 2 Kings 19. 35 Iſa 37. 36. he here oppoſeth Angels, to men; many to few; heavenly to earthly; the invincible to the infirm; where theſe charge, an hoſt is not able to inveſt one of them. See on Luke 8. 30.

V. 54. But how then] The reaſon why I do not now pray to God for Angels to defend me, is becauſe the Scripture hath foretold my death for mans ſalvation; not that I doubt of ſpeeding, were it neceſſary, and according to my Fathers will.

that thus it muſt be] Iſaiah 53. 10. As ſome ſay, neceſſitate conſequentiæ, non conſequentis, in neceſſity of conſequence (in reaſon; becauſe God is trne) not of the conſequent (in fact becauſe God is juſt, and his preſcience according to which he revealed this in Scripture, nihil ponit in eſſe: his foreſeeing of ſin, is no cauſe thereof) for the Jews who thus apprehend, and crucifie Chriſt, are not hereby excuſed; which they muſt have been, had that they did been of ſimple, inevitable, neceſſity, not voluntary: there is no neceſſity to ſin, nor ſin where there is an abſolute neceſſity: for God cannot be the authour of any ſin: as there is no ſin in him, ſo neither is there any of him. Fulgent. See Luke 24. 26. 44.

V. 55. Are ye come out] He expoſtulateth with them, who came with ſo much warlike proviſion againſt him; vvhat need you arm ſo many againſt one unarmed man? wickedneſſe is ever covvardly and diffident.

as againſt a thief] See on verſe 47. as if ſo be you were to apprehend a thief, or ſome deſperate malefactour, who knovving his offence to be capital and unpardonable, would rather fight deſperately, than yield himſelf to the hand of juſtice.

V. 56. That the Scriptures] Lam. 4. 20. And all the reſt which foretold of Chriſts ſufferings.

Then all his diſciples forſook him] As he had foretold, verſe 31.

V. 57. And they that] See on John 18. 2. Mark 14. 54.

to Caiaphas] After that he had been brought to Annas. See on John 18. 13. and on Luke 22. 60.

V. 58. But Peter followed him] This is ſet dovvn to make vvay to the ſtory of Peters denying him. verſe 69. &c.

afar off] As one not belonging to him. Here was fear ſo mixed vvith love, that follow he vvould, but not ſo near as to come into evident danger, if they ſhould apprehend him alſo as one of Jeſus diſciples.

unto the high-prieſts palace] the high-prieſts houſe is alſo mentioned, as verſe 3. to the evidence of the hiſtory. Palaces are houſes of Princes; ſuch vvere the high-prieſts for their authority and dignity among the people of Iſrael. How Peter was admitted into this place, we read John 18. 15. at firſt as a ſtranger there, he ſtood at the doore vvithout, untill the other diſciple (not John the Evangeliſt, as ſome conjecture but ſome other believer and ſecret diſciple of Chriſt, vvho not being knovvn to be ſuch, might more ſafely be there) vvho vvas knovvn to the high-prieſt, ſpake to the keeper of the door, and brought in Peter.

ſate with the ſervants] vvho vvaited there to attend their maſters coming out of the invvard place, vvhere they vvere buſie in examining Jeſus; they had diſmiſſed the Roman ſouldiers

when they had brought Jeſus bound to the High Prieſt, and now it ſeems their own ſervants waited on them in the night; Peter putteth himſelf into their company, that he might (as it is probable he hoped) without ſuſpect hear and ſee the event, what they would do to Jeſus; if he were put to death, that he might ſhift away ; if he were onely ſcourged and ſo diſmiſſed, then he would be ready at hand to attend him : or however, if Jeſus by his Divine power ſhould deliver himſelf, Peter might ſuppoſe, that he would alſo deliver him from danger. Now it is probable, that Peter did not thus far ingage himſelf out of any vain curioſity, but out of love and zeal to the perſon, and ſafety of his Maſter , yet was it incautiouſly done to put himſelf into the way of ſuch dangerous tentation whereof Chriſt had before warned him and the reſt, verſe 31 34 all ye ſhall be offended, becauſe of me this night, &c. and to confident Peter he ſaid, this night before the Cock crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice.

V. 59. Sought falſe witneſs] They were all reſolved to deſtroy Chriſt, and therefore regard neither equity nor truth ; but lay hold of the moſt impious means to compaſs their deſign : what greater injuſtice, than for Judges to ſuborn falſe witneſſes ? malice is ever diligent, but commonly unjuſt.

V. 60. Yet found they none] That could accuſe him of any evil ; or whoſe witneſs agreed, Mark 14.56. and therefore could they not legally condemn him. See Deut. 17.6 Thus God did every way ſhew forth his Sons innocency ; that it might appear, that he died not for himſelf, but us.

two falſe witneſſes] For one would not ſerve, Deut. 19. 15. they, are called falſe witneſſes, for depraving, and miſ-reporting Chriſts words and meaning.

V. 61. This fellow] οὗτος ; This man. See on Chapter. 12. 24.

I am able to deſtroy] Though that had been true if he had ſaid it, it was falſe that he did ſay ſo ; juſtly might he ſay, every day they wreſt my words ; all their thoughts are againſt me for evil, Pſal. 56. 5. he ſpake concerning the Temple of his body, which when they ſhould deſtroy, he would raiſe it up in three dayes John 2. 16. they to render him odious to the people, (overmuch addicted to, and truſting in the dignity of their Temple) teſtifie that he ſaid, that he would raiſe up the material Temple in three dayes : we need not wonder that ſo many falſe, and injurious conſtructions are made of our words ; thus they uſed Chriſt who could not erre..

V. 62. Anſwereſt thou nothing] Seeing their Depoſitions inſufficient, he endeavoureth to draw ſomething from Chriſt himſelfe.

V. 63. But Ieſus held his peace] Seeing it was to no end to ſpeake, the Sentence being given , before any witneſſe was examined.

I adjure thee] So 1 Kings, 22. 16. ἐξορκίζω ; the meaning is, upon thy oath, and by the authority of a Iudge ; in the Name of God, I command thee : In the Primitive Church, they were called Exorciſts , who having the gift of Miracles , caſt out Devils, by calling on the Name of Chriſt. See on Acts 19. 13.

that thou tell us whether thou be the Chriſt] This he asketh not intending to beleeve the Truth , but to deſtroy Chriſt ; thinking hereby to enſnare him , if he confeſſed it, as a blaſphemer ; if he denyed it, as an Impoſtor, and deceiver of the people.

V. 64. Thou haſt ſaid] See on chap. 27 11. It is an ingenious confeſſion of Truth, which Mark more expreſly hiſtorifieth ; he ſaid I am.

neverthe leſſe] Or furthermore.

I ſay unto you] I tell you , though ye will not beleeve what I now ſay ; but hereafter ſhall, when yee ſee it come to paſſe.

hereafter ye ſhall ſee] Chapter 16. 27. At my ſecond coming ; leſt they ſhould conclude, that Chriſt could not be the Sonne of God, whom they had convented before them, and bound as a malefactor ; he who could have convinced them by more evident arguments (the time of his birth ; the Scepter departed from Iudah, the place, Bethleem ; the linage, of the ſeed of David, the manner, of a Virgin ; by his Doctrine, which he preached to the poor ; by his miracles, &c. would propoſe (for preſent) two more obſcure Arguments : one from his ſitting at Gods right hand which they ſhould once ſee : the other from his coming in the Clouds of heaven, to judgement : as if he ſaid, you cannot deny him to be the Meſſias, and Sonne of the living God whom ye ſhall ſee coming to judge you, whom ye ſhall ſee ſitting at Gods right hand: I tell you this novv, to leave you unexcuſable then, if you vvill not novv beleeve.

at the right hand of power] In the higheſt honour vvith God. Luke 22.69. of the power of God, that is, of the divine Majeſty, Hebr. 1.3. & 8 1. or of God Almighty, Mark 16.19. Acts 7. 55. Rom. 8. 34. Epheſ. 1. 20. Coloſ 3.1.

in the clouds of heaven] See on Chap. 24 30.

V. 65. The high preiſt rent his cloathes] As if his heart were ready to break, for zeal to Gods Honour : ſo the Iews uſed to do at blaſphemy. 2 Kings 18. 37. & 19. 1. So the ancient heathens alſo did in their mourning.

what further need have we of witneſſes] To prove that this man ought to dy. He pretended that Chriſt blaſphemed, in ſaying, that they ſhould ſee him ſitting on Gods right hand, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven ; vvhich becauſe they all heard, he takes it for granted, that they needed no other vvitneſs to condemne him (as vvorthy by their Lavv to dy) but his ovvn publick confeſſion, vvich they judged blaſphemy.

V. 66. What thinke ye ?] What puniſhment doe you think him vvorthy of ? he vvould have Ieſus condemned by a common conſent, and ſentence of all : and asketh that vvhich he full vvell knevv ; for they had already condemned him before his tryall, and reſolved to deſtroy him, whatſoever he ſhould or could alledge in his ovvn juſt defence. Sinners vvould have all ſhare with them in their ſinne, hoping to find ſome patronage in multitudes with them conſenting in wickedneſs.

V. 67. Then did they ſpit in his face] A token of contempt and abhorring, Numbers 12.14. Iſai. 50.6. See alſo Deut. 25 9. Iob 30. 10. Luke 18. 32.

and buffetted him] Iſaia 50. 6

palms of their hands] See Chap. 5.39 Mark 14. 65. Iohn 18.22. and 19.3. The word in the Greek, is, ἐῤῥάπισαν, which ſignifieth to beat with rods, (as alſo doth ῥαβδίζω) with ſtaffe or club, Acts 16 22. we in a more generall expreſſion, give ῥαβδίζειν, to beat or ſmite ; as alſo doth the Syriac here מחין הוו ליה machin havu leh, cædebant eum, they beat or ſtrook him : which Marke 14.65. giveth by κολαφίζειν to buffet him ; 'tis moſt likely they did both buffet and ſwitch him, for Marke uſeth both theſe words.

V. 68. Propheſie unto us] This they required after they had covered his face, Mark 14 65. as if they had ſaid, by this we will try thee ; if thou art ſo much as a Prophet, tell us now, who ſmote thee ?

V. 69. Now Peter] Mark 14. 66. Luke 22. 55. Iohn 18. 25. After that the Evangeliſt had ſhewed what hitherto became of Chriſt ; he interſerteth the relation of that which befell Peter, and was done by him, of whoſe enterance into the High Prieſts houſe, he ſpake before, verſe 58. in all which we have an eminent example of the beſt mens infirmity (a grave document of humility, vigilancy and cautiouſneſs to all, that they beware they fall not) as alſo of Gods infinite mercy to the penitent, to the comfort of wounded Conſciences, in that he gives repentance, and forgiveth the penitent.

ſate without in the Palace] Remote from the Conſiſtory of the High Prieſt ; but ſome think in the ſame room, becauſe he went out after, verſe 71. but ſo might he doe from the common Hall, where the ſervants and multitude were. This word ἔξω, without, muſt not here be underſtood of ſome place out of the Houſe, but to import that he was not in the upper or inward part thereof, where Caiaphas and his aſſiſtants were examining Ieſus, but in an inferiour part of the Houſe, he was, ἐν τῇ αὐλῇ κάτω, Mark 14. 66. beneath in the Palace, Luke 22 55. we give the ſame word in the Hall ; in the middeſt whereof, they had kindled a fire, at which Peter ſate and warmed himſelf among the company.

Jeſus of Galilee] Either for diſtinction ſake, becauſe there were many of that name, Acts 13.6. Col. 4. 10. or in way of contempt. See Iohn 7.50.

V. 70 I know not what thou ſayeſt] I neither know him, nor well underſtand what you mean hereby. He anſwereth not directly to the Damoſels objection, I was not with him ; unwilling to deny Chriſt, and not willing to come into danger, he diſſembled : ſeldome is the Truth of moſt high concernment confeſſed before the wicked, without great danger, but never is Chriſt denied without the greateſt.

V. 71. This fellow] οὗτος , this Man. See on Chapter, 12. 14, V. 72 I doe not know the Man] Now he more plainly denied Chriſt, than Verſe 69. ſins have ſpeedy growths.

V. 73. Thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee] Comming nearer to the Syriac and Samaritan Dialect , than that of Ieruſalem. See Iudges 12.6.

V. 74. Then began he to curſe] Mark by what Degrees ſinne ſpringeth up , if once admitted to Roote : Firſt , he denieth his Maſter , then forſweareth him : Thirdly , curſeth himſelfe , if he knew him ; or imprecateth ſome fearfull miſchief to come upon himſelfe, if he knew him : See here the wretched Fruit of confidence in our ſelves : it is a ſad Document hence to be learned ; let him that thinketh he ſtands, take heed leſt he fall.

and wept bitterly] The falls of Gods ſervants humble them, and cauſe in them a godly ſorrow to repentance, never to be repented of, and ſelf loathing for their doing that which diſpleaſeth God. See Ezekiel 6. 9. See on Luke 22. 62. So the ſinnes of the regenerate, as thoſe Canaanites, which ſhould have been utterly deſtroyed by Iſrael; which not being done, they prove, as Joſhua ſaid, ſnares and traps unto us, ſcourges in our ſides, and thorns in our eyes, Joſhua 23. 13. but though we cannot ſo overcome them in this fraile ſtate of mortality, yet by Gods mercy, humbling us by them, and giving us repentance for them, they are as thoſe Gibeonites, Joſh. 9. 23. put under tribute, and made hewers of wood, and drawers of water for the Houſe of God; that is, full of zeale and matter of repentance to ſalvation, 2 Cor. 7. 11. ſo Peter wept bitterly, and was after more zealous, even to death.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verſe 1. WHen the morning was come] As ſoon as it was day, Luke 22. 66. they ſo much deſired Chriſts death, that they could not ſleep that night. Chapter 26. 47 See Prov. 4. 16. malice is vigilant as the Devil, and induſtrious to doe miſchief.

all the chief Prieſts] Mark 15. 1. Luke 22. 66. John 18. 28. By all the chief Prieſts, underſtand the High Prieſt, his ſurregate, and thoſe of the Sanhedrim: where the High Prieſt and his Sagan, or ſecond High Prieſt ſate chief, See 2 King. 23. 4. for though the High Prieſt did not alwayes ſit in that Court in perſon, yet in matters relating to the Civill and Eccleſiaſticall intereſt (as they would have this cauſe of Chriſt to do) wherein both Conſiſtories aſſembled, (as here, all the chief Prieſts and Elders of the people tooke counſell againſt Ieſus) there it is moſt likely that the High Prieſt and his Counſell, would meet with the civill Conſiſtory of ſeventy Judges: it is Satans miſchievous policy to unite conſpiratours againſt Chriſt, ſo, as that none of them will be miſſing to an impious convention and enterprize, whereas the ſame findeth his chief advantage againſt Truth by dividing the Profeſſours thereof, or by making them cold, and ſecure on the goodneſſe of their cauſe.

to put him to death] They blaſphemouſly accuſed him of blaſphemy: (it is uſuall for the wicked to caſt their own faults upon the guiltleſſe) but fearing that Pilate would not put him to death for that, and themſelves had no power (Iohn 18. 31.) they now reſolve to endite him of treaſon and ſedition, as appears in the charge Iohn 19. 12.

V. 2. When they had bound him] They put on him all appearances of a malefactour: ſo they leade the Holy Ieſus bound to Pilate; the Lord of Life, to be tryed as a Delinquent, for his life.

delivered him to Pilate] That they might deſtroy him by the abuſed hand of juſtice: for to have done it privily, would have been infamous and dangerous to the actours as murther uſeth to be; and in a tumultuous way, would have been apparently dangerous to the liberties of the City, and priviledges of State. See Luke 24. 20. But God in his incomprehenſible wiſedome, and love to mankind, had appointed, that for the work of our redemption, he ſhould die that death, which was then moſt infamous; that thereby he might deſcend as low by humility, and diſhonour, ſhame and infamy for mans repair, as mans ambition had aymed high to his own ruine, and deſtruction: there man affected to be as God: here Chriſt God and Man, ſuffereth as the worſt of men.

V. 3. VVhen he ſaw that he was condemned] By the Conſiſtory of the Prieſts, whoſe Sentence he now thought would take effect; which it may be, fell out beſides his expectation, who poſſibly might dream that his Maſter would now have eſcaped their hands by Miracle, as at other times he had done, Luke 4. 29, 30. Iohn 10. 39. and 8. 59.

repented himſelfe] Was ſorry that he had done it; this was not any effect of Faith, or love to God, ſuch as is a condition of pardon, Acts 2. 38. Matth. 9. 13. Mark 1. 4. Luke 24. 47. Acts 11. 18. 2 Corrinth. 7. 9. 2 Pet. 3. 9. but of deſperate and impatient ſorrow, proceeding of ſelf-love, and fear of that which his conſcience told him, he muſt ſuffer; not that he had offended God, or could hope and truely believe in his mercy: I believe (ſaith Ambroſ. l. 2. de pœn. c. 5. if that Book be his) that even Iudas might not have been excluded from pardon, by ſo great mercy of God, ſi pœnitentiam non apud Judæos, ſed apud Chriſtum egiſſet: true repentance is in hope of pardon by Chriſt, to turn unto God, in newneſs of life.

and brought again the thirty pieces] To reſtore that which is unjuſtly taken away, is ſuch a neceſſary practiſe, as that there can be no true repentance without it: but this reſtitution to the Prieſts, nothing advantaged Judas, who neither beleeved, nor turned unto the Lord: the thirtie pieces, were thirtie Shekels, of which, See on Nehemiah, 5. 15.

V. 4. I have ſinned] Here was contrition, confeſſion to the Prieſt, and as much ſatisfaction as Iudas could make them; yet no remiſſion: he had ſinned againſt Chriſt, and the Prieſts could not forgive him.

innocent blood] Thus he that betrayed him, acknowledged his innocency; which ſerveth to acquit Ieſus, and to condemn Iudas: he confeſſed, quaſi evitaſſe ſit pœnam, præveniſſe ſententiam. Cypr. lib. 2. Ep. 8. as if to prevent the ſentence, were to avoid the puniſhment; he ſaith innocent blood, that is an innocent man: thus God would wound the conſciences, both of Iudas and the impious high Prieſts.

what is that to us?] Such is their hardneſs of heart; they could not ſay he was guilty of any thing, wherewith they could charge him, (though they who gave money to betray him, would have the world believe, that they were guiltleſs) they lay all on Iudas; yet they ſtill proceed to kill the Lord of Life.

ſee thou to that] Thus audaciouſly doe they tranſmit their ſinne to others, and in their hardneſſe of Heart and impenitencie deſiſt not from acting what they knew they had wickedly deſigned; but aginſt their owne Conſciences, precipitately goe on.

V. 5. He caſt down the pieces] To ſhew his utter diſlike of his own fact; perhaps to perſwade them to deſiſt, and not to preſent him to Pilate to be condemned.

and hanged himſelf] The word here uſed, is ἀπήγξατο, from whence, a learned Author ſtarteth this uſeleſs Paradox, that Iudas died of melancholy, or ſuffocation by ſome ſuch humour, for which many things are alledged to very little purpoſe; and were it not to as little, to be expenſive of time and paper in refutation, the invalidity of the Arguments, on which it ſeemeth grounded, might eaſily be ſhewed. Suidas rendereth the word, ἀπήγξατο by βρόχον ἧψεν; his Interpreter Æmilius Portus; thus, laqueam nexuit quo ſe ſtrangulavit, ſtrangulatus eſt, laqueo vitam finivit; the value of ἄγχω, ἄγχομαι, ἀπάγχω, ἀπάγχομαι, in the proper and common uſes eaſily appeareth in every Lexicon; and ſufficiently may in the ordinary acceptation of theſe words by ſeverall Authours: So that where Phyſitians uſe them to expreſſe ſuffocation by Melancholly, &c. they tranſlate them from their proper ſenſe, to a figurative: concerning the Syriac word חנק by him cited: the learned in that tongue give it, ſuffocavit ſtrangulavit ſuſpendit, in its proper ſenſe, metaphorically it alſo ſignifieth moleſtia affecit, v. Shind. Pentegl. citing this very place in the Syriac חנק נפשה tranſlateth it ſtrangulavit ſeipſum. So alſo that 2 Sam. 17. 23. & præcipit ſuper domum ſuam ויחנק Targ. ואתחנק & ſtrangulavit ſe. So tranſlateth the Arab. here, & abiit & ſuſpendit ſe, and he went and hanged himſelf. So Beza on Act. 1. ſaith, it properly ſignifieth to ſtrangle, which he interpreteth conſtrictâ gulâ necare: that Iudas and Abithophel hanged themſelves the ancient Fathers generally affirm from this Scripture, &c. He that betrayed our Saviour, now condemns himſelf to Hell, Acts 1. 24. not enduring to ſee his Maſter ſuffer, in whom he could not believe unto ſalvation: it is a miſerable ſanctuary againſt ſorrow, which the deſperate ſelf-murderers find in death.

V. 6. It is not lawfull, &c.] To put them into the Treaſury of the Temple: the hire of a whore might not be brought into it. Whence ſome obſerve, that no proceed of ſinne againſt the Morall Law, or the Ceremoniall; was to be brought into their Treaſury, but rather to be held execrable, and an abomination to the Lord, who required his Sanctuary to be reverenced, Levit. 19. 30. See Deut. 23. 18.

the price of blood] They were not afraid to give money to ſhed blood, but to put it into the treaſury afterward: they feared to defile their treaſury, but not their ſouls. Hypocrites ſtrain at gnats, and ſwallow camels, chap. 23. 24.

V. 9. Then was fulfilled] When the Prieſt bought the Potters field, with the thirty pieces of ſilver, which Judas had received for betraying Chriſt, and reſtored unto them again.

by Jeremiah the Prophet] Seeing this propheſie is read in Zachariah, it may be it was delivered at firſt by Jeremiah, and after written by Zachariah, who in many things imitates him, hence the Hebrews ſay, the ſpirit of Jeremiah was in Zachariah : or it might be partly out of Jeremiah ; and partly out of Zachariah ; for Ieremiah alſo bought a field. V. 10. As the Lord appointed me] Theſe words run, as if they were ſpoken by the Prophet, to ſhew that in Zachariah, was a type of that in Matthew.

V. 11. Art thou the King of the Jewes ?] Becauſe the Jewiſh Rulers had, with that accuſation, given him up to Pilate , as one that affected , or challenged , the Crowne of Iſrael.

thou ſayeſt it] As the thing is, though not in thy ſenſe, chap.26. 64. or, doſt thou ſay it, Iohn 18.34.

V. 12. He anſwered nothing] To this their ſecond accuſation : he anſwered to the former, verſe 11. now he did not anſwer, either out of a deliberate purpoſe that he might die, or becauſe he knew their reſolution, and what ſhould be. See Chapter 26. 63. Iſaiah 53. 7.

V. 13. How many things ?] Many things indeed were objected, but either of no probability (as that of his affecting the Kingdome) or no proof for them, as forbidding payment of Tribute to Caſar ; or far from the matter of their preſent charge ; as his filling Iewry with his teaching : all which calumnies needed no refutation.

V. 14. to never a word] Or, not ſo much as to one thing : As Chapter, 18. 16. Or , not ſo much as one word , Iſaiah , 53. 7.

to releaſe a priſoner] One priſoner : it may be they, at the beginning of that cuſtome, deſired it, as a memorial of their deliverance out of Egypt.

V. 16. A notable priſoner] A robber : Iohn 18. 40. a raiſer of ſedition, and a murderer, Mark 15. 7. Acts 3. 14.

V. 17. When they were gathered together] To wit, when before the multitude there was mention made of this cuſtome, Mark 15.8.

Barabbas or Jeſus] It appeareth that Pilate was very willing to ſave Ieſus, in that he ſet ſo vile a man againſt him : very likely it is, that he could have named ſome other priſoner, who had been committed for ſome lighter offence ; but he names Barrabas, in hope the people would not have choſen him, but Chriſt.

called Chriſt] By many ſo accounted.

V. 18. He knew that of envy] As well as by what he had heard of him, ſo by their frivolous charges : and it is moſt likely that Pilate, who had been the Roman Deputy all the time of Ieſus's publick Miniſtry, and doing Miracles, (the report whereof filled every mouth of that people) had ſome about him, who informed concerning Ieſus, as well as all other eminent and conſiderable things acted in that imperial City and Province, whereof he had the charge ; therefore no doubt but that he had likewiſe heard how the High Priſts ſtood affected toward Ieſus ; how they envied the Honour which the people gave him ; and that many Diſciples followed him.

they had delivered] That is, Ieſus into the civill Magiſtrates hand : ſo true is that of Syneſius , de provident ; Envie is not ſo much ſuppreſſed by Vertue, as inflamed ; or not ſo much appeaſed, as enraged.

V. 19. with that juſt man] Guiltleſs, good and innocent. See v. 4.24. Luke 23.47. Acts 3.14. and 23.14. & 7. 52. Beware thou condemn him not, though the Iewes importune thee ſo to do. She thus admoniſheth not without juſt ground and reaſon : firſt from the innocency of Chriſt, in that he was a juſt and holy man, for favour of men, and an impious vulgar; to deſtroy one good man, were an horrid impiety.

I have ſuffered many things, &c.] I have been much troubled about him in my ſleep this night : which might come to paſſe by ſpecial providence, the more to atteſt Chriſt's innocency, and to render Pilate more unexcuſable. Here is her ſecond reaſon, why ſhe would by no means have her Husband interpoſe, or meddle with that buſineſs, for the High Prieſts againſt Chriſt.

V. 20. But the chief Prieſts] Iohn 18. 40. Acts 3. 14. Here appeareth the devilliſh malice of the Prieſts, perſwading the people (whom they ought to have led to Chriſt and ſalvation) to deſtroy Ieſus with their out-cries : Duces eſſe principes erroris maxime prophanum ; Theodoret, in Jerem. it is moſt prophane for Princes to be leaders into errour : or, for the chief among the people to be ringleaders of errour.

and deſtroy Jeſus] By not asking his life : or that they ſhould not onely ask pardon for Barabbas but alſo clamour to have Ieſus put to death : as they did, verſ. 22.

V. 21. Said unto them] To the multitude of the Iews.

they ſaid Barabbas] Being before inſtructed by their Prieſts and Elders, as Salome was by Herodias , to ask Iohn Baptiſts head. See on Iohn 18. 40.

V. 32. let him be crucified] Too much pitty in ſparing Barabbas, and as much impious ingratitude toward Ieſus. Here is an example of an inconſtant and precipitate vulgar ; commonly ruled by paſſion and faction, ſeldome by right reaſon : multitudes are as fickle as the great waters, whoſe billows run furiouſly, one forcing on and moving another according to the ſeverall winds which blow upon them. So there; but now they cried Hoſanna, and preſently, Crucifie, Crucifie him (ſuch miſchievous influence had the Prieſts on the peoples levity :) Firſt, ſave I pray, (ſee Chapter 21. 9.) then Crucifie him ; ſo their High Prieſt blindly roved, Iohn 11. 50. you doe not conſider that it is expedient for us, that one man die for the people, and that the whole Nation periſh not, &c. So here the people cry Hoſonna ſonne of David ; and Crucifie him, yet not underſtanding that by being crucified, he ſhould ſave them.

V. 23. What evil hath he done ?] The Iudge did reaſonably enquire of a crime to be alledged, and proved by them, who were ſo audaciouſly forward to anticipate his ſentence, and to preſcribe ſo ſevere a puniſhment ; and this very queſtion ſummoned the people , to be witneſſes of Chriſts innocency, and their own fury.

they cried out the more] When they could doe nothing legally , or juſtly againſt him ; they fall to begging his Blood ; that the evill which they could not atchieve by Law, or Reaſon , Vociferando perficiant , Beda , they might doe by outcries.

V. 24. A tumult was made] He doubted, leſt they would take him by force, and raiſe ſome ſedition.

V. 25. His blood be on us, and on our children] That is, the guilt and puniſhment thereof, See Iohn 2. 19. if there be any offence committed in ſlaying him, let us and our poſterity ſmart for it, and bear the burden thereof, which they doe to this day ; and how heavily it fell on them, and their children, in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem ; the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtories abundantly ſhew ; the fruit of this raſh and wicked imprecation, came ſpeedily and heavily upon them then, See on Chapter, 24. 22. Iohn 19. 17.) but becauſe Chriſt had been ſo rudely handled by them, that he could carry it no longer, therefore they compelled Simon to carry it out of the City: ſome conceive that he onely helped Chriſt to bear it, carrying up the hinder part thereof, and cite to that end; Luke 23. 26. See Iohn 19. 34, 35, &c.

V. 37. The King of the Iewes] So was he indeed, though this were done in mockery. See Iohn 1. 49. and on Luke 23. 38 Iohn 19. 19. 22.

V. 38. Two thieves crucified with him] This was to diſhonor him, and to make the world believe that he alſo was a malefactor; therefore they plac't him in the midſt, as a principal ringleader of ſuch men: See Iſai. 53. 12. he was crucified with thieves, ſed quos paſſio jungebat, cauſa ſeparabat. Auguſtin. Bonifac. Ep. 50. But thoſe whom the like paſſion united, the cauſe ſeparated. See Luke 23. 41. This preceded in the head, Chriſt, which followed in many Martyrs.

V. 39. They that paſſed by] Who uſe to pity ſuch as ſuffer (though juſtly) See Lamentations 1. 12. Yet now they deride Chriſt, who was innocent; we read not that they were ſo inhumane and pittileſs to the thieves who were truely guilty, Luke 23. 41. See on Luke 23. 35.

V. 41. The chief Prieſts] Their malice to Chriſt was ſhewed in life and in death: it might ſeem much below their dignity, to be preſent at an execution, and it was unworthy of their high calling to inſult over a dying man.

V. 42. He ſaved others, himſelf he cannot ſave] He would not ſave himſelf, that he might ſave others: this is a ſcoff like that (Luke 4 23.) which the Proverb expreſſed, by Phyſitian cure thy ſelfe.

let him now come downe from the croſſe] Fooliſh perſecuters, he will riſe from the dead, who will not yield to your inſulting opprobries, by deſcending from the Croſſe; plus fuit mortem, reſurgendo, deſtruere, quam vitam, deſcendendo, ſervare. Gregor. hom. 21. It was more, to deſtroy death, by riſing again from the deed, than to preſerve life by coming down from the Croſſe: could Pilate ſay, what I have written, I have written; and ſhall not Chriſt perfect our ſalvation which he hath begun: but they ſay, let him come down and we will believe him: vain tempters, he will not ſo purchaſe credence with you, for, ſi deſcenderit neminem ſalvum faciet. Bernard. de 7. ſig. if he ſhould come down, he ſhould ſave none.

we will beleive him] This they ſaid in ſcorn, and confidence that he could not have come downe, if he would: for when he did more than this, by raiſing himſelf from the dead, (for it is more to reſtore, than to preſerve life) yet they believed not.

V. 43. He truſted in God.] Pſalm 22. 8.

if he will have him] or, if he delight in him, as Pſalm 22. 8. whence this ſeems to be taken.

V. 44. The thieves alſo] or, even the thieves; that is, one of the thieves. See Luke 23. 39. 40. and the like manner of ſpeaking, chap. 26. 8.

V. 45. From the ſixth houre] About noon; for they began their day at Sun-riſing, thence began their firſt houre of the day. See on Luke 23. 44. So was that literally performed which was ſpoken of Amo. 8 9. 10.

there was darkeneſſe] To ſhew Gods diſlike of their cruelty, he would not have the Sunne give light to ſo horrid an act, and as it were to ſee the Sunne of Righteouſneſſe ſo unworthily handled; a natural Eclipſe, it could not be: ſome thinke, it being ſo totall, ſo generall, and the Moon being now in the full (it being the middeſt of the lunar moneth, when the paſſeover was killed) and ſo of neceſſity, the body of the Moone (which uſeth to eclipſe the Sunne, by its interpoſition, and being between us and the Sunne) muſt be oppoſite to, and diſtant from the Sunne, the diametrical breadth of the Hemiſphere; the full Moon ever riſing at the Suns ſetting. Apollophanes, who is reported to have been at this time in Heliopolis a City of Egypt with Dionyſius Areopagita; when he ſaw this admirable Eclipſe, ſaid, Θείων ἀμοιβαὶ πραγμάτων, changes of the Divine works or adminiſtrations: but Dionyſius ſaid, ἢ τὸ θεῖον πάσχει, ἢ τῷ πάσχοντι συμπάσχει, either the Diety ſuffereth, or hath ſympathy with that which ſuffereth.

over all the land] Of Judæa, and the Countreyes and Regions near; or over all the earth as ſome ſuppoſe.

V. 46. My God] Pſal. 22. 1. This ſheweth that albeit in this bitter Agony, he had an heavy and intenſe ſorrow, a deep apprehenſion and ſenſe of the wrath of his Father againſt ſinne: yet he deſpaired not, for he called upon God, and called him his God, which termes and notions are not compatible with deſpair, apprehending no intereſt in God, or hope of audience in diſtreſs, Pſalm, 22. 1.

why haſt thou forſaken me] In my preſent apprehenſion: ſuffering my humane nature to feel ſo much miſery in ſenſe of thy abſence, and thine anger againſt ſinners, for whom I ſtand a ſurety: this is not the voyce of deſpair, but of ſo ſad a conflict with an heavy paſſion: why haſt thou left me in the hands of mine enemies, and comforteſt me not in theſe bitter ſorrows?

V. 47. Calleth for Elias] He called God his God, and they mock him, as if he called for Elias, becauſe the words are ſomething alike in the Hebrew, but more in the Chalde. Pſalm 22. 1. Whence it ſeemeth he tooke theſe words, accommodate to his preſent condition. אלי אלי eli eli my God, my God, See Mark 15. 34. אלהי אלהי elohi, elohi למא שבקתני lema Shebacthani. Targ. Theſe laſt words which the Greek retaineth, being Chalde or Syriac, the Hebrew being למה עזבתני, lama hazabtani, the Syr. שבקתני ſhebacthani: that which the Hebrew hath עזב dereliquit, the Syriac giveth by שבק ſhebac, reliquit, &c.

V. 48. Straitway] After he had ſaid I thirſt, John 19. 28. and they, or ſome of them had ſaid, This man calleth for Elias; preſently after that, one of them ran, &c.

a ſpunge] To ſuck it, for he could not otherwiſe drink of it, his hands being nailed to the Croſs.

filled it] See Pſalm 69 21. that he might ſuck ſome drink out of a full ſpunge, which out of an half-filled one he could not have done, having thereto no aſſiſtance of his hands, being faſtned with nailes to the Croſs.

with Vinegar] Or broken Wine, ſuch as the Romane Souldiers, had their allowance of; and did uſually drinke, mixed with water; to which purpoſe they might have a Veſſell then at hand by them. See John 19. 29. It may ſeem they mixed it with ſome other ingredients, Verſe 34. See Marke, 15. 23.

put it on a Reede] Or Cane. See on John 19. 29.

V. 49. The reſt ſaid] Others beſides them that mocked him, as before.

V. 50. When he had cried] And uttered thoſe fore-mentioned words, John 19. 30. Luke 23 46.

againe] For he had cried aloud once before.

yielded up] ἀφεὶς, Let goe. He willingly commended his Spirrit, into his Fathers hands, Luke 23. 46. that is, He willingly died.

V. 51. The veil of the temple was rent] Some think, that which divided the holieſt of all, from the holy place, as Exod. 26. 31. 2 Chron. 3. 14. whereby was figured that the ceremonial law was aboliſhed, and the way to heaven more plainly laid open. Heb. 9. 8. & 10. 19. 20. 22. and the wal of ſeperation broken down. Epheſ. 2. 14. Others ſay that there were two veils, and which of the two was now rent, the inward or the outward, it is very uncertain; Jerom and ſome other of the ancients underſtand it of the outward, Cyril and others of the inward. See Iſ. Caſaub. exercit. 16. N. 127. See on Luke 23. 45.

The earth did quake] Theſe were ſignes of Gods anger againſt the Jews, and of Chriſts Divine Majeſty, See Pſal. 114. 7.

V. 52. The graves were opened] The grave-ſtones it ſeemeth were moved, though the dead bodies there interred came not out till after Chriſts reſurrection, as appears in the next verſe; hereby was ſhewed then, that our Saviour had overcome death: as in his own perſon, ſo for others.

many bodies of the Saints] Probably they were ſuch as were lately dead, who appearing, verſe 53. were known to many in the City (ſee on chap. 17. 3.) who well remembred them, and if others, then were they known, as Moſes and Elias on the mount, were known of the three Apoſtles there preſent with Chriſt: this is to give us aſſurance of our reſurrection from the dead.

which ſlept] This word is often uſed in Scripture to expreſſe the ſtate of the dead: and to intimate that as we have often awaked from ſleep, ſo ſhall we once from death, ſleep is but deaths elder brother. See John 11. 11.

aroſe] Either to appear as witneſſes of Chriſts reſurrection, or to attend Chriſt into heaven (who was the firſt fruits of them that ſlept, 1 Cor. 15. 20.) or both theſe.

V. 53. into the holy City] Into Jeruſalem, See on Chap. 4. 5. for the places of burial were in the ſuburbs, out of the city.

appeared unto many] Of the faithful, not unto all the people: ſo alſo Chriſt appeared but not to all, Acts 10. 41. For they who would not believe Moſes and the Prophets, neither would they, if one ſhould come to them from the dead. Luke 16.

V. 54. watching Jeſus] See on verſe 36. A guard of Souldiers uſed to watch thoſe who were crucified, Jo. Druſ. præteritor. l. 1. commanded by the Roman Deputy to ſee execution done, ſo that no private perſon could, or might preſume to take down a crucifyed body from the croſſe, without his leave and warrant; or, poſſibly though they were their kindred or friends, to bury them, how and where they would; therefore Joſeph of Arimathea begged the body of Ieſus, of Pilate, that he might decently interre it.

they feared greatly] They were much afraid of Gods wrath, haveing been inſtruments of cruelty exerciſed on Chriſt in his ſuffering; and having ſeen ſuch dreadful ſignes of Gods anger, as the extraordinary eclipſe, the earthquake renting of the rocks, and poſſibly the graves opening.

this was the Son of God] A man beloved of God; or not guiltleſſe onely, but more than a man; for they being heathen men eſteemed their great and excellent men, Sons of their Gods: See Luke 23. 47. It is not certain that they acknowledged the deity of Chriſt; See Dan. 3. 25.

V. 55. Afar off] Either in modeſty they would not be among the throng of Souldiers: or, it may be, they permitted none to come near the croſſe; or they were afraid to be queſtioned as his followers, as Peter was, chap. 26. 58.

which followed Ieſus] They had followed him out of Galilee, and would not leave him; ſo great was their zeal to the goſpel, and love to him: yet were they not all Galileans. Luke 8. 3. & 23. 27, 28.

V. 56. Mary Magdalen] So called of the place of her abode. See chap. 15. 39.

the mother of Iames and Ioſes] See Mark 6. 3.

the mother of Zebedees children] See chap. 20. 20. Whoſe name may ſeem to have been Salome, Mark 15. 40.

V. 57. When the even was come] Mark 15, 42. Luke 23. 50. John 19. 38. After the ninth hour, at three of the clock in the afternoon.

a rich man] The more likely to obtain the body of Pilate, and the more in danger of the malice of the Prieſts for his care of Chriſt.

of Arimathea] Or Rama, or Remathaim. See on Luke 23. 50. Ierom de loc. Hebraic. calleth it Armatha Sophim, the city of Elkana and Samuel, near Dioſpolis.

named Ioſeph] Chriſt was not buried obſcurely, but by the Governours conſent, by an honourable man, in a place not far diſtant, in a new ſepulchre; So that there cannot reaſonably be any doubt of his death, See Iſaiah 53. 9.

V. 58. Begged the body of Ieſus] For the bodies of condemned perſons were in the power of the Magiſtrates.

Pilate commanded the body to be delivered] See on verſe 54.

V. 59. In a clean linnen cloath] To bury it decently.

V. 60. In his own new tomb] which Ioſeph of Arimathea had prepared for himſelf, but none yet had laid in it; that none might ſuſpect the riſing of ſome other body: See on Luke 23. 53.

rolled a great ſtone] As the Jews uſed to do on the ſepulchres of their friends. See John 11. 38. 39. which he did to ſecure the body from abuſe by his implacable enemies; Gods providence diſpoſing all that was done about this, to remove ſuſpicion of his diſciples taking it away, as is objected, chapter 28. 13. alſo to ſet off the power and glory of Chriſts reſurrection, whom neither that weight nor the bands of death could hold from riſing again: this was laid by man but removed by an Angel.

V. 61. The other Mary] Mentioned verſe 56. See Mark 15. 47.

ſitting over againſt the ſepulchre] To ſee where Chriſt was layd, that they might enbalm his body, Luke 23. 55. 56.

V. 62. The day of preparation] So was any day called, that was next before any ſolemn feaſt. See Mark 15. 47. Luke 23. 54. John 19. 14, 31, 42.

V. 63 That deceiver] See John 7. 12. Thus would their reſtleſſe malice anul the power of his doctrine and miracles: thus they hoped to waſh from themſelves blood-guiltineſſe, by aſſerting the equity of his condemnation.

ſaid] Chap. 12. 40. Mark 8. 31. John 2. 19. which, by ſome of the Jews, came to their eares: for (generally all) the Jews jealous of the honour and ſafety of their temple, might in ſome debate with the diſciples occaſioned by Chriſt's words. John 2. 19. underſtand that he there ſpake of his reſurrection from the dead on the third day: for ſo Chriſt had taught them who were his diſciples, Matth. 16. 2. & 17. 23. Mark 9. 31. & 10. 34. or poſſibly the traitour Judas, then one of the twelve, had let fall ſomething before Chriſts enemies, concerning his riſing again the third day.

after three dayes] Mark 8. 31. for he was layd in the grave on friday, lay there all Saturday, which was their Sabbath, and roſe on the Lords day morning, which is ours, chap 28. 1.

V. 64 Untill the third day] According to the time ſet by Chriſt, for his reſurrection; for ſo they might keep his body ſafe till that time were paſt, and then probably they meant to have ſhewed it to the people, hoping thereby to convince him of untruth in this particular, which would weaken the credit of all the reſt of his doctrine.

the laſt errour ſhall be worſe than the firſt] A proverbiall form of ſpeech; the people will believe in him more than before, John 11. 12. 32. which they counted errour.

V. 65. Ye have a watch] He means the garriſon Souldiers, appointed for the guard of the temple. Acts 4. 1. & 5. 56. eſpecially at the Paſſeover, for fear of tumults, in that confluence of people; it may be they were the ſame who went with Judas to take Chriſt, John 18. 3.

as ye can] ὡς οἴδατε. As ye know, as ye can deviſe, or ye knovv vvel enough hovv to do it.

V. 66. They went] The cuſtody of the ſepulchre vvas committed to them that murdered Chriſt, that there might be no doubt of the truth of his reſurrection.

ſealing the ſtone] With ſome publique ſeal of office, vvhich might prohibit any to remove, or meddle vvith it, See Daniel 6. 17.

and ſetting a watch] Wickedneſſe can never be ſecure: all this but confirmed the truth of his reſurrection, See on verſe 60. all that the adverſaries of the truth of Chriſt ſhall at laſt effect, is to render it more certain and undoubted: had not all this been done by the malitious Jevvs, the ground of our faith concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt, had not been ſo evident: the enemies of Chriſt, againſt their vvils, and intentions, are made competent vvitneſſes of his povver and truth.

to ſee the ſepulchre] To ſee vvhether it vvere ſafe, and ſhut up as they ſavv it, chap. 27. 61. out of their love and fear: ſo ſolicitous vvere they for the body of Ieſus, that they might embalm him, Mark 16. 1. Luke 24. 1. Not knovving that he vvas riſen from the dead.

V. 2. There was] Or there had been.

a great earth-quake] Which ſeems to have been vvhen the vvomen vvere in their vvay, there vvas one at his paſſion chap. 27. 51. and another at his reſurrection. By many ſigns did the Lord manifeſt this glorious vvork of Chriſts riſing again a triumphant conquerer over death and hell; as to confirm our faith concerning the reſurrection of the dead: ſo alſo to form the hearts of theſe witneſſes thereof, to a reverend elevation of minde to the truth of Chriſts deity; by the power whereof, he not onely raiſed up his own humane body: but alſo manifeſted himſelf to be the Lord of life, who will alſo raiſe up ours from the duſt of the earth, which now trembled at the ſurrendry of her Lord to life again.

for the angel of the Lord] Or an angel, two are mentioned. Luke 24 4. John 20. 12. Either one was neereſt at hand to ſpeak for both, or one appeared at firſt, and two when they came back: this for importeth not a cauſe, but a conſequence of the earthquake: Chriſt riſing from the dead, gave this triumphant ſignal of his victory over death, hell, and the devil, as to the watch at Ieruſalem, ſo to the inhabitants of the earth, whoſe foundations he thus ſhook at his pleaſure; for it is moſt likely that he roſe in this earthquake.

rolled back the ſtone from the door] Performing the office of a door-keeper; not but that Chriſt could have done it without his miniſtery, but out of duty to Chriſt: alſo he removed it that the women might go into the ſepulchre, and ſee that Chriſt was gone thence, and that the ſouldiers might, to their aſtoniſhment, ſee what he came for; not to raiſe up Chriſt, who could command the creatures to give way to him; but for their ſakes who were to behold the ſame, and teſtify it to others. See Iuſtin. Martyr. quaeſt. 117.

and ſate upon it] Expecting the coming of thoſe women, to whom he was to declare and teſtifie the reſurrection of Chriſt; for they were but in the way when the earth ſhook as Chriſt roſe from the dead: they were ſolicitous by the way as they came, whom they ſhould get to roll away the ſtone, that they might go into the ſepulcre to enbalm Chriſt. Mark 16. 3. Here God (whoſe aid is never wanting in due time and manner, to holy deſires) provideth ſo, as that they found it readily opened by the Angel.

V. 3. His countenance was like lightning] As Dan. 10. 6. See here. chap. 17. 2. Mark 16. 5. ſaith, they ſaw a young man; that is, the Angel who had aſſumed that ſhape, which intimated him, of entire ſtrength and agility: this Majeſty in his countenance, ſhewed that he was no man of the vulgar, but an heavenly meſſenger.

white as ſnow] Acts 1. 10. See this phraſe, Pſal. 51. 7. Lam. 4. 7. Dan. 7. 9 Rev. 3. 4, 5. 18. & 44. & 6. 11. & 7. 9. 13.

V. 4. The keepers did ſhake] At the ſight of his glory, and in conſcience of their own guilt: ſeeing the earth tremble, the grave open, the heavy ſtone rolling away from the ſepulchre, the dead body which they had in charge to watch, gone; a perſon of ſuch a dreadful preſence, and heavenly glory, as ſpake him more than man; they could not but know, that they had not now to deal with infirm man, but God: therefore, all aſtoniſhed, they tremble, and become like dead men: here were two main cauſes of fear. 1. Their own horrour of conſcience, who were actors in the death of Jeſus. 2. Fear of their Governour, whoſe anger they might well expect, if he ſhould not credit their reports, but conſtrue all, as incredible excuſes of their own default, and negligence in watching. Thus God ſhewed them how vain it was to take up arms againſt him; and alſo made them witneſſes againſt themſelves and the malicious prieſts.

V. 5. The angel anſwered] To the womens fear, verſe 8. or he ſpake, as chap. 22. 1. it is poſſible that the watch coming to themſelves again, fled into the city, as verſe 11. as the women came ſome other way, ſo that they miſſed them; for the women, without any let by the watch, entred into the monument (which probably they would not have ſuffered, had they been preſent) they ſaw the angel, and were afraid, but not as theſe armed keepers: a good conſcience is the beſt armour, and ſureſt fortification.

feare not ye] Though the ſouldiers be fled for fear of me, yet be ye not diſmaied: they watched Chriſt for evill, ye ſeek him for good: the keepers had cauſe to fear Gods revenging hand, who helped to murder his beloved, onely Son; but you have cauſe of hope and joy, not fear and ſorrow: the reſurrection of Chriſt is a due cauſe of terrour to the enemy, and of joy to us who believe.

I know ye ſeek Ieſus] This is one cauſe, why he would not have them fear; for he is on their ſide, who came not with the impious watch, as enemies; but as faithful ſervants of their Lord, to do him honour; for he ſaw the proviſion which they brought to enbalm Chriſt.

was crucified] He nameth that which is a ſcandal to the world, as the Chriſtians ground of rejoycing, Gal. 6. 14.

V. 6 he is not here, he is riſen] This is another argument of conſolation; he is not now in the ſepulchre: that was not enough; for Magdalen thought they had conveyed him thence, John 20. 13. therefore he addeth, he is riſen, to life again; the conquerer of death, and Lord of life.

where the Lord lay] Believe your own eyes (See Mark 16. 14.) let them help to enforme you: ſee the place where the ſacred body of Chriſt was layed in the ſepulchre, he is not now there, but riſen from the dead.

V. 7. Go quickly and tell his diſciples] To put them out of their heavineſſe: the Lord will quickly comfort the afflicted, except the cauſe of his delay be in our ſelves.

he goeth before you into Galilee] So had Chriſt foretold them, Mark 16. 7. chap. 26. 32. (See Micah 2. 13.) therefore he ſaid, Luke 24. 6. remember how he ſpake unto you. See note thereon.

lo, I have told you] Aſſure your ſelves of it: fail not to deliver your meſſage I have delivered mine.

V. 8. with feare and great joy] Being affrighted at the ſight and preſence of the Angel, but comforted at the joyful tidings of Chriſts reſurrection.

to bring his diſciples word] They are made the firſt witneſſes of his reſurrection, quae ardentius dilexerunt, Cyprian de reſur. who more fervently loved, and more devoutly ſought Chriſt. Death began from that ſex, and of the ſame, God appointed the firſt witneſſe of life reſtored, in the reſurrection of Chriſt.

V. 9. Ieſus met them] Chriſt not onely ſent an angel to publiſh his reſurrection, but appeared in his own perſon to the women, and ſends them to tell his diſciples: heres both a remedie againſt fear, and reward of obedience.

all hail] See chap. 26. 49. χαίρετε, rejoyce ye; it is a form of ſalutation which the Syriack expreſſeth by שְׁלָם לְכֹן, ſhelom lechen, peace be unto you: as the Hebrews ſaid, שלום לכם ſhalom lachem, peace be unto you, fear not, Gen. 43. 23. the 70. ἵλεως ὑμῖν, Chald. שְׁלָם לְכוֹן, ſhelam lechon. So Moſes is diſmiſſed by Jetero, Exod. 4. 18. לֵךְ לְשָׁלוֹם lech leſhalom. 70. βάδιζε ὑγιαίνων, go in, or to peace, or health: Chriſt here not only ſaid this, but wrought the effect in their hearts, in a ſpirituall illumination and joy.

held him by the feet] Worſhipping him: Either they endeavoured ſo to do, and were prohibited by Chriſt, as John 20. 17. or Chriſt firſt appearing to Magdalen, forbade her onely to touch him then; but permitteth theſe now: (See John 20. 17.) for now they were comforted, and their wavering minds better aſſured than at firſt: moſt likely Chriſt haſtened Magdalen to contribute her information to the reſt; intimating that her holding him by the feet now, though holy, was unſeaſonable, he having aſſigned her a greater work, which ought firſt to be diſpatched; that his diſciples faith might run no longer an hazard, by her delay. See on John 20. 17.

and worſhipped him] Though the humanity of Chriſt be a creature, and ſo, not of, and by it ſelf to be adored with divine adoration, but the Deity, to whom, alone, all divine worſhip is due (Matthew 4. 10.) yet becauſe, from his conception, the Deity is perſonally and indiviſibly united to his humanity, and ſo Chriſt is truely God, as truly man, from whom the Deity cannot be divided, neither in true faith, nor faithful invocation; therefore whole Chriſt is to be adored; that is, God the eternall word become fleſh, in, and with the humanity of Chriſt.

V. 10. Tel my brethren] His diſciples: this high title Chriſt gave them before, chap. 12. 50. ſo now alſo after his reſurrection, to ſhew the continuance of his affection to them. See Pſalm. 22. 22. John 20. 17. Heb. 2. 11. Rom. 8. 29.

V. 11. ſome of the watch came into the city] Now appear another ſort of witneſſes, above all exception, becauſe of the adverſaries partie; which this Evangeliſt exactly relateth, ſhewing particularly when, who, to whom, and with what ſucceſſe theſe teſtified concerning thoſe things they had ſeen. 1. the time was, before the women could come to the ſepulchre, the watch themſelves ran into the city, to enform. 2. the parties were ſome of the watch: the more underſtanding part thereof, the reſt for fear ſcattering and diſperſing themſelves in the city. 3. The high Prieſts, who ſet them on work, are enformed, not without a ſingular hand of divine providence, to convince and ſhame the malitious enemies of Chriſt, and authors of that counſel to guard the ſepulchre. 4. The ſucceſſe was not, as in reaſon might have been expected, the high Prieſts repentance, and happy acknowledgement of their errour to undeceive the people whom they had miſled: but a Pharaoh-like hardneſſe of heart: for they further endeavour to ſuppreſſe the truth, by bribing the ſouldiers to lie, and the preſident to connive at their wickedneſſe.

V. 12. large money] ἀργύρια ἱκανά, ſufficient moneys: money not a little, Syr.

V. 13. his diſciples ſtole him away] Pilate might the rather believe this, becauſe the Prieſts had given him an hint hereof before hand, chap. 26. 64. more eaſily do wicked men believe improbable lies, than probable truth.

while we ſlept] Very credible witneſſes, that could certainly tell what was done, while they were aſleep: if you were then aſleep, how knew you that his diſciples ſtole him away? Lactantius's rule is commonly true, haec enim eſt mendaciorum natura ut cohaerere non poſſint, l. 5. c. 3 this is the nature of lies, they can ſeldom hold together. This lye wanted all colour of truth: they would have made Chriſts vertue his diſciples crime, who recovered their Maſter (not as was pretended, by theſt, but) by faith, alive, not dead.

V. 14. come to the governours eares] Be heard by the Governour, as they might well fear it would, though they would do what they could to keep it from him: and might well fear the iſſue: for if they appeared to be the authors of a lie, they might expect his diſpleaſure: if they ſaid true, they might expect ſome ſevere puniſhment for ſleeping in their appointed watch.

ſecure you] We will make you ἀμερίμνους, without care: we will provide for your indempnity, by preventing the danger, that might come to you thereby, we will ſtand between harme and you, take you no care for that; for it was puniſhable to fail in the due performance of ſuch like truſts. See Acts 12. 10.

V. 15 this ſaying is commonly reported] Though the preſident could not but know it was falſe, as contradicting it ſelf: ſo probably he could not but queſtion them, why they came off their watch, before the end of the third day: yet for fear of tumult (as it is too common nowadays) he had rather bear with the diſhonour of God, than his own perſonal danger or detriment.

unto this day] So eaſily do untruths find entertainment among the vulgar, too incredulous of truth? this was the juſt judgement of God, to ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe lies, who would not receive the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved, 2. Theſ. 2. 10 yet for all this, the elect every where believed, See 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. and ſo ſhall do ſtill, notwithſtanding all theſe pernicious miſts of untruth, which aſcending from the bottomleſſe pit of hell, darken the truth of Chriſt ſo that the men of this world cannot diſcern the light thereof, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

V. 16. the eleven diſciples] This Evangeliſt is brief in repeating Chriſts apparations to his diſciples after his reſurrection, which the other ſupply. Theſe eleven are mentioned, chap. 10. 1. 26. 44. Judas the twelfth was gone, ch. 27 5. the chief are mentioned; but it is likely that more, or all the reſt went into Galilee to meet him; for they alſo were brethren. See ver. 10. the Apoſtle ſaith he was ſeen of more than 500. brethren at once, 1 Cor. 15. 6. Some make this ἐπάνω, to relate to the place; not to the number: as if the ſenſe were, he was ſeen above; when he aſcended: ſo this 500. ſeeing him at once, may be underſtood of their coming together to the mount of Olivet, Acts 1. 12. ἵνα αὐτοῖς καὶ τὴν ἀνάληψιν αὐτοῦ δείξῃ, Oecumenius; that he might ſhew them alſo his aſſumption.

into a mountain] What mountain of Galilee this was, is not mentioned; probably he went thence to mount Olivet neer Jeruſalem; for thence he aſcended, Acts 1. 12. and this was neer Jeruſalem.

V. 17. when they ſaw him] When the multitude of diſciples ſaw him alive from the dead, in his own former figure, lineaments and appearances, not yet in the Majeſty of his glorified body, leſt they ſhould have conceived that it had been ſome other body riſen, not that Jeſus which was crucified dead and buried: this glory after his reſurrection was veiled; rather for their ſakes, than miſſing on his: in that they could not have known him, and it was neceſſary for his diſciples ſo to attend him, ut poſſit cognoſci, Auguſtin. de C. D. lib. 22. cap. 19. that he might be known of them.

they worſhipped him] Acknowledging his reſurrection and divine power, by adoring him. See on verſe 9. being now more confident than ever that he was indeed their Meſſias, the Son of the living God: for ſo he was declared by his reſurrection from the dead, Rom. 1. 4.

but ſome doubted] Till he came neer to them, ſhewed them the prints of the nails (John 20. 25.) and ſpake to them: ſo the Syriack interpreter giveth it, dubitaverant, had doubted: one tence for another. See Mark 16. 11. 13. Luke 24. 11. 28. their unbelief makes for the confirmation of our faith: for their doubts being cleared, and the truth manifeſted, they left poſterity nothing rationally to doubt of.

V. 18. All power] Abſolute power without reſtraint and limitation, all dominion and authority to rule and govern.

is given unto me] God the Father hath given it to me; and I have now received it as man, who as God had the ſame power with the Father from eternity, (Philip. 2. 7.) and now unto me did he give the ſame in the fulneſſe of time: now I have put off the forme of a ſervant, wherein I was to ſuffer death for mans redemption; therein I was obedient, but now God hath highly exalted me, and given me a name above every name, &c. Phil. 2. 8. &c.

in heaven] Which comprehendeth power of ſending the holy Ghoſt, Acts 2. 33. power over Angels, Phil. 2. 10. Heb. 1. 4. Coloſ. 1. 16. power to give heaven to all his, chapter 25. 3. 4.

in earth] Power to gather a Church out of all nations. Pſalm 2. 8. Mark. 16. 15, 16. and to rule over all. See Acts 10 36. 42. Epheſ. 1. 20, 21, 22. Rev. 17. 14. Dan 7. 14.

V. 19 go ye therefore] Be not therefore afraid to execute your charge, which by a ſupream authority I commit to you; fear not the face of man, doubt not the ſucceſſe: be ye my embaſſadours to this porpoſe, adminiſtring this power among them. See 2 Corinth. 5. 20.

teach all nations] The word μαθητεύσατε, here uſed,, ſignifieth moſt properly, make diſciples, diſcipulos reddite, aut facite, as John 4. 1. Ἰησοῦς πλείονας μαθητὰς ποιεῖ καὶ βαπτίζει. Jeſus made more diſciples and baptized; that is, made them diſciples by baptizing them: and to this rather than teaching, the words immediatly following relate, where it is ſaid, verſe 2. though Jeſus himſelf baptized none, but his diſciples; which proviſion againſt the miſunderſtanding of the means of making diſciples needed not, except baptiſme had been the conſummating act and ſeal thereof, whereby one became a diſciple, though for preſent want of capacity (as it is in infants) he were not yet taught; for, as for that, it is undenyably and expreſſely manifeſt, that though our Saviour did not himſelf baptize, yet he precahed conſtantly and uſually, and the word μαθητεύειν here uſed, is diſtinct in ſignification from διδάσκειν (which word is uſed in the next verſe) for μαθητεύειν ſignifieth to make them diſciples, who were aliants from our magiſtery, as Paul did at Iconium, Acts 14. 21. where we read, καὶ μαθητεύσαντες ἱκανοὺς Beza, & diſcipulos multos adjunxiſſent, that is, had admitted, or gained many diſciples, by teaching them the goſpel, and baptizing them, as expreſſly that text ſheweth, where it is ſaid, εὐαγγελισάμενοί τε τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην, preaching (or teaching) the goſpel to that city, καὶ μαθητεύσαντες, &c & making many diſciples --where teaching, and preaching were improperly rendred, ſpecially where two actions as diſtinct as preaching and baptizing, are ſignified; as here, the meaning is, by preaching the Goſpel (for they had there to deal with men of years and capacity to learn in a Church to be conſtituted) they perſwaded many to give their names to, or to become diſciples of Chriſt by baptiſme; as that ſecret diſciple, Joſeph of Arimathea did, of whom we read, Matth. 27. 57. ὃς καὶ αὐτὸς ἐμαθήτευσε τῷ Ἰησοῦ, who alſo himſelf was a diſciple of Jeſus, in the former place, the Syriak diſtinctly readeth וכד מסברין vethad meſabberin--cum evangelizaſſent filiis civitatis illius, תלמידו (the very word here uſed) diſcipulos fecerunt multos. Laſtly, as Hebrew infants became diſciples of Moſes (John 9. 28. 1 Corinth. 10. 2.) by circumciſion; ſo do infants of believing Chriſtians, by baptiſme become diſciples of Chriſt; whereof we have elſewhere more largely diſcourſed. Finally by all nations, he meaneth, not only Jews, but Gentiles alſo. See Acts 10 34, 35. 47.

baptizing them] Adminiſtring to them the Sacrament of baptiſm; to all nations, wherein were ever many children, not here excepted in the Apoſtles charge to baptize.

in the name] εἰς τὸ ὄνομα, into the name. by that right inniatiating them, and receiving them into the profeſſion of the ſervice of one God in three perſons, and of depending on Chriſt alone for ſalvation. See 1 Corinth. 1. 13. 15. and 10. 2. with Exod. 14. 31. Rom. 6. 3.

V. 20. teaching them] Note here that teaching, in order, followeth diſcipling, or making diſciples (which all teaching in the world, can never do, except they be alſo ſealed by baptiſme) ſo that here is no advantage to the adverſaries of infant-baptiſme: for ſuppoſe that the former word μαθητεύσαντες, were to be tranſlated teaching (which we grant not) if their argument from the order of the words were concluding——(therefore they muſt be firſt taught, and afterward baptized——) why may not we as well conclude from the ſecond order of the words of Chriſt——baptizing them, &c. teaching them to obſerve all, &c. therefore children (of believing parents) are firſt to be baptized, and after, as ſoone as they ſhall be capable thereof, taught?

to obſerve] Obedience is required of believers See Rom. 2. 13. faith without works is dead; it ſaith, as once barren Rachel, Gen. 30. 1. give me children, or elſe I die.

all things] Not ſome only, See Pſalm 116. he that maketh choice of Gods commandments, which he will obey, and which not, is his own ſervant, not Gods: almoſt to be perſwaded to be a Chriſtian, is but as good as nothing: it is not enough to be baptized, but we muſt adorn the profeſſion there made, by doing that which God commandeth: Chriſts ſpeech comprehendeth (as Theophylact well noteth) θεωρητικὴν καὶ πρακτικὴν ἀρετήν, that is, contemplative and practicall vertue; knowledge and obedience.

I have commanded] Not what mans traditions command: will worſhip is a ſtranger to his Sanctuary; none ſuch may come neer, Num. 16. 40. it is as ſtrange as fire which came not from Heaven, God will not be ſerved therewith.

I am with you alwayes] Though your work be hard, I will aſſiſt you, and your ſucceſſours in the miniſtery at all times, to the worlds end: Os Chriſti, evangelium eſt, in cœlo ſedet, ſed in terra loqui non ceſſat; non ſimus ſurdi, nam ille clamat, Aug. de temp. ſerm. 205. the goſpel is Chriſts mouth; he ſitteth in Heaven, but ceaſeth not to ſpeak on earth; let us not be deafe for he cryeth out. Laſtly, here is comfort to all believers; for this ſheweth, as Jerom ſaith, ſe nunquam à credentibus receſſurum: that he will never depart from belivers: as more particularly for all the ſucceſſours of the Apoſtles, the faithfull Miniſters: Chriſt thus ſpeaks, leſt our Miniſtery ſhould ſeem to be executed, humanâ tantum operâ, onely by the work of man, Proſper de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 2. To the Miniſters may be applyed that which Jehoſhaphat ſaid to his judges, 2 Chron. 19. 6, 7. when he had told them the Lord would be with them: wherefore now, let the fear of the Lord be upon you, take heed and do it; for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor reſpect of perſons: it was Gods promiſe to him, who bare the figure and name of Jeſus, Joſhua 1. 5 I will be with thee, I will not fail thee nor forſake thee: it is the promiſe of our Jeſus, who leadeth us into our promiſed reſt: Behold I am with you alwayes unto the end of the world; be ſtrong therefore, and of good courage. fear not the malice of perſecutors; ipſe certamine agonis noſtri, & coronat pariter & coronatur, Cyprian lib 2, ep. 6 Chriſt in our conflict both crowneth, and is crowned. Fear not the ſucceſſe; it is Chriſt who giveth the increaſe, 1 Cor. 3 7. God could have done this work without our Miniſtery or by his Angels; but he will give man the honour of this Miniſtration, where his own holy Spirit will work to make it effectuall to the edification, and ſalvation of his elect: ſo fitted and prepared here, as were the materials of Solomons temple, that no noiſe of the builder ſhall be heard in rearing up the ſame there, where prophecies ſhall ceaſe, love be perfected, and faith end in enjoying the promiſes of God in Chriſt.

Amen] This word is current in all languages, and is originally Hebrew: ſo Jeremiah* the Prophet ſaid, אמן יהוה amen Jehovah, Jerem. 11. 5. The Hebrews uſed it after their prayers or bleſſings, therein wiſhing the ſucceſſe, truth, confirmation and conſummation of thoſe things they prayed for: it is as much as faxit Deus, certe ſtat. See Deut. 27. 15. which the 70. give γένοιτο, ſo be it. It is ſometimes doubled for the greater confirmation. See Numb 5. 22. So afterwards in the primitive Church the people uſed to anſwer, when their prayers ended Amen. Pitty that too many now are ſilent, and not ſo much as ſay Amen, to ſignify their conſent, and vigilancy of ſpirit in prayer: it is much to be feared that they neither regard, nor think of that which is ſaid in publique prayer; who in their own and others ſo great intereſt, not ſo much as ſay, Amen. See 1 Cor. 14 16. 2 Cor. 1. 20. Rev. 1. 7. Jer. 2. 8. 6. It is put here for confirmation of a certain and infallible truth. (See on John 3. 11.) Faithful is he that hath promiſed to be with us unto the end, Lord Jeſus ſo be it. Amen.

MATTH. CHAP. I.

Verſe 1. between the word, Enumeration, and Jer. 3. 8. Adde [though therein they uſed the word מגלה of גלל, volvit, complicavit, where is מגלה, volumen membrana, charta; a book, a rowle of parchment, for ſo were they wont to make their books, which they rowled up like a cylinder. So have the Jews the law now in their Synagogues, therefore it is ſaid of Chriſt in the Synagogue at Nazareth, Luke 4. 20. καὶ πτύξας τὸ βιβλίον, and ſhutting, or folding up the book, he gave it to the miniſter. See Jerem. 36. 2. Ezra. 6. 2. which the 70 expreſſe ſometimes by the Greek word κεφαλὶς, capitulum, Ezek. 2. 9. &c. ſometimes by τόμος, a tome (which Suidas and Heſych. expreſſe by χάρτης, eo quod exciditur è pellibus animalium, a rowle or volume of parchment or velome, written: or a Section or part of a divided volume.]

V. 2. between the word, covenant, and, Luke, Adde [and did expect Chriſt their promiſed Meſſias, to come of the ſeed of Abraham, according to the promiſe of God made unto him on that behalf, that all the nations of the earth ſhould be bleſſed in him. See Gen. 12. 3. Gen. 18. 3. Acts 3. 25. Gal. 3. 8. that is, in Chriſt to come of his poſterity; as was alſo promiſed unto David, and therefore they that believed and petitioned Chriſt, uſed this ſtile—— Son of David, Matth. 9. 27. Matth. 15. 22. &c. and it was therefore moſt neceſſary in the beginning of this ſacred hiſtory of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt (the eternal Son of God, John 1. 1. &c. and in the fulneſſe of time, becoming truely man of a woman, under the law, Gal. 4. 4.) that the writer ſhould firſt make it appear, by a clear and certain declaration of his pedegree derived from Abraham and David, that this Jeſus borne of the Virgin Marie, a daughter of David, or of his poſterity, was indeed the Lords Chriſt, and the very promiſed Meſſias, in whom all muſt believe that will be ſaved.]

And after the word, Abraham in the ſame verſe, Adde [yet were they by Gods covenant of the Goſpel, accompted for ſons of Abraham by faith in Chriſt, in whom Abraham believed, and through whom he was juſtified, Gal. 3. 7. they which be of faith, the ſame are the children of Abraham, and verſe 29. If ye be Chriſts, then are ye Abrahams ſeed, and heirs according to promiſe. See Rom. 2. 29.]

V. 5. after Luke 4. 22. Adde, [but his ſuppoſed Son, ſee Luke 3. 23]

V. 20. after the word, man, Adde [only; for the deity and humanity of Chriſt united without confuſion of natures (neither the deity becoming an humanity, nor the humanity a deity) became one perſon, Chriſt Jeſus, God and man, our Saviour; whereas the reaſonable ſoul, and humane body united, make the perſon of mere man, here to the conſtitution of the perſon of Chriſt our redeemer, concurred the deity and humanity of Chriſt Jeſus, the ſon of the Virgin Mary: therefore the Angel ſaid, not ὁ γεννητὸς but ----τὸ γὰρ ἐν αὐτῇ γεννηθὲν, &c. that which is conceived in her.]

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. between, Hebr. 11. 23. and the word, before, Adde [Μωσῆς γεννηθεὶς ἐκρύβη: Moſes when he was born was hid—— that is, not long after he was born; for he was hid but three moneths, before he was carryed out, according to the tyrannicall Pharoahs command, to the river, Exod. 1. 2. Exod. 2. 1. So here when Chriſt was born, that is, ſhortly after his birth]

And after the word, ſtar, in the ſame verſe, Adde [in Greek μάγοι, quod genus ſapientum & doctorum habebatur in Perſis, &c. de divinat. l 1. which were eſteemed a ſort of wiſe and learned men among the Perſians. So alſo the Greeks underſtood hereby wiſe men of the Chaldees and Perſians: ſo the Indians accompted their Gymnoſophyſts; the Galles their (ſee Alexand. ab Alexand. Genial. dier. l. 4. c. 13. Strabo l. 6.) Dryades; the Grecians and Latines their Phyloſophers: ſuch as poſſibly Zamolxis, Pythagoras, Plato, &c. were at firſt eſteemed very prudent and knowing men, inſomuch as that the Athenians in all their publique counſels would ever have ſome of them to adviſe with, whom they called Mantes (and their art μαντικὴν. Cic. q. ſ.) diviners, or conjecturers of things to come. Such as the Hebrew called קסם, Greek μάντις, ſo are the Philiſtines Southſayers called. 1 Sam. 6. 2. So Balaam, Joſhua 13. 22. Ezek. 13. 7. μαντείας ματαίας — divinationem mendacii, So ſaid Saul to the witch at Endor, 1 Sam. 28. 8. μάντευσαι, &c. divine unto me by the familiar ſpirit, the ſtudy of ſuch, at firſt, ſeemeth to have been a curious ſearch into the ſecrets of nature and conjectural knowledge of things future, by the courſes and aſpects of ſtarres; whence they obtained the opinion of interpreters of things divine: but over-curious in the ſtudy of judicial Aſtrology, they thence ſlid into vanities, ſuperſtitions; and oft-ſoone develiſh arts, inchantments, ſorceries, malifices, &c. See 2 Kings 17. 17. So that the name of Magus, as alſo Mantis, though at firſt honourable, became an odious note of infamie, and men inpious, Jerem. 27. 7. & 29. 8. Ezek. 12. 24. &c. and 22. 28. Mich. 3. 7. Zech. 10. 2. but theſe here mentioned Magi, or wiſe men, ſeem not to have been ſuch, but only certain Phyloſophers, and poſſibly aſtronomers; which might be the cauſe why God taught them (as hath been ſaid) by a ſtar; which very probably men nothing verſed in that ſtudy, would have taken little or no notice of.]

V. 2 after the words, King, &c. Adde [ὁ τεχθεὶς, recens natus, the new born king. See verſe 1.]

And in the ſame verſe after the word, Revelation, Adde [therefore was it called his ſtar, becauſe it declared him and his birth to them, as God had appointed it, and becauſe it was a new and extraordinary ſtar made for his ſake, to bring thoſe firſt-fruits of the Gentiles to him.]

V. 3. After the word, others, Adde [who are impious and tyrannicall Princes;] he muſt needs fear many, whom many fear.]

In the ſame verſe after the word, Jeruſalem, Adde [that is, all the inhabitants, citizens, or others then being in Jeruſalem.]

Again in the ſame verſe after the word, government: Adde [which concuſſion of ſtate never was, nor ever can be without much trouble and affliction of the people: which the more knowing ſort foreſeeing, or probably ſuſpecting, could not but be troubled, conſidering that their principle was that the kingdom of their Meſſias, was to be a temporal Monarchy.]

Verſe 4. After, Luke 20. 12. Adde [Matth 8. 19.]

Verſe 7. After the words, Firſt of all, Adde [he thus diligently enquired of the wiſe men concerning the riſing of this new Star (whereby they underſtood the birth of Chriſt, the King of Iſrael) under a fair pretence, as if he meant no other thing than that which the wiſe men came from the Eaſt to Jeruſalem to do, verſe 2. to worſhip him; ſuppoſing, as it is moſt probable, that the Star appeard firſt in the day of Chriſt's Nativity, or about that very time; they meaning nothing herein but good, concealed nothing thereof from the King: charity and holineſſe think no evil (1 Cor. 13. 5.) they nothing ſuſpected the immane cruelty which Herod had then in his heart to murder harmeleſſe Jeſus, and for his ſake, ſo many tender Infants.]

Verſe 9. After, verſe 2. Adde [it was by Gods divine providence, then hidden, and diſappearing, leſt it ſhould have begotten danger to the ſacred perſon of Chriſt, it it had been without this intermiſſion viſible, until it had ſtood over the houſe at Bethleem where Chriſt was then newly born.]

Verſe 11. After the words, it ſelf; Adde [more accommodate and ſafe for the Infant and woman in child-bed.]

In the ſame verſe, after, Exod. 34. 4. Adde [which beſides that it was the manner of the people of thoſe Eaſtern parts, ſo to proſtrate themſelves before their Kings) they were doubtleſſe moved to it, by a divine inſtinct, there being no ſemblance of Majeſty or Royal preſence, then viſible, to man: a more excellent Star, the light of Gods Spirit guiding them to their duty, ſhined in their hearts.]

Verſe 22. After the word, themſelves, Adde [as when God preſerved us in our infancy, and when we ſleep and cannot guard our ſelves, the keeper of Iſrael, who ſleepeth not, protecteth, defendeth, and provideth for us and our ſafety.]

Verſe 1. After, Luke 1. 80. Adde [Gr. παραγίνεται. Some think it noteth a ſudden appearance of ſome unexpected thing or perſon: See John 1. 6. in the Heb. he was called יוחנן Jochanan. Syr. Juchanan, ſignifying, the Lord hath ſhewed or performed grace or mercy: thus was Chriſts forerunner named of the argument of his preaching the grace and mercy of God in Chriſt, now (after the long expectation of the promiſed Meſſias and Saviour) exhibited. Concerning Johns parents, conception, impoſition of name, and admirable things concerning the ſame, St. Luke writeth expreſſely and fully, which our Evangeliſt omitteth. It was Gods holy providence ſo to direct them, that all exactly agreeing in the ſame truth for the main; that which one of them omitteth, the other recordeth. Why the Anabaptiſts, as weary of, and declining the proper name of their Sect, would be called Baptiſts it may ſeem ſtrange; ſeeing, in that name, and office they would ſeem to agree with us who indeed are Baptiſts (as John was appointed of God to baptize) becauſe we baptize, but do not as they, re-baptize: and therefore they are Anabaptiſts; and in ſpight of their railing, the Miniſters of Chriſt who adminiſter and profeſſe onely one God, one Saviour, one Baptiſm, are Baptiſts: their frivolous objections againſt pœdobaptiſm, as if the baptiſm of Infants were no baptiſm, that thereby they might avoid the name of Anabaptiſts or rebaptizers, have been ſufficiently refuted. John is here ſtiled Baptiſt, to diſtinguiſh between him the ſon of Zechary, Luke 1. and John the Apoſtle, ſon of Zebedee, Matth. 10. 2. as alſo becauſe he firſt, by the appointment of God (Luke 3. 3. Mark 1. 2, 3, 4. Mal. 3. 1. Joh. 1. 33.) did adminiſter the ſeal of the new Covenant, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, to repentance and remiſſion of ſinnes in Chriſt.]

Verſe 3. After, Dan. 2. 24. Adde [of which the Prophets foretold, to which the living way, Chriſt onely, giveth enterance, by baptiſm, Joh. 3. 3, 5. prefigured by that one door of the Ark, Gen. 6. 16. 1 Pet. 3. 21. and the promiſed reſt, the land of Canaan, into which Gods Iſrael, delivered from the bondage of ſin (Rom. 6. 3, 17, 18.) paſſed through the Red-Sea, prefiguring Chriſt's blood. See 1 Cor. 10 2. &c. and ſo underſtand theſe words; as if he had ſaid, hitherto you have been held in the bondage of ſin, and under the ſevere curſe of the law, Gal. 3. 10, 13, 23, 25, &c. but now Chriſt your Redeemer is come, and his Kingdom is at hand; not an earthly, ſecular, tranſitory kingdom, ſuch as many impious, and ſo unhappy Kings and ſubjects enjoy; but a heavenly, ſpiritual, and eternal kingdom, here to be begun in the ſtate of grace, but to be perfected in the eternal glory and happineſſe to come. Now John Baptiſt, being the meſſenger appointed to prepare the way before Chriſt, Mal. 3. 1. had this honour, openly and clearly to proclaim that which the Jews hitherto did never generally, by the Prophets underſtand, concerning the Kingdom of Chriſt, which they expected in external, ſecular glory, proſperity, deliverance, victory, &c. Thus therefore this ſilver Trumpet began to proclaim the ſpiritual Jubile, calling to repentance, faith, and newneſſe of life; ſounding a note much diſſonant from that on Sina, Exod. 19. 16 which was with threatning and terrour to all Iſrael: but this was the gladſome tidings of grace, mercy, and ſalvation, by Chriſt: and this is called the Kingdom of God and Chriſt, becauſe therein God through Chriſt reigneth in us. Sometimes it is called abſolutely the Kingdom, Matth. 4. 23. Matth. 5. 14. and 8. 12. and 9. 35. and 13. 19. becauſe this is indeed, a true and abſolute Kingdom, in which onely, is perfect freedom: other Kingdoms are but vain ſhewes and ſemblances of that which is not; wherein the greateſt Rulers and Commanders of others, are moſt enſlaved to ſin and ſatan, and ſo can govern others, but not themſelves. But why ſaith he, the Kingdom of heaven is at hand, or draweth near? was it not with them long before, in Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, and all the elect of every age, who looked for redemption in Iſrael, Luke 2. 38? Yes; but firſt, in reſpect of the paucity of believers, compared with them under the Goſpel. Secondly, in reſpect of the clearer revelation and better underſtanding of this Kingdom now then before, when all was under darke ſhadows of legal ceremonies. Laſtly, though many believed and expected Chriſt the King of Iſrael then to come, yet not being then, but ſhortly to be exhibited unto Iſrael, and to the ends of the world; his Kingdom was properly ſaid to draw near, wherein he was actually and eternally to reign: and in whoſe ſpiritual kingdom free remiſſion of ſins by his merits, was to be preached to all that truly repent and believe in him who freely juſtifieth ſinners.]

Verſe 5. After the word, Jeruſalem, Adde [having had no Prophet among them from the repair of the ſecond Temple unto this preſent, and now being perſwaded by the extraordinary things, immediately foregoing or accompanying Johns nativity; as alſo the admirable and unuſual auſterity of his life, they expecting (from the report of his preaching concerning the Kingdom of Chriſt at hand) ſome change of ſtate, or ſome great and remarkable accident, they not onely begin to liſten, but to run in multitudes, out to ſee and hear him: hence was that confluence of people from Jeruſalem, and the region adjacent.]

And in the ſame verſe, next after the word, river, Adde [Jordan which is the bound of Judea from the Eaſt: ſo called from the fountain, and ſteep deſcent of the waters thereof, as it were יורד מן דן iored min Dan, that is, deſcending or running down from Dan, as ſome ſay. It ſeems that Joſephus de bel. Jud. l. 1. c. 16. to whom Adricomius Theatr. S. Manas. N. 76. joyneth Egeſippus, will have it to be higher, at Panium an high mountain. Plin. l. 5. c. 15. ſaith, Jordanis amnis oritur è fonte Paneade qui cognomen dedit Cæſareæ -- which nothing hindereth the truth of the forementioned etymologie: for it runneth from Dan, afterward named Cæſarea Philippi, as they ſay, though the firſt riſing of the ſprings and heads thereof, (long time unknown) are at Paneas: the Saracens (ſaith Adricomius) call that ſpring, Medan, that is, the waters of Dan: for מי in their tongue, which is near the Hebrew מים ſignifieth waters: now the people from thoſe regions near Jordan flocking to Johns baptiſme muſt be from Judea, Galilee, Peræa, Batanæa, and the country of the Trachonites.]

Verſe 6. Between the word Jordan, and the word, as, Adde [or ſprinkling with the water of Jordan,]

In the ſame verſe, after, John 1. 33. Adde [and differing very much, and in many things, (as to the inſtitution, end, effect, and form,) from thoſe dippings, waſhings, or aſperſions in the Jewes manner of purifications, uſed.]

Verſe 12. After, Mark 9 45. Adde [unquenchable fire, that is, eternal; ſuch as can never be put out, never make an end of the damned, that they might no more be ſenſible of the torment they are condemned to: it cannot be put out, it not being like this fire which we here uſe, that muſt be fed with ſome combuſtible matter, or it will go out, of its own accord; but the breath of the Lord, like a ſtream of brimſtone doth kindle it, Iſai 30. 33. that is, the juſtice and omnipotent power of God ſo perpetuates their torment by hell fire, as if indeficient ſtreams and rivers of brimſtone ran in upon it, ſo that it can never go out for want of ſupply; neither can it ever end the life and ſenſe of the damned, who ſhall call to the mountains to fall upon them, and death to end them and their torments, but not obtain their deſire: the eternal juſtice of God which in their life time they ſecurely contemned, as it were ſo tempering the moſt active quality of the fire, that it ſhall ever torment, but never conſume them whom it once ſeizeth on: Nor need this ſeem ſtrange to any: do we not (ſaith Chryſoſtom) ſee the ſun begetting, by it, light, and an admirable heat by beames perpendicular, yet in ſo many generations, that heat is not at all conſumed? Do we not read of the buſh on fire, not conſumed? Exod. 3. By another expreſſion he affirmeth the ſame thing, Iſai. 66. 24. their worme ſhall not die, neither ſhall their fire be quenched --- See chap. 25. 41, 46.]

Verſe 1. After the word, parents, Adde [But why would Gods Spirit carry him to be tempted, who tempteth no man? Jam. 1. 13. and teacheth us to pray, Matth. 6 13. lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil? We muſt for anſwer know, that.

1. There is conſiderable the difference between Chriſt invincibly holy, and ſinful man, prone to all evil, and therefore eaſily overcome by temptations.

2. Chriſt came into the world to deſtroy death, and him that had the power thereof, the devil, Heb. 2. 14. and to annul and deſtroy his works, 1 John 3. 8. therefore preſently after his inauguration by baptiſm, he,as it were,entreth into the liſts with the prince of darkneſſe to a fierce monomachie and ſingle combat, in his own ſacred Perſon, to begin our victory over him and ſin, which by and through Chriſt we ſhall obtain: as alſo to teach us not to be ſecure, but when we give our names to God, and reſolve to leave our ſins, then to look for the moſt furious charges of Satan; who then will purſue us, like a ſpiritual Pharaoh, with all his power, until the rod of God open us a paſſage to our promiſed reſt, through the red ſea of Chriſts blood.

3. He was led into the wilderneſſe near Judea; not that Satan could not as eaſily and dangerouſly tempt in the populous City as in the elinge wilderneſſe. See verſe 5. but becauſe ſolitude was moſt accommodate to this conflict, as moſt free from diſturbance (of Satans machinations and tryal of his uttermoſt power) by any intervenient occaſion or party of Chriſt againſt him, by counſel or conſolation obſtructing, or any wayes hindring the worſt that Satan could do againſt him.

4. Seeing we are ſubject to various temptations, all our life long, it behoves us to pray that we may not enter into temptation, that we may be preſerved from it, or in it: we are hereto permitted, that we may be humbled in the knowledge of our own corruptions ever ready on all occaſions to betray us to the enemy: that we may be ſtirred up to a faithful vigilancy, having ſuch reſtleſſe adverſaries to deal withal, 1 Pet. 5. 8. to kindle in us an hearty thankfulneſſe to God, and confidence in his mercy, of whoſe providence in ſuch conflicts preſerving us, we have perpetual experience. See Rom. 7. 24,25. 2 Cor. 12. 9. To awaken us to frequent prayer, leſt we enter into temptation: laſtly, that through many combats exerciſed, we may grow more ſtrong and confident, grounded in Chriſt: as trees in tender valleys,often ſhaken with windes, take firmer root:ſo grow the regenerate more ſtrong,by temptations overcome. (See 2 Cor. 7. 11.) Therefore Chriſt (being like us in all things, ſin onely excepted, to ſhew us, that by him ſin and temptations thereto, hath in his own perſon, and in his body the Church, ſhall be overcome) would be ſubject to temptations.

5. That he might teach us not onely by his precept, but alſo by his own example how to overcome temptations, by faſting,vigilancy, prayer, and meditation, on the holy Scriptures.

6. That he might in his own ſacred perſon have experience of our miſery --- in that he himſelf hath ſuffered,being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted --- Heb. 2. 17, 18.

7. That he might ſtill and put the enemy and careleſſe ſinner to ſuch ſilence, as can have no apology. Had not the regenerate been permitted to temptations, Satan would have ſaid, as once of Job; haſt thou not made an hedge about him, Job 1. 10? had not Chriſt been tempted, the ſinner would ſay, I cannot do that which thou commandeſt me, becauſe it is impoſſible: thou bidſt me not be overcome of anger, luſt, fear, ſorrow, death, &c. but this is ſo contrary to nature (whoſe lawes thy ſelf haſt ſet) that all living creatures are ſubject to ſuch affections; or if you think nature can be ſo eaſily refined, tu ipſe qui præcipis, fac, ut ſciam fieri poſſe --- do you that which you command me, that I may know 'tis facile; but if you do it not why impoſe you lawes on free-men, which your ſelf will not obey? prius diſce qui doces --- loqui facile eſt,præſtare difficile. Lactant. l. 4. c. 23. therefore Chriſt our perfect Teacher, ought both to teach by precept, and confirm the ſame by his practice. Now, how ſhould he have done that which he commanded man to do, if he had not become man like unto him he taught? Had he been ſubject to no paſſion on which temptation could have taken hold, man might ſo have anſwered: truly, I would not ſin, but am over-powered; I am clothed with fraile fleſh and blood --- I am carried againſt my will, and ſin, not becauſe I would do ſo, but becauſe I am compelled. I am ſenſible of my ſinning, but the neceſſity of humane frailty which I cannot reſiſt, enforceth me. How ſhould he who ſhall judge the living and the dead, confute and reprove the ſinner thus excuſing his ſins by the infirmity of fleſh and nature, except himſelf had aſſumed the very ſame fleſh and nature of man,without ſin,that he might demonſtrate, that even fleſh and blood may be without ſin? Men prone to ſin,would faine ſeem,not onely to be worthy of pardon, but to ſin with good reaſon; and ſo would plead: Lord thou ſinneſt not becauſe thou art free from this body: thou coveteſt not, for the immortal hath no need or uſe of any thing; but I have need of many things to preſerve my life: thou feareſt not death becauſe thou art immortal: thou contemneſt ſorrow, becauſe thou canſt ſuffer no violence: but alas, I am mortal, and therefore feare thoſe ſorrows which fleſh and blood cannot bear. Leſt therefore the ſinner might object, thou commandeſt impoſſibilities, Chriſt ſubjected himſelf, to all humane infirmities, neceſſities, yea and temptations, that to the pretence of impoſſibility, he might have to anſwer: Lo, I am humane, clothed with fraile fleſh, yet perform I that which I command thee: behold, I go before thee, ſi præcipientem ſequi non potes, ſequere antecedentem. Lactant. q. ſ. c. 24.]

Verſe 2. After the word, Goſpel, Adde [Chriſt was pleaſed ſo to do, as to confirm the truth of the Goſpel which he would henceforth preach; ſo to afford Satan place to tempt him with bodily neceſſities (See verſe 3.) wherein he could not be overcome: and to teach us how to reſiſt theſe temptations which are to be overcome,onely with faſting and prayer. The firſt Adam was overcome in Paradiſe by taſting the forbidden fruit; the ſecond Adam Chriſt overcame Satan in the fearful wilderneſſe, by faſting.]

Verſe 4. After, Deut. 8. 3. Adde [or ſhall not have his life ſuſtained and prolonged by the creature, but the power of the Almighty Creatour whoſe will is his word, and his word his work: who in the creation ſet the lawes of nature whereby this or that creature is nutritive, and not another: he yet worketh (Joh. 5 17.) with or without (ſometimes againſt) the ordinary meanes, as he pleaſeth.]

Verſe 6. After, as chap. 3. 17. Adde [was affirmed.]

In the ſame verſe, after the word, armes, Adde [or ſave them from falling dangerouſly, by ſudden catching hold on them.]

Verſe 7. After the word, doe, Adde [ſo Scripture muſt be interpreted, that one place may ſtand true with another: ſo here we muſt know that God hath promiſed ſo to bear up his, that they ſhall not periſh, but yet we muſt not neglect the ordinary meanes of our preſervation which God hath appointed; as here, by deſcending by ſteps, and ſafe degrees: for in neglect or contempt of Gods ordinance, we tempt God; which another Scripture, by Chriſt alleaged, forbiddeth.]

Verſe 10. After the word, world, Adde [if thou couldſt give it; which I know is none of thine to diſpoſe of, but Gods.]

Verſe 11. After the word, able, Adde [1 Cor. 10. 13.]

Verſe 16. After, Pſal. 97. 11. Adde [And the knowledge of Gods will concerning the ſame, which Chriſt taught and teacheth in the Goſpel preached.]

Verſe 17. After, Mark 1. 14. Adde [That John being caſt into priſon by Herod, Jeſus came into Galilee,and dwelt at Capernaum: when John Baptiſt his fore-runner had finiſhed his courſe, witneſſing concerning the true light Chriſt, Joh. 1. 7, 9. and preparing the way for him, then it was neceſſary that he ſhould appear, and manifeſt himſelf unto Iſrael.]

Verſe 25. After the word, therein, Adde [concerning which, ſee on Mark, 7. 3.]

CHAP. V.

Verſe 6. After the word, ſatisfieth, Adde [comforteth and ſtrengtheneth the body, making it able and active to its ſeveral offices. Hence is the metaphor accommodated to the ſpirit, and duties ſpiritual: as if he had ſaid, be not dejected you that are ſenſible of your ſpiritual wants; for if you do but deſire grace, God will not be wanting to you: which our Saviour teacheth us by an argument from the leſſe to the greater, Luke 11. 13. if men in whom is but very little goodneſſe, will yet give their children that which is good how much more will God infinitely good, wiſe powerful --- give the holy Spirit to them that ask him? that is, a comfortable and ſufficient meaſure of grace, as he ſaid to Paul hungring and thirſting in his hot conflict with the meſſengers of Satan --- my grace is ſufficient for thee, 2 Cor. 12. 9.]

Verſe 10. Between the words, are, and, two, Adde [of things ſecular and belonging to this life]

In the ſame verſe, after the words, adverſity here, Adde [This is the moſt ample reward, of which St. James ſaith, chap. 1. 12. Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptations: for when he is tryed, he ſhall receive the Crown of life. See alſo, Rev. 2. 10. Seeing therefore the condition of the Saints as to this preſent life, is commonly afflicted and calamitous; Chriſt is pleaſed to comfort them with aſſured hope of bleſſedneſſe in the life to come: and hence it may appear how happy a thing it is,to caſt our cares and ſelves on Gods mercy and providence, who is a bountiful Rewarder of all them that truſt in him. If thou truſt in riches, they cannot deliver thee in the day of wrath: if in power of men &c. they will deceive thy truſt; in the end thou ſhalt find, that all confidence in creatures, will, like Pharaohs chariot-wheeles, there fall off, when thou art in greateſt danger, and leave thee to be overwhelmed with deſperate miſeries: but God is a moſt ſure and bountiful Rewarder of his, giving them for the loſſe of an earthly poſſeſſion, for ſome poor and tranſitory eſtate, glory, riches, honour, here loſt for his ſake, the kingdom of heaven, eternal, unmeaſurable, unſpeakable, true bleſſedneſſe.]

Verſe 11. Between the words: Gr. and lying, Adde [ψευδόμενοι]

In the ſame verſe, after the word, Martyr, Adde [now whereas truth, vertue, excellency; cannot, without apparent influence of Satan, be perſecuted; therefore the father of lyes furniſheth thoſe whom he inſtigateth to injure the holy, with miſcheivous pretences againſt them, ſuggeſting that they are innovatours, diſturbers of the publick peace, enemies to the ſtate, ſeducers of the people, impious, &c. See Jer. 18. 18, 23. Act. 6. 11. Act. 24. 5. Luke 23. 2.]

Verſe 12. After the words, with them, Adde [and alſo the perſecuted Prophets reward in heaven: becauſe God is yeſterday, to day, and the ſame for ever, inviolably juſt and good. Now 'tis the end which crownes all actions, and ſhewes them good or bad, happy or unhappy: the falſe Prophet who loved the wages of unrighteouſneſſe, knew this; therefore, without exception to the croſſe deſired to die the death of the righteous, and that his laſt end might be like his, Numb. 23. 10. therefore fear no perſecutors, their rage cannot be long, but the happineſſe of the perſecuted ſhall be eternal.]

Verſe 17. Between the word, Gr. and the words, to diſſolve, Adde [καταλῦσαι, which word among other things, ſignifieth to overthrow; as here, by abrogating, repealing, or rendring it no longer binding: in which ſenſe, Demoſth. Olynth. 3. uſeth --- λῦσαι νόμον to diſſolve, or deſtroy the law: to bring to nothing, as Act. 5. 38. καταλυθήσεται --- it will come to nought]

Verſe 23. After the word, ſeaſoned, Adde [without which all is but the ſacrifice of fooles, and cannot be accepted.]

In the ſame verſe, after the word man, Adde [See 1 Cor. 11. 28.

Verſe 42. After, Deut. 15. 8. Adde [δανείσασθαι here uſed, commonly ſignifieth, to take up on uſury: and ſo the word δανειστὴς a Uſurer, coming of δανείζω, to put out to intereſt: yet here we muſt underſtand Chriſt ſpeaking of a free lending. See Luke 6. 35.]

Verſe 44. After the word, Saints, Adde [which they can have over their enemies in this world.]

Verſe 45. After, John 3. 10. Adde [John 13. 35.]

In the ſame verſe, after, Eph. 5. 1. Adde [the moſt religious worſhip of God, is imitation of his holineſſe.]

CHAP. VI.

Before the beginning, of the Chapter Adde this.

Verſe 1. T*Ake heed*] This caution ſhews how prone we are to fail in our beſt duties: and the word προσέχετε, here uſed, importeth a very ſolicitous care to be had, as Luke 12. 1. as it were προσέχειν τὸν νοῦν, adhibere animum: attend and be cautious, leſt the malitious enemy pervert your almes-deeds and make a ſin of your, otherwiſe, good workes, depriving you of the fruits thereof.]

Verſe 7. After 1 Kings 18. 27. Adde [Gr. μὴ βαττολογήσητε do not like that prating Battus, who was notorious for his abſurd talkativeneſſe and vain repetitions of that he had ſaid, or might in few words have ſaid. See Suid. βαττολογία. Eraſm. Adag. chil. 2. Cent. 1. Ad. 92.]

Verſe 13. After the words, ſeeſt beſt, Adde [the power] This is for divers good reaſons added; as firſt to confirm our faith of obtaining, ſeeing that God who thus commandeth us to pray, hath abſolute power to do for us that which we want and pray for: nothing is impoſſible to him. Secondly, that we may not ſeem to attribute to him a powerleſſe kingdom, or any leſſe than an infinite and unlimited government over all creatures in heaven and earth. Again, that we may reſt aſſured, that it is not of infirmity or want of ability, that he doth not preſently revenge their rebellion who acknowledge not, or obey not the lawes of his kingdom; or that he doth not inſtantly grant the requeſts of his ſervants, to deliver or ſupplly them: however in his wiſdom he delayeth it, he ever hath that power which none can reſiſt.

and the glory] Either thine is, or to thee of right belongeth all honour and glory; as Rom. 4 11. Rev. 5. 12. 1 Chron. 16 28, 29. Rom. 11. 36. Gal. 1. 5. Iſai. 6. 3. Pſal. 8. 1. Pſal. 24. 7, 8. Pſal. 29. 3 and 113. 4. and 148. 13. &c. The ſumme is: We beg all theſe things of thee; confident that we ſhall obtain, relying on thy promiſe, holy will and power; for we know thou haſt begun in us the kingdom of grace, to prepare us for the kingdom of glory, to the manifeſtation of this glory; and in this confidence with ardent votes we cry, Amen.]

In the ſame verſe, after, John 3. 11. Adde [having acknowledged his kingdom, power and glory, to be eternal, as Pſal. 145. 10. in this one word, Amen, we expreſſe the fervency of our deſire to obtain that which we prayed for, and our aſſurance of obtaining becauſe he is faithful and true, and cannot deceive: for this is an Hebrew word, importing certainty and truth.]

V. 26. After the words, faſhion thereof, Adde [Gr. ἀφανίζουσι, they deform: ἀφανίζω, is, to obſcure, deform, disfigure, &c. So that the natural colour or complexion and favour may not appear: the word properly ſignifieth, è conſpectu afferre, to cauſe a thing not to appear, or be ſeen: So here they did away the nitour and comlineſſe of their viſage, that onely ſqualor appearing, they may ſeem in the neglect of their bodies, to faſt.]

Verſe 24. After, Luke 16. 13. Adde [he will not ſhare with the World, Sin, Satan; he will be ſerved with our body and ſoul: he made and redeemed them, and they are his, 1 Cor. 6 20.]

Verſe 34. After the words, but faith, Adde [every day of mans life hath care and evil enough; ſo that we need not anticipate our ſorrowes, and as it were, pull them upon us before the time: that evil comes too ſoon, that comes at laſt. Load not your mindes with thoughts of tomorrows, wants, or afflictions. The gatherers of Manna in the wilderneſſe were fooliſhly and unprofitably ſolicitous for the morrows ſtore, except onely for the Sabbath Exod, 16. 19. take all poſſible care for the reſt which remaineth for the people of God, Heb 4. 9. for the things of this life, do a prudent and holy endeavour, and commit the reſt to God; afflict not thy ſoul; every day of tranſitory life will bring its ſorrow with it]

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 7. After, James 1 6. Adde [God often encourageth us to earneſt prayer, by promiſing us audience. See Pſal. 50. 15. Jer. 29. 12, 13, 14. and alſo by the admirable effects of the ſame. See Pſal. 81. 7. Exod. 17. 11. &c. Pſal. 3. 4 and 6. 9. and 10. 17 &c. Act. 12. 5. &c. Jam. 5. 15, 17, 18. Now the three words here uſed, are to teach us ſo many neceſſary rules concerning prayer. 1. That we be ſenſible of our wants; for we ask not that which we have, or think we want not; but that which we know we want, and would have. 2. That we ſeek, as uſing the means to attain: this intimateth, care, and diſcretion in ſeeking, where, and when, we are likely to find. 3. That we conſtantly perſevere; (though we find not the way to our deſires preſently open) and as it were knock at the door until it be opened to us.]

Verſe 10 After the words, hurt us, Adde [or deny us any thing to do us good. See Pſal. 84. 11. Rom. 8. 32.]

Verſe 13. After the words, born ſuch, Adde [and cuſtom of ſinning makes it more eaſie; men fear their firſt offences but uſe emboldneth them to ſhameleſſe impudency: and therefore 'tis here compared to a ſpatious and eaſie way: ſo the word, εὐρύχωρος here uſed, ſignifieth, ſpatious, broad: here's nothing to hinder or trouble the ſinner, but that he may go ſmoothly on for a time.]

In the ſame verſe, after, Salvian. de gub. dei l 3 Adde [The greater the multitude of ſinners, the greater is the mercy of the Deity.]

Verſe 21. After, James 1. 22. Adde [though doubling of the word ſometimes importeth vehemency of the ſpeaker; yet here it ſeemeth to import a frequency and often having God in their mouthes. This is not all: to ſeem religious or to talke much of Religion like the bees humming at young Plato's lips, may poſſibly be a preſage of future eloquence: but if thou wilt be ſaved, thy Religion muſt be like that ſwarm which Sampſon found by the vineyards of Timnah, within thy heart: he is an Iſraelite, who is one within, Rom. 2. 29. God regards the heart.]

Verſe 22. After the words, damnation be, Adde [δυνάμεις here, as alſo elſewhere, ſignifieth miracles. See Mark 9. 39. Luke 10. 13. and 19. 37.]

Verſe 23. After Pſal. 6. 8. Adde [See on chap. 25. 41. ἀποχωρεῖτε, get ye far from me, and the joyes of heaven, out of which can be nothing but intenſeſt ſorrow and miſery of body and ſoul to eternity; and that which he commandeth is and ſhall ever be inevitable]

Verſe 24 After, Luke 6. 47. Adde [This Whoſ ever declareth, that God is no accepter of perſons: all muſt hear him that will be ſaved. His word is written in the holy Scripture, and ſpoken by all faithful Miniſters, concerning whom he ſaith, he that heareth you, heareth me --- Luke 10. 16. Matth. 10. 14 which all muſt hear; King, Prieſt, Prophet, People: if the Prophet, (ſpeak he never ſo well to others) hear not himſelf, he muſt be caſt away; becauſe he that will not hear this word, deſpiſeth not man, but God, whoſe truth, word and ordinance it is.]

Verſe 2*6*. After the word, men Adde [Yet all ſuperſtructions muſt fall, if the foundation fail: ſo is it here.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 2. After Luke 5. 12 Adde [it is here a note of a memorable and unexpected accident, or thing which men preſent, could neither foreknow, nor in their natural abilities reaſonably look for.]

In the ſame verſe, after the word, humility, Adde [and geſture, or poſture of diſtreſſed ſuppliants, accedere ad genua: to fall upon their knees, or to the feet and knees, of thoſe, of whom they begged mercy, favour, or relief.]

In the ſame verſe again, after the words, can heal it. Adde [and that he would ſhew his povver and mercy on him therein: had he knovvn the povver and mercy of Chriſt to others, never ſo much or confidently, except he had hoped, that it ſhould be extended to, and ſhevved on him alſo, he vvould not have come to entreat it: for vvho can pray for that, vvhereof he hath no hope of attaining?]

On the Goſpel according to

The Argument.

MARK is obſervable for his brevity, and in many things doth, as it were, abbreviate Matthew: Yet not without ſome uſeful differences, which may ſerve for explanations of the former Goſpel written by S. Matthew the Apoſtle. This Evangeliſt is thought to have been a follower of Peter, and called his Sonne, 1 Pet. 5. 13. yet whether it was John Mark or no, who is mentioned, as Barnabas his Kinſman, Coloſ. 4. 10. is uncertain; for he was a Follower of Paul and Barnabas, and not of Peter. VVhoſe Follower ſoever he was, out of doubt the credit of the Hiſtory dependeth not upon any mans Approbation, but upon Divine Inſpiration; elſe could it not be Canonicall Scripture, 2 Pet. 1. 21. In Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtories, he is ſaid to be the Founder of the Church of Alexandria in Egypt, and there to die, and be buried: Yet his Book remaineth for the good of Gods Church: To whom the Lord give grace to make good uſe of it, Amen.

CHAP. I.

THe beginning of the Goſpel] That is, the beginning of the Evangelical ſtory, of the firſt propagation of the Goſpel, which was by the Miniſtery of John; at whoſe preaching Mark begins his relations. See the Argument on Matthew, and on chap. 1. 1. there. Epiphanius To. 1. lib. 2. hereſ. 51. n. 6. noteth well, that God gave every one his part: ſo that every one of the Evangeliſts had his peculiar task alotted him, and that ſomethings they recorded with one conſent, ſo that they may all appear to have drawn, ἐξ ἀυτῆς τῆς πηγῆς, from one and the ſame fountain, and other things omitted of the reſt, ſome one of them mentioneth, as the Spirit of God gave him.

the Son of God] Matthew calleth him the ſon of David, to ſhew the truth of his humanity, and of Gods promiſes. Mark ſtiles him the Son of God, to ſet out his Divine power and ability to ſave us. See on Luke 3 38.

V. 2. as it is written] John went before Chriſt, as it was foreſpoken by the Prophets. Iſai. 40. 3. &c. Mal. 4. 5. &c. See Matth. 11. 13, 14. Luke 1. 76.

in the pophets] In the Books of the Prophets Iſaiah and Malachie, Matth 3. 3. and Luke 3. 4. as alſo in the Syriack here, Iſaiah is cited; the meaning is, in their propheſies. See Iſai. 40. 3. Mal. 3. 1.

I ſend my meſſenger] The Prophet uſeth the preſent tenſe, though he ſpake of a thing to come, being as ſure of it, as if it were preſent. So Hoſea 10. 7.

before my face] A metaphor taken from the Princes Harbingers ſent before them, to prepare for them.

prepare thy way, &c.] By fitting the way and removing the lets to a fairer paſſage; ſo did John, by preaching repentance, prepare the way for the Goſpel of Chriſt.

V. 3. the voice] See on Matth. 3. 3. John Baptiſt is called the voice of one crying, &c. to ſhew: that in that his Miniſtery, he taught nothing but that onely which the Spirit of God dictated to him: it was not his own word, but Gods; he was, to it, in ſome proportion, as the vocal inſtruments to the ſoul and mind, to expreſſe and bring the notions thereof unto the eares of men, which by the voice they do. When God would have Aaron joyne in commiſſion with Moſes for that great work of bringing Iſrael out of the houſe of bondage, he ſaid to Moſes, thou ſhalt ſpeak unto him, and put words in his mouth, and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye ſhall do: and he ſhall be thy ſpokeſman unto the people --- he ſhall be to thee inſtead of a mouth, and thou ſhalt be to him inſtead of God, Exod, 4. 15, 16. ſuch was John Baptiſt; ſuch is every faithful Miniſter, as the voice and mouth of God, to ſpeak, what he putteth into their mouth; not their own word, or ſenſe, Luke 10. 16. Chriſt ſaith to his Diſciples, --- he that heareth you, heareth me --- and Matth. 10. 20. for it is not you that ſpeak, but the Spirit of your Father which ſpeaketh in you.

in the wilderneſſe] See on Matth 3. 1. Either this may be joyned with the precedent words; and the ſenſe will be, that John began in, or near the Deſerts of Judæa to cry, prepare the way of the Lord, &c. or if with the following, the meaning is, prepare the way of the Lord, and in Judæa (which now lieth as a rough Deſert, untilled, without the fear and due worſhip of the Lord, and wherein few find or walk in the ſtrait paths of righteouſneſſe and life) now make ſtrait paths.

the baptiſm of repentance] John did teach thoſe whom he baptized, that this baptiſm did waſh away their ſins, who truly believed and repented. See chap. 16. 16. janua regni pœnitentia eſt cum fide, Jerom; faith and repentance are the gate of the kingdom: repentance was a part of Johns doctrine, and by baptiſm they profeſſed and teſtified their repentance.

for remiſſion of ſins] ἐις ἄφεσιν, &c. unto, or that they might obtain remiſſion of their ſins: not by the external waſhing with water onely, which is the Miniſters part, but by the inward Baptiſm of Chriſt, by the Spirit of regeneration: nor is repentance the cauſe, but the inſeparable condition of ſins remiſſion; which God alſo giveth (2 Tim. 2. 25.) who freely forgiveth the penitent. See verſe 8. onely the blood of Jeſus cleanſeth us from all our ſins, 1 John 1. 7. John 1. 29 See on Matth. 3. 11.

V. 6. clothed with camels hair] Matth. 3. 4.

V. 7. one mightier than I] John doth, as a faithful Miniſter ſhould do, leſſen himſelf, to advance Gods honour, referring the whole power of his miniſtration unto him, who alone can make it effectual. See 1 Cor. 3 7.

I am not worthy to, &c.] His meaning was to expreſſe the condition of the meaneſt ſervant, who ſtoops to pull off his maſters ſhoes; as if he ſaid, I am unworthy of the meaneſt ſervants office in his family.

V. 8. but he ſhall baptize you] He ſheweth that the whole efficacy of baptiſm proceedeth from Chriſt, inwardly baptizing. See Matth. 3. 11.

V. 9. and it came to paſſe] Matth. 3. 13.

V. 10. coming up out of the water] John, coming up ſaw it, Joh. 1. 33 34. it is likely that he went into the water with Chriſt, as Philip did with the Eunuch, Act. 8. 38.

the ſpirit driveth] Or ſends away, as verſe 43. or putteth forth, as John 10. 4. or leadeth him thither, Matth. 4. 1.

V. 13. with the wild beaſts] In the place where no man dwelt, Luke 1. 80 Act. 8. 26. alluding to Job 5. 22. in this triple neighbourhood of Chriſt, with Satan, wild beaſts, and Angels, it appeareth which God teſtified from heaven, that he is indeed the holy Son of God: that Satan tempted him it was more than for us to be taken. Greg. Nazianzen orat. 36. he tempted him, but could not prevail; this ſhewed him more than man: the wild beaſts were about him, and hurt him not, but acknowledged their ſubjection to him the ſecond Adam, as unto the firſt in his ſtate of innocency: and the Angels in their Miniſtery acknowledge him their Lord and God, who made them miniſtring ſpirits, Heb. 1.

Angels miniſtred unto him] After the fourty dayes faſt expired, and the temptations ended, Matt. 4.11.

V. 14. After that Iohn was caſt into priſon] After Iohns impriſonment, Chriſt ſhewed himſelf more evidently in the Office of the Meſſias.

Ieſus came into Galilee] Matt. 4.12.

V. 15 the time is fulfilled] The time foretold by the Prophet : for the manifeſtation of Chriſt is fully come, Gal.4. 4.

the Kingdom of God is at hand] Chriſt did now by the preaching of the Goſpel, take poſſeſſion of his kingdome, and declared the myſteries and power thereof, and Doctrine of Gods grace, and free mercy,for the gathering together, governing, and ſalvation of his Elect.

repent ye] Faith and repentance are the ſum of the Goſpel. See on verſe 4.

V. 16. now as he walked] Matt.4.18.concerning the calling of theſe Apoſtles S Matthew there ſpeaketh at large from the 18. to the 23.verſe, ſee alſo John 1.42 43, &c.

V. 17. I will make you fiſhers] See Matth. 4. 19 Luke 5. 10. he ſaith not, ye ſhall make your ſelves, as they doe, who intrude themſelves into the Miniſtery (as Gregor.Nazianzen ſaith, ἀνίπτοις χερσὶν, with unwaſhed hands; or as the ſame ſpeaks, orat. 20. at once ſowed and grown up (as the Poets feigned thoſe Giants)in one day, we make them ſaints, and commend them to be wiſe and learned, who have learned nothing, neither have brought any thing towards the miniſtery, before their will to be Miniſters, ſee Heb 5.4,5. Gregor.Nazianzen orat. 1.

with his hired ſervants] That by them he might mannage his affairs; and they attend him, who had now called them from that courſe of life to learn of him,and to preach to others the Goſpel.

V. 21. went to Capernaum] Matt. 4. 13. See on Matt. 11.23. Luke 4.31.ſee on John 2.12. Saint Matthew ſaith, chapter 4 13. leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum—— and verſe 23. that he went about all Galilee, teaching in their Synagogues,&c. and ſo he came to Capernaum, where he now dwelt, which was the cauſe why he often went and came to the ſame : this was a Town near the Lake of Geneſareth, in Galilee of the Gentiles in the borders of Zabulon and Neptalim, as Ierom gathereth out of the Goſpels. This flouriſhing, but impious place Chriſt pleaſed to dwell in, and there to preach the Goſpel, that they might have means of converſion and ſalvation, and that his Miniſters might learne that for the impiety and wickedneſſe of a people (though much diſcouraged therewith ; as Jer. 9. 3, &c. Ier. 20. 9.) they may not without Divine Warrant deſert and leave them ; but be —— apt to teach, patient in meekneſſe inſtructing thoſe that oppoſe themſelves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the Truth, 2 Tim.2.24 25,&c.

V. 22. aſtoniſhed] See on Luke 4. 32. and Matthew, 7.28.

V. 23. there was in the Synagogue] Luke 4 33.

of an unclean ſpirit] See on Luke 4 33 Matth. 10. 1. unclean, ſaith Euthymius, quaſi immundus a ſceleribus, &c. as rejoycing in uncleanneſſe and ſin. See on chap. 5.2.

V. 24. let us alone] ἔα it is a particle ἐκπλήξεως, of exclamation,proceeding from grief or aſtoniſhment, at ſome new, or unexpected thing, which troubleth and perplexeth;as much as ah. Euthymius interpreter giveth it, ſine, that is, dimitte nos; ſuffer, or let us alone : and Suidas giveth it by συγχώρει, ſine, concede, permitte, it is taken for an imperative of ἐάω, ſino, permitto, thence ἔα for ἔαε.

Jeſus of Nazareth] Becauſe he vvas bred there,though he vvere born at Bethlehem. See Matt 2.23. this vvas the ſubtilty of Satan, vvho vvell knowing, that Chriſt vvas, according to the Propheſies born at Bethlehem ; yet to perſvvade the people, that Chriſt vvas not the Meſſias expected and promiſed, he calleth him Ieſus of Nazareth. See Iohn 7. 42.

art thou come to deſtroy us] Did God therefore ſend thee into the World, to reſtrain us from doing miſchief, vvhich is a torment to us? See Luke 8. 31. the devils knovv that they are already damned,but yet they ſhall not be fully tormented before the end of the World. See 2 Pet.2.4 Iude v. 6.

the Holy one of God] So is he indeed the Holy Saviour of the World, figured by the High Prieſts Title, Exod. 28. 3. 6. and foretold,Dan.9.24.but mark hovv unconſiſtent falſhood is, the devils plots entangle himſelf : if the Holy one, then certainly come to caſt thee out : and here he confeſſeth Chriſt, in hope that none vvill believe that which the Devill ſaith, but all in vaine : they all believe Chriſt to be the Holy Saviour , vvho are regenerate by his Spirit.

V. 25. Ieſus rebuked him]ἐπετίμησεν, rebuked him with threatning.

hold thy peace] Ieſus refuſeth teſtimony of the evil one : Satan is a lyar, Iohn 8 44. and the father thereof : needs muſt his Teſtimony render Truth it ſelf ſuſpected vvith men : it is an uſual puniſhment of lyars, not to be believed, when they ſpeak Truth. The devil never ſpeaks truth, but to deceive. See Acts 16. 18. and Pſalm 50. 16.

come out of him] Thus Chriſt would rather ſhew himſelf to be that Holy one of God, by caſting out the unclean ſpirits, than by their Teſtimony ; and appeare ſuch in the effects of Divine Power, than the words of deluding ſpirits : Gods cauſe hath no need of ſinne or ſinners to ſupport it. See on Luke 8. 41.

V. 26. had torn him] Or pulled him with grievous pains, as by caſting him into a convulſion fit, which may be without renting) Luke 4. 35. ſo σπαράξαν importeth : thence is σπαραγμὸς, convulſion, σπαράσσω ſeemeth compounded of σπάω traho, to draw, (whence is σπασμα, convulſion or cramp) and ἀράσσω, pulſo, &c. ſo that it properly ſignifieth to tear or break, by drawing up together : this Chriſt preſent now permitted, that Satans malice might appear ; but would not ſuffer him further to hurt, that the power of him that caſt out Satan might be known.

V. 27. among themſelves] Or within themſelves, as Matthew, 16. 7.

what new doctrine is this] Not blaming it, as Acts 17. 19. but acknowledging it to be ſtrange and extraordinary ; in the matter of his teaching, and the manner of the confirmation thereof by miracles,which none of their late teachers could do.

with authority]Not by prayer to God as a ſervant,but ſuo jure,by his own juriſdiction, command and power over them.

V. 28. the region round about] Not onely into Galilee but alſo into all the countreys thereon bordering.

V. 29. forthwith] Matth. 8. 14.

James and John] It may be theſe dwelt together in one houſe, for they came with him.

V. 30. Simons wives mother] See Matt. 8.14.

V. 31. lift her up] Matt 8.15.

V. 32. when Even was come] Matt.8.16.the Sabbath then ending, the people were of opinion, that it was then lawfull to carry their ſick to be healed, which they conceived to be unlawful on the Sabbath day.

V 33 All the city] That is, all thoſe at leaſt whom it concerned to bring their ſick ; and probably a very great part of the Citizens of Capernaum beſides, ſeeing the ſick born along, and hearing what was done for them by Jeſus, would goe along to ſee the miracles.

V. 34. Of divers diſeaſes] This ſhewed his omnipotent power to repair man.

ſuffered not the devils] For it belonged not to them to preach the Goſpel. See Acts 16.18. nor would Chriſt receive a Teſtimony from them. See on verſe 25. The Syriack gives it, he would not ſuffer them to ſpeake, becauſe they knew him : and therefore (as he well knew) would out of malice reveal him : as ſome of his Miniſters, wicked men, preached Chriſt of ill will. See Philippians, 1. 15.

V. 35. And there prayed] He uſed to take the nights and mornings for prayer not onely becauſe theſe are freeſt from diſtractions, and ſo moſt accommodate to prayer, but becauſe he might have the day free to preach, and heal the ſick.

V. 36. they that were with him] Probably,Andrew, James and John, mentioned verſe 29.

V. 37 all men ſeeke for thee] That is, many men enquire for thee, which it ſeemeth came to Simon Peters door, by reaſon of the wonderous workes, which he had there done in the evening paſt.

V. 38. let us go into the next Towns] That he might heal their ſick,and inſtruct them alſo as well as the Capernaites.

that I may preach] Though prayer be a part of Gods worſhip, and an holy exerciſe, yet being advertiſed by the Apoſtles , that opportunity was offered to preach the Goſpel, he aroſe from that for this.

V. 39. he preached] ἦν κηρύσσων,he was preaching : that is, by degrees, and in time, he preached through all. See Matthew, 4. 23.

V. 43. Sent him away] So Luke 8. 38.

V. 44. ſay nothing] Till thou have firſt been with the Prieſt to offer according to the Law, for thy cleanſing : this might be to prevent the inconvenience which followed, verſe 45. See on Matthew 8. 4.

ſhew thy ſelfe to the Prieſt] Any of Aarons poſterity might judge of a Leper, whether he were cured or not. Leviticus 13.2. Not without an excellent miſtery, ſhewing that Chriſt (of whom Aaron, and the Leviticall High Prieſt for the time being, were Types) ſhould cleanſe and judge of the Leproſie of ſinne, Acts 17. 31.

V: 45. but he went out] From the preſence of Jeſus, Luke 5.15. That is, the humane and bodily preſence of Jeſus, and the company then with him.

to publiſh it much] He could not conceal what he had receiued: Chriſt did juſtly decline popularity, becauſe it ſomething hindred the courſe of the Goſpel, by creating him untimely dangers: and the cured man did juſtly glorifie God, who had done ſo great a work upon him.

could no more openly] As he was wont, and as he would, without too much confluence of people, and hazard to himſelf, from the malicious Scribes and Phariſees which ſheweth the cauſe why Chriſt charged the cured Leper, not to tell any man how he was cleanſed which Chriſt knew juſt cauſe for, though man could not underſtand it, to be either juſt or reaſonable to conceal the goodneſſe, mercy and power of Chriſt, ſhewed in curing him by his Word, in an inſtant.

V. 13. He went forth] From the Scribes convicted by this miracle, becauſe he ſavv, that all the mercy vvhich he ſhevved on that people, vvas but as vvater to unſlackt lime, in that it did not extinguiſh, but incenſe the *S*cribes and Phariſees anger the more:

V. 3. Stand forth] He bids him ſtand forth, that the miracle might be the more manifeſt: for as much as all that were then preſent ſhould ſee, both the diſaffected patient, and his preſent and miraculous cure, that they might for the confirmation of the Goſpel, as occaſion ſhould preſent it ſelfe, teſtifie the Truth of the ſame to others.

V. 4. or to do evil] It is good for me to ſhew mercy in healing this man or it is evil to neglect him, when I can heal him, (for he that ſaveth not, when he may and can, killeth) the queſtion is, which thinke you may I doe on the Sabbath day? So Acts 6.4. Coloſ. 4. 2. τῇ προσευχῇ προσκαρτερεῖτε——continue in prayer.

leſt they ſhould throng him] As Luke 5. 1. ſee here verſe 10.

V. 10. he had healed many] See on Matth. 12. 15. all that came to him to be cured, which were very many.

preſſed upon him] Ruſhed, or fell upon him, thronging him.

to touch him] See Matthew 20. 21. Matthew 14. 36. and Luke 6.19.

as had plagues] Diſeaſes, whereby God afflicteth men, as it were correcting them with whips. The word in the Originall is εἶχον μάστιγας——had ſcourges, for μάστιξ is flagrum, flagellum a whip or ſcourge, which word is here uſed not without ſingular Emphaſis to teach us how to eſteem and endure ſickneſſes, as the rods of our Heavenly Father, whereby he chaſteneth us, and humbleth us to amendment of our lives, that we may not be condemned with the world. See 1 Corinthians 11,30,32. Hebrewes, 12. 5.6, &c.

V. 11. and unclean ſpirits] In them, into whom they had entred: they who were vexed with unclean ſpirits.

thou art the Son of God] See Matt. 8. 29.

V. 12. that they ſhould not make him known] Jeſus came into the world, that he might be known to the ſalvation of the Elect; and it is life everlaſting to know him (See John 17. 3.) but he would not admit the teſtimony of unclean ſpirits: his Doctrine and Miracles ſufficiently manifeſted him to the world; the truth needeth neither lies, nor liars to ſupport it. See on chap. 1. 25. neither would he yet be manifeſted to thoſe Gentiles, now about him; before he had made himſelf more known to the Jewes, to whom he was ſent.

V. 13. goeth up into a mountain] Matt. 10. 1. which mountain, it ſeemeth, was ſomething near to the lake of Genezareth, ſee Mat. 5. 1.

V. 14. he ordained] Choſe and appointed twelve to be converſant with him.

twelve] See on Matth. 10. 2. Luke 6. 13.

to preach] To Judea firſt, and afterward to the world, chap. 16. 15. as his calling them hereto ſheweth their dignitie, ſo alſo their duty; which was, firſt, to be with Chriſt, to learn and obſerve his Holy Will, and then to preach the ſame to others.

V. 15. power to heal ſickneſſes, &c.] To the end, that ſuch admirable power might be as a ſeal to their Apoſtleſhip, for the confirmation of their Doctrine.

V. 16. Simon he named Peter] See on Matth. 10. 2. Luke 6. 14. and on John 1. 41.

V. 17. Boanerges] Βοανεργές. Syr. בני-רגשי benai-regeſhi, filii fragoris, which being their mother tongue, in which Chriſt ſpake, ſome think the name here uſed by the Evangeliſt, to be corrupted Syriack; as but few words which are ſtrangers to the Greeks, are uncorruptly written in their Letters. The name is compounded (ſaith Druſius, ad voc. N. T. com. 1.) of בני, ſons, which they anciently pronounced bane, and רעם raham, (of רעם tonuit) as Pſalm 77. 18. קול רעמך kolrahamcha, the voyce of thy thunder; which the 70 give, as the Evangeliſt here, βροντῆς. The Greeks wrote רעם-ργές, turning the laſt letter (ם) m, into (σ) s, as was uſual with them. So bane, and reges (whoſe firſt vowel point, omitted) make banerges, whereof the Greek (near the ſound of their βοῶν of βοάω) make Boanerges, and this בני-רגשי benai regeſhi, is according to the Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, put, thunderers; as they ſaid alſo, בנ-מות, ben meveth, filius mortis, 1 Sam. 20. 31. בן ברית ben berith, a ſon of the Covenant, alſo a ſon of peace, that is, peaceable. Some think this name compounded of בני and רעש, commotus fuit, or רגש, ragaſh, ſtrepuit. Chriſt thus named them, either becauſe their voice ſhould be heard in the world about, or becauſe they ſhould preach more powerfully or vehemently than others.

V. 18. Thaddeus] He had three names, Lebbeus, Thaddeus, and Judas, See Matth. 10. 3. Luke 6.1*6*. by the two former he is diſtinguiſhed from Judas the traitor.

V. 19. Judas Iſcariot] See on Matth. 10. 4. and John 6. 71. this diſtinguiſheth him from Judas the brother of James, mentioned Luke 16. 16. Jud 1.

into an houſe] Or home, into his houſe at Capernaum, Matth. 4. 13. hither he came with his Diſciples, wearied with labour and travel, that they might breath a while and receive ſome food, and refreſhment to repair and fit them to a future travell and miniſtration.

V. 20. the multitude cometh together again] After he returned from the mount to the houſe, they preſently flocked unto him.

not ſo much as to eat bread] For the importunity of the multitude, deſiring to hear, ſee him, and to have their ſick healed.

V. 21. his friends] οἱ παρ' αὐτοῦ, they that were of him, Syr. אחיונוהי, achienauhi, his couzens or kindred: it is of אח, ach, a brother, they ſo uſed to call kinſmen: now they that were diſtracted, or thought to be ſo, were to be provided for by their kinſfolk: we may not conceive, that all his brethren or kinſmen thus miſtook him: for ſome of them, as James and John were his Diſciples, and better inſtructed.

he is beſide himſelf] Gods Miniſters are often cenſured thus, 2 Kings 9. 11. Acts 2*6*. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 13. therefore went they out from Nazareth, where his kindred dwelt, unto Capernaum, where Jeſus now was, to lay hold on him, and carry him away from the multitude, that they might take care of him, as of a diſtracted man; for they did not yet all believe in him, John 7. 5.

V. 22. he hath Beelzebub] Syr. Beelzebub is in him: they could not for ſhame ſay he was madde, whoſe Divine Wiſedome had ſo often convicted them, and put them to ſilence before the multitude; therefore they blaſphemouſly impute that to the ſpirit of Sathan; which was the worke of God. See Matth. 9. 34.

V. 23. called them unto him] From them who thus murmured among the people, ſhewing them, that he knew all that they had ſaid, though they were bodily abſent, which was an argument of his Deity.

in Parables,] In ſimilitudes taken from things more known and, familiar to them.

Satan caſt out Satan] How can one devil have power to diſpoſſeſs another? See Matt. 12. 25, 2*6*.

V. 24. if a Kingdome] If the people of an earthly Kingdome be divided into factions, and inteſtine contentions. See on Matthew, 12. 25.

V. 25. if an houſe be divided] See on Matthew, 12. 25. for as Gr. Nazianzen ſaith, orat. 34. ſtrife is ἀρχὴ λύσεως, the beginning of Diſſolution, the nerves and ſinews of ſociety, is happy concord.

V. 2*6*. if Satan riſe up againſt himſelf] Unity is ſuch a bond of ſociety, that not ſo much as Satans kingdom can ſubſiſt without it. See on Luke 11. 17:

V. 27. into a ſtrong mans houſe] See on Matthew, 12. 29. and Luke 11. 21, 22.

V. 28. verily, I ſay unto you] Matth. 12. 31.

all ſins ſhall be forgiven] They onely are without hope of pardon, who doe maliciouſly and conſtantly oppoſe Chriſt whom they know. See Hebr. 6. 6. and 10. 2*6*. the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt is duritia cordis, ad finem huius vitæ &c. Auguſtine ep. 50. hardneſs of heart, and impenitency unto the end of this life: underſtand it with reſiſting a known truth, out of deſtinate malice.

V. 29. he that ſhal blaſpheme againſt the holy Ghoſt] He that contrary to the inward motion of his conſcience enlightned by the Holy Ghoſt, and convinced of the truth of the Goſpel, ſhall out of meer malice and contempt oppoſe it.

is in danger] ἔνοχος ἐστι, that is, as the Syriack gives it, is guilty of, or liable to eternall damnation; τῇ ἀρᾷ ἔνοχος, that is, execrable, devotus manibus, as Budæus interpreteth it.

V. 30. becauſe they ſaid, he hath an uncleane ſpirit] The Evangeliſt ſheweth the cauſe, of our Saviours ſpeaking here concerning the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, which the Scribes and Phariſees here committed, by their wilfull and malicious attributing that to Satan, which they could not but know was the finger of God, and work of his Holy Spirit.

V. 31. there came then] Matth. 12.46. then or therefore, becauſe he ſpake this, they thought him mad, as verſe 21. and would pull him out of danger: the Evangeliſt returneth to the Hiſtory begun, verſe 21. they came to him as he was in this ſerious conteſt with the Scribes and Phariſees.

and his mother] Probably his unbelieving kindred, giving information of his danger, might perſwade his mother to come with them, that they might thereby the more eaſily perſwade Jeſus to withdraw himſelfe from the multitude. *S*ee on Matthew, 12. 46.

his brethren] By brethren the Hebrews underſtood all that were of the ſame ſtock and kindred, Gen. 13.8.

V. 32. behold thy mother] See Matth. 12.48.

V. 33. who is my mother? &c.] *S*ee on Matth. 12.48.

V 34. behold my mother] See on Matth. 12. 49 the ſpiritual kindred ought principally to be accounted of. See Galat. 6. 10. Pſalm 16. 3.

V. 35. Whoſoever ſhall doe the will, &c.] See on Matthew, 12. 50.

the whole multitude] See on Matth. 13 2.

V. 2. many things in parables] See on Matt 13 3.

V. 3. a ſower to ſowe] The ſame Doctrine of the Goſpel which is every where ſowed by faithful Miniſters, hath not the ſame ſucceſſe every where; God mercifully opening the hearts of ſome hearers, and juſtly hardening the hearts of others, ſo that the ſame word proveth a ſavour of life to ſome, and a ſavour of death to others. This is the ſcope of this Parable. See on Matthew, 13.3.

V. 4. Some fell by the way ſide] See on Matth. 13.4.

V. 5. on ſtony ground] See on Matth. 13. 5.

V. 6. Sun was up] *S*ee Matth. 13. 6.

V. 8. on good ground Matth. 13.8.

V. 9. He that hath an ear, &c.] Matth. 13.9.

V. 10. with the twelve] Matth. 13. 10. Theſe with others that followed him, The Greek words οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν often ſignifie thoſe that are addicted to a man as his followers or diſciples. So it ſeemeth ſome other of his Diſciples, who were with the twelve Apoſtles asked him the meaning of the Parable, whether theſe were of the ſeventy Diſciples, as Euthemius, thinketh, or others, it is not manifeſt.

V. 11. Unto you it is given] Mat. 13. 11. To you that fear God, I will interpret the Parables: See Pſalm 25. 14. which not being unfolded are hidden myſteries.

unto them that are without] To ſtrangers, and ſuch as are none of ours, 1 Cor. 5 12.

V. 12, That ſeeing they may ſee] Matt. 13.14.

V. 13. Know you not this Parable] This ſo much expreſſed in particulars, to make it more eaſie? how then will ye underſtand the hardeſt?

V. 14. He that ſoweth] For the meaning hereof; See on Matt. 13. from verſe 18. unto the 24 verſe.

V. 19. The cares of this world] The unneceſſary and diſtracting cares about ſecular affairs.

and the deceitfulneſs of riches] 1 Tim. 6. 17. In the Greek ἡ ἀπάτη τοῦ πλούτου ſo Hebr. 3. 13. ἀπάτη τῆς ἁμαρτίας deceitfulneſſe of ſinne; and ſo 2 Theſ. 2. 10. he ſpeaketh concerning the ſecret and undiſcerned working of Antichriſt ἐν πάσῃ ἀπάτῃ τῆς ἀδικίας with all deceivableneſſe of unrighteouſneſſe: whence we may conceive the ſenſe of this place to be, that riches are to men of this world, a ſnare, 1 Timothy 6.9. ſtealing on, and beguiling their ſouls, who love and truſt in them ſo, as to carry them away from God, and true care of ſalvation.

a buſhell] The word in the Originall, may ſignifie a leſſe meaſure.

V. 22. for there is nothing] Matthew, 10. 2*6*. See on Luke 8. 17.

V. 23. He that hath an ear] So verſe 9. Here repeated to intimate our extreme dulneſs, and negligence in hearing the Word of Chriſt.

V. 24. Take heed therefore what ye hear] βλέπετε, properly ſee; but here, take heed, or be very careful: three cautions are very neceſſary in hearing; take heed; firſt, whom ye hear; hear not Satans ſeducing Miniſters. See Deuteronomy 13.3. 8. Jer. 23. 16. Matt. 24.23.26. It is very dangerous to liſten to the tempter, Matt. 24. 24. Secondly, Take heed what you hear: ſinne firſt entred by the ear, when the woman would hear the tempters deluſions; and yet evil words corrupt good manner, 1 Cor. 15.33. Thirdly, take heed how ye hear: See Luke 8.18. For the Word of God is powerfull, Hebr. 4. 12. it cannot be inactive, (See, Iſai. 55 10.11. Deuteronomy 32. 1, &c.) but will be either a ſavour of life unto life, or a ſavour of death unto death, 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. every Sermon thou heareſt, carrieth thee ſome ſteps on thy way, to Heaven, or Hell; it highly concerneth thee to take heed how thou heareſt.

With what meaſure you mete] Matt. 7.2. The more uſe we make of Gods Ordinances, the more grace God will give us; or as you deal with others, ſo ſhall it be dealt with you.

V. 25. For he that hath] Matt. 13,12.

V. 2*6*. So is the Kingdome of God] God doth as it were, ſow and reap in the Church, though men obſerve it not: but look on the work of the Miniſtery as on ſome effect of ſecond cauſes; not conſidering the Ordinacce and Power of God therein, which is the reaſon why ſo few profit thereby.

V. 27. and ſhould ſleep] Though he ſeemeth not to regard or look after the ſeed ſowed; or though the ſeeds-mans the Miniſters work ceaſe, when he hath done his part.

he knoweth not how] It is the Miniſters part to ſowe with all diligence, and leave the ſucceſs to God: for that ſecret power and providence whereby the ſeed cometh inſenſibly to blade and ear, cannot be diſcerned by man, onely it is knowne by the fruite and effect, as they ſay, non in fieri, ſed in facto eſſe, grown, not growing.

V. 28. of her ſelf] By a certain power implanted in the creature (by that omnipotent Word of God, who ſaid at firſt, fiat, let it be ſo) whereby it moveth or altereth it ſelf, by a natural courſe without mans help, *S*ee Gen. 1.11.

V. 29. fruit brought forth] παραδῷ ὁ καρπὸς, this ſubſtantive being of the nominative caſe, it appeareth that here is an Hebraiſme, as if it were ſaid, according to the ſignification of verbs in Hithpael (in which they ſignifie, actionem ejuſdem in ſe ipſum) when the fruit hath given, or produced it's ſelf. Euthymius well interpreth it, cum maturuerit, when it is grown ripe.

V. 30. whereunto ſhall we liken] Matt. 13. 31.

V. 31. is leſſe than all the ſeed] Chriſt would hereby ſhew, that of ſmall beginnings God effecteth admirable things in his Church, which ſheweth the greatneſſe of his power above mans.

V. 32. it groweth up] Matt. 13. 32.

V. 33. many ſuch Parables] Matt. 13. 34.

as they were able to heare it] According to the capacity of the hearers: for hearing is here put for underſtanding; as, 1 Corinthians, 3. 1. So Chriſt accommodated his diſcourſe to the preſent hearers apprehenſions: as, John 3. 12. which he well knew.

V. 34. he expoundeth all things] ἐπέλυε, he diſſolved, or opened by Explication. See the like phraſe, 2 Peter, 1. 20.

V. 35. and the ſame day] Matt. 8. 23.

V. 3*6*. they took him] They carried him away, ſetting ſail, or rowing, and putting off from the ſhore: for he had preached, being aboard the ſhip all this vvhile, v. 1.

as he was in the ſhip, &c.] He had no reſt, nor refection all the Day, and departed at Even, vvithout going aſhore again at that time.

V. 37. there aroſe a great ſtorme] See on Matthevv 8. 24. Luke 8. 23.

v. 38. aſleep on a pillow] He thus ſeemed to leave them to hazard, that they might learn πειρασμοὺς φέρειν, to bear tentations; ſaith Theophylact, had he vvaked, either they vvould not have feared, or prayed: he permitted them to this fear, to avvaken their Devotion by his ſleeping: that they might in the iſſue, be more ſenſible of his povver, commanding *S*ea and Windes.

careſt thou not that wee periſh? This ſpeake they out of their feare and infirmitie: it is true, the Humanity ſleepeth; but the Deity, (vvhich keepeth Iſrael) neither ſlumbers nor ſleeps.

V. 39. rebuked

V. 39. rebuked the winde] See on Mat. 8. 26. ἐπετίμησε, it it an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, as Pſal. 106. 9. ויגער בים jighebar bejam, he rebuked the ſea: the 70. give it in the word here uſed ἐπετίμησε, &c. (See alſo Nahum 1. 1. 4. Zech. 3. 2.) The Syriack interpreter giveth repreſſit ventum, he repreſſed the winde. The word ſignifieth a vehement rebuking, (ſuch as is oft times joyned with interminations and threatnings, in caſe the rebuked obey not) or charging, with threatnings, as Mat. 12. 16.

and ſaid unto the ſea, peace, and be ſtill] σιώπα, peace; this is his word of rebuke: Syr. זגיר zegir, their זגר zeghar importeth, increpavit, or ſilentium impoſuit; as it were with threatning words: in which ſenſe they ſeem to uſe their גער gehar 1 Tim 5. 1. he ſtilleth the raging of ſea and windes. See Pſal. 107. 29. this ſheweth the deity of Chriſt: he but ſpeaketh to the deaf ſea and ſtormy windes, and they obey him: he ſpeaketh to the dead, and they hear him: more deaf than ſea or dead men, are obſtinate ſinners who cannot hear and obey Chriſt, ſo long crying to the turbulent railers, and ſeditious quarrellers, peace, and be ſtill.

there was a great calm] This preſent calme ſhevveth the preſence of the Lord of the creatures; naturally the ſea rageth long after the winde ſlats; but here it was preſently ſmooth and calm.

V. 40. that have no faith] That is, firm confidence in my power and providence, which ſleepeth not. Pſal. 121. 4.

V. 41. feared exceedingly] Becauſe he did not appeaſe and rule the waters, as Moſes with a rod; or as Elias Jordan by prayer: 2 Kings 2. nor with the Ark, as Joſhuah; Ioſhua 3. he ſeemed to them ὑπὲρ ἄνθρωπον, above, or more than man; therefore they feared his preſence, whom they had not as yet duely underſtood, or obſerved with due reverence of ſuch a Majeſty preſent, See Math 8. 27.

Verſe 1. THey came over] Mat. 8. 28.

of the Gaderens] Gergaſa and Gadara were near, and the coaſt named from either: this was a city of Arabia, over againſt Tiberias and Galilee. (Luke 8. 26.) beyond Iordan, joyned to mount Gilead; or Galaad (Jer. de loc. Hebr.) in the lot of the tribe of Manaſſes: Ioſeph de bel. Iud. l. 3. c. 2. calleth it Gadarida. Suidas ſaith it is the ſame which was called Antioch, and Seleucia. See on Luke 8. 27.

V. 2. with an unclean ſpirit] ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ in an unclean ſpirit: it is an Hebraiſme ſignifying, with, or by. See Exod. 6. 6. I will redeem you בזרוע bizroah &c. in a ſtretched-out arm: that is, with or by, &c. Here it may import that the ſpirit held him faſt, as it were lockt up, and bound. Mat, 8. 28. Two are mentioned: but it ſeems this here, was the moſt notorious; and ſo he onely named.

V. 3. among the tombes] See on Matthevv 8. 28. and on Luke 8. 27.

no man could binde him] No man could keep him bound, with whatſoever they bound him: as verſe 4.

V. 4. pluckt aſunder by him] See on Mat. 8. 28

V. 5. night and day] So importunate a tyrant is Satan where he getteth dominion: ſo tormenteth he the damned ſoules. Rev. 14. 11.

in the mountains and in the tombes] They had their tombes generally in mountaines, or deſart places. Gen. 23. 9, 10. 2 Kings 23. 16. not in the cities; perhaps leſt they ſhould be defiled by touching them: See Numb. 19. 16. Great families had the more large and ſtately tombes, hewed out of rocks, or built up and arched with ſtone or brick, ſo that they might receive many bodies.

crying and cutting himſelfe] Crying, he was terrible to others paſſing by him; cutting or beating himſelfe with ſtones, he was cruel to himſelfe: ſo wretched a ſlavery it is, to ſerve Satan, whoſe onely delight is to make us hurt our ſelves and others: conſider this, you that take pleaſure in ſin. See Rom. 6. 12. 16.

V. 6. and worſhipped him] A great token of Chriſts divine power, that the very devils are in ſubjection to him, or that he ſhould ſuffer any man in his power, to worſhip him.

V. 7. What have I to do with thee] See on Mat. 8. 29. Becauſe the diſciples in the ſhip doubted ſaying, what manner of man is this? here is a more evident teſtimony of his deity, from the very enemies, the devils: Theophylact, mark how inconſiſtent Satans words and actions are; he worſhippeth him, and yet asketh what he hath to do with him?

I adjure thee by God] So ſaid the high prieſt, Mat. 26. 63. the meaning of this place is: I deſire thee to ſweare to me by God, that thou vvilt not torment me. So Luke 8. 28 I beſeech thee torment me not. See 8. 29. in vvhich ſenſe it vvas common in fear or danger, to deſire to be ſecured by the oath of him that had power over them: ſo ſaid Rahab to the ſpies; Ioſhua 2. 12. ſvvear unto me by the Lord, I pray you, becauſe I have ſhevved you mercy. See Geneſis, 21. 23. & 25. 33. Iud. 15. 2. 1 Sam. 30. 15. Satan here knowing that his petition was neither of merit nor povver, he interpoſeth the name of God, hoping thereby to prevaile.

V. 8. For he ſaid] Or, for he had ſaid: Chriſts bidding him go out, was the cauſe of the adjuration: verſe 7. It is the devils torment to be caſt out of poſſeſſion, where he thought all his own: the kingdom of Chriſt is his torment, vvhoſe onely pleaſure is to deſtroy bodies and ſoules.

V. 9. What is thy name] Chriſt asketh his name, to ſhevv the greatneſſe of the poſſeſsed's miſery, and vvonderful delivery; not that Chriſt might inform himſelf, but that the ſtanders by might know their multitude. Theophylact, Euthymius, &c.

my name is legion] A great multitude, like a Roman legion of ſouldiers. See on Luke 8. 30.

V. 10, He beſought him] Either the chief devil there preſent, or elſe the man over-maſtered by the ſpirits, and cauſing this petition to be uttered by his voyce.

out of the countrey] Not that Satan loved one countrey better than another, who hateth all mankinde; but that he deſireth to be there where corruption of manners, ignorance of God, and contempt of his word and ordinance, giveth him greateſt hope of deſtroying ſoules.

V. 11. nigh unto the mountain] This countrey is for the moſt part hilly; for the mountains of Galaad run through it. See on verſe 1.

V. 12. All the devils beſought him] Which vvere in the poſſeſſed.

ſend us into the ſwine] This ſheweth, as Satans malice, who will be hurting beaſts, rather than not hurt at all; ſo under what reſtraint his fierceſt malice is, who cannot meddle with the meaneſt beaſt, without leave of God firſt obtained. See Job 1 10.

V. 13. Forthwith Jeſus gave him leave] Among many other reaſons, this was one, to ſhew the power of Chriſt in ſaving this man from the poſſeſsion and tyranny of ſo many devils as appeared, ſo quickly precipitating a numerous herd of ſwine into the ſea: that the devils are preſently heard, and Gods ſervants ſometimes long delayed, and ſometimes obtain not what they ask at all; ſheweth that God ſometimes granteth in judgement, and denieth in mercy, or delayeth that vvhich he vvill give, to our greater advantage.

down a ſteep place into the ſea] Strabo ſaith, l. 16. that in Gadaris there is a lake of water ſo bad and unvvholeſome, that if the beaſts drink thereof, they looſe their haire, hoofs, or horns: the herd running here violently down, ſhew that Satan would have ſo driven this man, had not God reſtrained Satan, and preſerved the man, to become ſuch an admirable inſtance of his mercy: mark how Gods gracious providence watcheth over men, whom he might ſeem to have given over to utter deſtruction: who could ſeem more deſperate than this vvretched ſoul, with a legion of devils in him? what could Satan ſeem to himſelf more ſecure of, out of hell? yet God even then had ſuch a merciful care of him, as to limit Satans power, that he might reſerve him then to be pulled as a brand out of the fire when his converſion might beſt ſerve to advance Gods glory; truſt in God, and deſpair not, you afflicted ſouls, whatever you ſuffer for the preſent: God hath an eye toward you, and even then preſerveth his Elect, when Satan thinketh he is moſt ſecure of their deſtruction.

V. 14. They went out to ſee] Poſsibly the thing ſeemed incredible to them; or they deſired to ſee him who had done ſo admirable a vvork; or that they might intreat him to leave them: as, verſe 17. See on Mat. 8. 33. and Luke 8. 34.

V. 15. they come to Ieſus] Mat. 8. 34. They come to Jeſus, that he might go from them: hovv much better affection did the Samaritans ſhew toward him? Iohn 4. 40.

clothed and &c.] See on Luke 8. 35. The devils made him tear his clothes, and go naked, to adde his miſery, by depriving him of the comforts which God had given men therein. See Luke 8. 27.

V. 16. told them how &c.] They told thoſe who came out of the city to ſee what was done, how Ieſus by his word and command only, drave out a legion of devils, out of the man who had ſo long infeſted that way; and alſo, what became of the herd of ſwine.

V. 17. to pray him] That they intreated, ſheweth that they were afraid of his power, and their own further loſſe of ſecular things: they feared (ſaith Theophylact) μήποτε ϗ μεῖζόν τι πάθωσι, leſt they ſhould ſuffer ſomething greater; too many love their ſwine better then Chriſt, and more fear temporal loſſes than eternal loſſe of body and ſoul: hence it is that too many fear men, more than God. See on Mat. 10. 28.

V. 18. that he might be with him] Fearing leſt the devil in Chriſts abſence ſhould repoſſeſſe him: he is of a contrary affection to the Gaderens: ſo the ſame ſun-beams ſoften wax, and harden clay.

V. 19. go home and] See on Luke 8. 39. Hee would faine have attended Ieſus ſtill; partly in thankfulneſſe, as Euthymius notes; partly for fear of repoſſeſsion; as, verſe 18. but Chriſt ſendeth him home, who often directeth us to ſomething better, than that we vvell deſired. See Acts 16. 6, 7.

and tell how great things] Though Chriſt repulſed of the unworthy Gad rens, did according to their merit, deſert them; yet in his invincible mercy, he left them not without one meſſenger who could, out of ſufficient experience, preach unto them the omnipotency and mercy of Chriſt: neither can we reaſonably conceive, that Jeſus ſent him away before he had alſo inſtructed him in the Goſpel, for his own converſion and others: therefore he ſate at Jeſus feet, Luke 8. 35. and this was the greateſt mercy which God had ſhewed him.

V. 20. and began to publiſh] Here appeareth the admirable power and mercy of Chriſt, who made a preacher of ſo wretched a vaſſall of Satan: he that thus changed him, gave him this ready obedience: ſo following his own works to their conſummation.

all men did marvell] All that heard what Chriſt had done for this man: this admiration, poſſibly, was a previous diſpoſition to their faith in Chriſt; for, very probably, they ſo admired, as to praiſe and applaud the goodneſſe of God by Chriſt ſhewed unto infirm and wretched men; as afterwards when he came through Decapolis, c. 7. 31, 32. &c. in which region vvas the countrey of the Gadarens. Plin.. l. 5. c. 18.

V. 21. paſſed over again] Into Galilee, where many had ſeen his former miracles.

V. 22. One of the rulers of the ſynagogue, Jairus &c] The congregations vvere not vvithout ſome government: for in every ſynagogue, it appeareth there vvere ſome rulers: anarchicall parity is, a late ſprung up muſhrom. See on Mat. 9. 18. and on Luke 13, 14.

fell at his feet] Mat. 9 18. This vvas an effect and ſign of his faith in Chriſt, and tender affection to his child, vvhoſe life; he ſo ſubmiſſively begged on his bended knees; this poſture charactereth this man, humble, and modeſt, and much unlike the inſolent Phariſees: Chriſt beſtovveth his favours on the humble.

V. 23. lyeth at the point of death] Or in extremity; or is at the laſt gaſp. Mat. 9. 18. he ſaith, ſhe is even now dead: but, it ſeems it was after his ſervants had told him ſo, verſe 35.

come and lay thy hand] See on Mat. 9. 19. here was faith, in that he believed that only by laying on his hand, Chriſt could heal, or recover his child, in a condition ſo extream, and as to man, hopeleſſe; but not without much infirmity in which he deſired a bodily preſence, not knowing or acknowledging his divine power every where preſent, and able to relieve the diſtreſſed; as it ſeemeth the Centurion did. Mat. 8. 8. yet he who breaketh not the bruiſed reed, neither quencheth the ſmoking flax, Mat. 12. 20. would go along with him and raiſe his dead child.

V. 24. and thronged him] Many following with eager deſire to ſee the miracles, preſſed upon him.

V. 25. which had a bloody iſſue] Or being in an iſſue. See on Mat. 9. 20.

V. 26. had ſpent all] Coming into a double miſery, of being ſick and poor, ſhe came by this means to a double happineſſe, health of body and ſoul, verſe 34.

grew worſe] Going to the worſe; more weak by ſundry medicines; Phyſick, like good counſel, leaves them more incurable, whom it recovereth not; this ſhewes, as her deſperate condition; ſo the abſolute power of Chriſt in this miracle: there is no malady ſo deplored, and deſperate that Chriſt cannot cure it.

V. 27. when ſhe heard of Jeſus] That is, the miracles which he did, beyond all power of man.

ſhe came] After ſhe began to deſpair of help by Phyſicians, then ſhe cometh to Chriſt; then nearer health, when (in reſpect of man) ſhe ſeemed furtheſt from it: God doth moſt readily help the moſt helpleſſe; ſo when men under ſaile loſe ſight of the land, they are fain to look up to heaven for ſtars to ſaile by; which may probably be the reaſon why God in his divine wiſdom, taketh away from the diſtreſſed, the ordinary means of help, or maketh them effectleſſe, that he may force them to look up to, and to ſeek to him for help and comfort, which they cannot have from ſecond cauſes. See Hoſ. 5. 15.

V. 28. if I may but touch his clothes] See on Mat. 9. 21.

V. 29. ſhe felt in her] Knew, verſe 33. ſhe felt in her ſelf a ſodain and manifeſt change, in her preſent recovery of health and ſtrength reſtored, which her long and grievous infirmity had before taken away.

that ſhe was healed] See on Mat. 9. 22.

V. 30. knowing in himſelfe] That is, he knovving what miracle he had wrought: ſhe thought ſhe had obtained this favour which Chriſt knew not of; it was not meet ſhe ſhould go away with that errour; neither that Gods glory in this miracle ſhould be obſcured: therefore he asketh who touched him; as ſhe knevv ſhe vvas healed: ſo Chriſt knew that his povver had healed her.

vertue had gone out of him] As light or heat, goeth out of the ſun, not by diminution of the cauſe, but by production of the effect: ſo power vvent out of Chriſt; yet ἀμείωτος μένουσα, the ſame remaining in Chriſt undiminiſhed: as Theophylact expreſſeth it.

V. 31, his diſciples ſaid] Not knovving the preſent miracle, nor vvhat Jeſus meant hereby. For it vvas an expreſsion as unuſual, as vvas the cure, vvhich the diſciples yet knew not of.

ſayeſt thou who touched me?] Among this multitude thronging him, he diſtinguiſhed this one, whoſe faith touched him: nothing is hid from him.

V. 32. He looked round about to ſee] This he did, that ſhe might voluntarily confeſſe the benefit ſhe had received, to Gods glory, and the confirmation of Jairus and others faith; not that he vvas ignorant vvho, or vvhere ſhe vvas.

V. 33. fearing and trembling] ὡς κλέψασα τὴν ἴασιν, ſaith Theophylact, as, having ſtolne a cure. See Luke 8. 47.

V. 34. thy faith hath made thee whole] To the commendation of the effects of faith, he ſaith, thy faith hath healed thee, vvhen it was his power which healed her: ſo faith ſaveth not by any merit of faith, but by his merit whom faith apprehendeth.

go in peace] This is a form of bleſſing; mark here, unto what true happineſſe, bitter, deſperate, and long aſſlictions bring Gods children, to whom ſuch bitter means are ſanctified.

be whole of thy plague] Or continue whole: as, Dan. 1. 21. let it not return on thee: for ſhe was healed before Chriſt ſpake: of thy plague, that is, thy infirmity, as Euthymius well interpreteth. See on chap. 3 10.

35. from the ruler] From his houſe; properly, not from him, but to him; for he was now with Chriſt. So the Syriack expreſſeth it, from the rulers houſe; which manner of ſpeaking the Latines alſo uſed,---à fratre quæ egreſſa eſt meo. Ter. Phorm. that is, --- out of my brothers houſe.

why troubleſt thou the Maſter] To go to thy houſe, for ſhe is dead. They thought of Jeſus as of ſome excellent phyſician, who could cure the diſaffected living, but they thought her paſt cure who was dead; they knew not that the Lord of life was preſent.

V. 36. be not afraid] As if I could not raiſe thy dead to life again; which thou ſhalt ſee done.

onely believe] Have confidence that I both can and will relieve thee: thus he comforteth him, and cheriſheth his weak faith.

V. 37. ſave Peter, and James, and John] Luke 8. 51. Theſe onely he admitteth. Mat. 17. 1. they were unworthy to ſee his power, who disbelieved and derided truth, as the wicked Jewes did.

V. 38. them that wept and wailed greatly] This alſo ſetteth off the excellency of the miracle, in that there was no hope of life left in her to mans judgment: onely the Lord of life could help here.

V, 39. The damoſel is not dead] See on Luke 8. 52. mortua eſt vobis,, mihi dormit, Ierom. ſhe is dead to you, but only ſleepeth in reſpect of my power: for the Lord of life could as eaſily awake her from death, as ſleep.

V. 40. they laughed him to ſcorn] Being aſſured that ſhe was dead. Luke 8. 53.

But when he had put them all out] Such as mock and ſcorn Chriſt, are unworthy to be witneſſes of his mercy.

and them that were with him] The three diſciples mentioned, verſe 37. who vvere enough to vvitneſſe the truth: the reſt of the Jewes he left without: as, for their unworthineſs, ſo for his avoyding oſtentation.

V. 41. Talitha cumi] Theſe are Syriack words, which the Evangeliſt retaineth and interpreteth; טליות קימי To ſhew that Chriſt ſpake in their then vulgar tongue: not as Exorciſts whiſpering or muttering ſtrange and unknovvn words, but ſpeaking plainly to expreſs his divine povver, able to raiſe the dead to life.

V. 42. Straightway the damſel aroſe] That quickning voyce, (John 5. 28, 29.) recalled her ſoul. See Mat. 9. 29. See on Luke 8. 55.

V. 43. Something ſhould be given her to eat] To ſhevv that ſhe vvas not only revived, but alſo fully recovered. So Luke 8. 55.

CHAP. VI.

Verſe 1, HE went out from thence] Mat. 13. 54.

into his own countrey] Nazareth, vvhere he was bred: as, verſe 3. not Bethlehem vvhere he vvas born.

V. 2. From whence hath this man] See on Mat. 13. 54.

What wiſdome is this?] That is, vvhence is this wiſdome? whence hath this man this wiſdom? as, Mat. 13. 54. the expreſſion of their doubt is not improper, conſidering that the fountain whence wiſdom is, ſhevveth what it is. See Jam. 3. 15, 17. Mat. 21. 25. if it be from above, from heaven: it is good, holy and happy: but if of men, earthly, ſenſual, devilliſh.

even ſuch mighty works] δυνάμεις, They mean ſuch admirable works, as ſpake him more than man.

are wrought by his hands] That is, by him, as Vatablus interpreteth: hands are put for povver ſometimes: as Pſal, 28. 5. & 19. 1.

V. 3. Is not this the Carpenters ſon?] See Mat. 13. 55, 56.

are not his ſiſters] After the manner of the Hebrews, who by brethren and ſiſters underſtand, all their kinsfolk.

V. 4. A Prophet is not without honour] See on Mat. 13. 57. and on John 4. 44.

but in his own countrey] He may poſſibly be diſhonoured elſewhere, but for the moſt part, his own country affordeth him leaſt honour.

V 5. Not many mighty works] See on Mat 13. 58. Not becauſe he was infirm, but becauſe they were unbelieving, as Theophylact well noteth: he would not there do many great works, which muſt have been to their further condemnation, he could not, that is, they were not capable.

V. 6 And he went round about] Mat. 9. 35. Luke 13. 22.

V. 7. and he calleth] Mat. 10. 1.

over unclean ſpirits] To caſt them out of the poſſeſſed: leſt men ſhould contemn the preaching of obſcure and unlearned fiſhermen, he furniſheth them with this power, for the confirmation of their doctrine.

V. 8. that they ſhould take nothing] Nothing to hinder them: otherwiſe we muſt know, this precept was peculiar to them and bindeth us not from making neceſſary proviſions for journeys, no more than the command in the next place bindeth us: he would teach them ſaith Theophylact, contempt of money, and riches, τὸ ἀφιλοχρήματον, that is, ἀφιλοχρηματίαν.

V. 9. but ſandals] Theſe were inſtead of ſhooes, being onely a paire of ſoles, bound to, or buckled over the foot, which were, and are ſtill in uſe, in hot and dry countries.

not put on two coats] That is, they ſhould take no change of garments with them to trouble them, or hinder their work of preaching the Goſpel.

V. 10 there abide] See note on Matth. 10. 11. and Luke 9. 4. leſt they ſhould ſeem inconſtant for their eaſe, or bellies-ſake.

V. 11. Whoſoever ſhall not receive you] Mat. 10. 14.

more tolerable for Sodom] He doth not ſay, tolerable, but more tolerable: to ſhew, that as there are degrees of ſinnes, ſo ſhall there be of puniſhments: and that the Lord is a ſevere revenger of the contempt and neglect of his word and ordinance, as appears in the example of Sodom, on which, as Salvian ſaith, he ſent down gehennam è celo lib. 1. de gub. Dei. Hell (that is, ſhowers of fire and brimſtone) from heaven. 2 Pet. 2. 6. Gen. 19. and again, l. 4. He ſaith the Sodomites were leſſe damnable, than thoſe who neglect the Goſpel.

V. 12, preached that men ſhould repent] So Iohn Baptiſt preached, Mat. 3. So Chriſt, Mat. 4. Repentance is the key of Chriſts kingdom, as hath been noted.

V. 13 they caſt out many devils] As occaſion was preſented by them who brought the poſſeſſed to them, or as they otherwiſe met with them.

and anointed with oil] Jam. 5. 14. Though the Evangeliſt in his uſual vvay of brevity, mention not Chriſts command to the Apoſtles, to anoint with oil: yet is it more than probable, that Chriſt did ſo command them, elſe they would not have done it. This might then be uſed as a ſymbolum and pledge of the divine grace, by the power vvhereof, they healed: and principally to ſtrengthen the faith of the ſick, vvhoſe common errour is, ſo much to depend on ſecond cauſes, that they can hardly believe they can be healed, vvithout the concurrence and uſe of ſome ſuch outvvard means, as they fancie: vvhich vve ſee in Naaman, 2 Kings 5. 11. and many others. Therefore oil being in great uſe, ſpecially in thoſe countries (though Chriſt had neither furniſhed them vvith the art of Phyſicians, in the uſe of ordinary and natural means, but the povver of doing miracles, by extraordinary and ſupernatural vertue; neither might they ſo uſe any external means, vvhereby to obſcure the evidence of Chriſts power given them to heal) yet thus vvould Chriſt comply with the infirmity of ſome, and exerciſe the faith of others, who ſhould ſee ſuch admirable effects of means ſo weak; ſo ſaith Jerom, infirmitatem fidei virtute corroborat, he ſtrengthened the infirmity of faith by his power: they who now uſe oil, anoint their ſick, and make it a ſacrament, ſhould firſt conſider, and ſhew us where Chriſt inſtituted it for a ſacrament (for that appertaineth to him alone) next, if they pretend from that of Saint James 5. 14. let them either ſhew us the like effect following, as is here ſpecified, and whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, verſe 15. and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, or ſhew us cauſe, why a now naked and effectleſſe ſign ſhould be uſed, and out-live the gift of healing in the Church: or why they commonly uſe it where their ſick are paſt hope of recovery.

V. 14. Herod heard of him] See on Mat. 14. 1. The Goſpel comforteth the godly, but vexeth the wicked.

mighty works] The power of working miracles. Poſſibly he might hear that John Baptiſt in his life time did no miracles, but that he might now, being (as he ſuppoſed) come again from the dead.

V. 15. It is Elias] See on Mat. 16. 14. and on Luke 9. 7.

V. 18. It is not lawfull] Levit. 18. 16.

V. 19. a quarrel againſt him] Or an inward grudge, and therefore watched opportunity to be revenged. The Syriack gives it, impugnabat eum, ----but the Greek word ἐνέχω here and elſewhere uſed, is of more emphatical ſignification than either, to have a quarrel againſt, or to oppoſe or have a controverſie with one; it ſignifieth immineo: ſo Luke 11. 53. the Scribes and Phariſees began δεινῶς ἐνέχειν, graviter imminere, it expreſſeth ſome imminent miſchief, or at leaſt a deſire or watchfulneſſe thereto, a readineſſe to revenge, and expectation of every occaſion thereto.

V. 20 feared Iohn] See on Mat. 14. 5.

heard him gladly] The tyrant was contented to hear Gods word, that at leaſt he might ſeem holy, but the ſeed fell upon ſtony ground, and ſo quickly wilted away, what ever fair ſhewes it made at firſt, when the hypocrite, heard Iohn, and thereupon did many things accordingly, as here.

V. 21. a convenient day was come] See on Mat. 14. 6. This day was fitting to Herodias malicious deſigne; when wine and luxury would make them daring to any miſchief: mark how vigilant malice is.

unto the half of my kingdom] This was ſpoken to aſſure her of obtaining that which ſhe would ask, ſuppoſing ſhe would ask much leſſe; here is a ſhameful example of a debauched Prince, not onely giving ſo diſhonourable a pattern of imitation to his family, and ſubjects; but alſo ſo evident a teſtimony of his own levity, and precipitate dotage, in his making ſo improportionable and indefinite a promiſe, to ſo unworthy a merit: mark the injuſtice of the wicked; Iohn preached to ſave Herods ſoul; that was valued ſo much worſe than nothing, that it was requited with death: an immodeſt dancer, for pleaſing an intemperate company, is thought worthy of great reward.

V. 24 ſhe went forth] To conſult with her mother: it ſeemed the women ſate not then at table with them.

V. 25. I will that thou give me] Seeing thou haſt given me a free choice, I deſire only that thou give me, &c. ſo had Herodias inſtructed her in her own bloody arts: ſo quickly do children learn their parents evil qualities: evill, to which corrupted nature is prone, is eaſily learned, but any good, hardly.

V. 26. exceeding ſorry] In appearance at leaſt. See on Mat. 14. 9. poſſibly he might be ſorry for fear, as ver. 20. and Mat. 14. 5. it is manifeſt that when he vvould have put John to death, he feared the multitude becauſe they counted him as a Prophet.

V. 27. ſent an executioner] Or one of his guard: the word ſignifieth one that beareth a dart; and the kings guard was ſo called, becauſe they did bear darts: others ſay they were called ſo, becauſe they did cut of mens heads with a ſword.

V. 29. and laid it in a tomb] See on Mat. 14. 12.

V. 30. And the Apoſtles] Luke 9. 10. It may be they were afraid at the tidings of Iohns death, and durſt not preach abroad any longer, but came back to Chriſt, as to tell him what they had done, ſo to knovv vvhat they ſhould do. See on Mat. 14. 12, There Iohns diſciples relate their grief and loſſe, to Chriſt; here the Apoſtles give Chriſt an account of their embaſſy: ſo rivers return to the place whence they vvent out. *Ierom. V. 31. Come ye your ſelves] Having diſmiſſed the people, he retireth with his Apoſtles.

two hundred peny-worth of bread] Which according to the value of their peny, is about tvventy five crovvnes, ſixe pound five ſhillings; the Roman peny being ſeven pence halfpeny. See Mat. 18. 28.

V. 38. how many loaves have ye?] See the ſame hiſtory. Mat. 14. 17. &c. Luke 9. 13. John 6. 9. He asketh not this as if he were ignorant, but to make them the more ſenſible of the following miracle; having before ſurveyed their ſlender ſtore, and greatneſſe of the multitude. ſo that they might evidently perceive, in this defect of natural means, a divine hand and power of God ſupplying them.

V. 39. by companies] Word for word, by banquets, banquets after the manner of the Hebrews, who have no diſtributives: as, chap 6. 7. now he calleth the rows of them that ſate, banquets. See on Mat 14. 19. and on Luke 9. 15. John 6. 10.

V. 40. Sate down] Fell down. The word ἀναπίπτω here uſed, in goſpel-phraſe is commonly put for recumbere, or decumbere, which was according to their cuſtom, lying down, according to our manner, ſitting dovvn to eat.

V. 50. He went up unto them] For their better ſecurity, and that he might ſhew himſelf preſent, which in their fear they could not othervviſe have eaſily believed.

V. 51. beyond meaſure] Becauſe they ſaw the winde obey him, and the ſea calmed.

V. 54. Straightway they knew him] See on Mat. 14. 35. Chriſt being rejected in his own countrey, and arrived ſodainly among them of vvhom he vvas not expected, is received to their great profit.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1, THen came the Phariſees] Matthew 15. 1. συνάγονται, were congregated, as the Syriack gives it: they came together with one conſent: ſo that howſoever ſome more perniciouſly active than others might call them together, yet they well knew each others minde, and willingly came together, to take counſell againſt Chriſt.

V. 2. eat bread] Bread, after the manner of the Hebrews, importeth any kinde of meat. See on Luke 11. 3. and Luke 14. 1.

with defiled hands] κοιναῖς χερσὶ with common hands, for the Phariſees would not eat with unwaſhen hands, ſuppoſing themſelves defiled by touching of that which was (not ſacred or) common. See Mat. 15. 11, 12.

V. 3. oft] Or diligently, as they who waſh by rubbing their hands with water. Greek πυγμῇ which the Syriack giveth דבטי לאית dabbeti leith, it commeth of the Hebrew among other things, ſignifying neglexit: and in the Syriack by an antiphraſis בטל is curæ fuit, curavit ſolicitus See chap 4. 38. Rom. 12. 17. 2 Tim. 2. 15. Luke 10. 34. ſo alſo בטילאות battilauth, diligently, carefully, curiouſly; as, Luke 1. 39 Theophylact interpreteth, πυγμῇ by ἄχει τȣ ἀγκῶνος, up to the elbow: an expreſſion taken from common uſe of thoſe who tuck up their clothes to the elbowes, that they may waſh veſſels clean; with ſo much care did the ſuperſtitious Phariſees obſerve traditions of men: ſo little caring for the commandments of God.

V. 4. from the market] Or any other civill affairs; they would not eat, before they had waſhed themſelves, leſt they ſhould be defiled by commercing with ſtrangers: See John 18. 28. into the market uſuallly came men and women of all conditions and qualities, holy and prophane, pure and defiled, yea and Gentiles as well as Jews; therefore they thought it an high point of their religion (who might be defiled by touching any thing unclean) to waſh before they (comming from the market) might eat, leſt themſelves becomming unclean, by touching any thing unclean, ſhould defile themſelves and their meat, and ſo become abominable; ſuch ſnares had the Scribes and Phariſees layed upon the ignorant peoples conſciences.

the waſhing of cups] By theſe words, are underſtood all kindes of veſſels which are appointed for ordinary uſe.

pots] Sextarius is about a pint and a half, with them ordinary drinking pots or cups.

tables] Or beds. Couches, or pallets, on which they lay, or uſed to dine, or ſup on, κλίνη a bed. τρίκλινον, triclinium, by which was ſignified either a lodging chamber furniſhed with three beds, or three couches or beds ſet together, on which they dined or ſupped. Athen. l. 4. and hence, Ἀρχιτρίκλινος the ruler of the feaſt, John 2. 9. here note, that whereas the Evangeliſt calleth theſe waſhings βαπτισμοὺς, baptiſmes of beds or couches, among other things, this muſt be underſtood of baptizing or waſhing by aſperſion or ſprinkling of water, not by immerſion or dipping into water, and ſo no neceſsity of immerſion, douſing, or dipping over head and ears, can appear neceſſary in baptiſme (much leſſe eſſential to it) from the common uſe of the word.

V. 5. Why walk not thy diſciples] Why live not; an uſual manner of ſpeaking among the Hebrews, vvith vvhom a vvay often was put for a courſe of life. Pſal. 119. 5. Pſal. 128. 1. Pſal. 1. 1. See on Mat. 15. 2.

V. 6. Well hath Eſayas propheſied] That ſpeech of Iſaiah, ſpoken againſt the hypocrites of his time, fits you as vvell as if he had propheſied of you by name.

of you hypocrites] Hypocriſie is commonly joyned vvith ſuperſtition.

this people] Iſaiah 29. 13. Mat. 15. 8.

V. 7. in vain do they worſhip me] That vvhich they do pretending to ſerve me, in vain. See on Mat. 15. 7.

V. 8. laying aſide the commandment of God] The inventions of ſuperſtitious men, do not only not fulfill the Lavv of God, but alſo utterly deſtroy it.

V. 9. full well] An ironicall ſpeech, meaning, you do very ill in ſo dong.

reject] Or fruſtrate, or make void, deſpile; ſo ἀθετεῖν importeth. Luke 10. 16.

V. 10. Honour thy father] Exod 20. 12.

who ſo curſeth] See on Mat. 15. 4.

let him die the death] Let him ſurely die. Exod. 21. 16. See on Mat. 15, 4

V. 11. Corban] See on Mat. 15. 4. and on Luke 21. 4.

V. 12. ye ſuffer him no more] They did not forbid him to do any more for his parents, but they pronounced him innocent, if he did no more: or they tell him he hath given all to God already; and therefore may give nothing to his parents: or, ſo much, that he cannot; but their ſons offering ſhould bring a bleſſing upon them,

V. 22. covetouſneſſe] All kind of craftineſſe, whereby men gain by the loſſe of others.

wickedneſſe] Or, malice ; as, Rom. 1. 29.

an evil eye] See on Mat. 20. 15.

blaſphemy] Evil ſpeaking or detraction.

V. 23. come from within] Diſcovering themſelves by evil actions, proceeding from the heart.

and defile the man] See on Mat. 15. 20.

V. 24. into the borders] Mat. 15. 21. Into the uppermoſt coaſts of Paleſtine, which were next to Tyre and Sidon. See on Mat. 11. 21.

V. 25. A certain woman] See on Mat. 15. 22. They that know they want Chriſt will lay out for him.

V. 26. a Greek] Or Gentile.

a Syrophenician] Phenicia, is that region of Aſia and Syria, in which was Tyrus and Sidon ; whence the inhabitants were called Syrophenicians, inhabitants of that part of Syria, which is called Phenicia. Matthew following the old cuſtom of the Hebrews, calleth her a Canaanite. See on Mat. 15. 22.

V. 27. to caſt it to dogs] The meaning is, that though Chriſt might do good unto the Gentiles, yet might it not be to the prejudice of the Jews : ſee on Mat. 15. 26.

V. 28. yes Lord] That is, truth Lord ; for it is enough for the whelps, if they can but gather up the crumbes that are under the table ; I crave no more : that which thy Iſrael may ſpare from their wants, will ſufficiently relieve me.

eat of the childrens crumbs] See on Mat. 15. 27.

V. 29. for this ſaying] For ſo exellent a faith ; ſo admirably expreſſing it ſelf in confidence and humility : all which importeth not her merit, but his mercy crowning his own graces in her, who had given her ſuch faith, and ſuch thoughts to be expreſſed. See on Mat 15 28.

V. 30. her daughter laid upon the bed] Quietly, not toſſing to and fro in torments, as before : for the unclean ſpirit was caſt out by the power of Chriſt, though in reſpect of his humanity, he were abſent.

V. 31. again departing] Rather going back from : for it appears not in the ſtory, that he had been there before ; or elſe, again ſignifies the working of another miracle.

of Decapolis] It was a little countrey ſo called , of ten Cities , which the four governments did run between , and compaſſe. Plin. l. 5. c. 18. they are thus reckoned. 1. Damaſcus. 2. Opoton. 3. Philadelphia. 4 Raphana 5. Scytopolis. 6. Gadara. 7. Hippon 8. Pella. 9 Galaſa. and 10. Canatha. See Plin. lib. 5. c. 18.

V. 32. one that was deaf] This ſeemeth a natural diſeaſe, and therefore the more admirable was the cure : here again appears the faith and charity of thoſe, who brought him to Chriſt, confident that he both could, and would cure him, though no meer man could have prevailed againſt ſo great a defect of nature.

V. 33. put his finger in his ear] By theſe external means, he pleaſed to comply with the faith of infirm ſpectators ; he could as eaſily have cured him by his word. See on chap 6. 13. though he did not this without a myſtery, (as ſome note) intimating that the finger of God onely can ſupply ſuch natural defects.

and ſpit] See on John 9. 6.

V. 34. and looking up] To ſhew that he referred all to Gods glory, chap. 6. 41. Mat. 14. 19 John 11. 41. and 17. 4. and that this was done by a divine power.

Ephatha, that is, &c.] He ſighed, out of commiſeration of mans miſeries. See chap. 1. 41. The word here uſed is Syriac אתפתח ethphathach, which the Evangeliſt interpreteth, be opened: of the Hebrew word פתח pethach. (Joh. Buxtorf. Jun.) aperuit.

V. 35. His ears were opened] That is, reſtored again, or formed to a natural faculty of hearing.

his tongue was looſed] The tie-bond , or impediment to his tongue , or ſpeech was looſed , or taken away : ſo the work of Chriſt appeared in curing both infirmities at once , and preſently.

V. 36. ſo much the more] So chap. 1. 45. and Mat. 9. 31. Chriſt would have had it concealed to a ſeaſonable time, but they, out of an importune zeal, were carried away with an immoderate fervour to publiſh what they ſaw : for it ſeemeth Chriſt charged them that brought him to be cured to be ſilent, and not to publiſh abroad among the people, what he had done in curing the deaf and dumb man, or who had an impediment in his ſpeaking ; for ſo the word μογιλάλος ſignifieth, Exod. 4. 11. who hath made אלם the dumb ; the Gr. Interpreters give it there, in the word which our Evangeliſt here uſeth μογιλάλον : it ſeemeth the ſame which Moſes in the foregoing verſe expreſſeth by βαρύγλωσσος --- Vulg. tardioris linguæ, gravis linguâ. Ar. Montan. Vatabl. &c.

V. 37. beyond meaſure] As principally , at the effect of his power in healing ; ſo, that for all this he neither deſired any retribution of any thing , neither would have ſo much as applauſe with men ; which by his command he would have ſuppreſſed.

he hath done all things well] Here ſeemeth a ſecret oppoſition of ſome ill opinion, or report of Chriſts enemies : as if they had ſaid, they are wicked and injurious, who can ſpeak evil of this man, he hath done nothing, but good, and well : it is a wonder why the Phariſees blame, and accuſe him, as an evil doer, when all that he doth, is for our good : the life, preſervation, and welfare of man : and they inſtance in the particular cures, which they had ſeen done , as a certain evidence hereof. Matthew 15. 30. reckoneth up more.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 1. THe multitude] Which followed him , ſome to hear the Goſpel, ſome to ſee his miracles, ſome to be cured, ſome for other ends, Mat. 15. 32.

having nothing to eat] They being in ſuch a place, as that they could not accommodate themſelves with victuals, and having been three dayes with him.

V. 2. I have compaſſion] See on Mat 15. 32. Chriſt is the ſame yeſterday, to day and ever ; ſo that ſtill he hath compaſſion on us in all our wants.

V. 3. They will faint by the way] ἐκλυθήσονται ; to the letter, they will fall in ſunder, or be diſſolved ; for when men fall in a ſwoon, there is a kinde of diſſolution of the ſinews : ſee on Matthew 15. 32.

V. 11. and the Phariſees] Mat. 16. 1. The obſtinate enemies of the Goſpel ; giving no credit to the miracles already done, require new ; but Chriſt being herewith diſpleaſed, departeth from them.

came forth] The Phariſees came out of their houſes, on purpoſe to encounter with him.

ſeeking of him a ſigne from heaven] That they might hereby know that he was ſent from God : not that they might learn and believe in him, but to tempt him.

V. 12. he ſighed deeply in his ſpirit] Being very ſorry for theſe mens hardneſſe of heart, and unbelief, who having the key of knowledge, Luke 11. 52. ſhut up the kingdom of heaven againſt men, and neither went in themſelves, nor willingly ſuffered thoſe who were entring, to go in, Mat 23. 13. hence were Chriſts ſighs ; not ſo much for the incurable Phariſees as for the wretched people who had ſuch blind guides and teachers.

there ſhall no ſigne, &c.] If a ſigne be given: See Pſal. 95. 11. The Hebrews uſe ſuch elliptical expreſſions of oaths, or imprecations ; אם im. by an apoſiopeſis and ſudden reſtraining the ſpeech, as in paſſion : ſometimes they ſpeak more large, and mention a revenge from God, as 2 Sam. 3. 35. Pſal. 132. 3. ſo here, εἰ δοθήσεται, if it ſhall be given ; that is, it ſhall certainly not be given, it is a kind of oath, or proteſtation.

V. 13. he left them] Mat. 16. 4. As being incurable, and therefore unworthy of his gracious preſence, and further care for them.

no bread] They whoſe mindes are too much fixed on earthly things, do not quickly apprehend the heavenly , though never ſo plainly ſet forth unto them.

V. 17. becauſe ye have no, &c.] Or, ſaying it is becauſe, as, Mat. 16. 8.

V. 18. ſee ye not] See ye not my works which I have done before your eyes.

hear ye not] My doctrine, wherein I have taught you to depend on the providence of God for things neceſſary to this life ? Mat. 6. 25.

V. 20. And when the ſeven] Verſe 8. Mat. 16 10.

V. 21. that ye do not underſtand] How cometh it to paſſe, that ye do not underſtand things ſo plain and evident? Chriſt in all this ſpeech reproveth, as with admiration the incogitancy of his Diſciples, in that they did not ſo ſeriouſly as they ought, minde thoſe things which they ſaw and heard of him: whence it came to paſſe, that they yet underſtood not (after ſo many miracles ſeen) thoſe things which plainly ſpoke his power, providence, and wiſdom: and it is as if he ſaid; I appeal to the teſtimony of your own ſenſes, whether you do not ſtupidly miſtake: what have your eyes ſeen in my former works? what have your ears heard? Is all loſt? Poſſibly he here awakeneth them to better attention, and caſting off that ſleepy thought of fleſh and blood which clouded their underſtandings, by fixing too much on ſecond cauſes; not without a ſecret alluſion to that which he ſaid to the Jews, chap. 4. 12.

V. 22 Bethſaida] A little fiſher Town, on the ſea of Galilee, over againſt Dalmanutha; ſee Matthew 11. 21. John 1. 24.

bring a blind man unto him] Led unto him; being well aſſured by that which they had ſeen or heard of him, that if he but touched him, he ſhould recover.

V. 23. by the hand and led him] See chap. 7. 33. To avoid the opinion of thoſe, who might elſe think, that he did theſe miracles, to gain popular applauſe. See John 9. 6.

ſpit on his eyes] See on chap. 7. 33.

He asked him if he ſaw ought] This he ſaid to exerciſe his faith; for Jeſus well knew how much he had healed; and it was not impotency, but his will to heal this man, not (as many others) all at once, but by certain degrees; for cauſes beſt known to himſelfe.

V. 24. I ſee men as trees, walking] He perceived ſome motion, but could not at firſt diſcern that they were bodies of men which he perceived: a true reſemblance of illumination, which encreaſeth in us by degrees.

V. 25. and made him look up] He commanded him to try once more, whether he could ſee well or not.

V. 26. tell it not to any in the town] Poſſibly he dwelt in ſome out part, next the fields: the often repetition of the like charge, ſheweth, that the time was not yet come, that he would manifeſt himſelf; but would by ſmall and more private beginning, collect his Church, of thoſe who ſhould believe to eternal life. See on verſe 30.

be rejected of the Elders] Pſal. 118. 22. As one unprofitable and pernicious, as a ſtone to be refuſed of the builders. See chap. 12. 10. this ſheweth the ſad condition under ſuch teachers, who inſtead of edifying them to ſalvation, did their uttermoſt endeavour to keep them from Chriſt, in whom alone there is ſalvation, Act. 4. 12.

and after three dayes riſe again] See on Mat. 16. 21. This one point is ſo often beat upon by our Saviour, becauſe it is the main ground of faith, and all true Religion, as the Apoſtle Paul ſheweth at large, 1 Cor. 15. 3, 4, 14, 15. &c.

V. 32. openly] Not before the people, for they were not preſent, verſe 34 but in plain terms, before the diſciples.

began to rebuke him] See on Mat. 16. 22.

V. 33. looked on his diſciples] That he might inſtruct them by his rebuking Peter: foraſmuch as that ſame thing which he ſaid unto Peter, concerned them all, if at leaſt they were of his mind, that Jeſus ſhould have done well to have withdrawn from thoſe dangers, and to have ſpared and reſerved himſelf to a flouriſhing eſtate of Iſrael under his temporal Monarchy, which it ſeemeth they ſtill dreamed of: Chriſt well knew their thoughts, and therefore though he addreſſed his anſwer to Peter; yet by his turning about and looking on them all, he thereby intimated that, that which he ſpake to Peter, highly concerned them all, and every one of them, who too much ſavoured the things of men.

get thee behinde me] See on Mat. 16 23.

V. 34. Whoſoever will come after me] Mat. 10 38. Whoſoever will be my diſciple muſt put on this reſolution, not onely not to be ſcandalled at my ſufferings, but alſo to be conſtantly reſolved, if need ſhall be, to be ready to ſuffer for the teſtimony of the truth; to glory in my croſſe, by whom the world is crucified unto them, and they unto the world, (See Gal. 6 14.) that they may fill up that which is behinde of the afflictions of Chriſt in their fleſh, for his bodies ſake, which is the Church--- Col. 1. 24.

let him deny himſelf] That is, his own natural or carnal affections. See on Mat. 16. 24 Luke 9. 23. and all love of this world, and the fleſh, or whatſoever hereof retardeth them from a ready and cheerful obedience to Chriſt, or cooleth their zeal to his honour, and the practice of true Religion: for want of which renunciation of mens ſelves, ſo many are now ſick of the Laodicean diſeaſe, Rev. 3. 13. luke-warmneſſe, neither hot nor cold, and ſo odious to God.

V. 35. will ſave his life ſhall loſe it] See on Mat. 16. 25. Luke 9. 24. Herein he ſheweth how irreparably worldly men diſadvantage themſelves, by their love of the world, and fooliſh ſelf-love, which finally hurteth them more, than all the powers of hell could do, if they would indeed ſet their hearts to love God above all.

V. 36. What ſhall it profit a man] See on Mat. 16. 26. Luke 9. 25. illud ſolum eſt lucrum, ubi fructus perpetuus. Ambroſ. l. 4. epiſt. 44. V. 37. in exchange for his ſoul] To redeem it from deſtruction; as if he ſaid, no worldly poſſeſſions, no riches, can redeem, or be a price of redemption for a loſt ſoul. See on 1 Pet. 1. 18. Pſal. 49. 6, 7.

V. 38. ſhall be aſhamed of me] Mat. 10. 33. See on Mat. 16. 27. Luke. 9. 26. Shall refuſe to own or acknowledge me: ſee Rom. 1. 16. or ſhall be aſhamed of my ſufferings; or think it a ſhameful thing to ſuffer perſecution for the Goſpel and confeſſion of my Name. See 1 Cor. 1. 23.

when he cometh in the glory, &c.] This he mentioneth to intimate the greatneſſe of that glory wherein he (who now came in the form of a ſervant, Phil. 2. and man of ſorrows, Iſai. 53.) ſhould come again to judge the living and the dead.

They are here called holy Angels, to diſtinguiſh them from the impure and evil angels; ſo alſo to let the hearers know that they ought not to be ſcandaled, when they ſhould ſee wicked men aſhamed of the croſſe and humility of Chriſt: ſeeing that the holy Angels ſhould adminiſter unto him in his ſtate of exaltation and glory, which ſhall be true and eternal; leſt otherwiſe Chriſt be aſhamed of them (that is, will not own them as his) hereafter, Mat. 7. 23.

CHAP. IX.

Verſe 1. VErily I ſay, &c.] See on Mat. 16. 28.

taſte of death] Shall not have experience of death, or ſhall not die; as Hebr. 2 9. Mat. 16. 28. John 8. 52. the Hebrew word טעם taham, guſtavit; by a metaphor is transferred to the ſoul, and ſignifieth, cognovit, ſenſit, expertus fuit. So Pſal. 34. 8. Prov 31. 18. in the like manner, the Greeks uſed their word, γεύεσθαι, Hebr. 6. 4. γευσόμεθ' ἀλλήλων, let us try, or have experience of each other: ſo the Latines uſed their guſtare, guſtare ejus ſermonem volo, &c. a proper and proportionable expreſſion here, of the bitter effect of Adams taſting the forbidden fruit: he died (with his poſterity) by ſo taſting, and we ſo taſte by dying.

V. 2. after ſix dayes] Mat. 17. 1. Luke 9. 28.

V. 3. his raiment] It did as it were ſparkle; the heavenly glory of Chriſt, (which ſhould within a few dayes be again eclipſed and obſcured by his croſſe and paſſion) avouched by the conference of Moſes and Elias, and his Fathers voice from heaven, in the hearing of his three diſciples, witneſſes hereof: this was manifeſted unto them, ne timerent opprobrium crucis, Jerom; leſt they ſhould fear the ſhame of his croſſe.

V. 4. Moſes and Elias] See on Mat. 17. 3. Luke 9. 30. becauſe the people ſaid, that Chriſt was either Elias, or one of the Prophets, he ſheweth them, τὺς κορυφαίυς τῶν προφητῶν, Theophylact. the chief of the Prophets, that they might underſtand what the Lord differeth from his ſervants: alſo becauſe the adverſaries calumniated him, as an enemy to the Law and Prophets: here he hath teſtimony of Moſes, and one of the chief Prophets: all this was extream neceſſary for the confirmation of the Apoſtles, who were to preach the Goſpel to the world, leſt their faith ſhould have ſtaggered at the adverſaries importunate pretences of zeal to the Law and Prophets, to overthrow the doctrine of the Goſpel.

V. 5. it is good for us] Mat. 17. 4. This Theophylact thinks they ſaid, fearing leſt Chriſt would go down again, and die; they thought, if the Jews ſhould come up againſt him to the mount, they ſhould be ſafe, having with them Moſes, who triumphed over the Egyptians, and Elias, who commanded fire from Heaven to conſume the fifties.

V. 6. for they were ſore afraid] For the extraordinary glory which they ſaw: the apparition of Moſes and Elias, and the ſudden fear which ſtartled their mindes, in expectation of ſome change to doubtful events; they were almoſt beſides themſelves with fearful amazement.

V. 9 Tell no man] See on chap. 8. 30. See on verſe 10.

V. 10. they kept that ſaying, &c.] They divuldged it not until a ſeaſonable time; for ſo Chriſts prohibition is to be underſtood; not ſimply that they ſhould never tel it, but not until he were riſen again from the dead, as Matth. 17. 9. the reaſon poſſibly might be, leſt in his paſſion, eclipſing all his glory for the time, the hearers unbelief of ſuch a relation, ſhould dangerouſly have ſhaken their faiths towards the reſt of the Goſpel.

what the riſing of the dead ſhould mean] They underſtood that there ſhould once be a Reſurrection from the dead, John 11. 24. but ſo much did they yet dream of a temporal kingdom, that they could not underſtand what he ſhould mean by his reſurrection from the dead, ſhortly to be, while yet he lived: how, and when this ſhould be, they admired, thinking, as Euthymius ſaith, that this was but ſome parable.

V. 11. Why ſay the Scribes] If it be true that the Scribes ſay, that Elias muſt firſt come, how can the Meſſias ſuffer, ſeeing Elias is not yet come to reſtore all things?

V. 12. reſtoreth] Or fulfilleth, Mal. 4. 5, 6. ἀποκαθιστᾷ πάντα that is, ſhall reſtore all things: the preſent for the future tenſe: Syr. Elias venturus eſt prius ut omnia reſtituat: the word תקן there uſed, is very emphatical as ſignifying, among other things, to be, or be made ſtrait, to be reſtored, to correct, accommodate and fit, repair, and prepare; which ſeemeth to accord with that which Zacharias ſaid, Luke 1. 76. of John Baptiſt --- to prepare the wayes of the Lord: and that which the Angel before ſaid to Zachary, Luke 1. 16. concerning the ſame --- many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God. And he ſhall go before him in the ſpirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord: this was to prepare the way of the Lord. and to make his paths ſtraight, Matth 3. 3.

how it is written] Concerning the ſuffering of Chriſt, Iſaiah 53. Pſal. 22. ſo ſhall it be, ſo ſhall he ſuffer. See Luke 24. 26, 27.

and be ſet at nought] He telleth them beforehand, how ignominiouſly the unthankful Jews ſhould uſe him, leſt they ſhould be troubled when they ſhould ſee it; therefore he ſheweth from Scriptures, that theſe very things were foretold.

V. 13. but I ſay unto you] The fooliſh opinion of Rabbins is here refelled, concerning the coming again of Elias before the day of judgement.

that Elias is indeed come] And you are witneſſes thereof, who ſaw him in perſon with me on the mount; but John Baptiſt, who came in the ſpirit of Elias, they have ſlain, and after him now the Meſſias will they ſlay alſo.

as it is written of him] The name of Elias given unto John, portended, that he ſhould alſo find an Ahab, and a Jeſabel to perſecute him for his reproving their ſins.

V. 15. when they beheld him, were greatly amazed] Some think, that the divine *Ma*jeſty which ſhined in him on the mount, did yet appear when he came to the multitude; as the glory of Moſes face returning from the mount Exod. 34. 29. to the aſtoniſhment of the people beholding him; with this difference, that Chriſt appeared to them as amiable, as Moſes terrible, Exod. 34. 30. Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. therefore they came running to him to ſalute him: it ſeemeth his approach ſilenced the inſolent Scribes contention with the Diſciples in the abſence of Jeſus.

V. 16. what queſtion ye with them?] That is, among your ſelves, or with my diſciples: he asketh not as ignorant of their oppoſitions, but taketh occaſion hereby, to interpoſe for the defence of his, and the Goſpel which they profeſſed.

V. 17. one of the multitude] The Scribes for fear of conviction, and the diſciples for ſhame held their peace: but the man, who was the occaſion of their controverſie, anſwered for all: as if he had ſaid, I brought my ſon hither, ſuppoſing thou hadſt been preſent, but thy diſciples could not cure him.

a dumb ſpirit] That is, making my child dumb, hindring his ſpeech, Euthymius.

V. 18. whereſoever he taketh him] Be it never ſo dangerous a place, fire, water, precipice, as verſe 22. it taketh him at certain times, and by fits.

teareth him] Or daſheth him, caſting him down, as verſe 20. with an inward torment as if he would ſplit him, or rent his bowels. See on chap. 1. 26.

and he foameth] Or, ſo that he foameth: which foaming and gnaſhing of teeth, were ſignes of vehement torture, and hot pains.

and pineth away] With extreamity of pain, and grief of mind, and torment, and diſtemper of body proceeding from the ſame.

and they could not] Hence probably aroſe the conflict: the diſciples either not confident to attempt caſting out the unclean ſpirit; or attempting without ſucceſſe; the Scribes preſently inſulted, and jeered them; having ſuch blaſphemous calumnies ready in their mouths againſt Chriſt himſelf, they were not to ſeek for ſome impious objections againſt the diſciples and their doctrine: therefore Chriſt, who permitted them for their unbelife to this ſeeming foil, cometh in due time to reſcue them and defend his own cauſe.

V. 19. Bring him to me] See on Matth. 17. 17 Luke 9 41.

V. 20. when he ſaw him] So ſoon as Jeſus had looked on the boy that was brought unto him, the devil began to rage in this manner. So ſoon as the devil perceived that Jeſus was come to caſt him out, he would do what miſcheif he poſſibly could, ſo long as he could; which he did until a divine coercive power reſtrained: ſo doth he now with the Church of Chriſt (being looſed for a little ſeaſon Rev. 20. 3. yet, having great wrath, becauſe he knoweth that he hath but a ſhort time, Rev. 12 12.) rage and teare her into many pieces and ſchiſmatical factions, leaving her to the worlds judgement, (as this poor child verſe 25.) as one dead; inſomuch that many ſay, ſhe is dead.

the ſpirit tare him] ἐσπάραξεν, here σπαράττειν, [is as much as ῥήσσειν, verſe 18. there given daſheth him: to wit, as it were with violent convulſions tormenting him, for ſo the Greeks uſe σπάραγμα. See on Luke 9. 42.

V. 21. how long is it agoe?] He asketh not becauſe he knew not, but that the ſpectatours might well underſtand, how inveterate, and habitual this evil was; and that he had long ſince deſtroyed him, had he not been reſtrained by the ſame divine power, who now caſt him out

V. 22. into the fire] As verſe 18. Gr. both into the fire, or even into the fire.

if thou canſt do any thing] εἴ τι δύνασαι, which the Syriack interpreter giveth, quod poſſis, what you are able, help me: he meaſured the power of Chriſt with humane reaſon, not yet apprehending his omnipotency.

V. 23. If thou canſt believe] If thou canſt believe, I can do this thing for thee; if thou canſt believe, fear not.

all things are poſſible to him, &c.] Chriſt can, and will do any thing which is good for them that truſt in him.

V. 24. ſaid with tears, Lord I believe] Conceiving from Chriſts ſpeech good hope of his childes recovery, if the obſtruction and let thereto, were not in himſelf, in ſenſe of his own weakneſſe, and his childes miſery, he ſeriouſly profeſſeth his faith; for as Jerom ſaid, Epiſt. 9. Lib. 2. Nemo mentiens plorat; no man lying weepeth, or weeping lyeth.

help thou my unbelief] Supply with thy goodneſſe, what is defective in my faith. That which God giveth, he ofttimes gives by certain degrees, as the conditions of the gifts and receivers require: ſome men, acceptâ fide, diffidentia non carent, Proſper de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap 11. having obtained faith, yet want not ſome diffidence, as he well knew, who ſaid, I believe, help thou mine unbelief; and they who ſaid, Lord encreaſe our faith, Luke 17.

V. 25. that the people came running together] Toward him, to ſee what would be done: and knowing that there might be danger in a tumltuous throng would no longer hold them in ſuſpence who ſo earneſtly expected the event; but ſuddenly diſpatched the buſineſſe; commanding the evil ſpirit out, and forbidding him all reentry; that he might at once ſhew the admirable power of faithful prayer before the multitude; thereby to invite and encourage them to the ſame duty, in their ſeveral emergent neceſſities.

V. 26. rent him ſore] The nearer the power of Chriſt is to cure, the more furiouſly doth Satan rage: ſee on chap. 1. 26 this Chriſt permitted Satan to do; not that he hath any pleaſure in the miſery of any of his, but to the end that the multitude (ſeeing à quibus calamitatibus liberandus eſſet; Euthymius; from what calamities he was now to be delivered, and the horrid cruelty of the devil) might the better conceive the power and mercy of Chriſt delivering the poſſeſſed, which no art, care, nor power of man could do.

V. 27. and he aroſe] When the ſtanders by ſaid he was dead in that terrible fit, Jeſus took him by the hand, caſt out the devil, and the young man was preſently well again: there is no eſtate ſo deſperate, whence the hand of Chriſt cannot raiſe. Let thy hand help me, ſaid David, Pſal. 119. 173. and Pſal. 31. 5. Into thy hands I commit my ſpirit; though the Saint fall, he ſhall not utterly be caſt down, for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand, Pſal. 37. 24. bleſſed are the people who have the Lord for their God: ſerve him, and fear not the malice of Satan: Chriſts hand of divine power is as neer thee now in every diſtreſſe to lift thee up, as was that ſacred hand of fleſh neer this afflicted young man then, to raiſe him when the ſtanders by ſuppoſed him to be dead.

V. 28. why could not we?] See on Mat. 17. 19.

V. 29. but by prayer and faſting] See on Mat. 17. 21. we have need, not onely of faith and prayer, but alſo of faſting and extraordinary humiliation, to caſt Satan out of his poſſeſſion.

V. 30. and they departed thence] He and his Diſciples, Mat 17. 22.

and paſſed thorow Galilee] Paſſed aſide thorow, chap. 11. 20. and 15. 21. 29 they went by by-wayes out of the common rode into, and thorow Galilee, becauſe he would be private with his diſciples. See chap. 2. 23.

V. 31. for he taught his diſciples] Therefore he withdrew himſelf, as to prepare for his approaching Paſſion, ſo alſo to prepare and inſtruct his diſciples, againſt the ſcandal thereof: and to fit them to preach the Goſpel to the nations of the world.

V. 32 they underſtood not that ſaying] Concerning his ſuffering, which they thought could not befall their expected Meſſias, of whom they had ſo many glorious promiſes. See chap. 8. 32.

V. 33. and he came] Matth. 18. 1.

and being in the houſe] Where he was wont to make his abode, at Capernaum, where they were private.

V. 34. who ſhould be greateſt] In the temporal kingdom of the Meſſias, which they yet expected, Acts 1. 6 See on Luke 9. 46.

V. 35. If any man deſire to be firſt] In my kingdom, they that have higheſt places, muſt not look for moſt honour, but take moſt pains for the ſalvation of others, and to hear and mark that which he would now ſpeak unto them; he called all the twelve, becauſe without exception, it concerned every one of them to beware of ambition; well knowing, as their thoughts and conteſts by the way: ſo not onely what danger the deſire of Primacy might, by them, bring upon the Church of Chriſt, by them to be planted; but alſo what it did, in the ſame in a greater growth thereof: therefore he will here blaſt that miſchief in the bud, that it may grow no greater, neither come to a dangerous maturity.

V. 36. when he had taken him in his arms] ἐναγκαλισάμενος, that is, as Luke 2. 28. interpreteth, ἐδέξατο εἰς τὰς ἀγκάλας, he took him into his armes, to ſhew him for a pattern of that which he would have his be: a child is not ambitious of honour, he envieth not, is not covetous, nor reveng ful; quickly forgets injuries, and, in reſpect of actual ſinnes, cometh neereſt to mans ſtate of innocency.

receiveth not me, but him that ſent me] He doth not onely receive me, but alſo him that ſent me

V. 38. and John anſwered him] Luke 9. 49

we forbad him] Out of perverſe zeal to their Maſters honour; as Joſhua envied Eldad and Medad, Num. 11. 27. 28.

V. 39. for there is no man] See 1 Cor. 13. 3.

in my name] God who is the Author of an ordinary vocation, worketh alſo extraordinarily, ſo often as it pleaſeth him; but an extraordinary vocation pretended to, muſt be juſtified by an extraordinary commiſſion, and appear by ſome extraordinary approbation: as Amos 7. 14, 15. and here; and alſo by the doctrine which they preach.

lightly] ταχὺ, lightly, quickly: he ſhall find much to do, firſt to quiet his own conſcience, if he ſhall profeſſe, or act againſt the evident light thereof.

V. 40. He that is not againſt us] He that oppoſeth not the Goſpel, but preacheth, or profeſſeth it.

is on our part] Not that Chriſt eſteemeth them his, who are indifferent, neither hot nor cold (Rev. 3. 16.) neither true friends, nor profeſſed enemies; but to teach them who are his, a candid charity, interpreting all things to the beſt, where appeareth no maniſeſt argument to the contrary. Neither doth that (Matth. 12. 30.) He that is not with me, is againſt me, conclude any thing againſt this: for there he principally reſpecteth the minds of men; here the actions; here the Apoſtles, there himſelf: there he pronounced them his enemies, who did not with faithful and ſincere hearts joyne themſelves to him, there being no mean between Chriſt and Belial; here he admoniſheth his diſciples to take none for enemies who did not declare themſelves ſuch; ſpecially thoſe who did any thing which might ſerve to advance the Goſpel, and cauſe of Chriſt: interpret nothing in the worſt ſenſe, where a better may be made.

V. 41. for whoſoever] Matth. 10. 42.

he ſhall not loſe his reward] This ſheweth how profitable it is to further the work of the Goſpel: that endeavour ſhall not miſſe of a reward: and it is moſt certain, that on the other part, they that take away from the Miniſters of Chriſt, the means enabling them to ſubſiſt and preach the Goſpel, ſhall once have the revvard of their ſacriledge truly payed them.

V. 42. whoſoever ſhall offend] Matth. 18. 6 God is ſo ſevere a revenger of offences, that a man vvere better ſuffer any thing here, than be an occaſion thereof. One of theſe little ones that believe in me, importeth one of a meek, harmleſſe, and humble minde; not relating to the years, but quality of the perſon offended; ſo the Apoſtle diſtinguiſheth between children -- in (or as concerning) malice be yea children; but in underſtanding be men; or as of ripe age, 1 Cor. 14. 20. but the words of the text are -- ἕνα τῶν μικρῶν τῶν πιστευόντων εἰς ἐμὲ one of the little ones of thoſe that believe in me; which ſenſe the double article τῶν directeth to, as alſo the Series of the Text: for, as appeareth, Matth. 18. 2, 10. the queſtion being propoſed, who is the greateſt in the kingdom of heaven; Jeſus called a little child unto him, and ſetting him in the midſt of them he ſaid --- except ye be couverted, and become as little children, ye ſhall not enter into the kingdom of heaven ---- but whoſo ſhall offend one of theſe little ones τῶν πιστευόντων εἰς ἐμὲ --- of thoſe that believe in me, it were better for him that a milſtone, &c and preſently after he ſaith, take heed that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones: for I ſay unto you, that in heaven their Angles do alwayes behold the face of my Father which is in heaven: and here, chap. 10. 14. &c. he ſaith, of ſuch is the kingdom of God; and he took them up in his armes, put his hands upon them and bleſſed them.

offend thee] Or cauſe thee to offend.

to go] ἀπελθεῖν, to go away from this world.

V. 44. their worm dieth not] Iſaiah 66. 24 the worm ever biting the conſcience of the damned: that is, the memory of evil done, Jerom, Theophylact: the remorſe of conſcience, Euthymius: the immortal torment thereof, continually afflicting them: grief of mind, Auguſtin. de C. D. lib. 21. cap. 9. this is that ſecret tormenter, which with ſilent ſtripes teareth the wicked, endleſſe, and hopeleſſe caſt-away.

the fire is not quenched] The fire is, pœna inconſumpta; Jerom in loc. an endleſſe paine, immortalis mortis, of immortal death, as Bernard calleth it; in pſal. qui habitat.

V. 45. Cut it off] See on Matth. 5. 29, 30. and 18. 8.

V. 46. where their worm] See on verſe 44. this repetiton declareth our great need, often to be warned of the judgement to come. See alſo verſe 48

V. 47 offend thee] See on verſe 43. and Matth. 5. 30. & 18. 9.

V. 49. Every one ſhall be ſalted with fire] As every meat-offering in the law was to be ſeaſoned: ſo muſt we be with the graces of Gods Spirit, which are cleanſing like fire, Matth. 3. 11. to burn up the droſſe of ſin. It is an alluſion to the manner of ſacrificing. See Levit. 2. 13. no unſavoury oblation could be acceptale. The moral is opened, Eccleſ. 5. 1, 4. and Rom. 12. 1. ſalt was preſcribed them (to reſiſt corruption) Jerom interpreteth it to be wiſdom; becauſe ſaith he, there is no good work without wiſdom: as alſo their fire; the fire of the altar which came from heaven, that is, love and zeal: to offer with ſtrange fire was abomination Levit 10 1. &c. Matth. 5 23, 24. See the moral, Jam. 3. 17. ſalted with fire may ſeem an improper ſpeech, as alſo baptized with fire, Matth. 3. 11. but becauſe both were uſed in ſacrifice, and both are cleanſing, Chriſt fitted one word to both: intimating, that though the word of God were as ſharp as ſalt; or their afflictions grievous (therefore ſometimes are they ſtiled fiery tryals) yet men muſt be contented hereby to be bettered and made more pure (See Iſaiah 1. 25.) it being incomparably better and eaſier for them ſo to be ſeaſoned and refined now, that they may be a pure and acceptable ſacrifice to God, then to be left to Hell fire eternally.

V. 50. ſalt is good] Matth 5. 13.

but if it have loſt his ſaltneſſe] If Miniſters who ſhould ſeaſon others, have loſt their ability thereto; who ſhall mend them?

have ſalt in your ſelves] Keep grace, yet loſe not peace: Heb. 12. 14. See Matth. 5 13. Coloſ. 4. 6. we muſt ſeaſon our ſelves, as well as others; leſt we be like the water of baptiſm, peccata baptizatorum diluens, ſaith Gregory, hom. 17. in evang, waſhing away the ſins of the baptized, and then be caſt away our ſelves. See 1 Cor. 9 27.

and have peace one with another] Be ye cleanſed from the corrupt humour of ambition, and carnal affectation of ſuperiority: then ſhall ye be wiſe, and ſo love one another, that all men may know that ye are my diſciples, Joh 13. 35 ambition is an evident madneſſe; and diſſention (the undoubted iſſue thereof) extream folly, if it be ſo, to ruine our ſelves: reſtleſſe ambition was the devils ruine, and his maſter-piece on man.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 1 HE aroſe from thence] ἀναστὰς, ariſing, or he aroſe and went from thence: in the Hebrew ישב jaſhab, ſignifieth ſitting, tarrying, or dwelling: ſo alſo קום kom, which the Syr. here uſeth; he aroſe, or ſtood up to go away. See Matth. 19. 2. ſignifieth a departure from a place, or at leaſt a preparation thereto.

by the farther ſide of Jordan] In reſpect of ſome creek: for Jury and Galilee were on the one ſide of Jordan.

V. 2. to put away his wife] ἀπολῦσαι, to looſe his wife from him: for the wife while the husband liveth δέδεται is bound to him, Rom 7. 2. in oppoſition hereto, is often ſet ἀπολύειν, Luke 16. 18. or ἀπολῦσαι, Matth. 19 8 among other things ſignifying abſolutum dimittere to diſmiſſe one being unlooſed, or diſcharged from bonds, as Matth. 27. 21 26 John 19. 10. underſtand their queſtion to be, as Matth 19. 3. whether it were lawful for a man to put away his wife on every occaſion? they made no queſtion but he might for ſome.

V. 3. what did Moſes command you?] This Chriſt beſt knew, who gave the law by Moſes; but thus in all controverſies he would reduce them to the Law of God, hereby taking occaſion to expound Moſes by Moſes, the Law by the Law, one Scripture by another, (as appeareth verſe 6, 7, 8.) For Geneſis 2. 24. it is ſaid, Therefore ſhall a man leave his father and his mother, and ſhall cleave unto his wife.

V. 4. Moſes ſuffered to write a bill, &c.] Deut. 24. 1. See on Matth. 19. 7.

V. 5. he

V. 5. he wrote you this precept] See on Matth. 19. 8. this γράφειν is as much as ἐπιτρέπειν, verſe 4. to permit, as Matthew hath it. For Moſes commanded not diſmiſſion of the wife; but (as a civil Magiſtrate) permitted it, to avoid murder and cruelty : rather chargeing the unreconcileable, with a command to write and publiſh the deſertion of their wives, than any wayes approving that which was not according to Gods law and inſtitution : ſo our law reſtraining intereſt to eight per cent, rather cautioneth againſt extortion, than approveth uſury.

V. 6. from the beginning] Of the world, chap. 13. 19 when matrimony was inſtituted.

God made them male and female] One man and one woman; that two united into one fleſh, might be the fountain of propagation to all mankinde.

V. 7. leave his father, &c.] See on Matth. 19. 5.

V. 8. one fleſh] Gen. 2. 24. As they were one, (the woman being made of a part of man) ſo would God have them but one, in holy unity.

V. 9. what therefore God hath joyned] See on Matth. 19. 6. God is the Author of this bond, therefore man may not at his pleaſure diſſolve it.

V. 10. asked him again of the ſame] Of that which he had taught concerning indiſſolubility of marriage, it being a point which the Scribes and Doctors had never taught the people, therefore they yet underſtood it not.

V. 11. ſhall put away his wife] Matth. 5. 32, & 19. 9.

committeth adultery] Except he put her away for adultery, Mat. 19. 9.

againſt her] Whom he hath put away.

V. 12. and if a woman &c.] If a woman ſhall go from her huſband, and take another man, ſhe is an adultereſs.

V. 13. brought young children] See on Matth. 19. 13. Luke 18. 15. it is manifeſt that here the word παιδία, ſignifieth children in years, and that of ſuch is the kingdom of heaven, for verſe 16. he took them up in his armes and bleſſed them, which it is likely he would not have done to a man of years, though never ſo humble.

V. 14. he was much diſpleaſed] ἠγανάκτησε, he grieved, had indignation, or took it very ill : the Syriac gives it אתבאש לה ethbeſh leh, which Treſtius giveth indignatus eſt. The word באש baaſh (whence it cometh, and which out of the Syriac we tranſlate he had indignation, Matth. 26. 8. Matth. 14. 4.) properly ſignifieth fœtuit : and by a Metaphor, gravis, ingratus fuit auribus, as Geneſ. 21. 11. it was grievous, unwelcome, diſpleaſing, or odious : ſo that this giveth us to underſtand, that Chriſt abhorred and abominated (as a loathſome and odious thing which he could not endure to hear or ſee) this perverſe zeal of theirs, which (though probably out of a good meaning) prohibited children to be brought unto him: So the Greeks expreſſe an odious word λόγος σαπρὸς, Epheſ. 4. 29. rotten, ſtinking, rancid, or corrupt communication, ſuch as good men loath to hear : by this we may conjecture, how acceptable their zeal is to Chriſt who forbid Infants baptiſme, whereby they are brought to Chriſt, and implanted into him, Rom. 6. ſeeing he giveth this reaſon, for of ſuch is the kingdom of God, that is, the kingdom of Heaven, Matth. 19. 13. The impediment which is commonly objected, Chriſt taketh away, verſe 15. where he ſaith, whoſoever doth not receive the kingdom of God as a little childe, he ſhall not enter therein : which is in effect as if he had ſaid, the tender age of children is ſo far from barring children from the kingdom of God; that, except they who are of ripe years become like little children, their baptiſme ſhall not advantage them to give them admiſſion into the kingdom of Heaven. If the inheritance of the kingdom be theirs, that which is thereto ſubordinate muſt be theirs : ſuch is baptiſme, which (as the Ark in the deluge) ſaves us, 1 Peter 3. 20. 21 if theirs, then is it odious to Chriſt to keep them from that which implanteth them into him. See on Luke 18. 16.

V. 15. as a little childe] We muſt be like children in humility, ſimplicity and innocency, if we deſire to enter into the kingdom of Heaven. See 1 Cor. 14. 20. and here verſe 13.

V. 16. he took them up in his armes] See on chap. 9. 36.

and bleſſed them] In the Syriac וברך אנון abarech innun, of the Hebrew ברך barach; which ſignifieth to bend the knee, 2 Chron. 6. 13. Pſalm 95. 6. to pray; for the Syriac word ברך berach or ברך berech, ſignifieth the ſame, Acts 20. 36. Matth. 27. 29. Rom. 11. 4. &c. thence metonymically it ſignifieth he bleſſed, Mark 8. 7. Matth. 14. 19. &c. that is, according to the ſenſe of the Hebrews, he prayed for, or pronounced a bleſſing on them, 2 Sam. 8. 10. Exod. 12. 32. Pharaoh ſaith וברכתם גם-אתי uberachtem gam othi, ye ſhall alſo bleſſe me, that is, as the Chaldee giveth it, pray for me. Concerning infants we muſt know that God comprehended them in the covenant as well as their fathers, and therefore Chriſt bleſſed them. See Gen. 17. 7, 10. &c.

V. 17. that I may inherit life] Two things are to be eſchewed by them who will be ſaved; that is, 1. Opinion of their own merits, 2. Love of riches. Theſe two undo many ſouls: both theſe were in this young man. See on Mat. 19. 16.

V. 18. why calleſt thou me good] See on Mat. 19. 17.

V. 19. thou knoweſt the commandments] Chriſt anſwereth to his queſtion and ſenſe : he ſaid, what good ſhall I do? thinking he muſt be ſaved by the works of the Law; which is indeed to decline and wave free juſtification by faith in Chriſt, therefore Chriſt to convince his conſcience, remitteth him to the Law, by which is the knowledge of ſinne, Rom. 7. 7. but no juſtification from ſinne, Romans 8. 3. See on Matthew 19. 16, 17. and on Luke 18. 20.

Sell what thou haſt] This is no Evangelical counſel, but a precept; though not binding all particularly to ſell and give it away to the poor : yet in the general it bindeth every one to be willing to leave all at Gods command, or where his honour requireth it, and to give, according to his ability, for the relief of his poor or diſtreſſed neighbour;

V. 22. went away grieved] With a ſad heart and heavy countenance, afflicted, as the Syriac Interpreter hath it. See Mat. 19. 22. Luke 18. 23.

V. 29. or wife, or, &c.] The meaning is, that God is a bountiful rewarder, and that the want of that which for his ſake we forgo, ſhall be recompenſed with better ſpiritual ſupplyes.

V. 30. ſhal receive an hundred fold] Either of temporal bleſſings when afflictions and perſecutions are over; as Job did receive more than he loſt; or in a bleſſed ſupport in midſt of troubles; as experience of Gods mercies, the Mother of hope, Rom. 5. 4. and the quiet fruits of righteouſneſſe at laſt, Heb. 12. 11. Such a gain, is, loſſe for Chriſts ſake, they ſhall finde bleſſings temporall and eternall, as Jacobs ſonnes parting from Egypt, found in their ſacks both corn and their money again, wherewith they had purchaſed it.

V. 32. they were in the way] Mat. 20. 17.

Jeſus went before them] The diſciples abhorred this journey to Jeruſalem, knowing that the high prieſts and elders maliced him to the death; therefore to animate his timorous diſciples, he manifeſted himſelf a cheerfull leader of the way, by his pace, countenance, and geſture : to let them know that he feared not death; but now that the hour was come, offered himſelf thereto, they were amazed as they followed] Not yet underſtanding why he would caſt himſelf again upon ſuch apparent dangers.

they were afraid] Full of thoughts, as miſdoubting their own ſafety. They yet would follow him, for they were loath to forſake their Maſter. This was of their love to him; which being not perfect, it had a dangerous mixture of fear, leſt themſelves ſhould come into danger, being taken notice of as his ſectatours and diſciples; therefore they wiſhed that he would rather recede into ſome private and more ſecure place, where they might be quietly with him, than expoſe himſelf to the implacable malice of the Jews at Jeruſalem. See John 11. 12. 16.

he took again the twelve] See Mat. 20. 17. and on Luke 18. 31. It ſemeth by this word πάλιν, again, that theſe words relate to that which is ſpoken, chap 9. 31. where he to his Apoſtles privately declared, that yet not well underſtood the myſtery of his death and paſſion : hardly do we underſtand that which we are unwilling to learn : therefore Chriſt often teaching them this ſame point which was of neceſſity quickly to be learned, the time of his ſuffering now drawing ſo nere.

V. 40. is not mine to give] Not mine in the ſenſe wherein you deſire this priviledge; that is, as being an earthly Monarch: the heavenly rewards are not here to be diſtributed in ſuch reſpects; nor is my kingdom or glory of this world.

He often came to Jeruſalem, but never with ſuch acclamations and ſhew of Majeſty: formerly he came privately, becauſe he would decline their envy; but now that the time of his paſſion was come which himſelf had determined λαμπρότερον ἔρχεται, he cometh more glorioully, that they might know him to be truely God, and the expected Meſſias; if not, that it might be to their greater condemnation, ſaith Theophylact.

bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord] Well be it to him that cometh to us from God, or that is ſent of God.

V. 10. bleſſed be the kingdom, &c.] Be it now happy and proſperous as we have long expected. They generally dreamed of a temporall monarchy of the Meſſia, which was the bias of their votes: therefore whereas they mentioned David their father, underſtand that, not ſo by them ſpoken, as when they called themſelves Abrahams ſeed. John 8 33. but becauſe they owned David as the beſt Patriarch and father of the people, of all the kings of Iſrael, ſee Pſalm 78. 72. 2 Sam 24 17, and becauſe they well knew that Chriſt ſhould be of the poſterity of David their king; whoſe kingdom (the perpetuity whereof God had promiſed David, 2 Sam 7. 16. Pſalm. 89. 34.) was now, and even from Solomons time, miſerably rent and ruined, the ſcepter being departed from Judah, yet the repaire thereof by Chriſt being foretold by the Prophets, as Iſaiah 9. 7. they ſeeing Jeſus doing ſuch admirable things as excelled all power of man, might think the time thereof was now come, that the decayed eſtate of Iſrael ſhould be repaired, and their ſecular monarchy reſtored, which vaine hope ſtuck faſt upon the hearts of good men: yea, after Chriſts reſurrection, and their often being taught the contrary, the diſciples ſaid, Acts 1. 6.—Lord, wilt thou at this time reſtore again the kingdom to Iſrael? See alſo Luke 24. 21.—but we truſted that it had been he, which ſhould have redeemed Iſrael:—ſo that this vote of the multitude here, hath this ſenſe; Lord bleſſe and proſper us ſo, that the long-ruined kingdom and ſtate of Iſrael may be now repaired and reſtored again to its ancient integrity, liberty, proſperity and glory, which it had under king David.

V. 11 when he had looked round] As being Lord of that houſe, he appeared as viewing what was amiſſe, and to be amended or reformed, which he preſently did, caſting out prophaners from the temple.

if happily] Or to ſee if happily, a Gen 3. 22.

he found nothing but leaves] A true Embleme of an Hypocrite, who makes a ſhew of godlineſſe, but yet is fruitleſſe and near the curſe, Mat. 3. 10 Heb. 6. 8 Iſa 5. 5, 6.

for the time of figs was not yet] Iſrael was repreſented by this barren tree, Iſaiah 5. 7. Luke 13. 8. which brought forth onely ſhews of holineſſe, obſervation of ceremonies (that law affording them onely ſhadows, but no fruit) but not the ſubſtance of godlineſſe, which is the fruit which God looks for. In the Letter we muſt conſider, that the time of new fruits could not yet be, it being but the firſt moneth, as it was called after the captivity [ניסן] Niſan (which anſwered partly to our March, and partly to April) in the tenth day, whereof the Paſchal Lamb was to be taken, and on the fourteenth day the Paſſeover (to which they were now going to Jeruſalem) was to be eaten, Exod. 12. 3, 6. therefore ſo ſoon in the ſpring the fig-tree could not bear any of that years fruit: and certainly Chriſt did not irrationally go at an unſeaſonable time to ſeek fruit thereon: ſo that it may moſt probably be concluded, that he ſought ſome figs of the old ſtore which uſe to hang on all the year, ſpecially in thoſe hot countreys: ſo that in the Letter, albeit the tree could not yet yeild any new fruits becauſe the time was not yet come; yet might it have ſhewed ſome remainds of the former fertility. And in the type, if the Jews (hereby repreſented) might finde excuſe for their not yet believing in Chriſt, before the fulneſſe of that time was come; yet were they unexcuſable, that they neither brought forth to the Lord fruits of righteouſneſſe according to their firſt covenant under the Law, which ſaid, Do this and live: nor according to the ſecond covenant under grace and the Goſpel, which ſaid, Beleeve and thou ſhalt be ſaved: therefore Chriſt came this once to the figtree, not ſo much for his own ſake, (who well knew, both it, and how otherwiſe to have ſupplyed his own wants) as for the Apoſtles whom he would fore-inſtruct concerning the rejection of the Jews, to whom he came, three years ſeeking fruit, Luke 13.) which may import the time before the Law, under the Law, and now under the Goſpel) and found none. This, Chriſt neceſſarily inſtructed them in, in regard that it muſt have been no ſmal ſcandal and grief to the apoſtles, that their kindred, the Iſrael of God, muſt for their unfruitfulneſſe be under the curſe (like this withered fig-tree) and withered and conſumed for their rejecting the Goſpel, whereof they were to be preachers, as may appear, Romans 9. 2, 3. Therefore as God inſtructed Jonah by the withered gourd; ſo here Chriſt enformeth his diſciples by this ſoon withering fruitleſſe fig-tree. See on Matth. 20. 20.

V. 14. Ieſus anſwered] That is, according to the Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, he began thus to ſay on this occaſion.

never man eat fruit] Poſſibly this was becauſe he knew that this tree had not yet born fruit, or that it bare little, and was ſo unprofitable to the owner; but however, the Lord of all creatures might juſtly diſpoſe of it, who (what ever right he gives men in his creatures) may juſtly give, and take at his pleaſure.

his diſciples heard] They were to be witneſſes of what was done on the morrow; neither would they have admired, nor much obſerved the power of Chriſt herein; if they had not heard, when he had thus curſed it.

V. 16. that any man ſhould carry any veſſel] That is, any common ones, ſuch as they brought into the temple, who made it a market place; for concerning the holy veſſels, or things appertaining to the ſervice of God, the charge whereof appertained unto the Prieſts and Levites, as God had commanded, this place of Scripture ſpeaketh not.

So משלים meſhalim, Ezek. 14. 8. is tranſlated, a proverbe, which is an uſefull kind of teaching for moving affection, and ſtrengthening the memory, Chriſt in his divine wiſdome ſaw good to uſe it much in his teaching; beſt knowing how and when to inſtruct thoſe good hearers, who deſired to learne and believe, and to elude the captious and obſtinate unbelievers, who came not with any purpoſe or minde to be converted, but to tempt and calumniate; ſo therefore he, who knew their thoughts, accommodated his ſermons, and anſwers, that hearing they might heare, but not underſtand to converſion and ſalvation, ſee Matth. 13. 13. &c.

V. 28. one of the ſcribes] See on Mat 22.35.

V. 29. The Lord our God is one] Deut. 6.4. this εἷς ἐστι, is one, excludeth pluralitities of eſſence, or natures, not of perſons.

V. 30. Love the Lord thy God,&c.] See on Mat. 22.37,38. Luke 10. 27.

with all thy ſtrength] As much as poſſibly thou canſt: the meaſure of love to thy neighbour, muſt be thy ſelf; but the meaſure wherewith we muſt love God, muſt be to love him without meaſure.

V. 31. the ſecond is like] Of the like importance in reſpect of thy ſalvation; for thou canſt not be ſaved without love to God and thy brother,and what ſhal it then profit us, if loving our ſelves we bawk our neighbours? or what again ſhall it advantage us, it loving our neighbours, we neglect our ſelves? Greg. hom. 17. in evang. love thy neighbour as thy ſelf? but love both in God.

V. 32. thou haſt ſaid the truth] ἐπ' ἀληθείας, &c. thou haſt ſpo- in truth; the Syriac giveth it, as we, thou haſt ſaid the truth. He came to prove Chriſts wiſdom, and hearing it, giveth teſtimony thereto.

V. 33. more than all whole burnt-offerings] More excellent and more acceptable to God, 1 Sam. 15. 22. theſe ceremonies never pleaſed God, without the other duties which we owe to him and reſpectively alſo to our neighbour. See Iſa.1.13.16.17. Hoſ.6.6. Mic. 6.6,7.

V. 34. anſwered diſcreetly] νουνεχῶς, as it were from νοῦν ἔχειν: he anſwered as one having a ready minde, as we vulgarly ſay,with his wits about him, or learnedly and skilfully: for ſo the Hebrew חכם, chacham ſignifieth,and thence is the Syriac word רחכימאית dechachimaith, here uſed,derived.

V. 35. that Chriſt is the Son of David] Chriſt denieth that which is voucheth here of the Scribes, but proveth his Deity by the words of David. See on Mat.22.42.

V.36. ſaid by the holy Ghoſt] See on Mat.22 43.ἐν τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ in or by the holy Spirit: he intimates that it was not ſo much David, as the holy Ghoſt that ſpake by David. See 2 Peter 1.21.

The Lord ſaid] Pſal,110.1.

V. 37. the common people heard him gladly] Many of the common people,or the greater part of them, while he taught them, cheerfully and attentively hearkened to that he ſpake.

V. 38. Beware of the Scribes] βλέπετε, Look to: as chap. 8. 15. Mat.23.5. The manners of all miniſters, are not incautiouſly to be followed as examples of our lives.

in long clothing] ἐν στολαῖς, a ſtole, is a kinde of veſture or robe, long to the heels,which anciently the Perſians uſed to wear:the Latines did more ſpecially take it for a womans garment: στολίον, was a ſhort coat, ſuch as Philoſophers commonly wore: but in this place it ſeemeth to ſignifie that fringed garment, mentioned Deut. 22. 12. כסות cheſuth. See on Mat. 23. 5. and on Luke 20. 47.

ſalutations in the market] See on Mat. 23.7. that they might ſeem honourable among the people, they loved to have men riſe up when they came by, and with much reverence (as we ſay,with cap and knee) ſalute them when Ahaſuerus had promoted Haman, all the kings ſervants which were in the kings gate, bowed, and reverenced him; he was revengefully wrath with Mordecai, that he would not, Eſther 3. 2. by which we may gheſſe at theſe ambitious Phariſees mindes towards thoſe who ſaluted them not.

V 39. chief ſeats] See on Mat 23.6.

V. 40. devour widows houſes] They ſpoil thoſe whom Gods law gave a ſpeicall charge to preſerve. See 2 Tim 3.6. and on Mat. 23. 14.

receive greater damnation] That is, more than ordinary puniſhment in hell: becauſe they not onely ſerved ſin and Satan in their contempt of Gods laws, but alſo made a pretence of his holy worſhip, to ſerve their unhallowed deſires and impieties: counterfeit ſanctity, is double iniquity.

V. 41. ſate over againſt the treaſurie] See on Luke 21. 4.

money] χαλκὸν, Here is a metonymie of the matter: braſſe, is here put for any kinde of money, whether of braſſe or other mettal, which the Romans uſed, as do ſome nations now: ſo they uſed the word as, gravis are, full of mony, as alienum, debt: the Syriac hath a word here עורפנא hurephano, hereby ſignifying any kinde of ſmal money.

into the treaſury] Or cheſt, whereinto they put their beneficence. 2 Kings 12.10,11. 2 Chron 24. 8.

V. 42. two mites] It was (ſay ſome) a ſeventh part of one peice of that braſſe money. See on Luke 21. 2. though ſhe well knew the ſlenderneſſe of her ſtock, and how little thoſe her two drops, could adde to greater floods of others beneficence, yet ſhe would not want will, though ſhe did ability to her minde: nothing deſpairing, but that God would accept the will which he had given, who had not given her wealth.

V. 43. He called unto him his diſciples] He called them apart,probably; that neither his diſciples might be ignorant how God accepteth the will of thoſe; who cheerfully give, though they cannot bountifully; nor the widow might hear, to move her to any vain glory (a weed which will grow on the leaſt ground) nor the people to envy.

this poor widow hath caſt in more] See on Luke 21. 3. this was an epitome of great wealth; much in Gods gracious acceptance, who as Gregory ſaith, hom. 5. in evang. cor, non ſubſtantiam penſat, weigheth the heart (of the giver) not the value of the gift: ſo rich men give,ſecure of their wealth,to bear it; but poor men; of Gods favour, to ſupply them with more: it is our affection, not our ſtore which commendeth our gifts to God, who can never be covetous nor leſſe gracious in accepting the beſt we can preſent. See 1 Cor. 8. 12.

V. 44. but ſhe out of her want] Out of her exceeding ſmal ſtore, 2 Cor. 8. 2.

all her living] That is, all the meanes ſhe had to live on: all that for preſent ſhe had to ſuſtain her ſelf: ſo βίος ſignifieth, both life,and livelyhood: ſhe gave all, who had no more left her to give,or to relieve her ſelf;but muſt work for more;whereas others gave of that abundance,or ſtore,which lay by them,whereof they had not ſo much as preſent uſe.

CHAP. XIII.

ſee what manner of ſtones] How beautiful, Luke 21. 5. and large, verſe 2. Joſephus antiq. lib. 15. c. 14. reporteth, that they were white hard ſtones, of a very great magnitude: no doubt it was a very ſtrong, beautifull and magnificent ſtructure; but no ſtrength can reſiſt, nor worldly magnificence appeaſe Gods anger againſt obſtinate ſinners. Becauſe he had ſaid, their houſe (the temple in which they ſo much gloried) ſhould be left deſolate, becauſe of the grievous ſinnes, obſtinacy and hardneſſe of heart of that people, they admiring that ſuch a goodly fabrick ſhould be demoliſhed: ſhew him εὐπρέπειαν, the comelineſs thereof. Theophylact.

V. 2. Seeſt thou theſe great buildings] Thou thinkeſt, they ſhall ſtand for ever, becauſe of their ſtrength, beauty and magnificence; which, in relation to ſecond cauſes, might poſſibly be; but as, except the Lord build the houſe, their labour is but vain that build it, Pſal. 127. 1. ſo alſo, except he keep it.

V. 6. come in my Name] See on Matth 24. 5. many ſeducers pretending to my office, name, authority, or doctrine, that thereby they may ſeduce unſtable ſouls: errour and impiety can no wayes deceive, but under ſome ſhew or ſhadow of vertue.

V. 7. When ye ſhall hear of wars] See on Mat 24.6. now are theſe times foretold;for now alſo,as *Cyprian l.*2 *ep.*2.madet orbis mutuo ſanguine, the world is wet with mutual blood.

the end ſhall not be yet] See on Mat. 24. 6. The end ſhall not be yet; that is, οὐκ εὐθέως, not by and by (not preſently after ye ſhall hear of warres and rumors of warres) ſo Luke expreſſeth this οὔπω τὸ τέλος, for theſe things muſt firſt come to paſſe, ----nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdom againſt kingdom,----before all theſe things, they ſhall lay their hands on you, and perſecute you, &c. probably our Saviour addeth theſe words, to refell and confute that vain opinion of the Jews, ſo much gloriing and confiding in the beauty ſanctity, and perpetuity of their temple, that they thought that the world muſt neceſſarily have ending with it, albeit they might have been ſufficiently inſtructed to the contrary, by that which the Lord permitted the Chaldees to do unto their former temple, Jer.52.13. 2 King.25 9.

V. 8. Nation ſhall riſe, &c.] See on Mat 24.7.

theſe are the beginnings] Ye ſhall have greater ſorrowes afterward.

of ſorrows] See Mat. 24. 8. ὠδίνων; here is a metaphor taken from a womans travell, whoſe pains greaten by degrees, unto the birth; and are the more grievous, becauſe ſodain. See 1Theſ.5 3.

V. 9. take heed to your ſelves] βλέπετε δὲ ὑμεῖς ἑαυτούς, the Syriack giveth it, reſpect your ſoul: the meaning is, take heed of the dangers which ſhall then beſet you.

they ſhall deliver you up] The enemies of the Goſpel ſhall deliver you up to ſecular powers, that they may perſecute you: ſo they did to Herod Agrippa, Herod; &c.

for a teſtimony] For a teſtimony againſt themſelves, to leave them without all excuſe of their unbelief and diſobedience, who having heard the goſpel ſo evidently preached by you, yet regarded it not.

V 10. the goſpel muſt firſt be publiſhed] Before ye be thus perſecuted: ſo was it before Jeruſalem was deſtroyed. See Rom. 10. 18. See on Mat 24. 14.

among all nations] To the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews. To ſome nations it was not preached untill after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; many were remote, and ſome then undiſcovered.

V 11. when they ſhall lead you] To the Magiſtrates. See on Mat. 10. 19. and on Luke 20. 11. and on Luke 21. 13,14.

it is not you that ſpeak, &c.] Gods ſpirit will guide your tongues: this was a ſpecial promiſe to the Apoſtles. Yet not ſo to be reſtrained to them, but that we muſt underſtand that the ſame ſpirit of God aſſiſteth and ſpeaketh in their ſucceſſours in the miniſtery unto the end of the world, Mat. 28. 19, 20. although not now with an infallibility, yet with a meaſure of ſpiritual graces ſufficient for the refutation of all adverſaries of the Goſpel; and for the edification and gathering together the elect of every age into the myſtical body of Chriſt which is his Church. See Eph.4. 11,12,13.

V. 12. brother ſhall betray brother] Out of a blind zeal they will accuſe each other, and complain of each other to the Magiſtrate; ſo forgetting all laws of nature, as if their religion taught them to be cruel and unnatural: let him that readeth conſider our preſent condition.

V. 13. ye ſhall be hated of all men] Of moſt men with whom you ſhall converſe: or of all worldly men; or of ſome of all ſorts. The like manner of ſpeaking, ſee Phil. 2. 21.

that it is nigh] The kingdom of God, Luke 21. 31. Here, as alſo, Matth. 24. Luke 21. from the 20. verſe. Some things are recorded as relating to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, the temple, and polity of the Jewes; and ſome other things as relating to the end of the world, and coming of Chriſt to judgment; we muſt for the right underſtanding hereof carefully diſtinguiſh between, the ſigns of the nearneſs of approach of the one, and of the other; for albeit ſome ſignes which Chriſt giveth may agree to either, Jeruſalems end, or the worlds, as wars and rumours of wars, falſe Prophets deceiving many, iniquity abounding, love and charity growing cold, Mat. 24. 11, 12. yet ſome ſignes and ſymptomes are peculiar to the one which were not applyable to the other; as here ver. 26 ſeeing the Son of man coming in the clouds, was not ſpoken of, as a token of Jeruſalems deſtruction, but of the worlds end; the abomination of deſolation ſpoken of by Daniel the Prophet, ſtanding in the holy place, Mat. 24. 15. was not a ſign or preſage of the worlds imminent deſtruction, but of the temples, and Jeruſalems.

but the Father] The latter day is not curiouſly to be ſearched for, which the Father alone knoweth: we muſt rather take care that we may be ever provided for it: for therefore God concealeth it from us, that we might never be ſecure, but ever ſtand upon a careful watch.

V. 34. as a man taking a farre journey] Thus ſhall it be in the kingdom of God, as if a man ſhould take a long journey: ſo is Chriſts going into heaven, leaving his houſe the Church: out of the worldly mans belief, as out of his ſight: he committed to every one his charge; ſome to govern, ſome to obey: every one to be vigilant in his calling, ſanctimony of life, and expectation of judgment to come. V. 35. For ye know not] Seeing the danger is both inevitable and intolerable, if Chriſt coming to judgment, find us negligent and unprepared (for there ſhall be then no place for repentance) and ſeeing we cannot knovv the hour when he will come, it highly concerns every Chriſtian to ſtand upon a careful and conſtant watch.

at midnight, &c.] By theſe termes may be underſtood, that vve may expect death and judgment at all times; and that no age of man is exempt from death: live every day as if it were thy laſt.

V. 37. what I ſay unto you] Tell the reſt of my diſciples, and all others, for their learning and comfort, what I have told you, verſe 3.

I ſay unto all, watch] The word of Chriſt is without exception of times, places, or perſons addreſſed to all, ut noviſſimi per primos audiant, Ierom. that the laſt may hear by the firſt. Except the hour which ſhall bring thee to judgment; for that is to every man his day of judgment: every man goeth hence ſuch, qualis judicandus eſt illo die, Auguſtin. ep 80. as he ſhall be judged at that day: the life of a good and wiſe man, is a continnal meditation on death, and preparation for the ſame; when Satan can make men to get this, he eaſily bringeth them aſleep in ſin.

and delivered him to Pilate] The Romans having ſubdued them, and given them Laws and conditions of holding their inheritances in that land, permitted them not power of judicature in any capital cauſes; becauſe they could not put Jeſus to death (which they ſo much deſired) they deliver him to Pilate the Roman deputy for that time. With an enditement of high treaſon againſt Cæſar, which they ſuppoſed would eaſily carry on their deſign, before Pilat the name of King being ever odious to the Romans: therefore Pilate in the next verſe queſtioneth him ſo, art thou the King of the Jewes? which might ſeem very abrupt, but that we muſt underſtand that the Jewes had accuſed Chriſt of ambition, and affecting to be King of Iſrael, which for brevity ſake this Evangeliſt omitteth See verſe 3.

an honourable Counſellor] a man of great authority, of the council of the Sanhedrim ; or elſe taken into Pilat's council ; the firſt ſeems moſt agreeable with the preſent circumſtances.

waited for the kingdome of God] See Luke 2. 25. he waited for the kingdome of the promiſed Meſsias, and ſalvation therein, and on Luke 23. 51.

went in boldly in to Pilate] this intimateth either great freedome of his acceſs to Pilate ; or his much daring, in ſhewing himſelf a follower of Chriſt; conſidering the power and malice of the Prieſts, and Phariſees, now backed, with the fury of the miſled people ; ſo that he could not herein, but run the hazard of life and eſtate.

V. 44. Marvelled if he were already dead] Becauſe they who were crucified, were very long in their torments before they could die ; and becauſe probably he might hear that Jeſus had power to raiſe the dead he might poſsibly think, that he would have delivered himſelf from the Croſs ; therefore he marvelled: he knew not the counſel of God concerning Chriſts ſuffering, though himſelfe were a chief actor in the performance of the ſame, Acts 4. 27, 28. nor that Chriſt delivered up himſelf a voluntary ſacrifice for our ſins ; neither underſtood he the myſtery of the Paſchal Lamb to be eaten in haſt, Exod. 12. 11.

he asked him whether] fearing the Jews, if his Diſciples ſhould have taken him down, before he had been certainly dead (all which doubting, confirmeth our faith in his death and reſurrection) might give ſome miſchievous information againſt him to Cæſar.

V. 45. He gave the body to Ioſeph] He gave him power to take it down, and bury it, at his diſcretion, ἐδωρήσατο, he gave Jeſus body to Joſeph; loco muneris, ſaith one, he might boldly have added, the greateſt that man ever begged, or gave ; magna divinæ gratiæ teſſera : For ſo God loved the world, that he gave his onely begotten Son———John 3. 16.

and laid him in a ſepulchre] See on Matt. 27. 60. and on Luke 23. 53. Tremelius ſaith out of Maimoni de luctu. c. 4. it is a cuſtome in Iſrael, concerning the dead, and their ſepulture ; that when one is dead, they ſhut his eyes, and mouth, binding a band of ſome cloth to ty up his jaws ; waſh, the corps, and anonint it with ointment confected of divers aromatical things : then cutting off the hair of the head, the body is wrapped up in white linnen cloth, prepared for this purpoſe ; therefore the face is covered, before the dead be laid on the bier, with an handkerchiefe then laid on the bier, he is borne on mens ſhoulders, to the grave ; and there before the body be put into the ground, certain words written by the anceſtors for this purpoſe, are recited, wherein the Divine juſtice is commended, and the ſins of man aggravated whereby we have deſerved death; they pray God, that he would ſo exerciſe his juſtice, that he forget not that he is alſo merciful : after this, the corps together with the bier, is put into the ground, and covered : then turn they to the mourners, and certain things to comfort them are recited; which done, every one goeth hence: neither appears there any difference between the rich and poor, noble and obſcure, either in their burial of the dead, or conſolation of the living.

Verſe 1. WAs paſt] Or had come between, as Acts 25. 13. and 27. 9. See on Matt. 28. 1. this Sabbath began at ſunſet, and ended at ſunſet : ſo ſoon therefore, as it was lawful to work, or buy, and ſell, they went to buy ſweet ſpices to embalm the Body of Jeſus : which, though that ſacred Body had no need of (as other corruptible bodies) he being to lie in grave, and not to ſee corruption, yet theſe women were yet ignorant hereof ; and therefore it being a ſolemne cuſtome with them to embalm their dear deceaſed friends ; they would thus ſhew their love ; although Joſeph and Nicodemus had accommodated the Body with a Sindon, or winding ſheet, and a mixture of Myrrhe and Aloes, about an hundered pound weight, John 19. 39. for the cuſtome of thoſe places was often and many dayes to embalme the dead ; poſſibly they received it from the Egyptians, whoſe time of embalming, laſted fourty dayes : See Geneſis, 50. 23. See Herodot. in Euterpe.

V. 2. Very early in the morning] See on Matthew, 28. and on Luke 24. 1. John 20. 1. as ſoon as it was fit to doe it, on the Sabbath, they might not, and in the night there was no convenience.

V. 3. They ſaid among themſelves] That is, the women mentioned, verſe 1. as they went towards the Sepulchre; remembring how it was ſhut up, they began to caſt about, how they ſhould have the ſtone rolled away, that they might come to embalm him : as if they ſaid ; can all we doe it ? or, how ſhall we find any to doe it for us ? It ſeemeth they knew not that there was a publicke ſeale, and guard ſet upon the Sepulchre, ſeeing they make no difficulty concerning that, which had they known, they probably would have feared the iſſue of their preſent attempt.

V. 4. And when they looked] ἀναβλέψασαι, &c. When they caſt their eyes towards the Sepulchre it importeth here an intentive looking toward it, which they before did not, ſo the Syriac gives it, and beholding they ſaw, or looking more ſtedfaſtly they perceived.

for it was very great] This was the reaſon of their care and conſultation, v. 3. they were ſolicitous how they ſhould be able to remove the ſtone, becauſe it was very great, and heavy above their ſtrength to move.

V. 5. entring into the Sepulchre] John 20. 11. That is, ſaith Maſter Beza, in ſpeluncam, in qua exciſum erat Sepulchrum : into the Cave, in which the Sepulchre was hevved out of the Rock : Others ſay, they entred only within the ſeprum or fence, which divided the Sepulchre from the reſt of the Garden in which the Sepulchre was : Others ſay, after Auguſtine, l. 3. *de Conſen. Luke 8. 27.) either of that capacity, or ſo arched, that they might go dovvn into them.

as they mourned and wept] See on Luke 24. 17. They in their infirmity of faith, not yet apprehend what he had taught them concerning his reſurrection the third day ; mourned and wept ; as if he had ſtill been dead; but he would now have them ceaſe from that ſorrow, and be aſſured that he was alive again : Chriſt will ever ſend comfort to his, in due time, and at laſt wipe away all tears from their eyes. See Pſal. 9. 9.

This ſheweth, they were ſo far from any confederacy or compact in divulging Chriſts reſurrection from the dead that it vvas long before they could believe it their ſelves; ſee verſ. 13.

V. 12. in another form] In another habit than he had converſed with them in : and therefore they took him for a ſtranger. Luke 24. 18, as Mary did for the Gardner. John 20. 15. See on Luke 24. 15, 16. utique in ipſo corpore, cujus alia erat effigies Auguſtin.

V. 13. neither believed they them] All this is recorded that we may the more confidently believe thoſe to have been moſt free from any compact in their teſtimony, who were ſo ſlowly, and hardly induced to believe the Goſpel themſelves.

V. 14. Afterward] Luke 24. 36. John 20. 19. another time, after his appearing to Mary, and her relating the ſame to the Diſciples.

as they ſate at meat] ἀνακειμένοις, As they ſate together, at ſupper; as may be gathered from Luke 24. 33. compared with verſe 36. for thoſe two diſciples at Emaus, knew Chriſt in his breaking bread, and preſently returned to Jeruſalem to tell the diſciples thereof; while they were ſpeaking, ſodainly Chriſt ſtood by them, it is probable therefore, while they ſate at ſupper, whom he calleth the eleven; that is, the Apoſtles in generall, or indefinitely taken for thoſe of the eleven, who were gathered together with others at Jeruſalem; where it is ſaid (Luke 24. 33.) that Cleopas and another of them, found the eleven together; yet Thomas was not there. John 20.24 for after the death of Judas Iſcariot unto the election of Matthias, Acts 1. 26. the Apoſtles were commonly called the eleven. See Matt.28.16. Luke 24.9.33, &c.

V. 15. and he ſaid unto them] Matt. 28. 19. not preſently after this mentioned apparition, but when the Diſciples went into Galilee (Matt. 28. 16.) there to meet Jeſus on the mountain, where he had appointed them.

Go ye into all the world] Not into Judea alone (as Matt. 10. 5, 6) But now the partition wall is broken down, (Epheſ. 2.) and they muſt preach, adminiſter the Sacraments, and confirm the ſame with miracles among the Gentiles alſo.

to every creature] That is, to every nation, as Matthew expreſſeth it. (See 1 Pet. 2. 13.) to all mankind without exception: omni ergo creaturæ prædicatur Evangelium, cum ſoli homini prædicatur, &c. Gregor. hom. 29. in evang. the Goſpel is preached to every creature, when it is preached to man onely, for whom all things on earth were created: this word κτίσις, ſometimes ſignifies the creation of the world: Chapter 10. 7. Romans, 1. 20. Sometimes the things created; Chapter 13. 19 Romans 8. 22. Sometimes all mankind, men and women of all conditions, as here: Chriſt would have them know, that as he is the Creatour of all men, ſo would he now have the gladſome tidings of ſalvation by faith in him, and free remiſſion of ſins, to be republiſhed unto all the Nations of the world: the Goſpel was not now to be ſhut up within the limits of any particular Church; like the dew in Gideons fleece, while the floore was dry, (Iudges 6. 37, 38.) but to be communicated to all: and as it was ſent to all ſo was it entruſted to the care, and Miniſtery of all the Apoſtles, and to their ſucceſſours the Miniſters of the Goſpel: the Hebrewes call man the creature, by way of excellency, or eminency, as being Gods Maſter-piece, among the creatures, on whom he ſet his owne Image.

V. 17. theſe ſignes] Theſe miracles which you ſhall worke where you preach, to confirme your Doctrine, ſhall be ſignes of my preſence with you, and their Faith that believe in my Name.

ſhall follow them that believe] This power of Miracles continued accordingly for a time in the Church, untill Chriſtianity was more publikely profeſſed. See Irenæus l. 2. c. 58. albeit, all believers had not this power to do miracles; yet ſome ſucceſſively had (for many years after the aſcenſion of Chriſt) for the confirmation of others; and it was neceſſary thereto. Ut enim fides creſceret, miraculis fuerat nutrienda, Gregor. Hom. 29. in Evangel. That Faith might grow, it was to be nouriſhed with miracles, as we water new ſet plants, till they have taken good root, then we water no more: ſo did the power and providence of God work here.

V. 19. received up into heaven] Luke 24. 51. Secondly, the Starry Heaven; where all the Starres and Planets which we ſee, move in their proper Orbs. Thirdly, that ſpace which is between the Moon and the Earth; whereof the Birds are called Fowles of the Heaven, Matthew 6. that is, they fly in the Aire. On the Goſpel according to

The Argument.

THe Goſpel is the gladſome tydings of ſalvation by Chriſt: This Goſpel (as the Penman his ſelfe interpreteth, Acts 1. 1.) is the Hiſtory of thoſe things that Ieſus began to do and teach, untill the day that he was taken up, &c. That is as much thereof, as God ſaw good to Reeord by his Miniſtry: that (as the other Evangeliſt ſaith) we might believe that Ieſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and that in believing, we might have life through his Name. Iohn 20, 30, 31. This ſacred Hiſtory was dictated by the Holy Ghoſt, whoſe Penman was Luke.

Luke was of Antioch in Syria, by profeſſion a Phyſitian, (Coloſ. 4. 14.) he was a follower and faithfull Aſſiſtant of Paul (2 Timothy 4. 11.) and ſo became alſo a Phyſitian for the Soul: But who was the firſt Miniſterial means of his Converſion, is not certain: Some thinke he was one of the ſeventy Diſciples: and that other unnamed, Luke 24. 18. who with Cleophas after Chriſts Reſurrection, went to Emaus : If ſo, he had had Chriſt the beſt Teacher: But others thinke Paul converted him at Thebes : But his ſelf beſt ſheweth in his Preface, what Inſtructers he had, thoſe who from the beginning were Eye-witneſſes and Miniſters of the ſame Goſpel: Luke 1. 2. Whence it is evident, that ſome of the Apoſtles inſtructed him in the Myſteries of Salvation by Chriſt, and faithfully related to him this whole Story.

Matthew it ſeemeth wrote to the Hebrewes, and the other three Evangeliſts to the Gentiles in the Greeke Tongue, wherein Luke in an Elegant ſtile, dedicateth two excellent Pieces, (this Goſpel, and the Acts of the Apoſtles) unto Theophilus, an Honourable Perſon, and in him to all the Faithfull, who are lovers of God.

The occaſion of his writing, (whether he were incited thereto by Peter, as ſome think, or, by Paul, as others) was (that which he declareth in his Preface) for as much as many have taken in hand to ſet forth the Story of thoſe things, whereof we are fully perſwaded —— it ſeemed good alſo to me, —— &c. Luke 1. 1. Thus God by the unanimous conſent of a ſufficient number of Witneſſes (writing at divers places, and times) pleaſed to confirm the Truth of the Goſpel unto us.

Concerning the Matter and Subject of this Goſpel, we muſt know, that the Evangeliſt purpoſed to declare, That Ieſus the Sonne of the Virgin Mary, was that promiſed Seed (whoſe fore-running Meſſenger was Iohn Baptiſt, according to the Propheſies :) Whoſe admirable Conception by the Holy Ghoſt, made not againſt the Truth of his Humane Nature, and Nativitie, according to the Fleſh: who in the fulneſſe of time (the Scepter being departed from Iudah) in the fourtie ſecond yeare of the reign of Auguſtus Cæſar, was born in Bethlehem Iudah, grew up to mans ſtature and perfection, undertooke his publicke Miniſtery and Office of the Meſſiah, ſhewing himſelfe in Doctrine and Miracles, (ſpecially, in his glorious Reſurrection from the dead, and Aſcenſion into Heaven) truely, God and Man, in Unity of Perſon, the Saviour and Redeemer of the Elect: All which he relateth in this Order.

1. In the three firſt Chapters, he rehearſeth this Conception, Nativity, and the Witneſſes thereof; to which he annexeth his Genealogy.

2. From the fourth Chapter, to the tenth, he ſetteth downe the preparation to his Miniſtery, in his tentation, the beginning of his Preaching, Miracles, Ordination of Apoſtles, Transfiguration on the Mount, and departure out of Galilee.

3. From the tenth Chapter, to the twentieth, he recordeth what Chriſt did in his laſt paſſage towards Ieruſalem.

4. In the twentieth, and the following Chapter, he telleth what he taught in the Temple, his Diſputes with the Phariſees and Saduces, as alſo of the deſtruction of the City and Republicke of Iſrael, where he inſerteth ſome things concerning his ſecond coming to judement.

5. Thence he cometh to the Hiſtory of his Paſſion, Chap. 22. 23. The concluſion and loweſt degree of his Obedience and Humiliation.

6. The laſt Chapter, containeth the truth of his Reſurrection, his Apparitions to his Diſciples, ſpecially the two going to Emaus, and his glorious Aſcenſion into Heaven, the aſſured Pledge of our intereſt therein, whereof he hath in our Nature taken Livery and Seiſin.

Verſe 1. M*Any have taken in hand*] It ſeemeth that Matthew and Marke wrot not before Luke, had they, he would have ſpoken more reverently concerning them: Whether he mean by many, thoſe counterfeit pieces under the Titles of the Goſpel of Nicodemus, Thomas, according to the Egyptians, or according to the twelve; it is uncertain; becauſe he nameth neither theſe, nor others like: but affirming a full aſſurance of that which he (with the other Holy Evangeliſts writeth, he ſeemeth modeſtly to deny, that others had the ſame.

into the temple of the Lord into that court which was called holy; into which only the Prieſts entred, Exod. 28 43.

V. 10. The whole multitude] See Levit. 16. 17. then aſſembled to the worſhip of God, in that part of the Temple, which vvas called atrium Iudæorum, becauſe thither the Ievvs might come to the publick ſervice of God in the Temple. God could have privately, at his ovvn houſe ſecretly, revealed theſe things to Zechary, concerning Elizabeth his vvives conception of the great fore-runner of Chriſt, Iohn Baptiſt: but it pleaſed him to reſerve the ſame to ſuch a time and place, as might by many witneſſes of thoſe things, which then and there fell out, render this viſion of Zechary, more famous and publick for the ſtirring up the minds of the people, to attend the event thereof.

without] in that part of the Temple, which was called the peoples Court. See Leviticus 16. 17. 1 Kings 7. 12.

the time of Incenſe] See Exod. 30. 1. That is, while the Prieſt, according to the Law, burned Incenſe within: this Incenſe was to be offered morning and evening by the Prieſt, when he dreſſed the Lamps, Exodus 30. 7, 8. not without a ſingular myſtery; for the Lamps ſignified the light of Gods Word, the Incenſe prayers, therewith to be joyned, and that the prayers of Gods people are a ſweet ſpiritual Incenſe acceptable unto him (Pſalm 141 2.) being preſented by Chriſt our High-Prieſt miniſtring in the true Tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, Hebr. 8. 2. appearing in his preſence for us, Hebr. 9. 24. offered in the golden Cenſer of the Angel of the Covenant Chriſt. See Revel. 8. 3. 4. theſe, as that Incenſe offered morning and evening, ought to be continual. 1 Theſ. 5:17. as our High-Prieſt, ever liveth to make interceſſion for us, Hebrews 7. 25.

V. 12. And fear fell upon him] The ſudden and unexpected ſight of the Angel not only troubled, but terrified him. So Dan. 10. 8. it the appearance of one Angel ſent to comfort, ſo much affrighted this juſt man, in the work of his Holy calling, what dread and terrour ſhall fall upon the wicked when Chriſt, (God and Man) ſhall appear with all his Angels to judge the wicked, for all their wilfull acts of impiety?

V. 13. Thou ſhalt call his name John] this is not only a prediction but a precept, and the impoſition of a name before the nativity, was ever an argument of Gods marking thoſe parties to ſome excellencie, See Matth 1. 21. this name ſignifieth the grace of God: intimating that which ſhould be in his perſon and office: See note on Iohn 1. 6. So that Zacharies prayer was heard in that the Meſſias ſhould now come: and in that Elizabeth, for whom he had often prayed, ſhould alſo conceive and bear a Son.

V. 14. And thou ſhalt have joy, &c.] So great, as that it ſhall break out into rejoycing, for that thou ſhalt obtain a deſired iſſue, above hope and the common courſe of nature, and for that thou ſhalt know the ſingular office, to which this childe is aſſigned, that is, to be the immediate Herauld to proclaim the Meſſias, and the fore-runner to prepare his wayes. And this joy ſhall not be onely domeſtick, but alſo publick, as concerning the intereſt of all thoſe which expect Chriſt the Saviour of Iſrael.

V. 15. great in the ſight of the Lord] That is, God ſhall highly eſteem him, and make him excellent.

ſhall neither drinke wine nor ſtrong drinke] σίκερα, which Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. interpret πᾶν τὸ μέθην ἐμποιεῖν δυνάμενον, any thing which may make drunken: So alſo Jerome lib. 2. ep. 14. Nepotiano. The word is taken from the Hebrew שכר inebriatus fuit, thence שכר, ſhechar, and in the Syriac שכרא, Levit. 10. 9. Aaron and his ſons were forbid to drink יין wine, and alſo שכר which the 70 give σίκερα; as here, ſo where Hanna ſaid ſhe had drunk neither wine nor שכר ſtrong drink: the 70 give it μέθυσμα the Syriac by שכר underſtand alſo, fœdum, deformem, a filthy or deformed perſon: ſuch are they who are overcome with drinke: and therefore the Lacedemonians were wont to make their Helots, or Slaves drunken; that themſelves being ſober, and obſerving τὴν ἐκείνων ἀσχημοσύνην their uncomely and filthy behaviour, it might be a remedy to them; cauſing them to loath that ſin, the effects whereof were ſo ſhameful and loathſome. See Clemens Alexandrinus Pædag. lib. 3. cap. 8. The meaning of the Angel is here, that John ſhould be conſecrated unto God, as a Nazarite. See Numb. 6. 3. Judges 13. 4 5. 1 Sam. 1. 11.

filled with the Holy Ghoſt] That is, he ſhall have an abundant meaſure of the Spirit of Sanctification even from his mothers wombe; and in his ripe Age, for the execution of his charge. See Jeremiah, 1. 5. Galatians, 1. 15. Seeing then Infants are capable of Grace, and the Holy Ghoſt, we may ſay for them as Peter for his hearers, Acts 10. 47. Can any Man forbid Water, that theſe ſhould not be Baptized, which have received the Holy Ghoſt, as well as we? See note on Acts 10. 47.

V. 16 many of the Children of Iſrael.] See Malachi 4. 6. He ſhall be the meanes of their Converſion, by his Preaching, accompanied with the power of the Holy Ghoſt, to make it Effectuall. See Acts, 26. 18. 1 Corinthians, 3. 5, 6. James 5. 19 20.

V. 17. he ſhall goe before him, &c.] That is, immediately before Chriſt the Meſſias, the King of Iſrael, to declare his coming, and preſence. See John 1. 29. Malachi, 4. 5. Matthew, 11. 14 in the ſpirit and power of Elias] That is, with as great a meaſure of grace, and gifts of Gods Spirit, to make his Miniſtery powerfull. See Matth 11. 11, 14. Mal. 4. 6.

turn the hearts of the fathers to their children] By his miniſtry, the unnaturall, degenerate, and wicked children, ſhall be converted, and become obedient children to their fathers, and to the Church of Chriſt; ſo, as their fathers ſhall acknowledge them to be their children indeed: For the diviſion, which followeth the Goſpel, that is, an accidental effect, which the corruption of man produceth, and not the Goſpel of peace.

to the wiſdom] ἐν φρονήσει, Here ἐν is put for εἰς. So the Interpreter of the Syriac, ad cognitionem rectorum, the knowledge of right things. Jerome, on Mal. 4. giveth the meaning. Ut credant poſteri eorum in Dominum Salvatorem in quem & illi crediderunt, that their poſterity may believe in the Lord their Saviour, in whom (Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob) themſelves belived; the whole ſenſe is, by the example of their holy Fathers, they ſhall be wiſe and believe, and ſo be of one heart and conſent with their fathers.

V. 18. For I am an old man &c.] Conſidering the ordinary courſe of nature, he was ſlow in beliving ſo great a miracle. Abraham laying aſide all natural reaſon, believed above hope. See Rom. 4. 17.

V. 9. I am Gabriel] גבריאל fortitudo Dei. This name ſignifieth the power of God: he putteth him in minde, that he was the ſame Angel, who ſome hundred years before, was ſet to the Prophet Daniel, to declare the time of Chriſts coming, Dan. 8. 16. Dan. 9. 21. that he might aſſure him of the fulfilling of the ſame, now in the fulneſſe of time.

that ſtand in the preſence of God] This Hebraiſme, borrowed from thoſe who wait on Kings, importeth a readineſſe to adminiſter or ſerve. See 1 Kings 10. 8. Prov. 22. 29.

V. 20. thou ſhalt be dumb] Becauſe thou deſireſt a ſigne; this ſhal be both a puniſhment of thy incredulity, and a ſigne to confirm this faith, as Cryſologus Ser 90. ſaith, Ut ex te & in te credendi regulam conſequaris: that from thy ſelf, and in thy ſelf, thou muſt attain a rule of believing.

V. 21. waited for Zachary] For he was to diſmiſſe them with a bleſſing. See Numb. 6. 23. Now they waited longer than ordinary, without the holy place, to which the people of the Jews were to reſort, as verſe 10.

V. 22. he could not ſpeak] Not onely becauſe a marvellous ſtupor of fear had invaded him, but becauſe God had, for the time, taken away his faculty of ſpeaking, for a ſigne unto him (that he might believe) and to the people, that at the preaching of Chriſt now at hand, their Prieſthood ſhould be ſilenced.

they perceived that he had ſeen a viſion] By his ſilence, pale countenance, beckning with, and lifting up his hand toward Heaven, or the Holy place whence he came, by theſe or the like means God would prepare the people to conceive an high opinion of John the forerunner of Chriſt.

V. 23. were accompliſhed] At Jeruſalem he was to officiate one whole week. See 2 Kings 11. 1. Chron. 9. 25. which ended, ſhe went home.

V. 24. hid her ſelf] She kept her chamber, or otherwiſe concealed her miraculous conception ſo long, until it was evident, and out of doubt that ſhe had indeed conceived.

V. 25. to take away my reproach] For barrenneſſe was counted a diſhonour to the women. See 1 Sam 1. 6, 11.

V. 26. the ſixth moneth] Reckoning from Elizabeths conception.

V. 27. to a virgin eſpouſed] That is, promiſed in marriage: a woman ſo promiſed was ſaid μνηστεύεσθαι. See Mat. 1. 18. and here, chap. 2. 5.

of the houſe of David] Of the ſtock and linage of David, (ſo ſome Greek Copies have it) as was alſo Joſeph, Luke 2. 4. Matth. 1. 16.

V. 28. highly favoured] Or gratiouſly accepted, much graced (ſee verſe 30.) freely beloved: as the Apoſtle uſeth the word, Epheſ. 1. 6. honoured with this ſingular grace, to be the Mother of the Meſſias: therefore he ſaid ſhe was bleſſed among women: he ſaid not, be honoured as God: οὔτε γὰρ Θεὸς ἡ Μαρία, ſaith Epiphanius adv, hæreſ. l. 3. tom. 2. 23. for neither was Mary a God.

V. 29. ſhe was troubled] At the appearance of the heavenly Majeſty which probably ſhined in the Angel, and at that ſtrange ſalutation.

V. 30. thou haſt found favour] Thou art in Gods favour, who hath freely choſen thee to this honour which thou thoughteſt not of.

V. 31. and behold thou ſhalt conceive] See Iſa. 7. 14.

his name Jeſus] See Matthew. 1. 21. a Saviour of his people.

V. 32. the ſon of the higheſt] So he ſhall be called, and ſo is he from all eternity: the onely Son of God by nature: God manifeſted in the fleſh, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

the throne of his father David] The ſpiritual and eternal kingdom over his Church, prefigured in Davids temporal kingdom over Iſrael. See Iſaiah 9. 7. Jerem. 30. 9. Ezekiel 34. 24. Ezekiel 37. 24. Hoſea 3. 5. thus the Angel declareth, that this is he in whom the Propheſie of Amos 9. 11. concerning the raiſing up of the decayed tabernacle of David, ſhould be fulfilled.

V. 33, and he ſhall reign] See Daniel 7. 14. Micha 4. 7. This ſpiritual kingdom of Chriſt is begun in this world, in, and over the Saints, by the grace of his Spirit, regenerating and governing them; and ſhal be perpetuated in his kingdom of glory; uniting them unto himſelf the head of his Church, and making them thereby fully and eternally bleſſed,

V. 34 How ſhal this be? This queſtion was not of diffidence, but rather of admiration: for though the propheſie declared this myſtery of Chriſts incarnation by a virgin, Iſaiah 7. 14. and of the branch ariſing out of the decayed ſtock of Jeſſe, Iſaiah 11. 1. yet the manner how was not fully underſtood; herein ſhe deſireth reſolution: and it ſeemeth they were not to come together preſently after betrothing.

V. 35. overſhadow thee] The extraordinary power of God ſhall effect this: it ſeemeth an alluſion to that, 1 Kings 8. 12.

holy thing] Chriſt without all ſin: as God, the eternal Son of the Father: as man, conceived of a ſanctified maſſe, or ſubſtance without all ſin.

V. 36, thy couſin Elizabeth] See note on verſe 4.

who was called barren] Elizabeth who was known or noted to be barren, is now ſix moneths gone with childe.

V. 37. nothing ſhall be unpoſſible] See Geneſ. 18. 14. Jeremiah 32. 17. Matthew 19. 26. in the Greek it is πᾶν ῥῆμα, every word; that is after the Hebrew expreſſion, no word. So Pſalm 143. 2. כל-חי, all living; that is, none living: and ſo they put דבר dabar, a word, for a work, or thing, as Geneſ. 24. 50. from the Lord proceedeth הדבר, 70. τὸ πρᾶγμα, the thing. In theſe words, the Angel lifteth up the virgins minde to the conſideration of Gods omnipotency, that ſhe might reſt ſecure concerning the fulfilling of the promiſe, which he brought her.

V. 38. behold the handmaid of the Lord] This is alſo an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, importing a ready obedience and ſubmiſſion. See 1 Samuel 3, 4. הנני hinneni, behold I, or here am I, Iſaiah 6. 8.

V. 39. to the hill countrey] To Zacharie and Elizabeths houſe, which probably was Kirioth-Arba, or Hebron aſſigned to prieſts, See Joſh. 14. 15. Joſh. 21. 11.

V. 41. The babe leaped] This extraordinary motion was by the inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt, enabling Elizabeth to know and propheſie the incarnation of Chriſt; (for no otherwiſe could ſhe know it than by divine revelation) and ſhewing a ſecret correſpondence between Chriſt and John rejoycing at his coming.

V. 42. bleſſed art thou] So the angel pronounced verſe 28. ſhe was bleſſed, in that God not onely vouchſafed her the honour of conceiving her Saviour in her womb but chiefly for that he gave her faith to believe in her Son and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. See verſe 45. and Chap. 11. 27, 28.

V. 43 whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord, &c] Elizabeth reſpecting Gods great favours conferred on the Virgin Mary, yeildeth her due reſpect and honour, and acknowledgeth this viſit an honour undue to her ſelf; yet doth ſhe not adore her to Gods diſhonour, we may neither undervalue Gods graces in others, nor idol them for the ſame. The excellencies of the creatures are ſo farre forth well reſpected and reverenced, as no interpoſition thereof cloudeth Gods Majeſty.

V. 44. as ſoon as the voice, &c.] See note on verſe 41.

V. 45. bleſſed is ſhe that believed] By the inſtinct of the Holy Ghoſt, ſhe declareth wherein the bleſſedneſſe of Mary (as alſo of all the elect) conſiſteth; that is true faith apprehending all the promiſes in Chriſt, which ſhall certainly be fulfilled.

V. 46. My ſoul doth magnifie] That is, extolleth ond praiſeth: not as hypocrites uſe in words onely, but with the inward affections of my ſoul. So ſhe attributeth all the favours received, to the meere and free mercie of God, leaving nothing to her own merits.

V. 47. and my ſpirit hath rejoyced in God] My ſoul hath an inward joy in Gods mercy and ſalvation: there can be no ſolid rejoycing until we belive God to be our Saviour.

V. 48. ſhall call me bleſſed] For this favour freely beſtowed on me, which all ages ſhal ſpeak of: ſhe ſaith not, ſhal call me Queen of Heaven, Lady, &c. much leſſe, ſhall adore me: See note on verſes 28, 42, 43.

V. 49 for he that is mighty, &c.] That is future ages ſhall ſo acknowledge me bleſſed, as attributing all which God hath done for me, to his free mercy, not any merit of mine: there can be nothing more injurious to this bleſſed Saint, than ſacrilegiouſly to put on her the ſpoiles taken from Chriſt her Saviour: here is no, roga patrem, jube natum, &c. See Offic. Beatæ Mariæ.

and holy is his name] The name of God ſometimes here importeth teth God himſelfe, as he manifeſteth himſelfe to us, See Matthew 6. 9. and ἅγιον holy ſignifieth alſo venerable and ſacred, or ſeparated from things vulgar, or prophane: ſo ought we to ſpeak and thinke of the holy God, with all reverence. See Exod. 20. 7.

V. 50. his mercy is on them that fear him] This ſpeech ſeemeth taken from the covenant of God: Gen. 17. 7. and Exodus 20. 6. Deuter. 7. 9. Pſalm 105. 8. God is ever one, unchangable, and therefore conſtant in his favours, as appeared in the example of Abraham, and his ſeed; but becauſe all are not children of Abraham, who according to the fleſh were deſcended of Abraham, but the faithfull and holy onely; therefore ſhe here reſtraineth the effect of the promiſe to thoſe who fear God. See Pſalm 103. 17. in vain do they boaſt that God is their father, who degenerate from the faith, and ſanctity of thoſe ſaints, whom he owned for his children. See 1 Pet. 1. 17. under this word fear him, are underſtood, faith, obedience, and all piety, and true religion.

V. 51. he hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arme] ἐποίησε κράτος: ſo Pſalm 118. 11. עשה חיל, hoſe chail, ἐποίησε δύναμιν. 70. that is, δυνατῶς, powerfully. So Numb. 24. 18. and Iſrael עשה חיל, 70. ἐποίησεν ἐν ἰσχύι, ſhall do valiantly, which phraſe is ſometimes uſed for the atchievement of victories, wherein might and power is ſhewed. So the Syriac interpreter giveth the words as if it were ἐνίκησεν, he overcame, &c. the arme of the Lord importeth his power, commonly in oppoſition to all other helpes, as Iſaiah 59. 16. See Pſalm 89. 13. Iſaiah 51. 9.

he hath ſcattered the proud in, &c.] God ſheweth his power in deſcending and lifting up the humble: the proud he ſcattereth in their imaginations and vain counſels, as the winde the chaffe: See Pſalm 33. 10. 2 Samuel 15. 34. Job 5. 12. 1 Peter 5. 6. Iſaiah 8. 10. Gen. 11. 8, 9. Iſaiah 14. 13, 14. Ezek. 28. 2, 7.

V. 52. he hath put down the mighty] 1 Sam. 2. 6. Job. 5. 11. that is, Kings, Princes, &c. as appeareth not only in the examples of Nebuchadnezar, Saul, &c. but many others: and it is the ſame power and providence of God to exalt and ſet up whom he pleaſeth, as we ſee in David, Eſter, Ioſeph, Mordoche, &c. and the B. Virgin here ſpeaking.

V. 53. he hath filled the hungry] See Pſal. 34. 10. 1 Samuel 2. 5. in this alſo he ſetteth out the divine and good providence of God, diſpoſing of all perſons, eſtates, and conditions humane.

V. 54. in remembrance of his mercy] See Jerem. 31. 3. 20. This is accommodate to mans underſtanding, who then properly remembreth, when he remindeth or calleth to minde and memory, that which was before out of minde and forgotten: which cannot be properly ſpoken of God, who cannot forget, the meaning is, that although God might ſeem, in the long time of Iſraels affliction, to have forgotten his promiſe made to Abraham, and the Fathers; concerning the covenant made with them, and concerning their Meſſiah, yet in the appointed time he maketh it appear in the fulfilling thereof, that he never forgot it nor them.

V. 55. as he ſpake to our fathers] Gen. 17. 9, 10. Pſalm 132. 11, 12.

to his ſeed for ever] That is, to the faithful and holy, See Gal. 3. 16. 26, 27, 29.

V. 56. about three moneths] Until her delivery; probably that ſhe might ſee that fulfilled, which the Angel propoſed to her, for the confirmation of her faith.

V. 57. and ſhe brought forth a ſon] So God ever fulfilleth his promiſes in good time.

V. 58 rejoyced with her] This is that holy ſympathy which God commandeth, Rom. 12. 15.

V. 59 on the eighth day] See Gen. 17. 12. Levit. 12. 3. not without an excellent myſtery was this Sacrament to be given on the eighth day; intimating the abſolute circumciſion of the heart, and taking away all corruptions of fleſh and blood, ſinnes and ſinfull affections, in the ſabbath and reſt to come in Chriſt, Heb. 4. 9.

they called him Zacharias] They who were to circumciſe him, as the common cuſtom was, called him by his fathers name.

V. 60. he ſhall be called Iohn] It is likely that Zacharie had by writing enformed Elizabeth concerning the whole viſion, and impoſition of this name by the Angel. See note on verſe 13.

V. 61. none of thy kindred] They relyed on the cuſtome; which (had their aſſertion been true) may never be followed againſt the word and commandement of God.

V. 62. they made ſignes to his father] To end the controverſie, they do by ſignes conſult his father.

V. 63. he asked for] Or required: that is, made ſignes to have brought him writing tables: ſo underſtand, ſaying, to be writing, his name is Iohn.

V. 64. his mouth was opened] His voice and uſe of ſpeech was reſtored him again.

and praiſed God] Doubtleſſe, acknowledging his dumneſſe, a juſt puniſhment of his ſlowneſſe to believe: the righteous are not aſhamed to confeſſe their faults to Gods Honour: and this ſerved to enforme the preſent, that this child was, (as conceived out of the ordinary courſe) ſo promiſed by an heavenly Oracle.

V. 65. and fear came on all] That is, a reverend conſideration of all theſe things: ſo ought we to meditate on Gods works, as that they may ſeriouſly affect us,

V. 66. all they that heard] All, that is, many: poſſibly many alſo forgat them: as it commonly cometh to paſſe, in things moſt obſervable and divine.

the hand of the Lord was with him] He profited ſo, as that there appeared a ſingular power, and manifeſt grace of God in him.

V. 67. filled with the holy Ghoſt] Inſpired with an excellent meaſure of the Spirit of propheſie concerning the myſtery of our ſalvation by Chriſt.

V. 68. viſited and redeemed] He ſpeaketh of that which was ſpeedily to come, as if it were done, to ſhew the certainty of Gods counſels and promiſes: to viſit, is out of a care and purpoſe to relieve, comfort, and help: though God be ever preſent with us, he doth not alwayes manifeſt it: but when he ſheweth in ſome eminent effect, that he hath care of his people, then he is ſaid to viſit them: ſo alſo when he puniſheth, he is ſaid to viſit. See Jerem. 14. 10. Amos 3. 2. Pſal. 89. 33. Iſa. 27. 1. Iſa. 29. 6. Here he viſited to redeem his people from ſinne and damnation, which he did by the Paſſion of Chriſt.

V. 69. an horne of ſalvation] That is, δύναμιν καὶ βασιλείαν σωτηρίας, Theophylact, power and a ſaving kingdom: the Hebrews ſignified, ſtrength and defence againſt enemies (as Pſalm 132. 17, 18. Pſalm 89. 17, 13.) by an horn of ſalvation.

V 70. as he ſpake by the mouth of his holy Prophets] Who living in divers ages, yet with one conſent taught concerning ſalvation by Chriſt onely: this doctrine was from the beginning: God ſpake by the mouth of all his Prophets, Heb. 1. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 21. See Chap. 24. 44.

ſince the world began] As Acts 3. 21. and Pſal. 119. 52. מעולם, meholam, which the 70. give ἀπ' αἰῶνος, (the word here uſed) of old, or from the beginning of time: from the firſt time that God began to ſpeak by any Prophet. Sometimes the ſame word importeth eternity.

V. 71. That we ſhould be ſaved; &c.] This declareth the end of Chriſts coming: this ſalvation we muſt underſtand to be from our ſpiritual enemies; Satan and ſin, with whom we have truceleſſe war: See Epheſ. 6. 12. &c.

V. 72. To remember his holy covenant] Becauſe in the long affliction of his people, his promiſe might have ſeemed forgotten; but God ever remembreth and in the appointed time performeth his promiſes in Chriſt: hath he promiſed remiſſion of ſins? he performeth in Chriſt. Hath he promiſed eternal life? he performeth it in Chriſt: therefore was the book of the Law (containing all Gods promiſes) ſprinkled with the blood of the ſacrifice (Exodus 24. 7, 8. Hebrews 9. 19.) which ſignified the blood of Chriſt, in whom all theſe promiſes were fulfilled.

V. 73. and the oath which, &c.] See Gen. 12. 3. Gen 17. 4. Gen. 22. 16. Heb. 6. 13. That is, his covenant which he confirmed with an oath; the Syriac giveth it —— juramenti quod juravit Abraha. See Hebrews 6. 13, 14, 16, 17; 18. Geneſ. 22. 16. and 17. &c.

V. 74. that we being delivered] The efficient cauſe of our deliverance and ſafety is Gods free mercy: the finall our ſerving him in holineſſe. See 1 Theſ. 4. 7. 1 Cor. 6. 20. Titus 2. 11. Rom. 12. 1. Epheſ. 1. 3. We are delivered from ſervile fear, (Rom. 8. 15.) in our peace with God through faith apprehending the merit of Chriſt for our juſtification, Rom. 5. 1. without which none can rightly ſerve God: they who in doubtful anxiety of minde know not whether God accepteth their ſervice or no, can never be accepted: for without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him, who loveth willing and cheerfull ſacrifice: firſt then the conſcience muſt be quieted in aſſurance of Gods mercy, that we may ſerve him, as David begging a mercifull audience for his prayer, ſaith, if thou Lord ſhouldeſt mark iniquities: O Lord, who ſhall ſtand? but there is forgiveneſſe with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared: Pſalm 130. 3, 4. when God giveth us peace of conſcience; he ſweetly inviteth us to come unto him cheerfully, and to call upon him in our wants, with a filiall confidence: as Romans 8. 15, 16. whereas, without hope of attaining, who can pray cheerfully? Tolle Gubernatori ſpem perveniendi, & in mediis fluctibus incertus errabit; take away from the Maſter of the ſhip hope of ſafe arrivall, and being uncertain, he will let his veſſel goe adrift, whither winde and tide will carry her. Now for the preſent, our freedom from fear, is as our immunitie from ſin, not but that ſome Cananites are ſtill left to exerciſe us: but in that we are ſecure of victory in Chriſt. See Rom. 7. 25. 1 Cor. 15. 57.

V. 75. in holineſſe] See 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16, 17. We muſt be conſtant all our life: it is not enough to begin well, we muſt ſerve him in holineſſe towards him, who ſearcheth the hearts, and righteouſneſſe and equity in juſt dealing with men, who are witneſſes of our actions: before them alſo our light muſt ſhine, to Gods glory, Matth. 5. 16.

before him] Before the all-ſeeing God, to whom no hypocrite can be acceptable. See Pſal 16. 8.

V. 76. go before the face] See Mal. 3. 1. He was the voice of the cryer, to prepare the way, and proclaim the preſence of the King of kings. John 1. 23. the friend of the Bridegroom Chriſt. John 3. 29. the burning and ſhining light, (Math. 11. 9, 10. 11, John 5. 35.) born before Chriſt: and as Nazianzen orat. 42. ſaith, τῷ προδρόμῳ λύχνῳ τὸ φῶς ἀκολουθεῖ τὸ ὑπέρλαμπρον, that moſt excellent light (Chriſt) followeth (John) the foregoing light.

V. 77. to give knowledge of ſalvation] This is to prepare the way of the Lord: to teach them the will of God, concerning the free pardon of their ſins in Chriſt, which is the ſum of the Goſpel.

V. 78. the day ſpring] The Sun of righteouſneſſe Chriſt Jeſus, Mal. 4. 2. the worlds ſun riſeth from the low Horizon; But Chriſt deſcended from the incomprehenſible height of Majeſtie, far above all creatures, to give us light of ſalvation: even from the Father: (John 3. 13.) as the beames from the ſun; he had not his riſing from the earth, where (as man) he was conceived and born: ſee John 16. 28.

V. 79. To give light] Or to appear to: See Iſa. 9 1. Mat. 4. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 19. until Chriſt our light ſhine in our hearts, there can be nothing but deathful ignorance therein.

in the way of peace] That is, ſalvation and true happineſs, in our peace with God, and peace of conſcience.

V. 80. ſtrong in ſpirit] In the gifts and graces of the Spirit: whereby it appeared that God prepared him to a ſingular office: See Chap. 2. 40. 52.

in the deſerts] The places of Judea which were leaſt inhabited, as are great forreſts: the rough mountainous countrey, as verſe 40. See 1 Kings 2. 34. 2 Kings 3. 8. Joſhua 15. 61. not that John Baptiſt lived like an Eremite, from all ſociety of men, but in ſome obſcure places, neer Jordan: (as appeareth Luke 3. 3.) until he was called to preach repentance, and to baptize. See Matth. 3. 1, &c. Luke 3. 1. &c. that he might do that office to which God aſſigned him, in manifeſting and declaring Chriſt now exhibited to Iſrael, John 1. 31.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. IN thoſe dayes] Some ſay in the fourty ſecond year of Auguſtus Cæſar, Emperour of Rome, in the thirty third year of Herod the Great, Sonne of Antipater: (Epiphanius Hæreſ. 51. N. 22.) then came the promiſed Shilo, the Meſſias, the King of peace: that Jacobs propheſie might appear fulfilled, Gen. 49. 9. in that the Scepter and kingly power was now departed from Judah; as alſo that his kingdom was ſpirituall, not of this world, to whoſe princes he would be tributary, and ſubject, thereby declaring, that he came not to take away the order of their government, but to eſtabliſh it.

all the world] All that which is ſubject to the Romans; theſe weſtern parts of the world.

V. 2. this taxing was firſt made] This, firſt, relateth to other taxes following, whether under Cyrenius, as ſome think, or others: ἀπογραφὴ; is here, taking in writing, the pole or name of every region, city, family, and perſon, that they might taxe, or ceſſe them by the head: this taxing was firſt made, when Auguſtus Cæſar, being deſirous to know the wealth and power of his Empire; (though perhaps not with any preſent purpoſe of levying moneys thereby) among others gave commiſſion to Cyrenius to tax Syria.

when Cyrenius was Governour of Syria] That is, Sulpitius Quirinus. See Joſephus Antiq lib. 17. cap. 15 and lib. 18. cap. 1. was Governour, ἡγεμονεύοντος, governing: there were other governours in ordinary, to whom this commiſſion of taxing was not given by Cæſar; but to Quirinus or Cyrenius, jure extraordinario: the Emperours aſſigned great and chief men of the Empire to this office: ſo Druſus, this Quirinus, and others were commiſſionated by Auguſtus, ſo the great Germanicus, by Tiberius, Tacit. Annal. Libro primo, & cætera: this ἡγεμονία, and ἡγεμονεύειν, is uſed to import; any great power and authority in the Common-wealth: therefore in the Scripture ſometimes the Roman Emperour is called ἡγεμὼν: ſometimes it ſignifieth Cæſars Deputy, See Matthew 27. 2. &c. So that Cyrenius was not now Preſident of Syria in ordinary, as afterward, after Archelaus, when hee was made Governour, both to govern that Province, and to tax and levy monies on them; whereof you may reade more in Suetonius, and Lin. Roman. hiſt.

V. 3. into his own city] That is, into the chief town or city of their own tribe: as the Metropolis or chief city of Benjamin, was J*eruſalem*; of Juda, Bethleem: hither came J*oſeph* and Mary, though they dwelt at Nazareth of Galilee: Herein appeareth the admirable providence of God, (who doth according to his will in the army of Heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, Daniel 4. 4. 35.) by a ſecret inſtinct moving the minde of Cæſar dreaming of nothing leſſe, to give that very command which muſt occaſion the fulfilling Gods Word by the Prophet concerning Chriſt the Meſſias's birth at Bethlehem-Judah, So men ſhall do Gods will when they intend it not.

V. 4. city of David] The city where David, Ioſeph, and Chriſt was born, of the linage of David. See John 7. 42. Mic. 5. 2. Mat 2. 5. 1 Sam. 16. 1.

V. 5. his eſpouſed wife] Chapter 1. 27. ſhe is called a Virgin eſpouſed, and here an eſpouſed Wife: which is to ſhew that Ioſeph had (according to the Angels word) taken her to wife, Matthew 1. 24. who was before betrothed to him. For eſpouſal is but marriage promiſed, or contracted: and marriage is eſpouſal accompliſhed: therefore ſhe is here called his eſpouſed wife; becauſe he had married her: he had not known her. Matthew 1. 25.

V. 6. while they were there] While Ioſeph and Mary were at Bethlehem, to be taxed, for ſuch was the great multitude of people to be taxed, and to give in their names to the officers thereto authorized, that they could not be preſently diſpatched and diſmiſſed; but here was the ſecret providence of God diſpoſing of all things ſo, as that the truth of his promiſe concerning the place of Chriſt's natiaity, might appear fulfilled.

the dayes were accompliſhed] The time was come that Mary ſhould be delivered; thus God uſed the command of Cæſar, and iſſuing out of warrants by his officers, to ſummon the people to appear before them in their ſeveral cities to which they belonged, to that very end which himſelf had propoſed, and many ages before declared by the Prophet, that Chriſt the Meſſias of the ſeed of David, ſhould be borne at Bethlehem the city of David: men purſue their own deſignes, ignorant of that which God will bring to paſſe thereby.

V. 7. her firſt-born] He is ſaid to be the firſt-born, before whom was none elder by the ſame parents, although he be the onely Son, after whom there is no ſecond born, as Theophylact well obſerveth.

no room for them] With ſo great a confluence of people coming to be taxed, all the rooms of the Inne were taken up; onely they found room in a Stable.

V. 8. keeping watch, &c.] ἀγραυλοῦντες, that is, (as Theophylact expreſſeth it) ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ αὐλιζόμενοι καὶ διάγοντες, lying or being without in the fields, intending their flocks which were otherwiſe in danger of wild beaſts, or theeves. Some would hence conclude againſt the ancient cuſtome of the Church, obſerving the Nativity of Chriſt on the twenty fifth of December; ſuppoſing it improbable that ſhepherds would in ſo cold a part of the year abide with their flocks in the fields; not conſidering the diverſities of air according to the diverſity of climates, neither the vigilant induſtry of countrey men, when neceſſity requireth. The learned Iſ. Caſaubon, Exercit. 2. ad Annal. Ecleſ. B. An. 1. Num. 14. well adviſeth, Quare vetuſta traditio Eccleſiæ non temere nobis rejicienda, it being but a cold argument which can be grounded on this ſuppoſition, that the ſhepherds would watch their flocks onely in Summer; the ſame hazard and neceſſity of feeding being alſo in Winter, if not greater.

V. 9. came upon them] The Syriac Interpreter giveth it, came unto them: ἐπέστη αὐτοῖς. It importeth ſuch an apparition as ſuddenly came upon them, and unexpectedly, they little thinking of any ſuch thing; that it might appear to be no compact.

glory of the Lord] Such an heavenly brightneſſe and light that the amazed ſhepherds might by ſo unuſual glory, perceive that he was the Angel of the Lord: Thus God adorned his Meſſenger, to the end, the meſſage by him ſent, might deeply affect their mindes, and be received no otherwiſe, than as from the mouth of the Lord. Had the Angel appeared with leſſe majeſty and authority (as ſometimes Angels appeared) perhaps this great myſtery would not have been ſo readily believed: we more eaſily credit that which we belive cometh from Heaven: ſo that this glory was here neceſſary for the confirmation of theſe witneſſes faith; who were to finde the Meſſias in ſo low an eſtate of his humiliation.

V. 10. fear not] As if he had ſaid; I am not ſent unto you from an angry Judge, nor with any ſad meſſage, but with joyful news; ſo ſaid the angel to Zechary, chap. 1. 13. fear not. In great and ſodain fears, the minde cannot be attentive to that which is ſpoken, therefore the Angel firſt allayeth their fear, that they may be enabled to make a right uſe of his meſſage.

great joy which ſhall be to all people] The greateſt joy which ever ſounded in the ears of Men or angels, as concerning a true and eternal bleſſedneſſe in Chriſt : and that which concerneth all the people of God,of all nations; all which are,or ſhal be, Jews and Gentiles,bond and free : all believers.

V. 11. for unto you is born this day, &c.] For your good and ſalvation. So Iſaiah 9. 6. unto us a childe is born, unto us a ſon is given, &c. this is that great myſtery of godlineſs, God manifeſted in the fleſh; 1 Timothy 3. 16. this day, after ſo many ages, foretold by the Prophets, ſignified by the legall ceremonies, expected by the faithfull; in this afflicted condition of Iſrael, now he is come : this day he is born : this is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoyce and be glad in it, Pſalm 118. 24.

a Saviour] See Mat . 21.1. Chriſt the Lord, the promiſed Meſſias, both ſignified anointed : the only Mediator between God and man. Chriſt our Saviour,God and man ; the Angels Lord and preſerver, and mans Redeemer.

V. 12. this ſhall be a ſigne] That they might not be offended and think themſelves deluded, when they ſhould finde Chriſt the Saviour in ſo poor a worldly condition , the Angel preventeth that before hand, ſhewing them how they ſhould finde him of the heavenly hoſt] The Hebrews uſed to call companies of Angels מחנה אלהים machane elohim, Gen.32. 2. 70 παρεμβολὴ Θεοῦ; the tents, or hoſt of God : and צבא השמים zeba haſhamaiim,the hoſt of Heaven, 1 Kings 22.19. and he is called the Lord of Hoſts, Pſalm 24.&c.

V. 13. with the angel a multitude] For the more evident confirmation of the truth by ſo many witneſſes, and their faith by ſo glorious a company.

prayſing God] Thus God would have this publique ſervice (for ſo their multitude made it) performed by all that have knowledge of, and intereſt in the birth of Chriſt : as to manifeſt his mercy and truth, ſo to condemn their ſtupid ingratitude, who perverſly refuſe to joyn in this duty : as if general precepts in Gods word, right reaſon,and the examples of men and angels inſpired by Gods Spirit choſen witneſſes of our Saviours nativity, and for this ſame purpoſe ſent by God himſelf from Heaven, that they might thus celebrate that day,were not ſufficient warrant to lead them to imitation, and joyning in an holy harmony with them.

V. 14. Glory to God] Let God be glorified,in mans reconciliation to him. Or they congratulate and rejoyce praiſing God for both theſe.

in the higheſt] In Heaven; Hebr. במרום bammarom, on high, Pſal.93.4 So the Syriac hence hath במרומא (in excelſis) bamraume.

on earth peace] See on Luke 19.38 and at this time all the world was at peace. By peace the Hebrews alſo ſignified,proſperity,health, and ſalvation, here was peace come, (and declared by the Angel) to the inhabitants of the world,through Chriſt now born; therefore verſe 11 .he is called, the Saviour. See Col. 1.13.14. 20. this peace is here principally meant.

good will towards men] The free mercy of God towards men and love and good will of one man towards another : whereas ſinfull man was at enmity with God; in Chriſt he is reconciled. See Rom. 5.10. Coloſ 1 20,21.

V. 15. the ſhepherds] Gr. the men : ſhepherds, that is, the men which were ſhepherds.

and ſee this thing] τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦτο, this word : ſo the Hebrews put דבר dabar, a word, pro rebus verbo celebratis, as was noted, cap. 1. 37. for the things ſpoken, 1 Kings 17. 9,21. &c. So here, this word ſignifieth, this thing which the Angel told us. See verſe 19. and on Deut.cap.1.37.

V. 16. came with haſte] Neither the hazard of their flocks,length of way,nor darkneſs retarded them : this faith and ready obedience, God rewarded, in their finding their Saviour, to their great joy and comfort,verſe 20.

V. 17 they made known abroad the ſaying] This was their faith, and ſincerity, that they truely related to others thoſe things which they had ſeen, and heard of the Angel concerning Chriſt. Thus would God propagate the glorious myſteries of the kingdom of Chriſt, by men ſo obſcure and ſimple; as to beat down the arrogance of carnal reaſon, ſo to confirme our faith. For, as Lactantius ſaith of Chriſtians truth, Abſuit ab iis fingendi voluntas, & aſtutia, quoniam rudes fuerunt, &c. lib. 5. cap. 3. they had neither will nor ſubtilty to feign. becauſe they were ignorant : therefore they were of the minde of thoſe four Lepers, 2 Kings 7.8,9. being themſelves refreſhed and abundantly enriched by the Aſſyrian tents, they ſaid one to another, We do not well, this day is a day of good tydings, and we hold our peace,——Now therefore come, that we may go and tell, &c.

V. 18. wondred at theſe things] as men thoughtfull, what all theſe things would come to. This knowledge therfore left them more unexcuſable, who thereby did not profit in the faith of Chriſt.

V. 19 kept all theſe things] τὰ ῥήματα : that is, as Theophylact interpreteth τὰ πράγματα. See on verſe 15. thoſe things; the ſpeech of the Angel, and all that which the Shepherds related, and all that which now came to paſſe.

and pondred them in her heart] Diligently comparing,and laying theſe things together.

V. 20. the ſhepherds returned] To their calling and habitations.

glorifying and prayſing, &c.] This is an effect of faith, and the end of our coming to Chriſt, and of all that ſpirituall and ſecular bleſſing, which God beſtoweth on us. See Pſalm 50. 15. 1 Cor. 10. 31.

V. 21. when the eight dayes were accompliſhed] *S*ee Gen. 17. 12. Levit. 12,3. Luke 1.59. Thus would he be ſubjected to the law,that he might redeem thoſe who were under the law, (Gal.4. 4.) and deliver us from the curſe of the law.

his name was called Jeſus] The Jews uſed to name their children when they circumciſed them,as we do when we baptize them: God would have him named, according to the office aſſigned him; to declare that there is no other name under Heaven whereby we can be ſaved, Acts 4 12. Neither was this done by the counſel of man but God,who ſent his Angel to name him ſo before his incarnation. *S*ee 1,21. Luke 1 31.

V. 22. dayes of her purification] See Levit 12. 2, 5,6 For though Mary was not made unclean,in her conception,but rather ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt and power of the moſt high; yet thus ought they then to fulfill the law ; which was not as yet repealed,or taken away, as it was afterward, when Chriſt had accompliſhed and fulfilled the ſame.

to preſent him to the Lord] To dedicate,commend him to, or ſet him before the Lord in the place of his publique worſhip. See Exod. 13.12. Numb.18.15. Exod.22.29.

V. 23. every male] This was he for whoſe ſake all the firſt-born under the Law were holy to the Lord, as Tertullian ſaith, c. 23. De carne Chriſti.

V. 24 according to that which is ſaid] Levit.12.2.6.

a pair of turtle doves] Which offering was appointed unto them who were ſo poor, that they were not able to offer a Lamb, or a Sheep, Levit. 5.7.

V. 25. was juſt and devout] One that feared God, and expected the coming of the Meſſias, ſee verſe 38 and Mark 15. 43.

the holy Ghoſt was upon him] Tat is, the ſpirit of propheſie, this is here inſerted, that we may know, that this teſtimony of Simeon concerning Chriſt,was not humane,but divine,and the very dictate of the holy Ghoſt by him.

V. 26. that he ſhould not ſee death] That he ſhould not dye, before he had ſeen Chriſt the anointed King, Prieſt and Prophet,come in the fleſh. See Pſal.2.6. Iſa.61.1 Dan 9. 24.

V. 27. came by the ſpirit) By the ſecret inſtinct and motion of the holy Ghoſt, he came not now into the temple,caſually,or called, or invited thither by any counſel or command of man, but by the motion of Gods Spirit, who had before revealed to him, that he ſhould not dye before he had ſeen the Lord's Chriſt, the promiſed and long-expected Meſſias come into the world.

when the parents brought the childe Jeſus] That is Joſeph (the reputed father of Jeſus : See Heb 7. 3.) and Mary his mother.

V. 28. then took he him up] With great joy did he imbrace Chriſt in his arms, and bleſſed God : that is, gave thanks and praiſe to God for Chriſt, now born in the fleſh, which the ſpirit of God had likewiſe revealed unto him : for Chriſt in his ſtate of humiliation was, as it is were, ſol in nube, not known by the teſtimony of carnal eyes to be the Chriſt, the Saviour —— no man can ſay, that Jeſus is the Lord,but by the holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 12.3.

V. 29 Lord now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart, &c.] Now that thou haſt ſhewed me the fulfilling of thy promiſe concerning my Saviour the Meſſias, whom thou haſt given to raiſe up the tribes of Jacob, to reſtore the preſerved of Iſrael, and a light to lighten the Gentiles to be thy ſalvation unto the end of the earth, Iſa.49 6. Heb.2.10.& 5.9. now I willingly and cheerfully leave this preſent life.

V. 30. for mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation] Pſal.98. Iſa.52.10. he did before this time ſee Chriſt with the eye of faith, as Abraham did,and rejoyced : but now he ſaw with his bodily eyes that fulfilled which he before expected.

V. 31. before the face of all people] As that which thou wilt make manifeſt to all nations; but thus he ſpeaketh after the manner of the Prophets, concerning that which was future, as if it were preſent, for the infallible certainty thereof : Chriſt was not yet, but ſome time after revealed; by the preaching of the goſpel, unto the nations;but he thus ſpeaks,as of that of which he was fully aſſured, in its time ſhould come to paſſe.

V. 32. a light to lighten the Gentiles] A light to ſhine unto the Gentiles who were aliants to the covenant of God, and ſate in the region and ſhadow of death, Matthew 4. 16. that is, ignorance and ſpiritual blindneſſe : now ſhall he teach them the knowledge of God, and life everlaſting : he alludeth to Pſalm 98 2. Iſaiah 9 2. Iſaiah 42. 6. and 49. 6. this is that which God promiſed by all the Prophets, the ſum of whoſe words is, that all Nations of the world ſhould look up to Chriſt, the onely author of ſalvation. *S*ee John 8. 12, the glory of thy people Iſrael] With whom he had a covenant; who were his adopted and firſt-born, Exod. 4. 22. to them peculiarly was Chriſt promiſed: among them was he born in the fleſh: ſee Rom. 1. 3. Rom 9. 5. to them he firſt offered the Covenant of free-grace in him.

V. 33. marvelled] Not becauſe they believed not (being confirmed by ſo many teſtimonies of the Angels, Shepherds, and Wiſe-men) but becauſe they apprehended an admirable concurrence of all theſe, declaring the truth of God fulfilled in Chriſt.

V. 34. Simeon bleſſed them] He prayed for the ſucceſſe of Chriſts Kingdom, and Joſephs and Maries proſperity.

behold this child is ſet for the fall &c.] This κεῖται, is ſet, importeth not onely the event, but alſo the decree of God: which when it is come to the execution thereof; then, as we muſt underſtand, that the free grace of God (calling and working faith in the Elect to apprehend the merits of Chriſt for their juſtification) cometh between the decree of ſaving them, and their ſalvation: ſo, between the fall of Reprobates, and Gods decree concerning them, their own corruption, and wilful unbelief intercedeth: ſo that as God juſtly decreed to puniſh them for that which he foreſaw in them from eternity: So doth he no otherwiſe execute that his counſel in time, than by a juſt puniſhment of their wickedneſſe; and they bear no more than that which themſelves have cauſed, and truly deſerved: and ſo underſtand this place, That Chriſt was ſet or appointed for the fall and greater condemnation of unbelievers (who wilfully fall upon this rock of offence which God layed in Sion) and for the reſurrection and recovery of the Elect to whom he giveth faith, Epheſ. 2. 8. So God ſaveth the Elect in free mercy, and caſteth away the Reprobate in abſolute juſtice, whom he predeſtinated to juſt puniſhment, but not to ſin, but for ſin. See Iſaiah 8. 14, 15. Rom. 9 3. 1 Pet. 2. 8.

which ſhall be ſpoken againſt] By unbelievers and wicked men, the enemies of Chriſt and the Goſpel; who, however diſſenting among themſelves, yet all combine againſt him, as if he were the onely mark for all the powers of Hell to ſhoot at.

V. 35 a ſword ſhall pierce] That is, bitter ſorrows ſhall afflict thy heart: he ſeemeth to allude to Pſalm 105. 18. This he ſaith concerning Maries heart-grief which ſhe ſhould conceive for her dear Sons ſufferings, to which ſhe was conformable in a double capacity: firſt as a tender mother: next as a true member of his myſtical body wherein his ſufferings were meritorious, and ſanctified hers.

V. 36. A propheteſſe] That is much exerciſed in the holy Scriptures, and inſpired of the holy Ghoſt to declare things hidden, extraordinary, and unuſual. See 1 Sam. 18. 10. or things to come. See Acts 11. 28. 1 Cor. 14. 3. Judg. 4. 4. 2 Kings 22. 14. this Luke inſerteth to ſhew the authority by which ſhe ſpake, not as a vulgar woman; and to the ſame end ſerveth the deſcription of her.

V. 37. departed not from the temple] Not that ſhe was a Recluſe: but this ſheweth that ſhe daily frequented the temple: night and day, or continually, in ſuch acts of Religion, import a conſtancy, without ceaſing, not without intermiſſion. See 1 Theſſ. 5. 17. 1 Tim. 5. 5. Luke 24. 53. 1 Theſſ. 3. 10.

V. 38. At the ſame inſtant] Gr. the ſame hour: ſee Matthew 9. 22.

gave thanks likewiſe] Gr. anſwered in confeſſion: confeſſed accordingly, as Simeon had done; agreeing in her teſtimony with his, who had profeſſed Chriſt, now preſented before the Lord to be the promiſed Saviour.

and ſpake of him to all] She ſpake of him to all them who, frequenting the temple, expected ſalvation by Chriſt: thoſe now heard what Anna ſaid, and probably ſhe ſpake the ſame elſewhere as occaſion ſerved.

that looked for redemption] (Mark 15 43. and here verſe 25.) As now at hand, and at the door: though there was a fearful apoſtacy in Iſrael, and depravation of Religion, yet ſtill God had his Church among them, ſome who expected ſalvation by Chriſt.

V. 39. They returned into Galilee] That is, Joſeph and Mary with the child Jeſus, after they had been in Egypt, as Joſeph was warned by the Angel, which ſtory Matthew recordeth, Mat. 2. 13. &c. and this Evangeliſt omitteth in purſuit of the following Hiſtory; for as Ephiphanius. Alog hæreſ. 51. 6. well obſerveth; God gave every Evangeliſt his proper task: ſo as that they related ſomethings συμφώνως καὶ ἴσως with one accord and equally; thereby ſhewing that they all drew out of the ſame fountain: other things omitted of all the reſt, one of them rehearſeth, as the holy Spirit gave him that for his part, as hath been noted.

V. 40. Filled with wiſdom] With admirable wiſdom ſhewing it ſelf in him as he grew up: this was the effect of the Deity dwelling in him, ſhining from under the vail of his aſſumed humanity; to the Deity could nothing be added: an infinite cannot encreaſe: in the humanity he was as we in all things, without ſin, Hebr. 4. 15. and ſo had a native ignorance of ſome things; from, which he grew as he encreaſed in age: for though the Deity and humanity were but one perſon, yet were not the incommunicable properties of the Deity given to the humane nature: the Deity was infinite, omnipreſent, &c. ſo was not the humanity, &c.

V. 41. The paſſeover] See Mat. 26. 2. and Luke 22. 1. they went up to the Paſſeover as was commanded, Deut. 16. 1. It ſeemeth Mary came up of her own free devotion, as did alſo Hanna, 1 Sam. 1. 2. &c.

V. 43. Fulfilled the dayes] The dayes of the feaſt preſcribed by the Law, Exod. 23. 15. That is, the feaſt of Paſſeover, which began the fourteenth day of the firſt moneth at even; when the Paſcal Lamb was to be ſlaine, in remembrance of their deliverance out of Egypt, Deut. 16. 3. as alſo to prefigure Chriſt our Paſſeover (1 Cor. 5. 7.) the Lamb that taketh away the ſinne of the world, John 1. 29. to be ſlain in the Evening of time, Acts 2. 17. Hebr. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 20. 1 John 2. 18. which we are to remember by the ſupper of the Lord, 1 Cor. 11. 25, 26. until he come again. Now albeit this feaſt of Paſſover was but one day in the year to be kept; yet hereunto were joyned the ſeven dayes, the feaſt of unleavened bread immediately following the ſame; which began the fifteenth day of the ſame moneth: this vailed many excellent myſteries 1. The ſeven dayes figured the whole time of our life, wherein we muſt eat the bread of affliction, Deut. 16. 3. Gen. 3. 19. Acts 14. 22. 2 Tim. 3. 11, 12. 2. We muſt all our life time thankfully remember our deliverance by Chriſt, our Paſſeover. 3. We muſt purge out the old leaven of malice and wickedneſſe, not onely for ſome few dayes, but all our dayes, that we may keep the feaſt with the unleavened bread of ſincerity and truth, 1 Cor. 5. 8.

the child Jeſus tarried behind] Not out of any diſobedience, but to ſhew what his office was, to which he was deſigned by his Father; the Prophets foretold hereof, Iſaiah 61. 1. and Chriſt mentioned it; chap. 4. 43.

V. 44. To have been in the company] ἐν τῇ συνοδίᾳ the Syriac Interpreter giveth cum comitibus eorum with the company or companions in the way, for they uſed to come up to the feaſts at Jeruſalem from all parts of the land in great companies; and ſo to return home again.

V. 45. They returned back] Not without great perplexity of mind; that not onely for loſſe of time, labour, and the company of their friends and kindred, but principally for fear of the child Jeſus.

V. 46. The midſt of the Doctors] With the Doctors: it is an Hebraiſme: as c. 22. 27. it may be he ſat at their feet, not in the chief ſeats; of which Luke 11. 43.

V. 47. Were aſtoniſhed] ἐξίσαντο properly ſignifieth, they were out of themſelves with admiration; it was beyond their underſtandings which they heard, in the preludium, and firſt reliſh of Chriſts miniſtery: the ſame word uſed c. 24. 22. Budæus interpreteth, ad ſtuporem uſque nos perculerunt.

V. 48. Thy father and I] Theophylact thinketh ſhe thus calleth him in reſpect of the Jews, ἵνα μὴ νομισθῇ ἐκ πορνείας εἶναι; but indeed ſhe thus called him, becauſe though he was not his natural father, yet was he (as Epiphanius ſaith. Ebionit. hæreſ. 30.) ἐν τάξει, that is, vice, or munere, a father: the Evangeliſt beſt expreſſeth it, his ſuppoſed father, c. 3. 23.

V. 49. My fathers buſineſſe] ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρός μου --- in the things which are my fathers: the Syriac giveth it, know ye not that I muſt be, דבית אבי debeth abbi; in my fathers houſe? that is, the temple where they found him; the meaning is, doing that which appertained to mans ſalvation: his purpoſe was to ſhew, that though duty to parents muſt be obſerved, yet duty to God muſt be preferred, Mat. 10. 37.

V. 50. They underſtood not the ſaying] For his office of a Mediatour and Saviour was not yet known to them, though the Angel had foretold it, Mat. 1. 21. and Zachary had propheſied it, Luke 1. 68. &c

V. 51. Was ſubject unto them] From that time till he was about thirty years old, c. 3. 23. Mark 6. 3. this ſubjection was not infirmitatis, but pietatis, as Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 2. c. 2. obſerveth, diſce quid parentibus tuis debeas, ſaith the ſame, thou oweſt to thy mothers trouble, ſorrow, and danger, in bringing thee into the world, who when ſhe hath brought forth what ſhe long deſired, partu abſolvitur, non timore; ſhe is delivered of the birth, not her fear: many labours and cares of Parents belong to the education of children; oughteſt thou not for all theſe, to requite them with thy obedience?

V. 52. Increaſed in wiſdom] As a child lege humanæ naturæ as Euthymius ſaith well, he encreaſed by little and little; for as God, he was abſolutely perfect: becauſe he aſſumed a reaſonable ſoul as well as an humane body; the Deity thereto united was ſo vailed, that the graces thereof ſhewed themſelves by certain degrees, according to the maturity of his humane faculties; and ſo he encreaſed in wiſdom; though the fulneſſe of the Godhead dwell in him, Coloſ. 3. 9 and ſtature] ἡλικίᾳ In ſtature of body, the Gr. word alſo ſignieth age So he, as man encreaſed in body and ſoul; Nam ſicut carnis eſt ætate proficere, ſic eſt animæ ſapientiâ & gratiâ profeciſſe. Fulgent. de myſt. Mediat. ad Thraſ. lib. 1.

CHAP. III.

Verſe 1. OF Tiberius Cæſar] This was ſucceſſour of Auguſtus Cæſar, in whoſe reign Chriſt was born, chap. 2. 1. after Julius, and Auguſtus Cæſar, the following Emperours were ſtiled Cæſars, as the Egyptian Kings were called Pharaohs, and Ptolomes. See Alexand. ab Alexandro. Genial. dier. lib. 1. cap 2. Mark the admirable candor and diligence of the Evangeliſt in hiſtorifying the circumſtances of our Saviours Nativity, and entrance into his publick miniſtery, that the truth thereof may evidently appear: he telleth in what place, what Emperours reign, and who were witneſſes, &c.

Pilate being governour] Or Deputy, appointed by the Roman Emperour to govern that Province.

Herod being Tetrarch, &c.] See on Mat. 14. 1. This was Herod Antipas. Joſeph. de bel. Jud. l. 2. c. 4 whom Tiberius made Tetrarch of Galilee.

of Abilene] This country Adricomius Theat. Neptalim. 4. ſaith, took its name from Abila, Abyla, or Abela, a famous city of Cœleſyria neer mount Libanus. Jerom de loc. Hebraic. mentioneth three Towns and Cities in ſeveral countreys called Abela; this Evangeliſt would not omit Lyſanias Tetrarchie becauſe many Jews dwelt therein, in the borders of Decapolis, whence many came to hear Chriſt, Mat. 4. 25. Mark 5. 20. & 7. 31. See Iſ. Cauſabon. exercit. 13. 3.

V. 2. Annas and Caiphas being the high prieſts] There were three degrees of miniſters under the Law; Prieſts, Levites, and Nethinims: over theſe the high Prieſt was chief; and that office was ſucceſſively tied to the line of Aarons firſt born, all the reſt of his poſterity were Prieſts: but there was to be but one high Prieſt, at whoſe death another was ſtill to ſucceed: that two are here named high Prieſts together; ſome think that the Grecian Kings, at their pleaſure made high Prieſts to officiate by the year, not for life. V. Shindler lex. Pent. in בהן others impute this diſorder and violation of Gods Law concerning the perpetuity of this office in one man during life, to the power and covetouſneſſe of the Romans. But for better reſolution we muſt conſider that the high Prieſt had alſo his ſuffragan, or סגן ſagan, who in caſe of the high Prieſts pollution, performed his office: Such was Zephaniah, Jer. 52. 24 the high Prieſt his ſelf was called כהן הראש cohen haroſh: ἱερεὺς ὁ μέγας; 2 Kings 22. 8. and ἱερεὺς πρῶτος, 2 King. 25. 18. the firſt or chief high Prieſt: or כהן הגדול cohen hagadol, the great high Prieſt; the ſuffragan, who alſo was called high Prieſt) was ſtiled כהן משנה cohen miſhne. ἱερεὺς ὁ δεύτερος 2 Kings 25. 18. or as ſome read, υἱὸς τῆς δευτερώσεως, as we give the ſecond Prieſt. Jer. 52. 24. The ſecond Prieſt, that is, ſuffragan or vicar, ſo was Caiphas here ſuffragan to Annas his father in law, who was the high Prieſt: but the Evangeliſt, John 18. 24. after their vulgar manner of ſpeaking, calleth him τὸν Ἀρχιερέα. See Joſ. Scaliger. Proleg. in Euſeb. Iſ. Cauſabon. Exercit. 13. 4 and D. Godwin. Moſes and Aaron. l. 1. c. 4 See note on John 18. 13.

I would the Anabaptiſts would throughly examine their own conſciences, who ſent them to re-baptize; and that they would no longer deceive others, and themſelves.

V. 3. And he came] Out of the deſert into the inhabited places, that he might execute his charge in preaching repentance unto the people for the remiſſion of ſins. See Mat. 3. 1. Mark 1. 4.

V. 4. The voice of one crying, &c.] Iſai. 40 3. See on Mat. 3. 3. and on John 1. 23.

V. 5. Every valley ſhall be filled] All impediments ſhall be taken away, ſo that the way of God and eternal life by Chriſt, ſhall be plain and evident to him that believeth; which by the works of the Law, as it was obſcure under thoſe ſhadows, ſo alſo impaſſable by reaſon of the infirmity and corruption of fleſh and blood. Abraham to our father] See on Mat. 3. 9. Which prerogative, ſimilitude of manners may rather claim, Quam ordo majorum ſaith Ambroſ. in Luc. lib. 2. cap. 3. than order of parentage.

of theſe ſtones] See on Mat. 3. 9 Gregory underſtandeth by ſtones corda Gentilium, the inſenſible hearts of the Gentiles, not apprehending the things of God, Hom. 20. So Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 2. c. 3. underſtandeth here ædificationem eccleſiæ, the edification of the Church of Chriſt, conſiſting of living ſtones, 1 Pet. 2. 5. and thoſe principally of the Gentiles to be converted.

V. 9. The axe is laid to the root of the trees] See on Mat. 3. 10. the metaphor ſhewed them, that the inſtruments of their deſtruction (ſuch as were Titus and Veſpaſian) were near, and ſhould quickly execute; except they repented: the axe is laid to the root. cum tota ſimul progenies cum parente tollitur. Greg hom. 20. when the whole progeny is cut up with the parent: which judgement then threatned the Jewiſh nation and long it was not, before it came upon them.

V. 10. What ſhall we do?] Their hearts being toucht, with Johns preaching they enquire (as Peters hearers alſo did Acts 2. 37.) what they ſhould do? as if they ſaid, what fruits muſt we bring forth, that we may flee from the anger to come, having heard the ſevere doctrine by him delivered concerning their deſtruction, and the remedy to prevent the ſame, by him alſo propoſed; to wit, repentance, and the fruits thereof, verſe 8. they now deſire to be informed further, and more particularly concerning the ſame, as to particular callings, and duties thereof in order, to eſcape Gods judgement and be ſaved.

V. 11. He that hath two coats] As Ambroſe ſaith, to thoſe ſeveral ſorts of men he gave an anſwer, ſingulis conveniens, omnibus unum; convenient to every particular one, but in ſubſtance it was but one precept; that is concerning mercy and charity, which is plenitudo virtutum: the fulneſſe of vertue: the moſt acceptable fruit of repentance, without which, all religion is vain, and the anger of God hangeth over men. See 1 Cor. 13. 1. Jam. 1. 26 27. & 2. 14 1 John 3. 17. 1 John 4. 20 John 13. 35.

V. 12. Publicans to be baptized] Theſe were officers who received tribute, and cuſtom for the Romans. See on Mat. 9 10. and Mat. 5. 46. this office was erected among the Jews, after that Pompey had ſubdued them (whereof ſee Joſeph de bel. Jud. l. 1. c. 5.) and they became tributary to the Romans, about threeſcore years before the birth of our Saviour: of Publicans Cicero and other Authors make often mention.

V. 14. Exact no more, &c.] He taxeth the unjuſt exactions whereby ſuch men commonly grieve the people: therefore chap. 19. 8. Zacheus in his converſion, proclaimeth reſtitution, without which (where there is any ability) can be no true repentance: not that the office was unlawful, but becauſe oppreſſion and religion are inconſiſtent: therefore, of many ſins whereof John Baptiſt might have admoniſhed them, he inſtanced onely in that to which they were commonly given, and which cannot ſtand with charity and equity; without which faith is dead, and all religion counterfeit.

V. 14. Do violence to no man] Or put no man in fear by your violence, and ravages.

your wages] Let your pay, and allowance of victual, apparel, or appointed quarter content you: extort no more: if Chriſtian diſcipline had diſallowed all wars, it ſhould have been told theſe that asked counſel, ut abjicerent arma, that they ought to lay down their arms. Auguſtine Marcelin, ep. 5.

V. 15. People were in expectation] Or in ſuſpence; Conſidering the unuſual auſterity and excellency of John, they began to have hope that he was their long expected Meſſias. So the Syriac expreſſeth this προσδοκῶντος, by the word סבר Sebar: which ſignifieth hope: as alſo סברא Sabro, Acts 24. 15. 1 Tim. 5. 5. &c. alſo it ſignifieth joyful tidings, the Goſpel, &c. Luke 2. 14. Mat. 4 23. &c.

V 16 I indeed baptize you with water &c.] Meaning that he adminiſtred onely the external ſign and Sacrament, but Chriſt would give the inward effect thereof, for the waſhing away their ſins. See on Mat. 3. 11. Mark 1. 8. John 1. 26 Acts 1. 5. Acts 11. 16. & 19 4.

and with fire] Meaning that Chriſt would cleanſe them from their ſins, as fire doth the gold from droſſe. See Acts 2. 3.

V. 17. Whoſe fan is in his hand] See on Mat. 3. 12. the preaching of the Goſpel is as a fan in Chriſts hand: before the truth is preached, all ſeem one confuſed heap; chaffe and wheat, good and bad are undiſtinctly one maſſe in the Church: it is the fan which ſeparateth the chaffe: thus he ſhewed the Jews, that there was now coming a purging blaſt of the truth to be preached, which ſhould make them fly out of the Church, as chaffe out of the floor, in which they with their many corruptions had hitherto but filled up a place: this ſeparation Chriſt beginneth here, which ſhall be perfected in the life to come; and it is to be underſtood concerning the effect of the word preached, which proveth a Savour of life unto life to ſome, and a Savour of death to death to others: it edifieth and comforteth ſome, and enrageth others to an heat of perſecution of Chriſts Miniſters; concerning the final and abſolute ſeparation to life or death eternal, we may not here pronounce (of that he ſaith Mat. 13. 30. Let both grow until the harveſt &c.) That we now ſee by woful experience, many ſeparating from us, let none be offended: the wind bloweth out the chaffe from the floor, not the good grain, as Cyprian. de ſimpl. prælat. tract 3. ſaith let thoſe of light faith, as much as they will, flee away with every breath of tentation eo purior maſſa frumenti in horrea Domini reponetur

netur, ſaid Tertullian de præſcript. chap. 3. the more purer heap ſhall be laid up in the Lords granary the Church; ſome of Chriſts diſciples taking offence at his words (John 6. 66.) ſeparated: do we wonder that ſome depart from his Church? theſe things ſhew us to be Chriſtians which we ſuffer according to the example of Chriſt; they went out from us, they were not of us, 1 John 2. 19.

V. 18. Many other things] This Evangeliſt wrote onely the ſum of Johns preaching, as much as might demonſtrate him to be the fore-ordained meſſenger to prepare the way of Chriſt, to whoſe Hiſtory he addreſſed his diſcourſe. See Mal. 3. 1. The ſpirit of God was not ſolicitous by the Scriptures to ſatisfie mans curioſity; but to reveal therein that which is ſufficient to make the believer wiſe to ſalvation. See Joh. 20. 30, 31. Joh. 21. 25. 2 Tim. 3. 16. 17.

V. 19. But Herod] See on Mat. 14. 3. and Mark 6. 17.

V. 20. Added yet this above all] This bloody fact helped to fill up the meaſure of his ſin, in that being incenſed againſt the word of God, he revenged himſelf on the Miniſter thereof as on an enemy: a ſad document to all perſecuters of Chriſts Miniſters, would they underſtand it.

V. 21. Jeſus alſo being baptized] See on Mat. 3. 13. Mark 1. 10. John 1. 32. he would be baptized, non mundari volens, ſed mundare aquas --- ſaith Ambroſ. in luc. lib. 2. cap. 3. not to be cleanſed, but to cleanſe the waters, that they being made clean by the fleſh of Chriſt who knew no ſin, might have baptiſmatis jus --- an ordinance, and right to baptiſm.

V. 22. Like a dove] See on Mat. 3. 16. John 1. 32. Why like a dove? (ſaith Ambroſ.) ſimplicitatem enim lavacri requirit gratia. Our baptiſm enjoyneth us to be ſimple and harmleſſe as doves.

V. 23. About thirty years of age] At which age the Prieſts were to enter into their function, Num. 4. 3, 35. &c.

being (as was ſuppoſed) the ſon of Joſeph] For Chriſt as man, had no father; as God, no mother; as it is ſaid of Melchiſedec his type, Heb. 7. 3.

Son of Eli] Luke aſcendeth from the laſt father to the firſt, and Matthew contrarywiſe deſcendeth; extending his rehearſal no further than to Abraham; to aſſure the Jews of Gods promiſe in Chriſt fulfilled to them. Luke rehearſeth to Adam, to aſſure the Gentiles alſo of their intereſt in Chriſt, for as much as they were the ſons of Adam, though not of Abraham. Note alſo that the Jews reckoned their genealogies, not onely by the natural, but alſo by the legal deſcents: and that whereas divers men had two names: one of the Evangeliſts reciting one, and the other another, they yet agree in the ſame perſon.

ſon of Naaſſon] 1 Chron. 2. 10.

V. 34. ſon of Thara] Geneſis 11. 24. 26.

V. 36. which was the ſon of Cainan, which was the ſon of Arphaxad] Moſes ſaith Arphaxad begat Sala, Geneſis 10. 24. but this Evangeliſt reckoneth Cainan between Arphaxad and Sala. For the reconcillation of theſe places, and the better underſtanding thereof, conſider,

1. That all the word of God is infallibly true, and without all contradiction, John 17. 17. 2 Tim. 3. 16. though we underſtand not ſome; neither how to reconcile others of them.

2. That not one jot, or tittle of the Scriptures, in matter of ſubſtance, hath paſſed away, or ever ſhall, until all be fulfilled, Mat. 5. 18. Luke 16. 17.

3. That ſome perſons mentioned in holy Scriptures were binomii, ſuch as had two names: ſo Eſau was alſo called Edom, Gen. 25. 30. Gen. 36. 1, 8. Jerom. adverſus Hevild. inſtanceth in Raguel Moſes father in law, called alſo Jethro. So alſo in Gedeon; Ozias, &c. So was Simon alſo called Peter, John 1. 42. Joſeph was alſo called Barſabas, and ſurnamed Juſtus, Acts 1. 23. So Simon was called Niger. So Judas was ſurnamed Barſabas, Acts 15. 22. ſome think Shem was called Melchiſedec.

4. That Gods Spirit in opening the truth of holy Scriptures (as Lactantius well noted, lib. 2. cap. 9) would have us know thoſe things which concern life eternal, and the means thereto; other things he omitted or cauſed to be abridged. See John 20. 30, 31. John 21. 25. therefore Matthew omitted 3. deſcents, Mat. 1. 8. where it is ſaid, that Joram begat Ozias: Ahaziah, Ioaſh, and Amaziah, are omitted. See 1 Chron. 3. 11, 12. See note on Mat. 1. 8. ſo Chriſt is called the Son of David, Mat. 1. 1. you muſt underſtand that many generations and forefathers according to the fleſh, came between. So Luke 1. 5. Luke 13. 16. &c. It is probable which ſome ſay; that ſeeing Matthew propoſed to mark a threefold ſtate of Iſrael from the promiſe made to Abraham concerning Chriſt, unto the time of his coming in the fleſh; he reckoneth three times 14 generations; within which compaſſe holding himſelf, he was not curious of choice, but indifferently mentioneth holy and wicked, and ſo many in ſucceſſion; his principal ſcope being to ſhew the truth of Gods promiſe fulfilled in Chriſts incarnation. And certainly Moſes alſo intending to ſhew how God ever had his Church, and to declare the truth of his promiſe concerning Chriſt, principally took care to ſhew in what line the Church continued; neither reckoning all the Saints which were in that line, nor them onely which were holy; nor all deſcents in a direct line, without intermiſſion of any perſon.

5. There are many elliptical and ſhort ſpeakings in Scriptures: ſo that the interpreter muſt neceſſarily inſert the word, or words there underſtood, as Luke 7. 11. ἐν τῇ ἑξῆς underſtand ἡμέρᾳ: which the Syriac inſerteth; or καίρῳ as it ſeems Theophylact doth, reading ἐν τῷ ἑξῆς: deinceps, as chap. 8. 1 ἐν τῷ καθεξῆς. So John 5. 36. I have witneſſe, μείζω τοῦ Ἰωάννου; that is, μείζω τῆς τοῦ Ἰωάννου as the learned Beza noteth: the full ſpeech muſt have been μείζω τῆς μαρτυρίας τοῦ Ἰωάννου: greater than that teſtimony of John. So Acts 15. 5. ἐξανέστησαν δέ τινες, there εἶπον (they ſaid) is underſtood. So Mat. 21. 30. The ſecond ſon ſaid, ἐγὼ; underſtand ἀπέρχομαι, or ποιήσω, I will go, or will do ſo. So Mat. 1. 6. ἐκ τῆς τοῦ Οὐρίου where γυναικὸς and the word γενομένης are to be underſtood: Uriahs wife, which became Davids. So Rom 11. 4. τῇ Βάαλ, that is, τῇ εἰκόνι τοῦ Βάαλ. So Mark 14. 43. παρὰ τῶν Ἀρχιερέων: underſtand πεμφθέντες or ἀποσταλθέντες ſent from the high Prieſts. See Acts 9. 11.

6. That the article ὃ, is ſometimes put to ſignifie that which is, or is called ſomething notable, Mark 15. 16. ὃ ἐστι πραιτώριον, which is called the pretory: ſometimes that word is expreſſed: as, Luke 21. 37. τὸ ὄρος τὸ καλούμενον ἐλαιῶν, that is, τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν: as, Mark 11. 1. Luke 22. 39. of which ellipſis of the word הר, we read alſo 2 Sam 15. 30. Sometimes the Greeks double the article, and propoſe it to both names, Iohn 1. 42. Iohn 6. 69.

7. For concluſion then (ſeeing all the Scripture is infallibly true, and no jot thereof may paſſe away) we muſt underſtand that (whereas Luke here nameth Cainan, between Arphaxad and Sala, which Moſes in the ſame genealogie doth not, Gen. 10. 24) Moſes in that epitome of Hiſtory, ſaying Arphaxad ילד jalad 70 ἐγέννησε begat Sala, muſt be no otherwiſe underſtood, than Mat. 1. 8. Joram (ἐγέννησε) begat Ozias: not immediately, but as one of his progenitors: as, 1 Chron. 3. 11. &c. or as the whole ſeries of this genealogie is elliptical υἱοῦ being ſo often underſtood: So may we here underſtand καλουμένου; as if we read Ἔβερ τοῦ Σαλὰ, τοῦ καλουμένου Καϊνάν. Eber the ſon of Sala, who was alſo called Cainan: and ſo this article τοῦ may here be underſtood, as ſet to diſtinguiſh this ſurnamed Cainan, from his anceſtour of the ſame name mentioned, Gen. 5. 9, 12, 13, 14. and here verſe 37. or if we underſtand here λεγομένου, it may onely point out the vulgar errour, which it may be the miſtake or corruption of the 70. Interpreters brought in; that being then the vulgar and commonly received tranſlation of the old Teſtament into the Greek tongue; and ſo may the Syriac reading here be underſtood, ſhala בר קינן bar Kainan, that is, דמתקרא בר קינן demeth kere bar Kainan, which is called the ſon of Cainan: ever neceſſary in difficult genealogies, is that rule of the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 1. 4. that we give not heed to endleſſe genealogies, which miniſter queſtions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: the end of the commandment being charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conſcience, and of faith unfeigned. See alſo Tit. 3. 9. Theſe things are written that we may believe, that Ieſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and that believing, we may have life through his Name, Iohn 20. 31.

V. 37. the ſon of Methuſala] Gen 5. 21 &c.

V. 38 the Son of God] God is the univerſal Parent, and Creatour of all men. See Deut. 32. 6. 18, 19. But Adams parentage extendeth to God his Maker, who had not (as all other meer men,) any humane Parent: therefore the Syriac readeth דמן אלהא demen elaho, who was of God.

eat nothing] See Mat 4. 2.

V. 3. If thou be the Son of God] Thus Chriſt preſently after his baptiſm is tempted, ſhewing us therein, that Satans temptations moſt rage in the ſanctified; quia victoria ei eſt magis exoptata de ſanctis. Hilar. in Matth. canon. 3. becauſe he moſt deſireth victory over the Saints: others, ut captivos & victos contemnit & præterit, &c. Cyprian. l. 1. ep. 1. he paſſeth by as captives and conquered people, of whom he is already ſecure and aſſured.

command theſe ſtones, &c.] See on Mat. 4 3.

V. 4. it is written] Deut. 8. 3.

word of God] The meaning is by the Ordinance and Providence of God; whereby he enableth the creature to nouriſh man. See Mat. 4. 4. 1 Tim. 4. 5. Gen. 1. 29.

V. 5. taking him up &c.] Mat. 4. 8. That he ſhewed Chriſt here, all the kingdoms of the world in a moment, declareth that this ſhewing, was by a viſion: otherwiſe all could not have been under view in a moment, as here it was.

V. 6. that is delivered unto me] This he ſpake of his own, as a lying ſpirit, John 8. 44. for he can do no more than God permitteth him, (Rev. 13. 7.) neither in giving nor taking away. See Pſal. 75. 6, 7. Mat. 6. 27.

V. 7. worſhip me] Or, fall down before me: this the ſacrilegious impudent ſpirit ſaith, that failing in his other aſſaults, nunc vel ambitione corrumperet, Hilar. can. 3. he might (as he did the firſt Adam) corrupt him by ambition: it was ambition which caſt him out of heaven; in which ſin he ſtill continueth; affecting the honour due to God alone, in that he would have us ſerve and worſhip him; as idolaters do, 1 Cor. 10. 20 2 Chron. 11. 15.

V. 8. get thee behind me] Avoid and get thee gone.

it is written] Deut. 6. 13 & 10 20. And ſo muſt we learn to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, and to reſiſt Satan with the ſword of the ſpirit, which is the word of God, Epheſ. 6. 16, 17.

him onely ſhalt thou ſerve] Chriſt interpreteth Moſes words, by adding him onely, &c. becauſe this is the true worſhip of God, to ſerve him onely, and no creature with him. See Rev 19. 10. and 22. 8, 9 Mat. 4. 10. this is an excellent ſhield againſt ambition caret enim ambitione religioſa devotio, Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 4. c. 4. religious devotion is free from ambition.

V. 9. brought him to Jeruſalem] See on Mat. 4. 5.

caſt thy ſelf down] Thus he tempteth: perſwading men to hurt themſelves, becauſe without their own conſent, he can neither hurt them nor compel them to do any evil: the conſent of the corrupted will is in every act of ſin.

V. 10. For it is written] Pſal. 91. 11. Thus the devil (as impious hereticks his diſciples) perverteth Scriptures, either citing part, and leaving out the reſt, as here he leaveth out (to keep thee in all thy wayes: not in any evil way) or miſinterpreting and miſapplying them to their own deſtruction, 2 Pet. 3. 16. The Scripture ſaith not, caſt thy ſelf down, this Satan addes. Ireneus l. 5. c. 3. See Nicet. com. in Gr. Nazian. orat. 40. n. 11

V. 12. Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord] Deut. 6. 16. Matthew 4 7.

V. 13. for a ſeaſon] For he ſet upon him furiouſly in his paſſion. See Luke 22. 53. John 14 10. in which laſt aſſaults, he came not (as Ambroſ. ſaith) tentaturus, ſed apertè pugnaturus; not to tempt, but onely to fight.

V. 14. in the power of the ſpirit] That is, ſupported in that journey by divine power: ſo that he came ſpeedily, by the ſame ſpirit, by which he was ſuſtained without meat, fourty dayes in the wilderneſſe; and with which he was abundantly furniſhed for the execution of his Miniſtry

V. 15 in their ſynagogues, &c.] That is, in their Churches, wherein they met to hear the Lectures of the Law every Sabbath-day, Acts 15 21. Jeruſalem was the place which God had choſen for his Temple, ſacrifices, and other publick worſhip, there onely to be performed.

glorified of all] δοξαζόμενος, That is, magnified, admired, and praiſed, as for his doctrine delivered with divine power and authority, beyond the manner of all other teachers, Mat. 7. 28, 29. and here, verſe 32 So alſo for his miracles, whereby he confirmed the ſame: by doing good to all, and in this (all) we muſt underſtand the moſt part: or excepting thoſe, who out of envy, and the ſpirit of contradiction, diſtaſted any thing that was good: all others glorified him: the preſent praiſed him, and the abſent celebrated his fame.

V. 16. on the ſabbath-day] See note on Mat. 12. 1. and Luke 6 1. Mat. 13. 54.

and ſtood up for to read] As the manner was to read ſome portion of the Law and the Prophets every ſabbath-day. See Acts 13. 15 and 5 21.

V. 17 There was delivered unto him] By ſome officer of that ſynagogue; according to the cuſtom, to ſhew (ſaith Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 4. c 4) that it was himſelf who ſpake in the Prophets; and to repel their ſacrilegious perfideouſneſſe, who ſay that there was one God of the old Teſtament, and another of the new, &c.

V. 18 the ſpirit of the Lord is upon me] See Iſaiah 61. 1. The fulneſſe of the ſpirit; all the gifts thereof: not by meaſure, it was on the Prophets and Apoſtles, and is on the faithful Miniſters, in ſome good meaſure to enable them to their office and miniſtration. See Iſaiah 11. 2. John 3. 34. Col. 2. 9.

becauſe he hath anointed me] That is, endued me with graces, and aſſigned me thereto; the ſpirit reſting on Chriſt, as appeareth by the effects to us-ward, and of whoſe fulneſſe all we have received, grace for grace, John 1. 16.

to the poor] He calleth them poor, who had not yet taſted of the riches of his grace, and the poor in ſpirit; as Matth. 5. 3.

to heal the broken-hearted] Thoſe who have deep remorſe for their ſins, and terrour of conſcience to repentance: ſuch he calleth to him, Mat. 11. 28. See Iſaiah 61. 2. Pſal. 147. 3.

deliverance to the captives] To thoſe who were held captive of Satan and ſin (ſuch as we all were by nature, Epheſ. 2. 3 Rom. 7. 14.) this he did when he preached and proclaimed the new covenant of God, that is, free remiſſion of ſins to thoſe who believe in him: that he hath fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice for us: this whoſoever truly believeth, is by the ſame ſpirit (working faith and obedience in him) manumiſſed, and ſet at liberty from the kingdom of ſin and Satan; although yet they exerciſed ſome tyranny over him in this preſent life. See John 8. 36. Rom. 6. 13, 14, 18.

recovery of ſight to the blind] That is, ſpiritual illumination to them who were as yet ignorant of Chriſt the true light: ſee chap. 1. 78. Mat. 4. 16. for ſo he diſcovered himſelf in deeds, that they might ſee him preſent in his works, of whom they uſed to read in the books of the Prophets. Hilar. can. 3. in Matth. See alſo Mat. 11. 5.

to ſet at liberty them that are bruiſed] The meaning is, to free them who are burdened with ſins, who wreſtling under their heavy weight, have not of themſelves, ſtrength to ſhake them off: who are throughly humbled with the ſenſe of their ſins, and miſeries: ſee Mat. 11. 28.

V. 19. the acceptable year] He alludeth to the year of Jubile, Levit 25 10. &c. ſignifying the time of grace, and reconciliation, wherein God ſetteth us at liberty in Chriſt, and ſheweth his ſpecial goodneſſe on mankind.

V. 20 he gave it again to the Miniſter] Of that ſynagogue, of whom he had received the ſame. It is ſaid here, πτύξας τὸ βιβλίον --- cloſing the book; that is, rowling it up again; for they then uſed to write their books in velome or parchment, which they rowled up. See hereof on Mat 1. 1.

and ſat down] It ſeemeth it was then in uſe for teachers to ſit, or ſtand, as occaſion required, Acts 13. 16.

were faſtned on him] With deſire to hear how he would interpret the place of Scripture which he had read unto them: as alſo for the fame they had heard of him; who without ſtudy, and ordinary means, became ſo incomparable a teacher. See John 7. 15.

V. 21. this ſcsipture is] Or hath been fulfilled in your ears; meaning, that the ſame ſcripture which by his reading, had ſounded in their ears, was fulfilled, in his preaching: he being that perſon of whom the Prophet there ſpake.

V. 22 all bare him witneſſe] All approved and commended his preaching, as extraordinary and admirable.

gracious words] Or words of grace: which by a divine ſweetneſs drew their affection, with ſecret influence, and perſwaſion of the Holy Ghoſt wherewith he was filled, John 1. 14. ſee Pſal. 45. 2. Cant. 4. 3. Iſaiah 50. 4.

V. 23. Phyſician heal thy ſelf] If thou canſt do any thing, ſhew thy power here in thine own countrey; for he had done no miracle there: ſee Mark 6. 5. and here verſe 25.

V. 24. No Prophet is accepted] See Mat. 13. 57. Mark 6. 4. John 4. 44. As if he had ſaid; as the Prophets were contemned in their own countrey: ſo am I here, and therefore, wonder not that I do fewer miracles here than in other places; you may thank your ſelves for this: you contemn me and my miniſtration. This ſheweth that God there withholdeth his graces, where his Miniſters are contemned or undervalued.

V. 25 many widows] See 1 Kings 17 9.

ſhut up] When it rained not in three years and ſix moneths, Jam. 5. 17. that which is ſaid, 1 Kings 18. 1. --- the word of the Lord came unto Eliah in the third year, &c. underſtand of the third year of his living at Zarephath: for it rained not on the earth by the ſpace of three years, and ſix moneths, Jam 5. 17.

V. 26. unto Sarepta] God oftentimes preferreth ſtrangers before them of the houſhold; for he is debtour to no man; therefore the men of Nazareth could not reaſonably claim any priviledge in Chriſt, becauſe they believed not as others did

V. 27 and many lepers were in Iſrael] See 2 Kings 5. 14. This appeareth in thoſe four lepers whom hunger emboldened to venture upon the tents of the Aſſyrians beleaguering Samaria, in the Prophet Eliſha's dayes, 2 Kings 7. 3 &c.

V. 28. were filled with wrath] As commonly it cometh to paſſe among formal hypocrites, when their ſins and puniſhments are touched and ſpoken of.

V. 29. and roſe up] ἀναστάντες, riſing up, and diſmiſſing the aſſembly: going out of the ſynagogue, they thruſt him out of the City.

unto the brow of the hill] To the cliffe ſide, there to deſtroy him; by caſting him down.

V. 30. But he paſſing through the midſt of them, &c.] He eſcaped miraculouſly out of their hands, which probably he did, not by making himſelf inviſible, or any wayes changing the eſſentiall properties of his body; but by his Divine power, making himſelf way through the midſt of his enemies, See Pſalm 18. 29. and that as ſaith Theophylact, οὐ τὸ παθεῖν φεύγων, ἀλλὰ τὸν καιρὸν ἀναμένων: not to avoid ſuffering (for which he came into the world) but waiting for the appointed time, for his hour was not yet come; John 8. 59.

V 31. He came down to Capernaum] Being ſo evilly and unworthily entreated at Nazaret he did not command fire from Heaven, nor peſtilence to deſtroy them; but leaving all to him that judgeth righteouſly, in purſuit of his miniſtry he goeth to preach the Goſpel at a neighbouring city

V. 32. for his word was with power] That is, full of majeſty and convincing authority: ſo that it ſmote the conſciences of the hearers, with an awfull reverence and fear: as Matthew 7. 29. Mark 1.22.

V. 33. and in the Synagogue, &c.] See Mark 1. 23.

V. 34. let us alone] ἔα, Away, Syr. ſine me; ſuffer me, or let me alone.

V. 35. had thrown them in the midſt] Had thrown the poſſeſſed man in the midſt of the people preſent.

V. 36. what a word is this? τίς λόγος, &c. what thing is this? what power is it, which with a word can doe theſe things? See Matth. 8. 27. Mark 1. 27.

V. 37. the fame of him went out] One telling another what admirable things they had ſeen him do: and hereby God confirmed the Goſpel, and drew men to Chriſt, that they might believe and be ſaved.

V. 38. and he aroſe out of the Synagogue, &c.] See on Matt. 8. 14. Mark 1. 30.

V. 39. ſtood over her] He ſtood by her; and took her by the hand to lift her up, whom he immediately cured.

V. 40. When the Sun was ſetting] See on Matthew 8. 16. and on Mark 1. 32.

V. 41 and the devils] Mark 1. 34.

thou art Chriſt the Son of God] The devils confeſſed him in hope thereby to bring him into ſuſpect with the multitude, therefore Chriſt forbad him to teſtifie of him: for as Tertul. adverſ. Marcion. l. 4. c. 8. ſaith, Chriſt would have men, not unclean ſpirits to acknowledge him to be the Son of God: he had ſent thoſe before him, who were to manifeſt him, utique digniores prædicatores; that is, more worthy Preachers.

to ſpeak] Or to ſay they knew him to be Chriſt.

V. 42. when it was day] See Mark. 1 35.

V. 43. I muſt preach] Mark 1. 37. ſheweth the occaſion of theſe words; all men ſeek for thee, ſaid the Diſciples to Chriſt: therefore he ſaid unto them, I muſt preach, &c. he was not ſent for one City only, but to be a Saviour of the world.

V. 44. in the Synagogues of Galilee] Herein he giveth us an example of obedience to God; in that he, who might have lived in honour and eaſe in Capernaum, would with much labour and hazard, travel about to preach the Goſpel, and gain ſouls to God.

CHAP. V.

Verſe. 1. A*Nd it came to paſſe*] See Matthew, 4. 18. Mark 1. 16.

the people preſſed on him] ἐπικεῖσθαι ſometimes importeth to be inſtant, or importunate; as Luke 23. 23. where it is ſaid of the multitude of the Jewes, requiring Chriſt to be crucified, οἱ δὲ ἐπέκειντο —— at illi imminebant, &c. yet here it ſignifieth a preſſing near to, or thronging upon him to ſee and heare him.

lake of Genezareth] which for the greatneſſe, was called the ſea of Galilee Matt. 4. 18. Mark 1. 16. Geneſareth was a City in the tribe of Nephtali; which Herod beautified with munificent buildings, and called it Tiberias, in honour of Tiberias Cæſar: hence the adjacent region near Capernaum and Bethſaida, Mark 6. 53. as alſo this lake was ſo called. John 6. 1. It was anciently called כנרת Cinneret, and כנרות Chinneroth, Deut. 3. 17. Numb. 34. 11. Joſh. 11. 2. and Chalde גינוסר Ginnoſar, from the corruption of both words, it was called Geneſareth. See on John 21. 1.

V. 2. ſtanding by the lake] That is, lying near the ſhore: this manner of ſpeaking is uſuall with Sea-men, concerning a ſhip under ſail; whereof they ſay, ſhe ſtandeth for the ſhore; or ſuch and ſuch a place: and the Latines uſed to call a road, where ſhips uſed to lie at anchor, ſtationem, ſtatio malè fida carinis.

and were waſhing, &c.] to lay them up to ſome other time: as being for preſent without hope of taking any thing after ſo much labour loſt.

V. 3. And taught the people] This Evangeliſt ſaith not what he taught, but Matt. 4. 17. It appeareth that the ſum was, repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

V. 4. Let down your net, &c.] By this miracle, he will ſhew his new called Diſciples his power, that they might not be offended at his poverty and form of a ſervant, which others contemned and deſpiſed.

V. 5. Maſter, we have toiled, &c.] ἐπιστάτης properly ſignifieth him that is chief governour or ruler.

at thy word] according to thy word: at thy command, becauſe thou wouldſt have us ſo to do.

V. 6. A multitude of fiſhes] So Chriſt bleſſed their labour; to teach them to depend on him, and his commands.

V. 7. Began to ſink] That is, as the Syriac readeth: they were neer ſinking, here appeareth an evident motive and cauſe of the Diſciples ſo ſoon leaving their ſhips, nets and callings to follow Chriſt, for they heard his admirable Doctrine, which they thus ſaw confirmed by miracle. See verſe 9. 10.

V. 8. Depart from me] This ſpake he out of conſcience of his owne vileneſſe, and the Divine preſence of Chriſt. See 1 Kings 17. 18.

V. 9. Aſtoniſhed, and all that were with him] Not onely Peter, but the reſt were amazed to ſee the draught of fiſhes; apprehending a divine power in that work: therefore feared they the preſence of Chriſt, by whoſe command all was done.

V. 10. Fear not, from henceforth thou ſhalt catch men] To comfort them, he declareth what ſhall be the effect of his preſence; that they ſhould thereby be enabled by preaching the Goſpel, (which is that great draught-net of Gods Kingdome, Matthew 13. 47.) to draw men out of the bitter floods of ſin to life everlaſting; hereto Chriſt enabled them as he promiſed, Matt. 4. 18. all our ſufficiency is of God. 2 Cor. 3. 5. who therefore did call, and ſo now can all ignorant men, to an effectuall and powerfull Miniſtry of the Word to ſave ſouls: but whom he thus calleth, he doth miraculouſly make able Miniſters of the New Teſtament, 2 Cor. 3. 6. which when the falſe Apoſtles, (who pretend to extraordinary calling) can make appear, that God hath wrought in them, we ſhall believe they are indeed called to preach the Goſpel: one thing is certain, Chriſt never called any idiot or unlearned man (to this Office) to leave him ſuch, but to ſhew a miraculous power in enabling him to that, to which he called him, though Chriſt ſaid this to Peter, (who it ſeemeth out of deeper ſence of his own ſins, and the Majeſty of Chriſt ſhining in this miracle, prayed Chriſt to depart from him) yet it was a common grace here promiſed to them all; and ſo no prerogative of Peter; though Chriſt addreſſed this comfort by name to Peter whom he ſaw moſt afraid.

V. 11. Forſooke all and followed him] They were called to be Diſciples before, John 1. 39. but now to be Apoſtles: therefore, though after their firſt hearing Chriſt, they returned to their calling again; yet now they leave all, and follow Chriſt in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel.

V. 12. And it came to paſſe] See Matthew 8. 2. Marke 1. 40.

full of leproſie] this diſeaſe was ſomewhat common in theſe Eaſtern parts, and very hard to be cured: ſo that when Chriſt (by his Word and putting forth his hand to touch him) cured it immediately, the power of his Godhead appeared, which could as eaſily repaire, as create by his Word: See Matthew, 8. 3. &c

V. 13. And touched him] For, as Tertullian ſaith, adv. Marcion. lib. 4. cap 9. he touched him à quo etſi homo inquinari potuiſſet, Deus utique non inquinaretur. By vvhom though man might be made unclean, God could not.

V. 14. Charged him to tell no man] For the time was not yet come that Chriſt would be glorified, being now in the form of a ſervant: and leſt men who were not yet well acquainted with his Doctrine, ſhould too much depend upon miracles.

goe and ſhew thy ſelfe to the Prieſt] He would not diſſolve the Law, yet in force, but leave them more unexcuſable, in that ſeeing the miracle, they would not believe in Chriſt, See Leviticus, 14. 4. 10.

V. 15. So much more went there a fame of him] They the more admired, and ſpake good of him, becauſe they perceived that he did theſe miracles, neither for gaine nor applauſe of men.

V. 16. Withdrew himſelf] He vvithdrevv himſelfe from the multitude which followed him, leſt he might ſeem to affect popular applauſe, or to move or occaſion ſedition againſt the civil magiſtrate; as alſo ſometimes to reſt from labour of preaching and going to and fro to heal the ſick and infirm.

and prayed] thus he manifeſted himſelf God in his miracles, and man in performance of his mediators office, in preaching to, and praying for his.

V. 17. The Phariſees, &c.] See on Chap. 14 1. See Matthew 3. 7.

the power of the Lord was preſent to heale] That is, at this time the power of the Lord ſhevved it ſelfe in healing the ſicke: it was ever vvith him; but it did not alvvayes ſhevv it ſelfe, as novv vvhen he preached the Goſpel, and for the confirmation thereof, vvrought theſe miracles. See Marke, 6. 5.

V. 18. Men brought in a bed a man, &c.] See on Mat. 9. 2, Mark 2. 3.

V. 19. Let him down through the tiling] διὰ τῶν κεράμων through the pavements: for their houſes vvere flat roofed, and railed, or battlemented according to the lavv. Deut. 22. 8. to ſecure them from falling off; theſe pavements layed vvith tarrice, or the like material might keep out all vvet, theſe they digged or brake through, Mark 2. 4. this ſetteth out the great faith of theſe men, and their confidence of Chriſt his povver and vvill to heal their ſick: as concerning ſuch pavements, See Plin. lib. 36. cap. 25.

V. 20. When he ſaw their Faith] That is, diſcerned it, the faith of the ſick, and the bearers.

man, thy ſins are forgiven thee] meaning both guilt and puniſhment: intimating, that all miſery of body and ſoul, is an effect of ſin, this ſick man believed and is to be reckoned among them whoſe faith our Saviour ſaw, and therefore he pronounced his pardon, and healed him.

V. 21. And the Scribes and Phariſees] See on chap. 20. 1.

who is this that ſpeaketh blaſphemies?] thus they blaſphemed in accuſing him of blaſphemy.

V. 22. Why reaſon you in your hearts] Why think you ſuch things? by diſcovering their thoughts, he declareth himſelf to be God, the καρδιογνώστης; Acts 15. 8. ſearcher of hearts, and therefore that he alone hath power to forgive ſins.

V. 23. Thy ſinnes be forgiven thee] His Divine Power appeared in the miracle, which when they either knew not, or maliciouſly diſſembled, he repeateth the mans pardon, that thence, and upon their confeſſion of that Principle, that none but God could forgive ſinnes, they might conclude, and acknowledge him to be God and Man, and therefore the Saviour of the world.

V. 24. Power to forgive ſins] See on Matth. 9.6.

V. 25. He roſe up] See on Matt. 9.7.

V. 26. And glorified God] See on Matt. 9.8.

V. 27. After theſe things he went forth, &c. See on Matt. 9. 9. Mark 2. 14.

ſitting, at the receit of Cuſtome] that is, the Cuſtome Houſe, or place where they received Cuſtomes, or Impoſts due to Cæſar.

V. 28. He left all, roſe up, &c.] See Matt. 9.9.

V. 29. A great feaſt] Thus he expreſſed the joy of heart conceived from his preſent calling to follow Chriſt

V. 30 Murmured] Calumniating him, as if he were a friend of, and companion to the wicked: thus they hoped to diſcourage his new called Diſciples from following him

V. 31. They that are whole need not the Phyſician] See on Matt. 9.12. hereby he declareth their irrational malice: they murmured that he converſed with ſinners; this was as Auguſtine ſaith, de verb. Apoſt. ſer. 8. to find fault, quod in domum ægroti intravit medicus, that the Phyſitian went to the ſick man: Chriſt came that he might diſſolve ſinne, the worke of man; and ſave man, the worke of God.

V. 32. I came not to call the righteous] Thoſe who ſeem ſo to themſelves: or it may be underſtood ſimply; before Chriſt called and juſtified them, none were righteous; had any been ſuch, Chriſt needed not have died for their Redemption. See Matthew, 9. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 15. *Fulgentius de incarn. & gra. D. n. Jeſu. c.*22. ſaith well: if that man were not by any means curable, the Heavenly Phyſitian would not have come to recover him: again, if he could cure himſelfe, cæleſti medico non egeret, he ſhould not have needed an Heavenly Phyſitian, if he could by any means have cured himſelf.

but ſinners to repentance] See Matth. 9. 12. That is, to the acknowledgement, confeſſion and deteſtation of their ſins, and to newneſs and Holyneſſe of life: for Repentance is not onely in ſaying, I repent, God be mercifull unto me, but in changing our minds, evil purpoſes and courſes of life; and forſaking our ſinnes: ſo the Syriac interpreteth it לתי בותא latteio butho, ad converſionem, rightly, for as Tertullian ſaith, adverſ. Marcion. l. 2. c. 24. pœnitentia nomen, non ex delicti confeſſione, ſed ex animi demutatione compoſitum eſt: the name of Repentance (μετάνοια) is not compoſed, or derived from Confeſſion of ſin, but change of the mind: ſo the Verb μετανοέω, whence it cometh properly ſignifieth, poſt factum ſapio; or I ſo grieve for my errour or offence, that I will endeavour to mend it for the time to come.

V. 33 And they ſaid unto him] See Matt. 9. 14. Mark 2. 18. The Scribes and Phariſees aske this queſtion, v. 30. When their cavil about his company waſhed off, they bring a ſecond againſt his feaſting: as if they had ſaid, Why do you and your Diſciples feaſt? Why do you not rather keep ſome faſting dayes? the Diſciples of John came to Chriſt with the like queſtion: it is likely, that the Scribes and Phariſees fomented the controverſie on purpoſe to make diſſention between Johns Diſciples and Chriſts: this is the diſpoſition not onely of Hypocrites, but alſo of ſome infirm men. John 3. 26. to deſire to draw all men to their way, and to obtrude that for a Law to others, which pleaſeth themſelves, ſpecially in the placing ſanctity in things Ceremonial and external ſo that Scribes and Phariſees, and Johns Diſciples moved this queſtion, and ſo they are united, Marke 2. 18.

and make prayers] they mean ſome ſolemn, extraordinary, and long prayers, ſuch as Phariſees uſed in the ſtreets and open places, Matt. 6.

V. 34. Can ye make the children of the Bride-chamber faſt, &c. Meaning, that now was their time of rejoycing, not of mourning, while Chriſt their Saviour was with them; and that he would not burden his Diſciples with too much rigour, for which they were not yet ſeaſoned, nor more able to bear, than old Veſſels to hold new Wine.

V. 35. Shall be taken away from them] He meaneth, that he would not be bodily preſent with them, after his aſcenſion into Heaven.

then ſhall they faſt] He intimateth the afflictions which his Diſciples ſhould endure after his aſcenſion.

V. 36. A parable unto them] See Matt. 9.17. Mark 2.22. παραβολὴ, a compariſon or ſimilitude, it is of παραβάλλω, comparo, it is here a comparing of Heavenly things with earthly, See on Matt. 13. 3. 18, &c.

no man putteth a piece of a new, &c.] See on Matthew, 9. 16. Mark 2.21.

V. 37. No man putteth new Wine] See Matthew, 9. 17. Mark, 2. 22.

V. 38. New Wine muſt be put into, &c.] See Matthew, 9. 17. Mark 2.22.

V. 39. No man having drunke, &c.] The ſum and meaning is: that he diſalloweth not ſeaſonable Faſts, (For himſelfe faſted) if they be without Hypocriſie, ſuperſtition, and vain-glory; but would ſhew, that men cannot ſo ſuddenly beare a change of life, from joy to ſorrow; but, muſt be brought to it by little and little.

the old is better] commonly wholſomer, and to them that are accuſtomed thereto, more pleaſing: ſo the rule of teaching and living, which Chriſt preſcribed his, was of the Eternal will of God, and accommodated to his Diſciples: but the Faſts of the Scribes and Phariſees, as their other externall rites, were later inventions of their Elders.

on the ſecond Sabbath] at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, when corn was ripe, Leviticus 23. 15. 14, 15. ſome think; others at the Paſſeover: for it is ſaid, Leviticus 23. 15. ye ſhall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath (70. ἀπὸ τῆς ἐπαύριον τῶν σαββάτων. ——unto the morrow after the ſeventh Sabbath, ſhall ye number) fifty dayes, &c. See alſo Deuteronomy 16. 9. ſo that they underſtand here the morrow after the firſt Sabbath, or Paſſeover: but theſe Feaſts contained divers dayes, and ſo continued two Sabbaths: ſo that the Sabbath here termed δευτερόπρωτον, was the Sabbath next after the ſixteenth of Niſan, or אביב Abib, (which ſignifieth an ear of corn, for herein their corn began to ripen, and this was their firſt moneth, and contained part of our March, and part of April;) the Jewes counting the forementioned fifty dayes, by numbering the weeks from the δευτέρα; whence the Feaſt of weeks was named, according to the number of the Sabbaths following the δευτέρα: ſo the firſt Sabbath following was δευτερόπρωτον σάββατον: the ſecond δευτεροδεύτερον: the third δευτερότριτον, &c. plucked ears of corn] this was lawful for any to do, Deut. 23. 25. and for them, becauſe they were hungry, Matt. 12. 1. as it was for David in his neceſſity to eat of the ſhew-bread, 1 Sam. 21. Rites and Ceremonies may not ſtand againſt Charity; which is the end of the Law, 1 Tim. 1. 4.

they which were with him] for though he went alone to the Prieſt, yet had he attendants ſtaying for him, 1 Sam. 21. 2. 4.

V. 4. Which is not lawfull to eate, &c.] See Leviticus 24. 9.

V. 5. The Son of man, &c.] He that gave this Law interpreteth the works of mercy, and neceſſity to be no breaches of the Sabbath day, Son of man often importeth man, as Pſalm 8. 5. Iſaiah 56. 2. ſo ſaith Athanaſius. de com. eſſent. patris, &c. ἀνθρωπότητα αὐτοῦ, υἱὸν ἀνθρώπου, his Humane nature, the Son of man, Chriſt converſant as man with man, in the form of a ſervant: the Hebrewes called obſcure and vulgar men בני אדם bene adam, and the more illuſtrious and honourable בני איש ſo Pſalm 49. 2. which give low and high. Ezekiel, is often ſtiled בן-אדם Sonne of man, c. 2. 1. & 3. 1, &c. Chriſt willingly profeſſed Humility, who could have ſtiled himſelf the Son of the moſt High, intimating his Glory: but thus he would for a time be clouded under the vail of his fleſh, in which he came to ſuffer for men, that he might make them the Sons of God, was withered] After his former works, and doctrine concerning the Sabbath, he now proved by the teſtimony of God the Father, whoſe power concurred in this following miracle alſo, that he taught the truth: this poor mans hand was dead and uſeleſs, before Chriſt healed it: ſo Jeroboams hand was withered, 1 Kings 13. ſome take it for the diſeaſe which the Greeks called ἀτροφίαν, a tabes, pining, drying up, and withering for lack of natural moyſture to nouriſh and ſtrengthen the diſaffected part.

V. 7. Scribes] See on c. 20.1.

Watched him] ſeeing they could not faſten their calumny on the Diſciples, they watched an occaſion to accuſe Chriſt of Sabbath-breaking: malice is as reſtleſs as the Devil.

V. 8. Knew their thoughts] Whereby his Divine knowledge might appear: for God onely knoweth the thoughts of men, 1 Kings 8. 39.

ſtand forth in the middeſt] that the miracle might be evident, in that all preſent, ſeeing his withered hand ſodainly changed, and recovered, onely by his Word, might be convicted, or confirmed by the ſight of that cure, which none but God could work.

V. 9. I will aske you one thing] The Scribes and Phariſees had queſtioned, whether it were lawfull to heal on the Sabbath. Matthew 12.10. Now Chriſt asked them a queſtion; is it lawfull on the Sabbath dayes to doe good: taking that for granted which all would confeſſe, that it is indiſputably good to ſhew mercy and to heal: the whole controverſie was concerning the Circumſtance of time; now indeed as Proſper ſaith, malè celebrat Sabbatum, qui ab operibus bonis vacat, he miſ-celebrateth the Sabbath, who reſteth from good works, and he here putteth ψυχὴν, for life: (for concerning ſaving of Souls on the Sabbath, there was no queſtion) So נפש is often uſed for the life, though it properly ſignifie the ſoul, Geneſis 9. 4. Leviticus 17. 11. Lamentations 5.9. 1 Chron. 11.19, &c. and ſometimes a Perſon Geneſis 12. 5. Geneſis 46. 15, &c.

V. 10. Looking round] Upon his convicted adverſaries, as it were to ſee, if any would anſwer, he looked with anger. See Mark 3. 5.

V. 11. Filled with madneſs] That is, extreme anger and impatience; ſuch is the condition of carnall and proud hearers, when any thing ſpoken croſſeth their affection, or opinion, though never ſo erroneous.

V. 12. Continued all night, &c.] To teach us vigilancy and perſeverance in prayer: what oughteſt thou to do for thine own ſalvation: ſeeing Chriſt ſpent whole nights in prayer for thee? Ambroſ. in luc. l. 5. c. 6.

V. 13. And of them he choſe twelve] Of them that followed him he choſe, according to the number of the Tribes of Iſrael and the Patriarchs. Matt. 10. Mark 3. 14. & 6.7.

Apoſtles] the word ſignifieth Ambaſſadours, or Meſſengers, See 2 Corinth. 5. 20. So Clemens Romanus ſaid well, οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἡμῖν εὐαγγελίσθησαν ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, &c. the Apoſtles being ſent by Chriſt Jeſus preached the Goſpel to us, as Chriſt did being ſent of God: ad Corinth. ep. pag. 54. he therefore choſe theſe Apoſtles, (being to aſcend into Heaven) that he might commit the charge of preaching the Goſpel unto them; and that he might commit the charge of preaching the Goſpel unto them; and that he might teach men by mans Miniſtry, ſufficiently confirmed by the efficacy of his ſpirit and power of miracles.

V. 14. whom he named Peter] John 1. 22. Matthew, 10. 2.

V. 15. Simon called Zelotes] Or the Canaanite, Matthew, 10. 4.

V. 16. And Iudas Iſcariot] See on Matth. 10. 4. and John 6.71. Judas the traytour is choſen unto this Office; non per imprudentiam, ſed per providentiam: not by ignorance, but by providence, Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 5. c. 6. How great is the mercy of Chriſt, how great his love to us? He took on him the infirmity of man, and therefore refuſed not theſe parts thereof: Voluit deſeri, voluit prodi, voluit ab Apoſtolo ſuo tradi, &c. He would (for our ſakes) be forſaken; he would be betrayed by his own Apoſtle; to the end, that if thou be forſaken of friends, or betrayed by thoſe thou truſteſt; thou mayeſt patiently beare the errour of thy judgement, and loſſe of thy love and good opinion placed on the unworthy.

V. 17. came down with them] That which Luke here recordeth, ſeemeth ſome part of that which Chriſt taught, Matthew 5. 1, &c. though there it be ſaid, that he went up into the mountain, and ſate and taught: for he firſt went up and ſtood, and taught a ſmaller company. See Mark 3. 13. but perceiving greater confluences of people coming to heare, he deſcended from the top, for their better convenience of hearing him; and ſate down upon the edge of ſome Plain, which was more capacious.

V. 18. they were healed] Therefore deſcended he, that he might teach and heal, καὶ διπλῶς εὐεργετῶν Theophylact, and beſtow a double benefit on their ſouls and bodies.

V. 19. there went vertue out of him] He had power of healing all that touched him by Faith, becauſe he was God and Man: the Prophets and other Saints had the gift of healing, but vertue did not ſo goe out of them, for they were not πηγαὶ δυνάμεων; the Fountaines of Vertue, Theophylact. See on Mark 5. 30. and Luke 8. 46.

V. 20. on his Diſciples] For, them chiefly would he inſtruct, incourage, and fit to be teachers of the Word: though not them only, See verſe 27.

poore] Poore in ſpirit, Matthew, 5.3. That is, you, who being humbled with external or ſpiritual wants or preſſures, wholly betake your ſelves to Gods mercy and providence. See on Matthew 5. 3.

V. 21. hunger now] Iſaiah 65. 13. Whoſe preſent afflictions being ſanctified unto you, cauſe you to aſpire to a better eſtate in Gods Kingdome, and to ſet your affections on things above, which cauſeth you to hunger and thirſt for righteouſneſſe, Matth. 5. 6. however theſe may ſeem to ignorant men, non poſſunt tamen eſſe aliud quam beati, Salvian. de gub. Dei l. 1. yet can they be nothing leſſe than happy.

that weep now] Iſaiah 61. 3. In this preſent life: but he ſpeaketh all this concerning the Elect, which ſhall Eternally be comforted: neither the wicked poor, nor ſorrowful, can be bleſſed; See Pſalm 126.1.

V. 22. and caſt out your name, as evil] This further expreſſeth what he meant by ſeparation, or caſting out of their Synagogue, John 16. 2. when they expunge and put out your names from the Regiſter of Gods people: This is a dreadful ſentence, and the thunder of the Church, when denounced on juſt cauſe, and by the true Miniſters of Chriſt: if otherwiſe, whatever men thinke, they are bleſſed who keep not company with the wicked. Pſalm 1.1. &c. nemo enim alieno cenſu miſer eſt ſed ſuo, Salvian q. ſ. therefore can they not be unhappy in the falſe judgement of any man, who are truly bleſſed in their own conſcience.

for the Son of mans ſake] That is, falſely calumniating you for your profeſſion of Chriſt: this is to bear his reproach; Hebrews 13. 13. if any ſuffer deſervedly for his faults, what thanks ſhall he have, 1 Pet. 4. 13, 14, &c.

V. 23. leap for joy] As men ſurprized with abundant joy: intimating the certainty and fulneſſe of their joy in Heaven, who here ſuffer any injury for Chriſt his ſake; Greek σκιρτήσατε σκιρτάω, Salio, ſalto, it ſignifieth ſuch a leaping as wanton cattle uſe, and thence is taken to expreſſe ſuch a rejoycing as ſo affecteth one, that he cannot but leap for joy, and ſometimes ſpoken of things inanimate; as Pſalm 114. 4, 6. τὰ ὄρη ἐσκίρτησαν ὡσεὶ κριοὶ —— the mountains skipped like Rams —— So the Hebrew word רקד ſignifieth exilivit, exultavit præ gaudio. So Michal ſaw David at the coming of the Ark to Bethel מרקד ſaltantem: 1 Chron. 15. 29. which 2 Sam. 6. 14. is given, in morem capræ ſaltabat Ad Mont.

V. 24. Wo unto you that are rich] Meaning thoſe who truſt in riches and ſerve them. Amos 6.1. James 5. 1. or thoſe who being rich are unthankful to God, or uncharitable and evil to men: non cenſus igitur, ſed affectus in crimine eſt, Ambr. on Luc. l. 5. c. 7. wealth is not in fault, but the affections of men: ſuch have had their conſolation here, and cannot reaſonably expect it hereafter, who truſt in them, make them their God, or any wayes abuſe them to ſinne.

V. 25 Woe unto you that are full] See Iſaiah, 32. 9. Iſaiah, 65. 13. Amos 6. 1. Iſaiah, 28. 7, 8. Ezekiel, 16. 49.

you that laugh] That live at eaſe, and in pleaſures, diſtracting you from the ſervice of God.

V. 26. when all men ſpeake well of you] Either, when wicked men ſpeake well of you, which ſhall then onely be, when you are like them: or when you affect the praiſe of men, and give not God the Glory in all things: or becauſe it is very hard to hold Humility in generall applauſes: For the firſt, Auguſtine ſaith, truely, nemo enim laudat, niſi quod ei placet; in Pſalm 48. for the laſt, Ignatius Epiſt. ad Tral. ſaith, μὲ ἐπαινοῦντες, μαστιγοῦσι; they that praiſe me, ſcourge me: and Auguſtine To. 4. de ſerm. Domine in mont. Si ergo inter quos vivis te recte viventem non laudaverint, illi in errore ſunt: ſi autem laudaverint, tu in periculo: if thy neighbours amongſt whom thou liveſt well, praiſe thee not: they are in errour, but if they doe, thou art in danger.

V. 27. For I ſay unto you, &c.] See Matthevv, 5. 44. Romans 12. 20.

V. 29. unto him that ſmiteth thee, &c.] See Mat. 5.39. Meaning, be more ready to bear new injuries, than to avenge the old: it is not bearing, but doing injuries which maketh a man unhappy; See 1 Cor. 6.7.

V. 38. aske them not again] That is, not by any violent, or unlavvful means of recovery: othervviſe, the uſe of Lavv and Magiſtrates is not denied Chriſtians.

V. 31. as yee would that men ſhould doe to you, &c.] See Matt. 7. 12.

V. 32. For if you love them, &c.] See Matthew, 5. 46.

what thanks have ye?] What revvard can ye expect from God? it is no good vvork vvhich onely ſelf-love, carnal reſpects, or deſire of like favour from others cauſeth.

V. 34. And if ye lend] See Matt. 5. 42.

for ſinners,] Such as have no fear of God to lead them to theſe civil offices.

V. 35. Love your enemies] Matt. 5.44.

hoping for nothing again] This is to be underſtood with reſpect to mens abilities to give to the poor, as alſo that verſe 30. So that if our neighbours neceſsities require, and we be able, we muſt lend without Hope of being repayed by them: and in other caſes we muſt not violate Charity, nor give ſcandal in requiring our debts. See Iſai. 58. 3.

your reward ſhall be great] It may be men will requite us with injuries, or be unthankfull: it is ſufficient that God will reward; if our labour be loſt on the wicked, yet ſhall not our reward be loſt with a juſt God.

V. 36. as your Father, &c.] See on Matt.5.48.

V. 47. and doth them] See on Matt. 7.24.

V. 48. when the flood aroſe] He means by this metaphor to declare, that temptations will ſhew how every man hath profited in hearing the word, and that they ſhall put a manifeſt difference between the Hypocrite, and the true Diſciple of Chriſt.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1. HE entred into Capernaum] Matt. 8. 5.

V. 2. a certain Centurions ſervant] A captain of an hundred; he is not named; but it is likely that his company was in gariſon at Capernaum.

ſicke and ready to die] Matth. 8.6. The diſeaſe is ſpecified; it was a paralyſis or palſie; which oft-times bereaveth of ſenſe and motion.

V. 3. he ſent unto him the Elders, &c.] Matthew ſaith he came unto him: whereby it appeareth, that Matthew attributed to him, that which was done in his Name, and by his requeſt: theſe whom he ſent, were not vulgar or ordinary meſſengers, but Elders. ſo the Jews called their Senatours and Magiſtrates of Cities; ſuch as for years and authority were moſt reverend: probably he had heard of ſo great a Prophet riſen among them, who could, and readily would cure all diſeaſes: therefore firſt he ſent, then came himſelf to Chriſt, Matt. 8.13.

V. 4. ſaying he was worthy] This maketh nothing for merits of works before God (our merits are dona Dei, the gifts of God, as Alcuinus hom. 8. poſt. pentecoſt. well obſerveth after Auguſtin. ep. 105.) well doe theſe men acknowledge this benefit received, commending the Centurions love to their Nation, and beneficence towards them, as intending this for a motive whereby to entreat Chriſt to helpe him, though he were a Heathen, and a Souldier.

V. 5. a Synagogue] Or Church: it ſeemeth he was a Proſelyte; this word is from the Greek συνάγω, to gather together: and συναγωγὴ, though it be uſed to other matters, yet here, as commonly in the Goſpel, it is taken for an houſe dedicated to the ſervice and worſhip of God, as preaching, prayer, &c. the Hebrewes called it בית הכנסת beth hacneſeth, the houſe of aſſembly: ſo the Syriac here calleth it בית כנושתא beth cenuſhetta: it cometh of the Hebrew word כנס Syr. כנס canas, cenas, or כנש cenaſh: which ſignifieth, to aſſemble or gather together, Hiſt. 4. 16 &c. the Temple at Jeruſalem was as the Cathedrall Church, the Synagogues as pariſh-Churches, for the eaſe of the people, who could not come every Sabbath-day up to Jeruſalem: there they offered ſacrifices, but in their Synagogues they might not.

V. 6. ſent friends unto him ſaying] That is, to ſay in his Name.

trouble not thy ſelf] Weary not thy ſelf in taking ſo much pains to come to an unworthy man. See Mat. 8.8.

V. 7. but ſay in a word] Command that it be ſo, and I am confident, it ſhall be done. See Pſalm 44. 4.

V. 8. a man ſet under authority] See Matt.8.9.

V. 9. marvelled] Matt.8.10 This is not to be underſtood of admiration properly taken, which is from ignorance of the cauſe, but of affecting and declaring a thing which was notable, and admirable to common reaſon; as that this Centurion being but an alien, ſhould excel all the Iſraelites (which had hitherto believed in Chriſt) in his profeſſion of Faith: thus would Chriſt provoke them to believe. See Rom.10.19.

V. 10, found the ſervant whole] This, Matt.8.11.12, 13. is more largely Hiſtorified.

V. 11. Naim] Which was a town of Galilee in the tribe of Iſſachar, not far from Tiberias; at the foot of mount Hermon; about four miles from Capernaum.

V. 12. there was a dead man carried] So ſoon as he had cured the ſick, he preſently doth a more admirable work in raiſing the dead: all things were poſſible to him, and he omitted no opportunity of doing good.

V. 13. Weep not] Not forbidding natural affection, but allaying her ſorrow, by comfort offered, as, 1 Theſſ.4.13. and not onely in word, but in taking away the cauſe and occaſion of her preſent ſorrow.

V. 14. touched the bier] Or coffin, wherein the dead body was born toward the grave: this probably he did, that they which bare it might ſtay; and that the ſorrowful mother, and others preſent might be the more attentive to obſerve the admirable power of his Word, reſtoring the dead to life again, that they might believe in him to Eternal life, who is the reſurrection and the life, See John 11. 25.

I ſay unto thee] I command thee by that power which I have in Heaven and Earth, over the living and the dead, that thou live and ariſe to life again: theſe examples of Chriſts power, are our aſſurances of his raiſing up the dead in the generall reſurrection.

V. 15. ſate up and began to ſpeake] This declared the evidence of the miracle, and a preludium of that which Chriſt ſaith, John 5. 28. 29. the houre is coming, in which all that are in the graves ſhall hear his voyce, and ſhall come forth, &c.

V. 16. there came a fear] Becauſe of their ſenſe of a Divine preſence ſhewing it ſelf in his raiſing the dead: it intimateth a more thankefull and more reverend Opinion, which they began to have of Chriſt, in whom they ſaw ſo divine a power.

hath viſited his people] The preſent eſtate of the Jews was calamitous, and ſervile as if God had forſaken them: their comfort was, that he would ſend the Meſſias to repair them: therefore from this which they ſaw done by Chriſt, they conclude that God now began to look upon them, in that (as they conceived) he had ſent them a great Prophet, as a forerunner of their expected deliverer: ſo weake and perplexed was their Faith, in expectation of a glorious Temporall Meſsias, and an Earthly Monarchy. See Chapter 1.68.

V. 17. This manner of rumour] That is, that God had now viſited them, and raiſed them up a great Prophet.

V. 18. The Diſciples of John ſhewed him, &c. See Matt. 11. 2. They probably were moved with ſome envie and emulation; as, John 3. 26. ſuppoſing that the fame of Jeſus ſomewhat obſcured the honour of John, whom they might poſsibly hope to be the Meſſias and reſtorer of Iſrael.

V. 19. he that ſhould come] The expected Meſsias and Redeemer; which John was aſſured of: but this he did to inſtruct and confirm his Diſciples in the Faith of Chriſt, by their own experience of his power working ſuch miracles, as none but God could do; and it is very likely, that they out of infirmity and perverſe zeal to Iohns honour, might cauſe him to ſend them to Chriſt to be fully ſatisfied, in that which he ſaith unto them, John 3. 27. 28, &c.

V. 21. in the ſame houre he cured many, &c.] At the very time that theſe meſſengers of Iohn came to Chriſt, the providence of God ſo diſpoſed, that they ſhould ſee many cured of ſuch ſeveral and deſperate maladies, that their incredulity might be convinced, not by Iohns words only, but alſo by the Divine works of Chriſt: and it is obſervable, that by the ſame providence, Iohn Baptiſt, greater than a Prophet, ſhould yet herein be leſſe than divers of the Prophets that he did no miracle. John 10.41. while Chriſt (as alſo the Apoſtles afterwards) did many that Iohns Diſciples might the more eaſily be tranſmitted to Chriſt; who poſsibly might otherwiſe have been too tenacious of that ſuſpition which then amazed moſt men, chap.3.15.

V. 22. tell Iohn what things ye have ſeen, &c.] Without any oſtentation of himſelf, he appealeth to their own ſenſes and reports, that they might conclude by that which was done and ſaid, that thoſe things which the Prophets long before ſpake concerning the Meſsias, were now done by Chriſt. See Iſaiah 35. 5, 6. Iſa. 61.1.

to the poor of the Goſpel, &c.] That is, ſuch as are of obſcure and poor condition in the world: who feel their own miſery and diſability to ſtand in Gods judgement.

V. 23. offended in me] Who ſhall not ſtumble at my ſtate of Humiliation, as a Rock of offence: See Matth.21. 42. Acts 4.11. Romans 9.33. 1 Cor.1.23. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. Pſalm 118. 22. See on Matth.11.6.

V. 24. he

V. 24. he began to ſpeak unto the people] How Johns diſciples behaved themſelves toward Chriſt, or what they anſwered, none of the Evangeliſts record: but Chriſt addreſſed his diſcourſe to the people preſent, to let them know that John Baptiſt (one of his witneſſes) was above exception, and conſtant for the truth, leſt they ſhould think him impriſoned for any evill by him committed.

a reed ſhaken with the winde] That is an inconſtant man, or a thing of little moment.

V. 25. a man clothed in ſoft raiment] See on Mat. 11. 8. a libertine or voluptuous liver! theſe interrogations have the value of a certain appeal to their own knovvledges, as if he had ſaid, did not your ſelves ever finde him a man of a moſt temperate, ſtayed, and auſtere life, void of all pride and delicacy, or ambition?

V. 26. more than a Prophet] That is, an extraordinary or excellent Prophet: for he had the honour to be the immediate forerunner of the Meſſias, to prepare his way, and to ſhew him preſent. See on Mat. 11. 1. 9.

N. 27. Behold I ſend my &c.] Mal. 3, 1.

V. 28. there is not a greater] In office; becauſe he did not (as the former Prophets) onely tell of Chriſt to come, but pointed him out, John 1. 29. See on Mat. 11 11.

in the kingdom of God] See on Mat. 11. 11. The meaning is, in the new ſtate of the Church, under the perfecter light of the Goſpel, in which the glory of God ſhineth: the meaneſt miniſter of Chriſt, who preacheth the fulfilling of thoſe things which John ſaw not, is in that regard greater than John: ſo that here is not a compariſon of the perſons, but of their kinde of doctrine. Or if we underſtand it of the kingdom of glory; the leaſt therein is greater than the greateſt mortal man.

V. 29. juſtified God[Meaning they gave witneſſe to the truth of God; and acknowledged him juſt, gracious, and merciful according to the preaching of John, whoſe doctrine they had embraced.

V. 30. the Phariſees] See on chap. 14. 1. The proud and arrogant Phariſees (as many now do) thought themſelves the moſt knowing men, and too good to be bettered with any teaching: therefore they rejected the counſel of God, &c. So the Syriack interpreteth with us: but the word ἠθέτησαν here uſed hath a more emphatical ſignification: ἄθετος, is irritus, ineptus, inutilis, and ἀθετέω importeth to aboliſh, as Gal. 2. 21. to deſpiſe, John 12. 48. Jude 8. to abrogate ſo, that it ſeemeth they rejected the ordinance of God, baptiſme, and the word declaring his counſel for mans ſalvation by Chriſt, as a vain fooliſh and unprofitable thing. See 1 Cor. 2. 14.

againſt themſelves] To their own loſſe and deſtruction, which they did in themſelves, by their unbelief and contempt of the Goſpel, which declareth the counſel of God for mans ſalvation. See Acts 20. 27.

V. 31. Whereunto then] See on Mat. 11. 16. This double quere importeth a vehemency of our Saviours ſpeech, reproving the Jews contumacy, and invincible hardneſſe of heart, wilfully rejecting the grace of God; who uſed all means to reduce them, but they would not. This manner of ſpeaking then concludeth neither ignorance, nor any heſitancy in Chriſt, as if he knew not to whom readily to compare or liken them, but a certain appeal to themſelves; as if he had ſaid, do you know any thing in the world ſo perverſe and peeviſh as this generation? not that he condemneth all, (God had his elect among them ſtill) but the Phariſees and Lawyers; and thoſe their followers who rejected the grace and mercy of God offered them in the Goſpel of Chriſt. See chap. 13. 18. 20.

V. 32. children ſitting in &c.] See on Mat. 11. 15. The meaning is, that whatever means God propoſeth to ſave the wicked, and however mercifully he complyeth with their infirmities, yet their obſtinacy will find ſome let to their reception of the Goſpel.

V. 33. Neither eating bread] He lived not according to the ordinary cuſtom of men; but alone in the wilderneſſe. Matth. 3. converſing with few men, being of a moſt abſtemious and auſtere life and converſation.

V. 34. Eating and drinking] That is, converſing friendly with men: John was a retired man: but Chriſt uſed a more gracious familiarity, and they, who then moſt profeſſed ſanctity and religion, calumniated both: and would not believe their preaching.

V. 35. But wiſdom] But yet they who are truly wiſe, embrace that as the wiſdom of God to ſalvation, which carnal men account the fooliſhneſſe of preaching. 1 Cor. 1. 21. Rom. 1. 16.

V. 36. One of the Phariſees deſired him] See Mark 14. 3. & Luke 14. 1. it appeareth hereby that this Simon, though a Phariſee, was yet none of Chriſts violent enemies, neither any deſpiſer of his doctrine; and though not yet fully underſtanding the end of Chriſt his coming into the world, to call and ſave ſinners (1 Tim. 1. 15,) yet had he a good eſteem of his perſon, and reverend eſteem of his doctrine, therefore Chriſt went to his houſe.

and ſate down to meat] That is, according to their manner, lying on pallets covered like tables, and leaning on the left elbow. See Iſ. Caſaubon exerc. 16. n. 36.

V. 37. Behold a woman] The circumſtances ſhew, that this was not ſhe who is hiſtorified. Mat. 26. 6. and John 11. 2. who anointed the Lord with ointment; for that was a little before his paſſion; but this was a good time before it.

which was a ſinner] an harlot: a woman of notorious levity, a bad liver, it is likely that ſhe had heard John Baptiſt, or Chriſt preaching repentance, grace, mercy and free remiſſion of ſins by faith in Chriſt; and ſeeing, or hearing of his works; believed him to be the very Saviour of the world: therefore came ſhe, as the ſick to the Phyſician.

V. 38. At his feet behind him] They lying down to meat as ver. 36. ſhe had convenience to weep upon his feet.

and anointed them] See on ver. 46.

V. 39. He ſpake within himſelf] That is, he thought, as Fulgentius ad Monim. l. 3. interpreteth; nihil aliud eſt apud ſe dicere, quam apud ſe cogitare.

what manner of woman] The Phariſee had reſpect to the law, concerning their pollution, who touched the polluted. Num. 19. 22. he knew not the gracious mercy of God in Chriſt. Here was Simons failing: he thought the ſtaines of ſin ſo abſolutely indelible, that what this ſinner had been, ſhe muſt be reputed ſtill, not conſidering the power and mercy of God, converting ſinners; making their ſcarlet ſins white as ſnow; and them, new creatures, and therefore he concluded that it became not a Prophet to permit ſuch a one to touch him: hence proceeded another foul errour, that Chriſt did not know what condition ſhe was of, and therefore that he was no Prophet, he might have conſidered that God reſerved many things from the knowledge of the Prophets, but errours are fruitful.

V. 40. Jeſus anſwering] That is, ſaid: the Hebrews ſo ſpeak of him that beginneth a diſcourſe: but here it properly betokeneth, that Chriſt being truly God the ſearcher of hearts, anſwered to the Phariſees prejudicate thoughts, and ſo ſhewed himſelf to be not only a knower of the external condition of others, which Prophets may be, but a knower and diſcerner of the thoughts of the heart, which only God can be.

V. 41. A certain Creditor] The ſcope of this parable is, by proportion to ſhew. 1. That, what, or how little ſoever a man oweth to God, he is ever unable to make payment, and to ſatisfie his juſtice. 2. That as the debtor (whether of a greater, or ſmaller ſum) is abſolutely diſcharged of the whole debt, if his creditor (that is God) forgive him all; and therefore are no more to be condemned as ſinners: ſuch are all they who truly believe in Chriſt for their juſtification. See Rom. 5. 1 Rom. 8. 1. 33, 34. this, Simon who looked only on the law, knew not.

V. 43. Thou haſt rightly judged] From this principle of common reaſon Chriſt would make him underſtand, and condemn his own raſh judgment: and therefore ſpake he in a parable, that he might behold, as it were the ſun under a cloud.

V. 44. Seeſt thou this woman] Whom thou contemneſt and condemneſt as unworthy of this preſence: yet ſhe hath done more than thy ſelf, who haſt neglected ſome ſmall and eaſie things in thy entertainment.

thou gaveſt me no water] It was their manner of entertaining ſtrangers in thoſe hot regions to give them water for their feet, to waſh and cool them. Gen. 18. 4. & 19. 2. Judg. 1. 19. 21. this Simon neglected: but the woman waſhed his feet with tears of repentance, moſt acceptable to God, who would not the death, but converſion of ſinners; at which, the Angels in heaven rejoyce. chap. 15. 7.

and wiped them with the hairs of her head] this was a token of her repentance: the unchaſt women are very careful and induſtrious in adorning their heads, which this convert ſo much neglected now, that ſhe caſt off all dreſſings, and uſeth her diſhevelled hair to the meaneſt office, the wiping of his feet which ſhe had wet vvith tears.

V. 45. Thou gaveſt me no kiſſe] Which was the uſual manner of ſalutations with the people of thoſe parts. Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 14.

to kiſſe my feet] This ſhevved her humility, the ſureſt ground of true converſion to Chriſt: God giveth grace to the humble.

V. 46. My head with oyl, &c. That is, vvith oyntment made of oyl, and other ſvveet ingredients: it ſeemeth their cuſtom vvas, at ſolemn feaſts, to pour ſvveet oyntment on the heads of their gueſts, this Simon neglected; but this convert anoynted his feet, thus uſe the proud to condemn others, of vvhom themſelves come ſhort in duties to God.

V. 47. Her ſinnes which are many] Many, that is, as Euthymius vvell interpreteth, all: for vvhere God forgiveth one ſin, he forgiveth all.

are forgiven her] here is no ſatisfaction on her part, but free remiſſion on Gods: to v. 42. ἐχαρίσατο, he frankly, and freely forgave both.

for ſhe loved much] as this forgiveneſs of ſo great a debt of ſinne, is a juſt cauſe of much love; ſo was that ſo great love a certain Argument from the effect, of her ſins remiſſion: for vvhere God remitteth great ſins, he alſo ſheddeth abroad great love in the converts heart: ſo that Chriſt alledgeth her love to God, not as a Cauſe, but as a certain conſequence of her ſinnes remiſſion, and ſo was ſhe (as Nazianzen ſaid of Cyprian, orat. 18 πολὺς ἐν ἀσεβείᾳ, ϗ πλεῖον ἐν εὐσεβείᾳ, abundant in ſin, but more in ſanctity.

V. 48 Thy ſins are forgiven thee] She came with faith, but wanted comfort for her afflicted ſoul (which her abundant tears declared) as appeareth in his pronouncing peace to her, verſe 50. and thus ſhe heareth the judges voyce abſolving her, whoſe preventing free grace gave her confidence to flye to the ſanctuary of his mercy.

V. 49. To ſay within themſelves] ἐν ἑαυτοῖς may be as much as πρὸς ἀλλήλους, among themſelves; it ſkilleth not much whether of theſe we here underſtand: they thought what they ſaid, and Chriſt equally knew both. See on ver. 39.

V. 50 Thy faith hath ſaved thee] To confirm her and to ſtop the gainſayers mouthes, he commendeth her faith, which alone can juſtify us before God, and bring us aſſurance of our reconciliation with him; this is to be underſtood of faith which worketh by love. Gal. 5. ever fruitful of good works: neither is our peace and ſalvation in the merit of faith, but in the ſole merit of Chriſt apprehended by faith go in peace] As chap 8.48. peace of conſcience; which ever goeth with remiſſion of ſins and juſtification (Mark 5. 34 Rom. 5.1.) both which he ſpecified, ut de præterito ſit ſolicita, & ſecura de futuro, ſolicitous for her ſins paſt (that ſhe neither relapſe, nor become proud in foegetting them) and ſecure for the future; (that he who had once freely pronounced her pardon, would never recall it) *Bernard. CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 1. Every city and village] For being aſſigned of God, to the office of a Saviour, to ſeek that which was loſt; he would not expect that ſinners ſhould ſeek him: but as a good ſhepherd, he is found of them that ſought him not, offering mercy, and preventing with his grace. See Rom 10. 20. Iſai. 65. 1.

the glad tidings of the kingdom] Of the kingdom of grace here, and glory in the world to come, that is, of mans reconciliation to God by Chriſt, free pardon of ſins, juſtification, and ſalvation of thoſe, who were exiles and aliants from his kingdom. See Mat. 3. 2. Rom. 14. 17. Col. 1. 13.

V. 2. Mary Magdalene] This other name he addeth to diſtinguiſh her from that Mary which was Martha's ſiſter. chap. 10. and others of the ſame name, mentioned in the Goſpel: ſhee ſeemeth to have had this name, as Suidas, and ſome others ſay ἀπὸ τόπου from the place: ſome ſay from a village called Magdala, (which ſeemeth probable from chap. 24. 10. where the denominative is firſt put, ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ Μαρία. Magdalen Mary; as it were Mary of Magdalen) or from a caſtle or tower, which the Hebrewes called מגדל, migdal, Chalde. מגדל magdal. Geneſ. 11. 4. &c. others reject this opinion as improbable; ſee the learned *Iſ. V. 3. Herods ſteward] ἐπιτρόπου Ἡρώδου, procuratoris Herodis: Pomponius Lætus ſaith, that unto Cæſars ſteward was all his perſonal eſtate committed: there was alſo an officer ſo called, whoſe power and truſt was ſuch, as that what he did, ſtood ratified, as if Cæſar had done or confirmed it under his own hand, *Feneſtella de Magiſtr. of their ſubſtance] in token of their gratitude to him: this received he (though he that could feed ſo many thouſands with few loaves and fiſhes; and cauſe the fiſh to bring him tribute money; could as eaſily have rather given them riches and all other neceſſaries) that their reward might be the greater: that he might leave an example, that it is but juſt for thoſe who adminiſter ſpiritual things to receive the temporal of their hearers: hee pronounceth the labourer vvorthy of his hire; and threatneth them who receive not, and relieve not his Miniſters.

V. 7. Among thorns] See on Mat. 13. 7.

V. 8. Other fell on good ground] Mat. 13. 8.

V. 9. Ears to hear] To underſtand and believe theſe things.

V. 11. The parable is this] That is, it ſignifieth or repreſenteth this: and ſo underſtand the applications following, (is) doth not alwayes in Scripture ſignifie an exiſtence a literal or real being: but ſometimes a ſimilitude, Sacramental repreſentation, and likeneſſe: God ſoweth when he cauſeth his word to be preached by his Prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters: ſee 1 Cor. 3. 5, 6, &c. the field repreſenteth the hearers, Mat. 13. 38. 1 Cor 3. as there are divers veins of earth ſome fruitful, ſome barren; ſo is it with hearers: ſome bring forth to newneſſe of life, and ſalvaion: ſome not amending, grow worſe, and nearer the curſe for their contempt of Gods word, Heb. 6 7, 8.

V. 12. The word out of their hearts] The meaning is; Satan took out of their hardened hearts the word which they heard; leſt lying ſtill in their memories, like ſeed in the ground, it ſhould at laſt take root, and convert them.

V. 13. With joy] Who take pleaſure in hearing the promiſes in Gods word concerning eternal and temporal bleſſings, in which they would be glad to ſhare, though they hate to live the life of the righteous See Numb. 23. 10.

for a while believe] Becauſe it was not rooted in Gods truth and love, but on temporal ends, and reſpects meerly mercenary; theſe failing, their ſeeming faith withered: and here, to the heat of the ſun, is affliction, tentation and perſecution reſembled; for as the kindly heat and influence thereof maketh fruitful, and ripeneth the well-rooted corn; but burneth that which is not on good earth: ſo do afflictions, &c. More confirm, make fruitful, and ripe for God, the elect and true believers; but cauſeth formal hypocrites to fall quite away: here appeareth the difference between temporary, or ſeeming faith, and that which is true and juſtifying, which never falleth away, or is finally loſt: becauſe he that believeth, hath already everlaſting life, John 3. 36. Again, the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. Rom 11. 29. V. 14. Go forth, &c.] Return home to their affairs; and the cares and pleaſures of this world, leave no place for the word of God to grow in their hearts, nor any leiſure to think of it.

V. 15 Honeſt and good heart] That which God hath made ſo who taketh away the ſtony heart, and giveth an heart of fleſh: ſo that here is not mentioned any cauſe, but a certain conſequence, of a fruitful and good heart, it is true, that God only who giveth the increaſe, giveth faith and obedience towards the word; but wherever he giveth ſuch an heart, he alſo giveth grace to retain and hold faſt the word which ſhall bring forth good fruits.

with patience] With perſeverance unto the end: theſe bring forth fruits of ſanctification to ſome maturity. Rom. 2. 7.

V. 16. No man lighteth] See Matthevv 5. 15. Mark 4. 21. Luke 11. 33. he warneth his to doe good with the light they have, and ſhall receive, that it might guide men according to the intent of the giver,

V. 17. For nothing is ſecret] See Matt. 10. 26. Mark 4. 22. Luke 12. 2. 1 Cor. 4. 5. the meaning is, that though their preaching was yet but of obſcure beginnings, and clouded by the malitious oppoſitions of adverſaries, yet it ſhould once glorioully break out and ſhine to the world, whereby the ſecret machinations of wicked and hypocriticall enemies (vvho under pretence of religion perſecuted the Goſpel) ſhould plainly appear.

V. 18. Take heed therefore how ye hear] Take heed how ye come affected to Gods word (that it be with repentance, faith, and due preparation) how ye behave your ſelves in hearing (that it be with reverent attention) and hovv you practice vvhen you have heard; that ye may bring forth fruits accordingly: See on Mark 4. 24. of Iſraels ear-rings, vvas the Idol made; Exodus 32. 2, &c. *qui malè audit, canflare ſacrilegium ſolet. See note on Mat. 8. 28. and on Mark 5. 1. and whereas Matthew ſpeaks of two men poſſeſſed meeting Chriſt, and here is but one mentioned, the order and circumſtances, ſhew it to be one and the ſame hiſtory, but where Matthew ſpeaketh of both the poſſeſſed, Luke and Mark ſpeaks but of one of them, who either was better known, and more notorious fierce, dangerous, or more cruelly tormented, by a whole legion of Devils.

V. 28. What have I to do, &c.] The Devils uſurping the parts and faculties of his body and ſoul whom they poſſeſſed, made the poor man cry this in his own name; whereas the preſence of Jeſus, was his happineſſe, but their torment. and ſo the ſpirit forced him to ſay this, in his own wrong, as they cauſed him to do many things.

V. 49. trouble not the Maſter] This they ſaid as ignorant of the power of Chriſt to raiſe the dead: as if they ſhould have ſaid, ſhe is already paſt help, let [illegible] not loſe his labour, for he cometh too late.

V. 50. fear not] Do not deſpair of help: he forbiddeth not ſuch fear as is neceſſary to beget an holy reverence; and to bring them for refuge and help to the power and mercy of God, who ſaith, Hoſ. 5. 15. in their affliction they will ſeek me early, but would have them confident in his power and love: ſicut meliores ſunt quos dirigit amor: ita plures quos corrigit timor. Aug. epiſt. 50. as they are better whom love directeth; ſo are they more vvhom fear amendeth.

V. 51. he ſuffereth none to go in] Mark 5. 37.

V. 52. ſhe is not dead] Mat. 9. 24. Mark 5. 39. She is not ſo dead, but that ſhe may and ſhall be raiſed: this he ſpake to confirm their faith concerning the reſurrection from the dead, intimating that it was as eaſie for him to raiſe the dead, as for one man to awake another out of ſleep: and it is probable which Euthymius ſaith; he permitted them to laugh, that they might be a manifeſt demonſtration or witneſſe of her being really dead and raiſed again: that they might not afterwards ſay that ſhe was not dead.

V. 54. he put them all out] All but thoſe forenamed; verſe 51. he would admit no profane ſcorners.

V. 55. give her meat] That they might know that ſhe was perfectly reſtored to life and health.

V. 56. tell no man what was done] That verſe 39. he bad the diſpoſſeſſed man tell what great things God had done for him, and here forbad the parents to divulge what he had done for them; the reaſon may be, that though he would aſſigne that man ſuch an office, to expreſſe his gratitude to God, and to prepare the inhabitants of Decapolis for their converſion to the faith of Chriſt; yet being come from thence, and doing this miracle in Galilee, he would not have it noyſed abroad, as for that he would decline the importune malice of the Jews towards him; ſo alſo juſtly to puniſh theſe excluded ſcorners, by permitting them to their own unbelief.

CHAP. IX.

Verſe 1. THen he called his twelve diſciples] Mat 10. 1. Mark 3. 13. and 6. 7. according to the number of the tribes of Iſrael: yet ſo far was the Prieſthood of Chriſt, (after the order of Melchiſedec. Hebr. 5. 6.) different from the prieſthood of Aaron, that he choſe not one Apoſtle out of the tribe of Levi, neither was he of that tribe, but of Judah.

authority over all devils] That is; to caſt any of them out of the poſſeſſed; which he did, as to give them confidence and aſſurance of his aſſiſtance, and their good ſucceſſe in preaching the Goſpel: ſo to confirm the faith, and foment the obedience of their hearers that in both, God might be glorified, and the Goſpel propagated.

V. 2. he ſent them to preach] In that he gave them power to do miracles, it ſheweth his deity, for no meer man could give it: in that he ſendeth them to preach as well as to do ſuch works, it declareth the principal end of miracles which is to confirm the doctrine preached; as alſo the difference between impoſtors and the miniſters of Chriſt; they work lying wonders to gain credit to ſome falſhoods, but theſe do true miracles for the confirmation and manifeſtation of the truth: the Goſpel having been confirmed ſufficiently; needeth no further confirmation: neither need the miniſters thereof any miracles to juſtify them, when according to their lawful calling, they ſincerely preach the truth of the Goſpel.

V. 3. Take nothing for your journey] Meaning that they ſhould not be diſtracted with any cares, for God would cauſe thoſe who received ſpiritual good of them; to adminiſter temporal neceſſaries to them.

V. 4. and thence depart] As you have occaſion to go or ſtay.

V. 5. ſhake off the very duſt] Which was a ſign of deteſtation, and their unworthineſſe to have the Goſpel preached unto them. See Mat. 10. 14. Mark 6. 11. Luke 10. 11. Act. 13. 51.

V. 6. went through the towns, &c,] According to his command who ſent them.

and he was perplexed] This was Herod Antipas. Mat. 14. 1. &c. who was thus troubled at the fame of Jeſus: the word here uſed is of ἀπορεῖν ſignifying not only to doubt as counſelleſſe, or ignorant which way to turn, but alſo to ſtick faſt upon ſome inexplicable difficulties. Hebrew ויתמה vaijthmach and he was amazed; Syr. ומתדמר vmethdammar; and he wondred; but it ſignifieth alſo obſtupuit; as doth alſo their תמה the ſame with the Hebr. תמה *tamah, abtonitus fuit, obſtupuit V. V. 9. deſired to ſee him] Not to be converted by him, but to ſatisfie his own curioſity; as, Luke 23. 8. in hope to ſee ſome miracle done by him.

V. 11. received them] That is, graciouſly entertained them: teaching and feeding them: ſo is he mercifully provident for the ſoules and bodies of thoſe that ſeek him. See Pſal. 34. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 8.

began to wear away] κλίνειν, to decline, or ſhut up. When it grew towards night.

V. 13. except we ſhould go and buy] This manner of ſpeaking ſheweth that the Apoſtles thought it impoſſible to feed and ſatisfy ſo great a multitude, having ſo little proviſion, which ſetteth off the truth and greatneſſe of the miracle.

V. 14 for they were &c.] That is, there were preſent ſo many. Five thouſand men beſide women and children. Mat 14. 21.

V. 15. fifties in a company] That which this Evangeliſt calleth here κλισίας: the Syriack interpreter giveth diſcubitus, and our tranſlation company. Mark 6. 39. is given συμπόσια,, συμπόσια, as it were by tables; that is, as many in a company as a table would hold: this was done for the better convenience of ſerving them all diſtinctly and orderly, which in a confuſed throng they could not ſo have done. As alſo that their number might more diſtinctly appear; to the greater evidence of the miracle, and Gods honour.

V. 17. were all filled] Whereby it appeareth that man liveth not by bread onely, but by the word and providence of God: and that our life is not in abundance, but in Gods bleſſing, who can make a little ſufficient.

V. 18. And it came to paſſe] Mat. 16. 13. Mark 8. 27.

and he asked them] That is, when he had done praying. Either he was praying alone, and his diſciples afterward came to him, or this καταμόνας, alone, is put in oppoſition to all other company but himſelf and his diſciples: the former ſenſe ſeemeth moſt probable.

Whom ſay the people that I am?] This he asketh, not being ignorant of the thoughts of men, but becauſe the faith and confeſſion of the Apoſtles, whom he appointed to be the light of the world, ought to outſhine all vulgar faith and confeſſion, he requireth it of them, verſe 20 and Peter as the ſpeaker for the reſt, anſwereth, the Chriſt of God; that perſon whom God fore-promiſed, and anoynted, above all thoſe that (as his types) were anointed; in whom the offices of King, Prieſts, and Prophet met together, for the work of our redemption.

V. 20. the Chriſt of God] See on Mat. 16. 16. John 6. 69. Chriſt the Son of the living God; the anointed of the Lord: the Meſſias and Saviour of the world.

V. 21 tell it to no man) Till the appointed time, when it was to be divulged to the world, Mat. 10. 27. which he ſaith not, as if it did not highly concern all the Elect to know and confeſſe the ſame: but becauſe he would not yet have his glory manifeſted before he had accompliſhed the work of the croſſe, in ſuffering an ignominious death, to redeem us from death and hell; thus would he yet leave the devil in ſuſpenſe: but principally, leſt the faith of the diſciples thus confeſſing, ſhould be dangerouſly ſhaken in the ſight of his bitter paſsion; and leſt their auditours ſhould have ſuſpected the truth they preached (neither theſe, nor they yet fully underſtanding the myſtery of Chriſts death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion into heaven) and ſo the perverſion of order in things opportunely to be manifeſted and known, ſhould have proved, but as removing of the ſteps from them who were by ſuch degrees to have aſcended to that great myſtery of godlineſſe and ſalvation by Chriſt. V. 22. Son of man muſt ſuffer, &c.] See on chap. 6. 5. He that was God and man in one perſon; in his God-head impatible, was to ſuffer in his humane body and ſoul, to redeem us, bodies and ſoules: to which God had aſsigned him from eternity: therefore as he is called the Lamb of God which taketh away the ſins of the world. his croſſe daily] Meaning, if God ſhould pleaſe to call us to daily afflictions, as it ſometimes cometh to paſſe. Rom. 8. 36. 1 Cor. 15. 31. we muſt yet endure and perſevere unto the end. Mat. 10. 22. and 24. 13. we are thereforre here admoniſhed to be alwayes prepared to bear afflictions for Chriſts ſake, and to follow him in obedience and holy imitation of his humility and patience: ſo muſt all they who will follow Chriſt, deny themſelves, not regarding their own profits or lives, in reſpect of his will and glory: ſo Chriſt ſought not his own, but his Fathers will.

V. 24. will ſave his life, &c.] That is, whoſoever will ſet more by his own eaſe, ſafety, or life, than Chriſt the way, truth, and life; ſhall loſe himſelf to eternity: but he that will expoſe himſelf to perils and death it ſelf, where the honour of Chriſt ſhall require it, ſhall be ſaved: Salvian therefore adviſeth well, de gub. Dei l. 5. fine, repudia te, ut recipiaris à Chriſto, renounce thy ſelf, that Chriſt may receive thee. Thou canſt not by any thy endeavours, ſave thy ſelf; that Chriſt alone can do: if thou wilt be ſure of ſalvation, rely on Chriſt for it, not on thy ſelf, or any creatures.

V. 25. For what is a man advantaged, &c.] Mat 16. 26. Mark 8. 36. Doubt not therefore to part with any worldly thing for thy ſalvation: becauſe, *ſi te amiſeris omnia in te perdis, Timoth. ad Eccle. when he ſhall come] To judge the living and the dead, with glory, and many Angels attending his tribunal : then will not Chriſt own him, who ſhall here before men, deny him, for fear or favour of men, or for love of this world, and the things thereof ; this doth not onely concern apoſtates openly denying Chriſt, but (as Fulgentius l. 1. ad Thraſ. well noteth) him alſo qui ſilentio firmat errorem, who by his ſilence confirmeth errour ſilendo non aſſtruit veritatem ; and by holding his peace doth not confirm the truth ; divinam contumeliam qui non refutarit, accumalat. He that repelleth not Gods diſhonour (what he poſſibly can) addeth to it ; the negligent or ſleepy centinel betrayeth his Princes Tents.

V. 28. it came to paſſe about eight dayes after] Matth. 17. 1. Mark 9. 2. Matthew and Mark ſay ſix dayes after. So that Luke taketh thoſe ſix with either limit included, that is reckoning to the ſix, the day preceding the firſt, and the day following the laſt thereof, which the other Evangeliſts take excluſively.

theſe ſayings] Or things.

took Peter and John and James] That they might firſt be ſpectatours of his glory, whom he would afterwards make witneſſes of his bitter Agony, and ſad conflict with the pains of death and hell : what this mount was we may not curiouſly diſpute, the Scripture not declaring it : the common opinion is, that it was mount Tabor in the midſt of Galilee, ſpecified, Pſalm 89. Hoſea 5. Peter calleth it the holy mount, 2 Pet. 1. 18. See on Mat. 17. 1.

V. 29. his countenance was altered] Gre. ἕτερον other, or changed from the ordinary appearance, beginning to ſhine with an admirable and divine beauty : and ſo his garments were light and glorious ; an heavenly glory ſhined in the Angels appearing, Matth. 28. 3. Revel. 4. 4. this light of Majeſty which they now ſaw, was a ſlender ray of his Divine glory, but much more excellent, than that wherewith Moſes face ſhined, which the people were not able to behold, Exod. 34. ſhewing in the myſtery. the diſability of men under the vail, to look unto the end of the law Chriſt Jeſus, 2 Cor. 3. 13. by this they now ſaw, Chriſt would give them a taſte of that glory, which ſhall be ſeen when he ſhall appear glorious in his Saints, 2 Theſ. 1. 14 Coloſ. 3. 4. 1 John 3. 2. Phil. 3. 21.

V. 30. Moſes and Elias] Theſe alſo appeared glorified ; poſſibly to ſhew theſe diſciples, that Chriſt was not againſt the Law and the Prophets, as the unbelieving Jews would perſwade men, for they gave teſtimony unto him : and becauſe theſe two were the moſt famous in the Old Teſtament.

V. 31. of his deceaſe] Of his death and paſſion at Jeruſalem.

V. 32. were heavy with ſleep] Either with joy, or fear and admiration, or a divine rapture : ſee Dan. 8. 18. and 10. 9. or overcome with watching, for they ſtayed there all night verſe 17.

V. 33. not knowing what he ſaid] So the Spirit of God opened his underſtanding to know Moſes and Elias, whom he never before had ſeen.

V. 34. overſhadowed them] Them, that is the diſciples, by means whereof Moſes and Elias were taken out of their ſight, after this conference ended : it ſeemeth the Apoſtles, imagined that his kingdom was now eſtabliſhed to him, and begun ; or they ſpake to him that he might avoid the ſuffering of which they conferred, by ſtaying ſtill in the mount.

and they feared] Becauſe it was an extraordinary cloud wherein the glory of God appeared : and the voyce was preſently heard ſounding from heaven, 2 Pet. 1. 17. Mark 3.

V. 35. This is my beloved Son] The onely Son of God by nature, for whoſe ſake we are beloved, Epheſ. 1. 6. in whom are all the treaſures of wiſdom : therefore under pain of rejection from God, we muſt hear and obey him, Deut. 18. 18, 19

V. 36. was found alone] Having put off that glory, and reſumed his form of a ſervant.

and told no man] Until Chriſt was riſen from the dead, for ſo he charged them, Mark 9. 9.

V. 37. and it came to paſſe] See Mat. 17. 14. Mark 9. 17.

V. 38. look upon my ſon] That is, have mercy upon him, and help him : for we willingly look on thoſe whom we pity and would help.

teareth him] Mark 1. 26. & 9 20.

V. 40. and they could not] See on Mark 9. 18.

V. 41. O faithleſſe and perverſe] Thus ſharply doth he reprove the Apoſtles unbelief. See Matth. 17. 20.

V. 42. the devil threw him down] Being enraged (as he uſeth to be) becauſe the child was brought to Chriſt : and becauſe he knew, that thereby he ſhould be caſt out of poſſeſſion.

V. 43. at the mighty power of God] Which appeared in his admirable work of Chriſts, commanding the unclean ſpirits, out of their poſſeſſion

V. 44. let theſe ſayings ſink down into your eares] That is, mark them diligently and remember them well ; That is, lay them to heart, and remember what you hear, and ſee ; that when ye ſee me dying, ye may not be ſcandalled, as if I ſuffered ſuch things out of infirmity, or becauſe I could not deliver my ſelf ; for in reaſon you may know, that he that hath wrought ſuch miracles ἠδύνατο ἂν μηδὲ σταυρωθῆναι : Theophylact ; could, if he had pleaſed, not have been crucified.

V. 45. They underſtood not this ſaying] They were ſo confident of Chriſts temporal kingdom, that they could not underſtand him, when he ſpake of his ſuffering death : after his reſurrection they underſtood it, John 2. 22. now they feared to ask him, becauſe he had a little before ſo ſharply reproved Peter about it.

V. 46. which of them ſhould be greateſt] Poſſibly the occaſion of this queſtion might now be his ſpeech concerning his death ; they deſiring to know, which of them ſhould be the chief or head, of his ſuppoſed earthly kingdom in his ſtead ; for yet they underſtood not his ſpiritual kingdom : but here, as alſo chap. 22. Chriſt reproveth their ambition.

V. 47. perceiving the thoughts of their hearts] For he is truly God, as truly man : none can ſearch and know the heart but God, Jer. 17. 10. the very Heathens knew this : therefore ſome of them dedicated to their ſuppoſed Gods ὦτα καὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, ears and eyes of ſome precious materials, intimating that God heard and ſaw all things. Clem. Alexandr. ſtrom. lib. 5.

V. 48. he that is leaſt among you] True greatneſſe before God, is in ſincere innocency and humility, ſuch as is commonly in little children.

V. 49 and John anſwered] That is, thus began to ſay, Mark 9. 38. It is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking (See chap. 7. 40.) occaſioned by the former paſſage, concerning their not caſting out the devil.

he followeth not with us] He followeth thee, not in our ſociety. It might ſeem ſtrange that any ſhould caſt out devils in the name of Chriſt, who did not follow Chriſt : but we muſt know, that though this power was principally given to the Apoſtles to confirm their preaching, yet was it not ſo confined to their office, but that Chriſt might give the ſame alſo to other believers. See Mark 16. 17.

V. 50. Is for us] Though he be not with us in body, or external communion ; yet he adhereth to us in faith, affection, conſent, in doctrine, and ſpiritual communion.

V. 51. received up] By his aſcenſion into heaven, after his death and reſurrection.

he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face] This is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, ſignifying a reſolving, and ſetling a mans ſelfe to do a thing, Jer. 42. 15. Ezek. 4. 3. God ſaith here to the Prophet והכינתה את פניך, vahachinotha eth phanecha, ſet thy face againſt it : the word is of כון Con, which among other things, ſignifieth to be prepared, firme, and conſtant, reſolved not to be diverted ; or to be fitted, diſpoſed, or intent to do ſomething. So here, the time of Chriſts paſſion drawing neer, he reſolved (whatever fleſh and blood ſuggeſted ; or Peter had perſwaded to the contrary, Mat. 16. 22.) to go to Jeruſalem. See on Mat. 19. 1.

V. 52. to make ready for him] Which was needful ; becauſe Chriſt was attended, not onely by the twelve Apoſtles, but many others who followed him, as diſciples and hearers.

V. 53. his face was as though, &c.] The Samaritanes took ſpecial notice of any that went up to Jeruſalem to worſhip, becauſe they had a Temple of their own for their falſe worſhip on mount Gerizim, built in oppoſition to the Temple of God at Jeruſalem. See John 4. 20. now it being neer the Paſſeover, the Samaritans took the more notice of their going that way, and therefore would not entertain them : moreover, the Jews having no commerce with the Samaritans, John 4. 9. there was the more need of fore-runners to make proviſion for them, who could not in an ordinary, or then uſual courſe, have expected any neceſſary entertainment there.

V. 54. even as Elias did] See 2 Kings 1. 10. Poſſibly, that very Region put them in mind to deſire fire from heaven, where Elias by fire from heaven obtained deſtruction of the two Captains with their fifties ſent to fetch him to their King; thinking the Samaritans now deſpiſing Chriſt the Son of God, worthy of the like puniſhment : therefore they pretend Elias example, not attending the difference of the caſe, without which, imitation of holy fathers may be very inconvenient and dangerous : So the fooliſh Samaritans alleaged the example of the fathers worſhipping in their mountain, John 4. 20. So in other caſes do many more, as ill-adviſed now : but as a reverend Authour ſaith, they who without due choice thus do, are rather Apes, than imitatours of holy fathers : that which they ſay, wilt thou that we command fire, &c. makes it doubtful whether they deſired that Chriſt ſhould give them that power they ſpeak of, or that they were confident of their power, if they had but Chriſt his approbation and conſent thereto.

V. 55. of what ſpirit ye are] You do not know what ſpirit moveth you herein: your counſel agreeth not with your calling: you ſhew a ſpirit of revenge, and therefore miſapply the example of Elias: for I am come to ſave, not to deſtroy. And indeed as Auguſtine ad Marcellin ep. 5. well ſaith, vindicta ultima juſtè poſcitur, quando nullus jam reſtat correctionis locus, extremo ſc. ſummoque judicio, final revenge is juſtly required, when there remaineth no place for amendment; that is, at the laſt judgement. So dangerous is imitation of miſapplyed examples of Saints, eſpecially to the violation of charity.

V. 56. is not come to deſtroy] See 1 Tim. 1. 15. John 3. 17. He now came to ſhew mercy, and to ſave the penitent, who will come again to judge and deſtroy the impenitent, and unbelievers: it was now a time for mercy, not judgement.

V. 57. and it came to paſſe] See Mat. 8. 19

V. 58. the Son of man hath not] Knowing his thoughts, he intimated to him, that he ſhould but deceive himſelf in following him for temporal gains, who now poſſeſſed nothing temporal, and came to propoſe ſpiritual and eternal gains.

V. 59. and he ſaid] Matth. 8. 21.

V. 60. Let the dead bury the dead] Meaning the unregenerate who are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, 1 Tim. 5. 6. Epheſ. 2. 1. not that Chriſt diſalloweth a decent and ſeaſonable performance of that office of duty and piety, but that he preferreth the advance of Gods glory in preaching the Goſpel, and ſaving of ſouls before it. See Mat. 8. 22

V. 61. bid them farewel] Mark 6. 46. the word ἀποτάξασθαι ſignifieth alſo to order or diſpoſe of: ſo that the ſenſe may be, ſuffer me firſt to go home, and order or diſpoſe of my eſtate and family: ſo that which the Prophet ſaith, Iſa. 38. 2. Hezekiah, צו לביתך, tſau lebeitheca command or give order to thine houſe; the 70 give τάξαι περὶ τοῦ οἴκου σου, diſpoſe of thy houſe: this probably was the main care of the man, to bid farewel, or take leave of friends; though an act of humanity, yet was it of leſſe moment than to order and provide for them.

V. 62. and looking back] This an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, ſignifying repentance of that one had begun. See Gen. 19. 17, 26. The meaning is, that no man dedicated to the miniſtery of the Goſpel, having in his heart a reſolution to forſake his calling, and to embrace the preſent world, is fit for that holy work: the ſimile is derived from ploughmen, who looking backward, cannot make ſtraight furrows. See 2 Tim. 4. 10.

other ſeventy alſo] After that the twelve Apoſtles had preached in the towns round about, now the hearers multiplying, there was need of more preachers to confirm them: therefore he choſe out of thoſe who had heard and followed him, ſeventy more to ſend abroad to that office: ſo the Syriac interpreteth, he ſeparated of his diſciples ſeventy other, and ſent them: the Greek word ἀναδείκνυμι here uſed ſignifieth, to deſigne or appoint: as Budæus interpreteth out of Plutarch, Creare, or make: as, ἀναδεῖξαι ὕπατον, to make one Conſul, or to deſigne one thereto: ſo to ordain or conſecrate, as Chriſt here did. Their return from Babylon was a kinde of type of their redemption by Chriſt: ſo here are appointed ſeventy, as they had their Synedrion or Council of ſeventy Elders or Judges after their return. So Moſes appointed ſeventy Elders, or aſſiſtants to him, Exod. 18. 22.

V. 4 carry neither purſe] Be not diſtracted with care concerning ordinary means to bear your charges, for clothes, or dyet: he that ſendeth you is able to provide neceſſaries for you; ſuch ought our confidence to be in Gods providence, that we may ever be aſſured, that he careth for us, while we are careful of his work; leſt otherwiſe, if the mind be too intent on the things of this world, minus aliis provideat æterna, Greg. hom. 17. in Evang. he ſhould be leſſe careful over others for things eternal.

ſalute no man] See on 2 Kings 4. 29. this he ſpeaketh not forbidding comity and civility which he enjoyneth, verſe 5. but diſtraction from, and hindrance in their duty and miniſtration. In the uncivil deportment of a late-grown-up monſtrous ſect among us, appeareth how dangerous it is to take up the letter of the Scripture without due conſideration of the ſenſe and meaning thereof: It is a moſt neceſſary rule, ſo to interpret Scriptures, as that the interpretation of one place, may not croſſe the plain ſenſe of another relating to the like purpoſe: as here; Some will not be civil to thoſe they meet, or to whom they ſpeak; becauſe it is ſaid, Salute no man: but they ought to conſider, many places commanding to ſalute one another: whence they learn their rude ſalutes, of thou, thou fleſh, &c. Let them conſider; we have learned of St. Peter, ep. 1. c. 3. v, 8. Be courteous.

CHAP. XI.

Verſe 1. ONe of his diſciples] All his Apoſtles were Diſciples: but all his Diſciples were not Apoſtles. Whether this were a Diſciple but not one of the twelve Apoſtles, it is not certain: probably he was preſent when Chriſt taught this prayer to his Apoſtles, and the multitude, Mat. 6.

Lord, teach us to pray] We know not what to pray as we ought, Rom. 8. 26. Deus ſolus docere potuit, ut ſe vellet orari, Tertul. l. de orat c. 9. Onely God could teach how he would be petitioned. Therefore his ſelf ordained and ordered the duty of prayer; and from his own Spirit, even then when it proceeded out of his mouth, animata ſuo privilegio, being animated and enlivened with his priviledge it aſcended into Heaven, commending to the Father thoſe requeſts which his Son hath taught. Prayer is a principal part of Gods worſhip: and there can be none other ſo good a teacher of prayer as Chriſt our Mediatour and Redeemer, God and Man: who as he died to give us life, ſo doth he ſit at Gods right hand, to preſent our petitions in Heaven, which his own Spirit enditeth for us here on Earth, that we may obtain the ſame. He therefore taught us to pray, and to avoid the vain repetitions and oſtentation of Phariſees and Heathens, thinking to be heard for their much ſpeaking. Mat. 6. 7. taught us this ſhort form of prayer, in it comprehending all things neceſſary to be prayed for.

as John alſo taught] By giving them ſome form of prayer: it ſeemeth, that becauſe Religion was miſerably corrupted by the falſe Gloſſes, and ſuperſtitious traditions of Phariſees, as alſo by a general depravation of manners, ſo that it was no marvel, if very few among them, either rightly practiced, or truly underſtood, that main part of Gods worſhip, which is in devout and faithful prayer. Therefore whereas now the long promiſed redemption of the faithful drew neer; it was neceſſary that their minds ſhould be ſtrengthned, and lifted up to the firm hope and confident expectation thereof, by earneſt prayer: ſo that John baptiſt, whoſe office it was to prepare the way of Chriſt, did, out of moſt evident places of Scripture thereto pertinent, compoſe his Diſciples (whom he was to inſtruct and fit to receive Chriſt the Meſſias) ſome private prayers ſuitable to their preſent condition, and the ſpiritual kingdom of Chriſt, which they were now to profeſſe.

V. 2. when ye pray ſay] Compare Matth. 6. 9. with this place, and the circumſtances ſhew, that Chriſt did twice at the leaſt teach them this very form of prayer. And hence it appeareth, that as this is the moſt abſolute and compleat pattern of prayer, it comprehending all that we muſt ask, ſo is it the moſt exact and ſacred from of prayer, endited and taught the Diſciples (who were to teach the whole VVorld the rules and practiſe of true Religion) by Chriſt himſelf, who is beſt able to teach his ſervants to pray.

Say] Chriſt preſcribed his Diſciples this form of prayer to be uſed by them; not rejecting others, which his Spirit taugh or teacheth, but to abridge all neceſſary petitions, into this one Sum. See Auguſtin. ep. 121. c. 12.

Our Father] Under one perſon of the holy Trinity named, we underſtand all three: according to that of Tertulian de orat. cap. 2. In Patre Filius invocatur, In the name of Father, the Son alſo (and the Holy Ghoſt) is invocated. This excellently agreeth with the ſtate of grace: firſt intimating our adoption in Chriſt; by whom we are to expect all that is profitable for us; as, remiſſion of ſins, preſervation, temporal and ſpiritual goods, all which God giveth as a loving and gracious Father: alſo in this (our) we learn that the faith onely which worketh by love, is available, Gal. 5. 6. So that as children of one merciful Father we muſt be unanimous, and mutually ſolicitous for each others good: and laſtly, it ſheweth us with what confidence we muſt pray: for this appellation & pietatis, & poteſtatis eſt, Tertul. qu. ſ. is both a name of piety and power.

which art in Heaven] Who poſſeſſeſt, ruleſt, and diſpoſeſt of all things in Heaven and Earth. Dan. 4. 34, 35. Filling Heaven which is thy Throne, and Earth, which is thy Foot-ſtool with thy power and glory: comprehending all things, comprehended of none: It is to be confeſſed, ſaith Auguſtine, Dardan. ep. 57. that God is every where, per divinitatis præſentiam, by or in reſpect of the preſence of his Deity, but not ſo, per habitationis gratiam, in reſpect of his grace dwelling in, and manifeſting himſelf to the holy. Such onely can be the Father of all the Elect, in all ages and places: this ſheweth us to whom our prayers muſt be addreſſed: that our God we call on is the true God: how we ought to lift up our minds in prayer, how we ought to live, if we call him Father, 1 Pet. 1. 17. Phil. 3. 20. and with what humility, ſinctity, and reverence we muſt appear before him when we pray. See Eccleſ. 5. 2.

Hallowed be thy Name] By Name, underſtand his Nature, Majeſty, eternal Power, Goodneſſe, VViſdom, Righteouſneſſe, Mercy, Truth, &c. By Hallowed, or Sanctified we pray that we, and all may, rightly know him, adore, reverence praiſe, magnifie, and ſet forth that his goodneſſe which ſhineth in all his works, that we may rightly worſhip and fear him, as Tertullian ſaith, de orat. c. 3. id petimus ut ſanctificetur in nobis, that it may be ſanctified in us: that we faithfully endeavour, as much as in us lieth, that all others may do the ſame: that his Name which is ever holy etiam apud homines ſanctum habeatur, Auguſtin. Prob. ep. 121. may alſo be accounted holy of men. That we may think and ſpeak of him with all reverence, and never take his holy Name in vain. That we may live to his glory, that his ſacred Name be not blaſphemed among the enemies, through our impiety. See Titus 2. 10 The ſum of all is, that God would manifeſt himſelf to us, and give and bleſſe the means by which all may come to the knowledge of him in Chriſt, that his Name may be magnified in our ſalvations.

Thy kingdom come] The kingdom of God importeth firſt, his abſolute ſoveraignty and univerſal government, under which, are all good and bad, Pſalm 103. 19. This is not here prayed for, as Auguſtin qu. ſ. ſaith, Quod ſeu velimus ſeu nolimus utique veniet, which ſhall come whether we will or no, it being alwayes every where and none can reſiſt it, Dan. 4.32. Secondly, his ſpecial kingdom, whereby he ruleth in the elect, working his will in them. This is 1. The kingdom of Grace whereby he governeth the Elect by his word (the Scepter of his kingdom) and his holy Spirit of ſanctification, whereby he cauſeth in them a voluntary ſubjection of the whole man body and ſoul, to his revealed will, Pſal. 110. 3. Rom 4. 17, 18. Pſal. 2. 13. with which underſtand the revelation of Chriſt and all the means of ſalvation. 2. The kingdom of glory; that is, the eternally bleſſed eſtate of the Elect in Heaven, as Auguſtine ſaith, Ut nobis veniat, atque nos in eo regnare mereamur, that it may come to us, and that we may reign therein. Neither may we conceive theſe to be two kingdoms of God: but one and the ſame, begun in the ſtate of Grace, and perfected in the ſtate of Glory: and it cometh by certain degrees, as firſt, illumination by the goſpel, and all other divine Ordinances, whereby Gods grace and favour in Chriſt is revealed, and his kingdom advanced and maintained. Secondly, ſubjection of the whole man, body, ſoul, will, and affections to Chriſt. Thirdly, true renuntiaation of the World, Sin, Satan, and our ſelves, in ſhaking off the kingdom and rule of ſin, and not following the guidance of carnal wiſdom and affection. Fourthly, affections ſet above, deſires and converſations fixed on Heaven, Coloſ. 3 Phil. 3. Fifthly, accompliſhment of all Gods promiſes to the Elect for the life to come; as Gods being all in all: perfection of every part and faculty of body and ſoul filled with glory and unſpeakable joy and bleſſedneſſe in the preſence of God: So that the meaning of this petition is, as if we ſaid, O Lord govern us by thy word and holy Spirit, that we may wholly and willingly obey thee in all things: encreaſe and preſerve thy Church, deſtroy the kingdom of Satan Sin, and whatſoever power exalteth it ſelf againſt thy Divine Majeſty, Truth, and holy Ordinances: protect and preſerve us in they kingdom of grace, and in thy good time bring us into thy kingdom of glory.

thy will be done, as in heaven, ſo on earth] We are not here to pray that God would do what he will, by his abſolute will, whereby he unreſiſtibly ruleth in Heaven and Earth; but foraſmuch as we are yet but partly fleſh and partly ſpirit, Gal. 5. 17. And as Tertul. de orat. c. 4. ſaith, Earth and Heaven; we pray that we may be enabled to do what God will for his glory and our ſalvation: we pray (ſaith Auguſt. ep. 121) for that obedience; that ſo his will may be done of us, as it is done by his Angels in Heaven. This will of his is firſt that we believe in Chriſt for our juſtification and ſalvation, ſee John 6. 40. Secondly, that we endeavour to the works of ſanctification, 1 Theſſ. 4. 3. and true conformity to our holy Saviour Chriſt. Thirdly, that we ſubmit to a patient and cheerful undergoing all that which the good providence of God ſhall lay upon us. See Acts 14. 2. Acts 21. 13. 2 Sam. 15. 25. Mat. 26. 39. which we muſt do by renouncing our own wils (which are corrupt and unjuſt, ignorant, and commonly hurtful to our ſelves) and ſubmitting and rendring up our ſelves wholly to the will and good pleaſure of God: to this end, Chriſt propoſeth the pattern, as in heaven The meaning is, that the Lord would frame us here on Earth to ſuch a holy, ready, and cheerful obedience, as now his holy Angels ſhew in the execution of his will, Pſal 103. 20. and as we ſhall alſo do it in the kingdom of glory, in which we ſhall no more ſin, Rev 22. 3. The ſum is, Lord give us grace to do thy will (for that we may do his will, opus eſt Dei voluntate, id eſt, ope ejus & protectione, quia nemo ſuis viribus fortis eſt, ſed Dei indulgentia &c. Cyprian. de orat. Dom. (ſi ſit opus ejus) We have need of Gods will; that is, his aſſiſtance and protection; becauſe no man hath of himſelf ability thereto. Let thy will revealed in thy word for thy glory and our ſalvation, be accompliſhed in our converſion, and mortification of our corrupt affections, (See Ezek. 33. 11.) denial of our ſelves, relying wholly on our Saviour Chriſt; ſanctification (1 Theſſ. 4. 3.) and cheerful ſubmiſſion to thy good pleaſure in all eſtates proſperous and adverſe.

V. 3. give us day by day our daily bread] Firſt, he teacheth to pray for (as alſo to ſeek, Mat. 6.) the kingdom of God, and then things temporal, which may accommodate and ſerve us thereto. We muſt ſay, give, Ne putetur eſſe ex nobis, Auguſtine ep. 143. and, us; for he would not have our prayers ſuch, ut -- pro ſe tantum precetur, &c. Cyprian qu. ſ. the God of peace and teacher of concord, ſo inſtructed his for unity, that he would have every one pray for all. quomodo in uno omnes ipſe portavit, as he being one, bore, and took care for us all. Day by day, τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, day by day, or for the day: every day as much as is ſufficient. So the Syriac, כל־יום culjum, is rendred quo opus habemus quotidie. By Bread, underſtand all things neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of this mortal life, meat, drink, clothes, houſe, utenſils, peace, health, liberty, maintenance, and whatſoever God knoweth needful to our natures, callings, and conditions, and thoſe whom he hath given us. So the Wiſeman prayeth, Prov. 30. 8. Feed me with לחם חקי lechem chukki, bread of my allowance, or convenient for me; as is expreſſed Geneſis 47. 12. לפי הטף lephi hattaph, to the mouth of the little one: 70. κατὰ σῶμα, according to their families; we give it, according to every ones eating. Chriſt doth not hereby prohibit lawful care and labour in our callings to provide things neceſſary for our ſelves and families, (ſee 1 Tim. 5. 8. Epheſ. 4. 28. 2 Theſſ 3. 10.) but 1. That care which diſtracteth from Gods ſervice and dependance on his fatherly providence, who can bleſſe the leaſt; without whoſe bleſſing, the greateſt ſtore cannot profit us. 2. All fraud, oppreſſion, injuſtice, and cruelty in getting. 2. Diffidence in Gods providence for neceſſaries. 4 Covetouſneſſe and deſire of more than enough, (ſee 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.) 5. Diſcontent and repining at that meaſure which Gods providence giveth us, (ſee 1 Tim. 6. 8. Hebr 13. 5.) 6. Intemperance in the exceſſive uſe of his creatures, making men unfit for the ſervice of God, and works of their calling. 7. That ingrateful looking on ſecond cauſes, and means of getting, which maketh carnal men forget to praiſe Gods providence, as if their own care and labours ſupplied them. The ſum of this petition is; Lord God whoſe providence deſcendeth to the preſervation and well being of all thy creatures, beſtow on us and ours, all things neceſſary for our preſent life, that we may daily and thankfully acknowledge thy fatherly providence, and faithfully and cheerfuly depend thereon.

V. 4. and forgive us our ſins] In this petition Chriſt teacheth us what we muſt ask, and what we muſt do if we will attain (Ut qui a Deo paſcitur, in Deo vivat, Cypr. qu. ſ. that he who is fed by God, may live in God) we muſt ask remiſſion of all our ſins, guilt, and puniſhment, without which we muſt periſh eternally: for that which S. Luke here calleth ἁμαρτίας, Mat. 6. 12. is called ὀφειλήματα, debts: to intimate what puniſhment we owe to Gods juſtice, except he remit and forgive it in mercy, (ſee Pſalm 130. 3, 4. Pſalm 143. 2.) in asking pardon, we acknowledge and confeſſe our guiltineſſe, and diſabiltiy to ſatisfie; as likewiſe our hope of mercy: thus he taught his Saints to pray: therefore as Auguſtine ep. 29 ſaith, quantum libet profecerimus, how much ſoever we have profited, ſtill we have need to ſay forgive us; for if we ſay we have no ſin, we deceive our ſelves, &c. 1 John 1. 8. The African Council contr. hæreſ. Palag. cap. 67. condemned them who ſaid, that the Saints thus prayed in regard of others ſins, not their own, or rather in humility than truly: Quis enim ferat orantem, & non hominibus, ſed ipſi Domino mentientem, qui labiis dicit ſibi dimitti velle, & corde dicit, quæ ſibi dimittantur. ſe debita non habere; for who can endure one praying, and lying; not to men, but God himſelf: ſaying with his lips that he deſireth to be forgiven, but in his heart, that he hath no ſin to be forgiven? That which we muſt do, is to forgive our brethren who hurt us: which duty is not here annexed as a cauſe, but as a condition of our ſins remiſſion in Chriſt. It is impoſſible to obtain remiſſion of ſins, without true faith, apprehending the merits of Chriſt for our juſtification: and as impoſſible for that to be without charity (Mat 6. 14. & 18. 33. &c.) therefore Chiſt herein gave us a law, Certa nos conditione & ſponſione conſtringens, binding us in a certain condition, bargain, or covenant, ſo to forgive as we deſire forgiveneſſe; Cyprian. qu. ſ. Here we ſee the neceſſity of that which Chriſt teacheth, Mat. 5. 23. The ſum is, O Lord forgive us all our ſins, guilt and puniſhment (for thy Son Chriſt his ſake) as thou haſt in thy mercy given us an heart to forgive all others, who have done any injury to us.

Lead us not into temptation] Mat 6. 13. He teacheth us to ſupplicate not onely de remittendis, for remiſſion, but alſo de avertendis peccatis, for averſion and prevention of ſins, Tertul de orat. cap. 8. Lead us not; that is as Tertul. and Cyprian. qu. ſ. interpret, Ne patiaris nos induci, &c. Suffer us not to be led into temptation: leſt being deſtiture of his help, either deceived, we conſent to; or afflicted, we yeeld to temptation, ſaith Auguſtine Epiſt. 121. cap 11. As if we ſaid, Lord leave us not to the malicious aſſaults of Satan, nor to the frailty and corruptions of fleſh and blood: We are of our ſelves unable to reſiſt the power of ſin; and have by our many wilful tranſgreſsions of thy holy Commandments deſerved to be given over and left to our own ſinful wills and affections, and thereby to deſtruction of body and ſoul: but Lord forſake us not in any temptation, but give an happy iſſue; ſo upholding us with thy merciful hand (who beſt knoweſt our weakneſſe and neceſſities) that we may neither faint in our tryals, nor yeeld to the power of ſin or allurements of Satan; but may ſo reſolutely ſtand, that, through thy good Spirit ſtrengthning us, we may at laſt obtain a perfect victory, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

but deliver us from evil] Serva nos a malo, keep us from evil, the Interpreter of the Syriac giveth it. Herein we pray againſt all thoſe things which the Adverſary practiſeth againſt us in this world, who hath (ſaith Cyprian qu. ſ.) power granted him againſt us, either ad pœnam cum delinquimus, vel ad gloriam cum probamur, to our puniſhment when we ſin; or to our glory when we are tried. And we are here admoniſhed, Nondum nos eſſe in eo bono, ubi nullum patiemur malum, Auguſtine epiſt. 121. cap 11. that we are not yet in that good eſtate, where we ſhall ſuffer no evill: This prayer (ſaith he cap. 12.) comprehendeth all that an afflicted Chriſtian can pray for: So that it is free to pray aliis atque aliis verbis, in other words, but not for other things than thoſe which Chriſt hath taught us to pray for.

V. 5. Which of you ſhall have a friend] The ſcope of this ſpeech is to teach us fervency and conſtancy in prayer; by an argument from the leſſe to conclude the greater: if men think no time unſeaſonable to help a friend in want, how much leſſe will God who is ever ready, willing, and able to help his? and unto whom nothing good can be importune or unſeaſonable; there can be no laſſitude in him whoſe word is his work, neither doth he ſlumber or ſleep, ſo that any untimely calling on him might break his reſt, therefore David ſaid, Pſal. 34. 1. I will bleſſe the Lord at all times, and Pſalm 119, 62. at midnight I will riſe to give thanks unto thee —— and he is every where to be found of them that ſeek him faithfully; therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands, 1 Tim. 2. 8.

V. 6, in his journey is come, &c.] ἐξ ὁδοῦ, out of his way. Syriac מן אורחא men urecho, which word coming from ארח arach, iter feci is put to ſignifie, a journey, or way.

V. 7. trouble me not] Which of you will be ſo uncivil as to put oft an importunate friend, ſaying, trouble me not? but rather (as verſe 8.) he will riſe and give him, becauſe of his importunity: how much more wil the keeper of Iſrael (who neither ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth; who is ever ready without any his trouble to relieve, having in himſelf that eternal and unſpeakable love to his elect, which can have no cauſe but it ſelf, which needeth none other Solicitor, or motive to entreat pity towards us) readily hear and relieve us?

V. 8. becauſe he is a friend, yet becauſe, &c.] Though he would not take ſo much pains for any love to his friend, yet will he do it to avoid more trouble and diſturbance, becauſe he loveth himſelf, and his own eaſe, quiet and reſt, rather (ſaith Auguſtine ep. 121. cap. 8) vitando tædium, quâm benevolentiam cogitando: avoiding trouble, than thinking of good wil: that we may hence underſtand, if he who ſleeping is awakned (awakned againſt his wil) to give, how much more benignly, and willingly will he give us, who knoweth not ſleep, and awaketh us from ſleep, that we may ask of him? This, as other ſimilitudes, is not to be drawn beyond the intent of Chriſt, whoſe purpoſe is to ſhew the excellent effects of fervency and perſeverance in prayer. (See Luke 18. 1. Mat. 15. 27, 28. Iſaiah 62. 7. Exod. 32. 10, 11. Exod. 17. 11. &c.) if importunity prevail ſo much with man, who loveth it not, what ſhall it do with God, who loveth it, commandeth it, and putteth the iſſues and condition of obtaining upon it?

V. 9. And I ſay unto you, &c.] See Mat. 7. 7, & 21. 22. Mark 11. 24. John 15. 7. Jam. 1. 5. 1 John 3. 22.

ask and it ſhall be given you] Underſtand this promiſe to be made to thoſe who ask according to his will: See Mat. 18. 19. Mat. 21. 22. Mark 11. 24. John 15. 7. John 16. 23. Jam. 1. 6. Jam. 4. 2. 1 John 3. 22. 1 John 5. 14. he will not fruſtrate our hope of obtaining; whoſe own ſpirit both moveth us to pray, and indited our prayers: ſo that when he commandeth us to pray, he commandeth, not becauſe he wanteth our prayers, but becauſe we want his bleſſings; ſo true is that of Auguſtine de verb. Dom. ſerm. 29. illud quod hortatur, propter nos hortatur, that which he exhorteth, he exhorteth for our ſakes.

V. 11. if a ſon ſhall ask] Here is another argument or motive to prayer, from the leſſe to the greater from the worſe to the better; if evil fathers will give their children nothing but good; how much more ſhall the good God (from whom cometh every good who can neither be deceived in his choyce, nor fail in his will) give his children that which is beſt? it is impoſſible for him to deceive his children by giving them any evil, when they pray for good.

will he give him, &c.] As if he ſaid, I appeal to your own mindes and affections: do but examine your hearts herein: would any of you naturall parents, willingly hurt your own children?

V. 12. will he offer him a ſcorpion?] Would any man abuſe the ſimplicity, or betray the confidence of his infant asking an egge, by giving him a deadly poyſon? a ſcorpion is a venemous ſerpent which bringeth forth young, ovorum ſpecie, like egges. Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 11. cap. 25. that which the Hebrew calleth עקרב hacrab. Deut. 8. 15. עקרבין Chald. 70. σκορπίος. So Ezek. 2. 6. vid Tertul. adverſ. Gnoſtic. cap. 1. init.

V. 13, the holy Spirit] That is, the graces of the holy Spirit, the moſt excellent gift, in which he inſtanceth to aſſure them that he who will give himſelf to them, will not let them periſh for want of things earthly and temporal; he is therefore (as Fulgentius ad Monim. lib. 1. well ſaith) to be praiſed for his grace and favour of either gift; both when he awaketh us from ſleep to ſeek him, and alſo when he giveth himſelf to be found of us ſeeking him: who indeed, nullatenus invenitur, niſi ipſe nos excitet, ut quæratur, is by no meane found, except his ſelf excite us to ſeek him.

V. 14. caſting out a devil] See Matthew 9. 32. and 12. 22.

and it was dumb] That is, it made the poſſeſſed dumb, or ſpeechleſs, by ſome reſolution of the nerves, or other obſtruction or diſaffecting the vocal inſtruments, ſo that the poſſeſſed could not ſpeak.

the dumb ſpake] He who made the mouth, and the dumb, Exod. 4. 11. can diſpoſſeſs Satan, and reſtore his creature, he onely can, verbum proferre de clauſis, vocem elicere de mutis. Ambroſ, in Luc lib. 5. cap. 6.

V. 15. he caſteth out] See Mat 9. 34. & 12. 24.

through Beelzebub] ἐν Βεελζεβοὺλ. Syriac בבלזבוב, by, or through Beelzebub. The Latines give it ſometimes Beelzebul, Tertul. adverſ. Marc. lib. 4. cap. 26. and commonly Beelzebub, it is all one, they meant (as our Evangeliſt here interpreteth) the chief, or moſt wicked of the divils. So the Jews called that unclean ſpirit, in deteſtation of the Idol of that name: 2 Kings 1. 3. בעל זבוב Babal Zebub: poſſibly not without a blaſphemous alluſion to the name of that ſpirit of the Magitians, which was called Baalzebub, muſcarum Dominus, the god or lord of flies: becauſe, as ſome report, they drave away flies: by ſwarms. See Pauſan. Arcadic. Plin. lib. 19. 6. cited alſo by Bodin. Dæmonom. l. 1. cap. 3. See Shindl. Penteglot. in בעל Hanov. 1612 pag 222. B. C.

V. 16. a ſigne from heaven] Mat. 12, 38. and 16. 1. It is likely, that ſeeing ſuch miracles, and through infidelity doubting, whether all might not be ſome compact or colluſion, they deſired ſome ſuch miracle, as they phancied would put them out of doubt; which was indeed to tempt God by deſire, to preſcribe him: or it may be they deſired to perſwade the people, that except he ſhewed them ſome ſuch miracle, he had no authority from Heaven: that is, ſuch as was in the Manna, thunder and ſhowers in Samuels time, &c. 1 Sam. 7. 10.

V. 17. knowing their thoughts] As the ſearcher of hearts, knowing to what end they required ſome other ſignes from heaven, being not ſatisfied with all thoſe ſignes which they had ſeen him do by a divine and heavenly power; knowing it was their infidelity, and impious minde to calumniate him.

every kingdom] Diviſion ruineth kingdoms; unity eſtabliſheth them: you ſee by woful experience, the kingdom of Satan powerful among you, not only, not the wicked caſt-awayes, but in that which is more apparent, ſo many which are now poſſeſſed of evil ſpirits in Iſrael: therefore Satans kingdom is not againſt it ſelf. Devils conſpire againſt all that which is good; but not againſt one another, or any thing which is evil: they are caſt out againſt their wils, chap. 9. 39.

V. 18. If Satan be divided] See Mat. 12. 26.

V. 19. If I by Beelzebub, &c.] Mat. 12. 27.

by whom do your ſons, &c.] That which ye allow in your children, why reprehend you in me? We may underſtand this either of their Exorciſts, or of ſome of thoſe to whom God had formerly given this gift of healing.

V. 20. with the finger of God] ἐν δακτύλῳ Θεοῦ, meaning by the power of God, Exod. 8. 19. it is called אצבע אלהום etsbah elohim, 70 δάκτυλος Θεοῦ: which Matth. 12. 28. is called the ſpirit of God.

the kingdom of God is come upon you] Meaning not onely the preaching of the goſpel of the kingdom; but alſo the power of Chriſt deſtroying the works of the devil, caſting him out of his uſurped poſſeſſions, and tranſlating his elect from the powers of darkneſſe into his kingdom of grace, Coloſ. 1. 13. and marvellous light: this was come to them who would not believe; which was a ſigne and argument of their greater condemnation.

V. 21. When a ſtrong man] Matth. 12. 29, ἰσχυρὸς, ſtrong or powerful. Heb, בן חיל ben chaiil, filius virtutis, 1 Sam. 14. 52. 2 Kings 2. 16. &c. a ſon of power or ſtrength; ſo uſed they to cal the ſtrong or mighty.

keepeth his palace] He compareth Satan in the heart of the unregenerate, to ſome uſurping prince, or powerfull tyrant, or Goliah-like gyant, domineering in confidence of his own ſtrength; and himſelf to be conquerer (who bare his type) till Chriſt come to conquer and caſt him out; Satan ruleth, as it were a king, in his palace, commanding all parts and faculties of man, in peace, that is, quietly, none troubling or oppoſing his dominion.

V. 22. come upon him] At unawares ſubduing him.

all his armour] πανοπλία, ſignifieth all ammunition or furniture appertaining to compleat arming, Epheſ. 6. 13.

divideth his ſpoils] As conquerours divide, or diſtribute the pillage to their ſouldiers: ſee Iſa. 11. 14 Iſa. 49. 24. his meaning is to ſhew how he came to redeem mankinde, which had no power to deliver it ſelf from the captivity and tyranny wherein Satan held the greateſt part of the world, untill Chriſt came, and reſcued all thoſe impropriated veſſels of honour, reſtoring God his elect, and to them the graces and ſtate of

holineſſe whereof Satan had diſpoyled them.

V. 23. He that is not with me] Matt. 12. 30. he that declareth not himſelf to be on my ſide; for there is no man, but he is either Chriſts or Satans: Chriſt can have no communion with Satan, (as they blaſphemouſly imagined in his caſting out devils) for Satans work is onely to deſtroy and ſcatter: but Chriſt, his work is to ſave and gather together the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael.

V. 24. when the uncle an ſpirit] Mat. 12.43.

is gone out of a man] Not that Satan ever leaveth any, except the ſpirit of regeneration drive him out: but that in ſome vacations, and want of oppertunities to precipitate them to ſins, he ſeemeth to be gone for a time: the purpoſe is, to ſhew the wretched condition of thoſe who abuſed light and grace offered them; or who being illuminated with the knowledge of God, ſeeming to have eſcaped from the ſnares and power of Satan, do yet relapſe to pride envy, malice, luſt, drunkenneſſe, &c. for their laſt eſtate is far worſe than the firſt: ſin never ſtandeth at a ſtay, but groweth worſe and worſe; 2 Peter 2. 20. Heb. 6. 4. and the judgement ſhall be proportionable.

ſeeking reſt] Meaning ſome other heart, where he might rule without any reſiſtance: Satans reſt is in the worſt of motions to hurt men, and to make them as damnable as himſelf.

V. 25. ſwept and garniſhed] Mat. 12.44. by a little formal repentance, or fruitleſſe reſolution to do ſome good.

V. 26. ſeven other, &c.] That is, many worſe, and ſo that mans ſtate becometh more deſperate, as v. 24.

V. 27. a certain woman of the company] Admiting the power and wiſdom of Chriſt; while the envious Scribes and Phariſees ſtudied, and vented their blaſphemy, ſhe thus confidently profeſſeth his excellency, this ſeemeth a proverbial manner of ſpeaking, importing a good and excellent perſon; and the reaſon thereof may ſeem to be; becauſe it is a bleſſing of God to be the mother of prudent, holy, and excellent children; as the contrary is a great affliction and unhappineſs.

V. 28. that hear the word, &c.] Without which no carnal priviledge can make happy, but we muſt keep it; for not the hearers, but the doers of Gods word are juſtified. See Rom. 2. 13. Jam. 1. 23. Mat. 5. 26. it is the food (of the ſoul) which cannot nouriſh except the ſtomake retain it to a good digeſtion.

V. 29. and when the people] Mat. 12. 38.

were gathered] When the multitude encreaſed, and were gathered to him.

V. 30. For as Jonah was a ſigne] See Jon. 2. 1. as Jonas deliverance out of the belly of the whale was a ſufficient proof of his miniſtery, ſo Chriſts reſurrection the third day, was of his miſſion: and therefore as the Ninevites beleeved Jonas, after he had been three dayes in the whales belly, ſo ſhould theſe believe and repent after his reſurrection the third day; Acts 2. 37. 41. 47. or elſe be left excuſeleſs.

V. 31. The Queen of the ſouth] See 1 Kings 10. 1. the Queen of Saba, or Sheba: ſee Mat. 12 42.

a greater than Solomon is here] That is, Chriſt the Meſſias, God and man: the eternal word and wiſdom of God: it is true that God gave Solomon wiſdom and underſtanding exceeding much, and largeneſſe of heart, even as the ſand that is on the ſea ſhore: ſo that his wiſdom excelled the wiſdom of all the children of the Eaſt, and all the wiſdom of Egypt: he was wiſer than all men, 1 Kings 4. 29, 30, 31. but in Chriſt all fulneſſe dwelt, Coloſ. 1. 19 the fulneſſe of the Godhead, Coloſ. 2 9. in him are hid all the treaſure of wiſdom and knowledge, Coloſ. 2. 3. ſo that (as Bernard ſaith ſup. Cant. ſerm. 27.) he, Non tam ſapiens, quam ipſa ſapientia eſt: is not onely wiſe, but wiſdom it ſelf: and ſo CHRIST excelleth all creatures: no creature is its own eſſence.

V. 32. The men of Nineve ſhall riſe up, &c.] See Jon. 3. 5. their example ſhall be an argument of condemnation againſt thoſe, who regarded not the preaching of a greater than Solomon, than all men, as John Baptiſt ſaith, John 3. 31.

V. 33. no man when he hath lighted, &c.] See Matth. 5. 15. Mark 4. 21. Luke 8. 16. his purpoſe is to ſhew, that though his preaching found little good effect in that evil generation, yet would he not hide the light which he brought not in vain into the world: this ſimilitude of light accommodate to the office of the miniſtery, is often uſed in holy Scripture, to teach us what we ought to endeavour to.

under a buſhel] See Mat. 5. 15.

V. 34 the light of the body is the eye] See Matth. 6. 22. as a window is called a light, becauſe it letteth light into the room: theſe words ſeem to give a reaſon why that generation continued blinde, in ſo clear a light of the goſpel preached to them: becauſe the eye of their minde was darkned with ambition pride, envy, malice, covetouſneſs, and other wicked affections; hence it came to paſs, that they, not onely underſtood not the truth which Chriſt ſhewed them, but oppoſed the ſame, accounting it darkneſs and errour.

ſingle] Clear without blemiſh, quick-ſighted; if the cryſtal humor, and pupilla oculi, were coloured, the eye could not ſee any other colour, for meus exiſtens prohibet alienum, that colour of the eye-ball would not ſuffer any other to be perceived; therefore hath the God of wiſdom (wonderfull in all his works) made that (like a clear glaſſe-window to let in light to the houſe) without any colour in it, that through it the ſpecies of things ſeen, might be preſented through the optic nerves to the common ſenſe; and ſo we have a right apprehenſion of things ſenſible: and ſo proportionably is it with things intellectual.

whole body] Meaning that the whole body is directed by a ſufficient light.

V. 35. that the light] That which ſeemeth to be light, take heed it be no darkneſſe of errour.

V. 36. no part dark] He meaneth this of true illumination by Gods word and holy Spirit, not as if any man (though regenerate) were free from all ignorance, but becauſe in regeneration every part is ſanctified and renewed (though not in this life perfected) ſo that we thereby walk as children of light.

V 37. a certain Phariſee beſought him, &c] Some of theſe invited him ſometimes, though poſſibly with ſeveral intentions; he who came to ſave ſinners, omitted no opportunity thereto. See Chap. 7. 36.

V. 38. Phariſee ſaw it] See Mark 7 3 &c.

firſt waſhed] They waſhed often according to their ſuperſtitious tradition, and he wondred why Chriſt did not ſo alſo, Mark 7. 2, 3, &c.

V. 39. and the Lord ſaid] See Matth. 23. 25. See the admirable difference between Chriſt, and the men of this world Chriſt, as a true friend, not ſo much endeavouring to pleaſe as to profit, plainly told the Phariſee his, and his fellows, faults; but the paraſitical trencher-flies will rather betray their benefactours ſoul by their ſilence, than venture their own intereſt in their favour by reproving them, and telling them the truth, that they might amend their faults.

V. 40. make that which is within alſo] Both body and ſoul, that God may be ſerved in both according to his revealed will, not your own tradition: you waſh the hands, and neglect the heart: it is deep hypocriſie to be ſolicitous for that which man ſeeth, and to neglect that which God ſeeth, and principally requireth. See Mat. 23. 26. 2 Cor. 7. 1. James 4 8.

V. 41. But rather give almes of ſuch things as you have] Τὰ ἐνόντα, that is, κατὰ τὰ ἐνόντα, according to the things which you have: τὰ ὑπάρχοντα, as Chap. 12. 33. The Syriac interpreter giveth it, id quod adeſt: as it is Geneſ. 32. 13. מן הבא ביד min habba beiad, of that which came to hand, which he had ready: the meaning is, as you are able and provided to give: it is not waſhing the body can make you clean or holy before God, but faith and a good conſcience within: ſpecially charity in giving according to your ability, wherein God will accept you, as clean.

V. 42. Wo unto you Phariſees] See Mat. 23. 23.

theſe ought ye to have done] As if he had ſaid; you Phariſees do well to pay tithes of all the increaſe of the earth, for ſo the Law commandeth, Levit. 27. 30. and in Abrahams tithes payed to Melchiſedec, it appeareth to be due by the law of nature, (the ground of the moral Law, and long before the Levitical Law commenced, in force) the tranſcript whereof is the Law written by God on the tables of ſtone. Next we muſt conſider, that God (the beſt and ſureſt interpreter of his own Law) interpreteth detention of tithes to be ſacriledge, as it is written, Mal. 3. 8 ye have robbed me—in tithes and offerings: notwithſtanding, men otherwiſe interpreted, who ſaid, Wherein have we robbed thee? and ſo a breach of the eighth precept of the morall law, therefore ſtanding ſtill in force; for Chriſt came not to diſſolve the Law, Matth. 5. 17. this ſpeech then of Chriſt, at the period of the Leviticall Law, affirming that they ought to pay tithes of all, even to the very herbs; ought not to be reſtrained as relating onely to the prieſthood of Aaron, it doth as duly now concern the Miniſters of the Goſpel, as any other part or branch of the moral Law: it being ſufficient for that, once to have ſaid to all perſons, times and places, Thou ſhalt not ſteal; the Prophet ſo expreſſely interpreting detention of tithes to be ſtealing and robbing; by ſo much more abominable, becauſe God hath vouchſafed to take tithes upon his own accompt in the Miniſters behalf, leſt it ſhould be thought an humane intereſt, and in the power of man to alienate them, under any pretence or colour whatſoever. It can be no leſſe than impious ingratitude to detain the tenth from God, who giveth us freely nine parts for our own uſe. Quid faceres ſi novem partibus ſibi ſumptis tibi decimam reliquiſſet? ſaith Auguſtin. de Temp. ſer. 219. what wouldeſt thou do, if he ſhould have taken nine parts to himſelf and left thee only one? All is his: he requireth but his own: he may diſpoſe of it as he pleaſeth. Neither doth he require tithes for his own ſake, but for our good: as for a maintenance which his wiſdom layed out for the Miniſters, which watch over our ſouls; ſo that he might bleſſe the other nine parts to us as it is written, Proverbs 3. 9 10. Honour the Lord with thy ſubſtance and with the firſt fruits of all thy encreaſe: ſo ſhall thy barnes be filled with plenty, and thy preſſes ſhall burſt out with new wine. And again, Mal 3. 10. Bring ye all the tithes into the ſtore-houſe, and prove me now herewith, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, if I will not open unto you the windows of heaven, and poure you out a bleſſing, that there ſhall not be room enough to receive it, &c. the curſe lyeth upon the detainers of tithes,not onely in particular, but in the general : Ye are curſed with a curſe ; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation, Mal. 3. 9. many fearful inſtances to this purpoſe do both our hiſtories, and memories afford us, too large for our preſent purpoſe. Two things are conſiderable by thoſe, who are of other opinion,and the third not contemptible : firſt, whereas they ſay, the Miniſters ſhal have otherwiſe a competency; let them conſider : how dangerouſly the wiſdom of man aſſaileth the amendment or bettering of Gods wiſdom and decrees. Secondly, whereas they ſuppoſe tithes were due in the ceremonial Law onely, not by the moral, let them conſider. Firſt, what could tithes prefigure, accompliſhed, (and ſo repealed) in Chriſt. And next, that (whereas all the ceremonies of the Law are repealed in particular, or in the general, ſo in the Goſpel or new Teſtament, as that their aboliſhing neceſſarily concludeth the abolition of all the particulars thereto appertaining) no one Text of the new Teſtament evidently,or by neceſſary conſequence prohibiting tithes, can be produced: whereas this preſent text ſaith, theſe ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone : and the forecited interpreteth the detention of tithes ſacriledge, or robbing of God : denouncing the curſe to the detainers, pronouncing the bleſſing to the payers thereof : now whatſoever was commanded in the Old Teſtament, having its ground in the law of nature, and being not repealed in the new; muſt yet ſtand in force, as a duty of the morall law. Thirdly, it is conſiderable, that every branch of the moral law, is indiſpenſable : ſo that if Miniſters and people ſhould conſent to any violation thereof: there can reaſonably be expected none other ſentence from the juſtGod,than that forecited,Mal.3.9.ye are curſed with a curſe; for you have robbed me, even this whole nation: Yet they ſaid, wherein have we robbed thee ? confident that detention of tithes was no ſin.To conclude,that whichChriſt taxeth here,is their not being as well careful for judgement, mercy, faith, (Matth. 23. 23.) and the love of God, as they ſeemed to be in paying ſmall tithes.

V. 43. Ye love the uppermoſt ſeats] See Matth. 23. 6. Mark 12. 38. Luke 20. 46.

V. 44. Ye are as graves] See Matth 23. 27. your filthy corruptions within you, appear not unto men, ſo that deceived by your ſhews of ſanctity, they eaſily fall into a dangerous imitation of you.

V. 45. Then anſwered one of the lawyers] One of the expounders of the law, thou reproacheſt us alſo] Thus he ſaid, as taking it for granted, that the interpreters of the law were unreprovable; he cenſureth Chriſts juſt condemning their hypocriſie : ſo hard is reformation, where pride, hypocriſie, and opinion of learning and wiſdom, prejudicate all inſtruction : this was the reaſon why ſo few Scribes, Phariſees, and Doctors of the Law were converted by the preaching and miracles of Chriſt, evidently enough ſpeaking him the expected Meſſias; and the ſame cauſe is there ſtill, why ſo few are now converted, but many are perverted dayly, the Spirit of pride, and a giddy influence of Satan hath ſo poſſeſſed many, that they think themſelves able to teach their Miniſters,and themſelves too good to be reproved : he injureth them, who but ſpeaketh of their ſinnes.

V. 46. And he ſaid] See Mat. 23. 4.

ye lade men] See Acts 15. 10. though they charged the people with many burdenſome traditions; yet here Chriſt ſeemeth not ſo much to ſpeak of theſe, as their rigid and imperious exaction of obedience to the whole law of ceremonies (which Peter calleth, a yoke which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear, Acts 15. 10.)and in the mean time they favoured themſelves, with eaſe and indulgence.

V. 47. wo unto you] See Matth. 23. 29.

V. 48. ye allow the deeds] Your fathers building the Prophets tombs, whom their fathers ſlew, therein condemned their fathers facts, by ſuch an honouring their memory, declaring their diſliking of their fathers cruelty; you doing the like, ſhew your ſelves heirs alſo of your fathers impiety. Non igitur ædificatio, ſed æmulatio loco criminis æſtimatur. Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 7. c. 11. not the building of the Prophets tombs, but imitation of their fathers wickedneſs is condemned : as if he had ſaid, you adorn their tombs, but will no more obey their doctrine than your fathers did : you will alſo kill the meſſengers of God, under pretence of Religion and Godlineſſe.

V. 49. Said the wiſdom of God] Matth 23. 34. as if he ſaid I ſay, who am the eternal ſubſiſting wiſdom of the father, Prov. 8. 12. or, the wiſdom and goodneſſe of God, thus diſpoſed to ſend Prophets, &c.

V. 50. That the blood of all, &c.] For in former ages they ſlew the Prophets of God, and the men of this generation continuing in their fathers ſinnes, and adding to the meaſure by crucifying Chriſt, and perſecuting the Apoſtles and Miniſters of the Goſpel ; God would now no longer bear, but powre down vengeance on the bloody nation, as was ſeen in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem : and as Chriſt foretold them, Matth. 23. 31.

V. 51. From the blood of Abel] See Geneſ. 4. 8. the meaning is, that God would call this nation to account for all the blood they ſhed ; though in their blinde fury, and ignorant zeal, they thought they had done God ſervice in ſhedding it (as John 16. 2.) he nameth Abel, becauſe his blood was the firſt that ever ſtained the earth; as if he ſaid, no cruelty and effuſion of innocent blood, when ever ſhed, ſhall eſcape unpuniſhed : of Zacharias we read, 2 Chron. 24. 22. whoſe dying words, when they ſtoned him, were the Lord look upon it, and require it : which quickly came to paſſe : for the Aſſyrians invaded Joaſh (who commanded him to be ſlain) and deſtroyed Princes and people ; and his ſervants conſpired againſt him and ſlew him in his bed, 2 Chron. 24. 25. concerning two named Zacharias, ſee the learned Iſ. Caſaubon. Exercit. 1. ad Annal. Eccleſ. 17. An 1. n. 57.

V. 52. wo unto you lawyers] See Mat. 23. 13.

taken away the key, &c.] By your artifices, traditions, and uſurpation over mens conſciences, ſubjecting them to your erroneous opinions ; and keeping them from the means of knowing the true ſenſe of holy ſcriptures, which is preaching the word ; it being the key of heaven : as alſo in that you hinder them from beleeving in me, who am the end of the law, the way, truth,and life.

V. 53. to urge him to ſpeak, &c.] The word ἀποστοματίζειν here uſed ſignifieth, ex ore elicere : to draw ſomething out of ones mouth: which the Syriac ſignificantly expreſſeth by ומתכסין vamthacſin & aucupabantur; as if it were ſaid, they went a birding : or layed wait to catch him and enſnare him in his words. חכם is a Syriac word, which, as Tremelius noteth, inter alia ſignificat aucupari, aut carpere verba alicujus. Rabbi Salomo expoundeth שפשף, viſco avibus inſidiari : Vatablus interpreteth it, captioſe eum interrogare de multis, they began captiouſly to queſtion with him concerning many things. So they urged him to anſwer, by propoſing ſeverall doubts and cavils, in hope that in many anſwers they ſhould catch ſomething whereof to accuſe him : ſo it is expreſſed, verſe 54. by ζητοῦντες θηρεῦσαί τι, ſeeking as it were by hunting to catch ſomething out of his words, whereof to accuſe him.

CHAP. XII.

Verſe 1. IN the mean time] See Matthew 16. 6. Mark 8. 15.

leaven of the Phariſees] Leaven is Metaphorically put in Scripture; ſometimes in the good part, as Matth. 13. 33. ſometimes in the bad, as Mark 8. 15. 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7, 8. Gal. 5. 9. it relateth ſometimes to doctrine, ſometimes to practice : in either of theſe, men uſe to receive a certain influence of qualities, from others whom they hear, or read, or with whom they converſe, whether good or evill as the leaven conveigheth and communicateth its ſowreneſs to the meal in which it lieth : ſo they interpret this word ζύμη, farina ſubacta, quæ acorem contraxit : Hebr חמץ chamets and Syriac חמע acris, acerbus fuit, as 1 Cor. 5. 6. מחמע machamah, here the Syriac hath חמירא chamira, from the Hebrew word חמר Chamar, mixed or confuſed. So that Chriſt here warneth them, that they be not infected with that ſame bitterneſſe of hypocritical Phariſees, the bane of religion : therefore is that πρῶτον uſed, not diſtributively to preſcribe an order of avoiding evil; but as a mark of eminency ſet upon that ſin; as if he ſaid chiefly (as Rom. 1. 8.) or above all evils, take heed of hypocriſie,with which there can be no truth of Religion.

V. 2. Nothing covered] Matthew 10. 26. Mark 4, 12. Luke 8. 17.

V. 3. The houſe tops] Publikely and openly : he reſpecteth the manner of their buildings, which were flat rooft, whence they might ſpeak to multitudes in the ſtreets. See 2 Sam. 11. 3.

V. 4. I ſay unto you my friends] He ſpeaketh thus to comfort them, and to encourage them to preach the Goſpel boldly. See Mat. 10. 28. John 15. 14, 15. A man will ſave and relieve a friend, ſpecially in that which he hath imployed him, and it were great diſhonour, to deſert him therein : therefore feare you not to preach the Goſpel, ſtronger is he that is with you therein,than all that are, or can be aginſt you,

V. 5. Into hell] To hell fire, and eternal condemnation; of this no creature hath power, therefore God onely is to be feared : Chriſt calleth it γέενναν, which ſome derive as a contract of גי-הנם ge-hinnoi, Joſh. 15. 8. the valley of Hinnom : hence the Syriac גהנא gihanno or gihannah. Greek γέεννα : it was a pleaſant and fruitfull valley neer Jeruſalem upon the brook Cedron, wherein was Topheth, where they offered their ſons and daughters to devils by the idol Moloch (as the heathens did to Saturn (Minuc. Fel. Octavio.) burning them between two fires, with hideous noiſes : for the aboliſhing whereof Joſias commanded, that all manner of carrions from the city ſhould be caſt there; ſo that there was continuall fire to burn and conſume the ſame, left they ſhould ſtench the city, See 2 Kings 23. 10, hence by a metaphor the Hebrews uſed to call hell (the place for torments of the damned) גיהינם gehinnom, as a place moſt abominable,impious,and terrible. See Joh. Druſ. ad voc. N. T. com. 1, Gehenna.

V. 6. Are not five ſparrows] Matth. 10. 29. This he addeth to confirm and comfort his diſciples againſt perſecutions, the poor birds cannot be deſtroyed, except God permit it; how much leſſe ſhall you? it is injury to the divine providence, to diſtruſt his care over us, who keepeth the creatures provided for us: he forgetteth not one of theſe; can he forget you? certainly you being of more vallew, are more deer to him

V. 7. The very haires of your head] See on Matthew 10. 30.

V. 8. Alſo I ſay unto you] Matthew 10. 32. 2 Timothy 2. 12.

V. 9. Whoſoever ſhall deny me] To the foregoing argument he adjoyneth the mention of reward: Chriſt will own them, who ſuffer for his ſake; and that before the holy Angels, who ſhall attend him in his judging the living and the dead. Mark 8. 38. as alſo the puniſhment of them, who (for fear, favour of men, or of this world, or the things thereof) ſhall any wayes deny him before men: as if any deny him to be very God and man: to be our Saviour, juſtifier, redeemer, and ſole mediatour: or if any deny the Goſpel, or any part thereof to be the truth: if any out of malice oppoſe it, for fear of men be aſhamed of it; or by an impious ſilence betray the truth thereof: To confeſſe him relateth, either to all Chriſtians, of which 1 Pet. 3. 15. or to thoſe who are called out before perſecutours, to give teſtimony to the truth of Chriſt: he will deny and caſt off all thoſe who deny him: which is to be underſtood in caſe of finall impenitency: otherwiſe Peters denyall of Chriſt, (through deep perturbation of minde in ſodain fear) and his bitter tears of repentance following, ſhew how far the elect, in ſome diſtempers are ſometimes over born in temptations; and yet by Gods mercy are recovered again.

V. 10. Speak a word] See Matth. 12. 32. Mark 3. 28. 1 John 5. 16.

it ſhall be forgiven him] He that ſpeaketh againſt Chriſt, through ignorance and unbelief, it ſhall be forgiven him when he repenteth: but he that ſhall blaſpheme the holy Spirit of God, the Godhead, out of deſtinate malice, againſt his knowledge and conſcience, wittingly and willingly, perſevering therein unto his end, it ſhall not be forgiven him: for otherwiſe, we know Pauls blaſphemy, was forgiven him, for he did it ignorantly. 1 Timothy 1. 13.

V. 11. When they ſhall bring you unto the Synagogues] See Matth. 10. 19. Mark 13 11. Luke 21. 14. the meaning is, when they ſhall convent you before the councils of Jews, High-Prieſts, Phariſes, &c, or the tribunals of heathen Princes, Magiſtrates, or Governours, fear not, you ſhall finde a preſent aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, in ſuch words and wiſdom as your enemies ſhal not be able to overthrow, chap. 21. 15.

V. 14. Who made me a judge] Chriſt would not intermeddle with ſecular government, when he was to redeem man, by ſubjecting himſelf to the judgement of man: not hereby diſſallowing the right of Magiſtracy and government by civill judicature, but intimating that God had now given him another calling: teaching every one to contain himſelf within the limits of his own calling, and not to uſurpe and intermeddle with others; admoniſhing all men, to beware of covetouſneſſe the fountain of contention: and laſtly, laying the ground for that which the Apoſtle urgeth. 2 Timothy 2. 4. that the ſtate of a Miniſter ſhould herein be proportionable to the condition of a ſouldier; diſſentangled from the affairs of this life, that he may pleaſe him, who hath choſen him to another office: not that the Miniſter may not meddle with any affairs ſecular, but that he may not thereby be entangled, and hindred from the work of his Miniſtery, to which God hath choſen him, and ſet him apart, as Romans 1. 1. nor be impropriated to the execution of civil offices of judicature or the like, becauſe it can be no leſſe than ſacriledge to convert that, in whole or any part, to common uſes (which is ſacred by a peculiar dedication to God and his Religious ſervice) incompatible with that conſecration and miniſtration; therefore Chriſt refuſed this office of civil judicature; becauſe he had no calling thereto, but to be a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedec (Hebr. 5. 4, 5, 6.) though he were in his own perſon of infinite abilities to have performed both theſe offices: the fourth Councel of Carthage. chap. 20. decreed, that the Biſhop ſhould not ſo much as be troubled with the care, rei familiaris, of domeſtick buſineſſe, but, lectioni, & orationi & verbi predicationi tantummodo vacet, attend onely to reading, prayer, and preaching the word: the third Counſel of Carthage. chap. 15. citing thoſe words. 2 Tim. 2 2, 4. decreed. that neither Biſhops, Prieſts, &c. ſhould be farmers, ſtewards, &c. it is not unlikely that they had alſo in their minde that of the Apoſtle; 1 Tim. 4. 15 that which ſome alleadge out of Poſſidonius, vit. Auguſtin. cap 19. that he ſpent whole dayes in compounding controverſies; and that which they bring out of Auguſtin de opere Monach. c. 29. To. 3. conclude nothing againſt us herein, ſeeing it appeareth not that Auguſtin executed any civil office of judicature; but that which was Eccleſiaſtical and immediatly ſubordinate to Religion, as are peace, mercy, and charity; which the firſt Counſell of Antioch allowed and enjoyned. chap. 20. it was ordeined that twice a year the Biſhops ſhould meet; διὰ τὰς ἐκκλησιαστικὰς χρείας, ϗ τὰς τῶν ἀμφισβητουμένων διαλύσεις, for Eccleſiaſtical cauſes, and to compoſe controverſies, &c. and chap. 25. of the ſame: it was decreed, that the Biſhop ſhould have τῶν τῆς ἐκκλησίας πραγμάτων ἐξουσίαν, &c. power of things belonging to the Church; to give alms; and to relieve his own wants: now although theſe controverſies, did not all ariſe from matters of faith and religion, but probably ſome, or many from ſecular intereſts (which might be the reaſon why Auguſtin de op. Monach. cap. 29. nameth thoſe ſecular buſineſſes, in compoſing whereof he was ſo much diſtracted) yet was the making of peace immediatly ſubordinate to the duties and acts of Religion unto which none are, or can be well and duly fitted, without peace; unity, and charity. (Matth. 5. 23. 24. 1 Cor 1. 10. 1 Cor. 3 3. Phil. 2. 1. &c. Pſ. 133. 3. &c) and ſo, though this office well became all the children of God, Mat 5. 9. yet queſtionleſſe, beſt thoſe who were, or are aſſigned to the miniſtery of the Goſpel of peace: yet is it conſiderable, that Auguſtin eſteemed this, ſuch a diſtraction from his Miniſtery in the word, and ſuch a burden unto him, that he calleth God to witneſſe, multa mallem per ſingulos dies, &c. aliquid manibus operari, &c. I had much rather every day ſome hours labour with my hands, that I might have others free to read, pray, and do ſomething concerning divine Scriptures. and that he not onely complained hereof, but obtained leave in an Eccleſiaſtically aſſembly of the people to tranſmit and put over this burden to Eradius his ſucceſſour elect. See Aug. ep. 110 If to ſpend time to make peace, were a known diſtraction and heavy burden to good Biſhops; we may ſecurely conclude with Ambroſ. ep. 33. ad Marcellin. tyrannis ſacerdotis infirmitas eſt——nunquam ſacerdotes tyranni fuerunt, ſed tyrannos ſæpe ſunt paſſi, that is, the tyranny of a prieſt is an infirmity ——prieſts (if good) were never tyrants, but have often ſuffered by tyrants.

V. 15. Beware of covetouſneſſe] Beware of inſatiable deſire of having more; which the Apoſtle calleth the root of all evil. 1 Tim. 6. 10. ſo it is indeed, of fraud, lying oppreſſion, murder, &c. non ille liber qui ſervit avaritiæ, Ambroſ. l. 2. ep. 7. he is no free-man who ſerveth avarice: all abundance cannot preſerve life; that is, it is in Gods hand, to give or take away; as he preſently ſheweth in the parable of the ſecure rich man: and truely, non cenſus divitem ſed animus facit: Ambroſ. lib. 10. ep 82. it is not ſo much wealth, as the minde which maketh a man rich: the law of nature is rich enough to all: unto which you may quickly finde abundance; but to deſire, all abundance is ſcarcity: nemo pauper naſcitur ſed fit: no man is born, but becometh poor: therefore poverty is not by nature, but opinion: therefore you may quickly finde natures rich man; hardly deſires.

V. 16. Brought forth plentifully] He teacheth that God giveth temporal bleſſings, even to the wicked, (as Matth. 5. 45.) many times for their greater deſtruction. Jer. 12. 3. Pſal. 73. 18. therefore we may not ſet our hearts on them; but aſpire to thoſe riches which he giveth to his elect onely, as the riches of his grace, Epheſ. 1. 7. Eph. 2. 7. the unſearchable riches of Chriſt. Epheſ. 3. 8. See Col. 2. 2. 1 Tim, 6. 5, 6.

V. 18. Build greater] This he ſaith, not to condemn an holy providence of ſaving and laying up that which God giveth us (for he commanded the broken meats to be gathered up. John 6. 12. See alſo 2 Cor. 12. 14. 1 Timothy. 5. 8.) but to ſhew us how evil, confidence in riches is, how vain and fooliſh; ſeeing they may be ſo ſodainly taken away from their ſecureſt owners, or they from them.

V. 20. Fool, this night] He was fooliſh in reckoning upon many years to come, who could not be certain of one night. longa noſtra deſideria increpat via brevis. Greg. hom. in Evang. 3 . ſo ſhort a way of life, reproves our long deſires.

Then whoſe ſhall theſe things be] No man (ſaith Ambroſ. lib. 8 ep. 10.) is rich, qui quod habet ſecum hinc auferre non poteſt: which cannot carry hence that which he hath: that which we muſt leave behinde us, is not ours, but ſome others.

V. 21. layeth up treaſure] He that heapeth up riches to ſatisfie his worldly deſires without the good proviſion of faith, and good works, ſhall be like this fooliſh rich man: ſee Mat. 6. 20. 1 Tim. 6. 19. Jam. 1. 5.

V. 22. Take no thought] See Mat, 9. 25. 1. Pet. 5. 7. Pſal. 55. 22. he forbiddeth not πρόνοιαν, care for your ſelves and your families, that we owe. 1 Tim, 5. 8. but this μέριμναν diſtracting and diffident care proceeding from a greedy deſire and love of the world, diſtruſt in Gods providence, and undervaluing of the true riches of Godlineſſe, 1 Tim. 6 5. 6.

V. 23. The life is more] Matth 6. 25. as if he ſaid: God hath given thee life and ſoul, which is far better than food and raiment; therefore he will not fail to give theſe for the preſervation of the other, the Creator never ceaſeth from the work of providence, John 5. 17.

V. 24. Conſider the ravens] Matth. 6. 26. God that provideth for the moſt abject and vile creatures, as ravens, &c. Job 38. 41. Pſalm 147. 9. will certainly much more feed, and provide for man, made to his own image; whom he redeemed with no leſſe a price than the pretious blood of Chriſt Jeſus. See Rom. 8. 32.

V. 25. Which of you by taking thought] Mat. 6. 27. this is another argument to diſſwade from worldly care, from the vanity and unprofitableneſſe thereof: as if he ſaid, all your care cannot make you rich; God only giveth or reſtraineth. See 1 Kings 3. 13. 1 Chron. 29. 12. Hag. 1. 6. 9, 10, 11. Job 8. 18. it is in vain to riſe up early, to ſit up late, to eat the bread of carefulneſſe, or ſorrows: except the Lord bleſſe it, you cannot thrive. Pſal. 127. 2.

V. 26. For the reſt] For that which is of greater importance, the preſervation of your ſelves.

V. 27. Conſider the lillies] See on Mat. 6. 28, 29. this argument is, like the former, from Gods liberality ſhewed on the creatures made for mans delight, to aſſure us that he is more liberal to man himſelf: he that thus clothes the ſoon-fading flowers, will not let man want clothing: the ſcope of all is to teach us in an holy and prudent endeavour, to caſt our care upon God. See Pſal. 55. 23. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

V. 28. If then God ſo cloth the graſſe] Mat. 6. 30.

V. 29. Neither be ye of doubtful minde] μὴ μετεωρίζεσθε, it ſignifieth, be ye not in ſuſpence or of mindes doubtful and wavering: ſo Suidas expreſſe it: ἦσαν δὲ μετέωροι ταῖς ψυχαῖς, καὶ πρὸς τὸ μέλλον ἐπισαλεύοντες erant autem animis ſuſpenſis, & ob incertum rerum futurarum eventum adhuc fluctuantes. So Thucidides, by him alſo cited, ſaith, that Greece was μετέωρος, that is, ſaith he, ἐκεκίνητο, καὶ οὐκ ἡσύχαζον; they were troubled, and did not reſt, So he calleth ſhips at ſea μετεώρους, that is, πελαγίους, καὶ μὴ ἐπ' ἀγκυρῶν ἱσταμένας: that which we may not improperly render ſhips a drift, or at hull, which are not come to an anchor: the interpreter of the Syriack gives this word, neque diſtrahatur cogitatio veſtra in iſtis: the whole ſenſe is, be ye not of wavering and doubtful mindes, about temporal neceſſaries, as they muſt needs be who, depending only on ſecond cauſes, do not put their confidence in Gods providence, which never faileth thoſe who truſt in him. See Pſal. 9. 10. Hebr. 13. 5.

V. 30. the nations &c.] This laſt argument is taken from the difference which ought to be between us Chriſtians, and the profane and unbelieving heathens: we acknowledge and profeſſe that God is our Father; we call on him who knoweth we have need of theſe things; and as a tender Father, he provideth theſe things for us; but the Gentiles and worldly minded men, have not faith to depend on God: no vvonder if they, vvho have no ſuch confidence on Gods favour toward them, depend on ſecond cauſes, and endeavour to provide for themſelves: a worldly mind diſcovereth a mans diſſidence in God, and groſſe unbelief, as to his relation to Gods covenant, and intereſt therein.

V. 31. theſe things] Theſe temporal neceſſaries, common to good and bad.

ſhall be added] See on Mat. 6 33. Shall be added over and above that ye ſeek for; as Solomons riches were to his requeſt for wiſdom. 1 Kings 3. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

V. 32. The Kingdom] Of heaven, therefore fear not: he that giveth an eternal intereſt in heaven; will not ſuffer you to want temporal and earthly neceſſaries, to fit you, and bring you thereto.

V. 33. ſell that ye have] Matth. 19. 21. Acts 2. 45. Acts 4. 34.

provide you bags] Se chap. 16. 9. Mat. 6. 20 1 Tim. 6. 19. This command condemneth not propriety of goods; neither reacheth it to all times, places and perſons; but reſpecteth caſes of neceſſity: and teacheth that charity much more ſafely layeth up riches in Gods hands (who will bountifully repay for the poor) than any care of worldly men, can otherwiſe do: and laſtly this ſheweth which are true riches: illa ſunt vera divitiæ, quas cum habuerimus perdere non poſſumus; Auguſt. de verb. Domini ſerm. 35. thoſe are true riches which we can never loſe, when once we have them.

V. 34. where your treaſure is] Matth. 6. 21. Becauſe your minds and affections will be commonly on that which is moſt loved, dear, and precious unto you: therefore be merciful, and ſo lay up treaſure in heaven, that your hearts and converſations may be there: See Col. 3. 2. Phil. 3. 20.

V. 35. let your loins &c] See 1 Pet. 1. 13. Meaning that they ſhould be alwayes ready to execute their charge; alluding to their habit, and manner of girding their long looſe garments unto them when they were to do any work; he willeth them to contrive all worldly neceſſaries ſo, that they may not hinder them in the ſervice of God.

V. 36. When he will return from the wedding] The meaning couched under this metaphor is, that we ſhould ſtand upon a ſpiritual watch, conſtantly expecting the coming of our Lord Jeſus to judge; ἀναλύσει return, properly ſignifieth to diſſolve or break up: ſo Athen. lib. 1. ἀπὸ τοῦ δείπνου ἀναλύοντες which may be interpreted breaking up company, to go home: ſome take it tranſlatitiouſly from ſhips breaking ground, to returne whence they came.

V. 37. and ſerve them] That is, God will abundantly requite their ſervice in Chriſt, with eternal bleſſings.

V. 38. in the ſecond watch] They were wont to divide the night into four watches; ſo often they relieved and changed the turns of their watchmen or centinels, from the courts of guard. See Matthew 14. 25. Exod. 14. 24. Theophylact underſtandeth here τὰς διαφόρους ὥρας τῆς ζωῆς ἡμῶν the divers hours or times of our life. The meaning is, whether he come ſooner or later, to take thee out of this life; this know, quos diu ut convertantur tolerat, non converſos, durius damnat. Greg. hom. 12. in Evang. thoſe whom he long tolerateth, that they may be converted, he more heavily damneth if they convert not.

or in the third] The meaning is, becauſe the hour of death or judgement is uncertain; therefore we muſt alwayes be provided for it. See Job 14. 14. See verſe 40.

V. 39. and this know] See Mat. 24. 43. 1 Theſ. 5 2. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 3. 3, & 16. 15.

V. 41. this parable unto us] Whether doth this parable appertain to us Apoſtles, Miniſters and watchmen over the houſe of Iſrael; or unto all men?

V. 42. Who then is that faithful, &c.] Matthew 24. 45 He anſwereth, not Peters quære directly, but ſo as that we may underſtand here, as Mark 13. 37. What I ſay unto you, I ſay unto all, watch: though it principally concern thoſe to whom God hath committed the charge of ſouls, yet all that will be ſaved, are alſo to watch.

V. 43. Bleſſed are &c. He exhorteth to the duty by the reward propoſed.

V. 44. ruler over all] Mat. 24. 45. that is, he will highly honour and recompence his diligence; as in things ſecular. Joſeph was honoured by Pharaoh, and ſet over his houſhold Gen. 41. 43. what this honour ſhall be, eye hath not ſeen, &c. 1 Cor. 2. 9.

V. 45. But if that ſervant] By puniſhment threatned, he dehorteth from ſecurity, tyranny, oppreſſion, and injury towards another.

V. 46. Cut him in ſunder] Or cut him off: διχοτομήσει. So Mat. 24. 51. Tertul. adv. Marc. l. 4 c. 29. giveth it by ſegregabitur: ſo the Syriack giveth it ונפלג, as Martin Troſtius readeth it; as Tremelius ויפלג & dividet: of פלג phelag. Hebr. פלג Phalag. ſignifying both; diviſit or ſeparavit, all to one purpoſe; for ſo will the Lord cut off the impious ſervant by ſeparating him from the number and ſociety of them that ſhall be ſaved: as Mat. 25 46. thus he will deal with deceivers of ſo great a truſt; this penalty is added to terrifie the idle, injurious, and thoſe who in the Church ſerve not the Lord Jeſus, but their own bellies, Philippians 2. 21. to theſe vvill he once give their portion or ſhare with hypocrites and unbelievers in hell fire.

V. 47. which knew his Lords will] As if he ſaid; if the ſervant which offendeth out of ignorance be vvorthy of puniſhment; what is he, who knowing it, wilfully, or negligently tranſgreſſeth it; ignorance is leſſe ſin than wilfulneſſe, 2 Pet. 2 21. it is vain to pretend ignorance (where all are bound to know, that cannot excuſe) and moſt wretched to abuſe knowledge.

V. 48 worthy of ſtripes] That is, who hath committed ſome fault worthy of puniſhment: he alludeth to the cuſtom of correcting ſervants.

V 49. to ſend fire] Mat. 10. 34. Cyril. Hieroſol. Catec. 17. underſtanding this of the Holy Ghoſt: others more probably of the fiery trial, aſſlictions, to which they ſhall be expoſed who will live godly in Chriſt. See verſe 51. &c. he ſpeaketh this of that effect which the Goſpel ſhould produce, not of it ſelf, but by reaſon of mans corruption and abuſe of it.

and what will I?] That is, though I deſire unity, not diſſention, yet I would not for wicked mens ſakes, that the Elect ſhould want the comfort, which ſhould come by the publiſhing of the Goſpel: hereby he inciteth them to diligence in preaching the Goſpel, notwithſtanding the tumults which they ſhould ſee following the ſame.

V. 50. baptiſme to be baptied with] Math. 20. 22. meaning that his ſelf muſt firſt ſuffer: this in the Saints is by ſome called the baptiſme of martyrdom: ſo by waters, the ſcriptures ſometimes expreſſe many or great afflictions. Pſal. 66. 12. & 69. 1.

how am I ſtraitned] Pained, or much preſſed: as if he ſaid, I much deſire that it were accompliſhed, and the redemption of man thereby.

V. 51. ſuppoſe ye &c.] Mat. 10 34.

but rather diviſion] See on verſe 49. He ſheweth them before, what would follow by the impious perverſeneſſe of men, leſt finding ſuch unexpected effects, they might be ſcandaled, and impute thoſe diviſions to the preaching of the Goſpel, which are onely accidental thereto: ſo muſt we accompt all theſe inteſtine quarrels in or about religion here ſpecified: See on Matthew 10. 34.

V. 53. the Father] Matthew 10. 35. one near and deare friend againſt another.

V. 54. When ye ſee a cloud riſing] Mat. 16. 2. The ſea bare weſtward from Judea, ſo that commonly clouds thence ariſing brought rain: ſo Elias ſervant ſaw a little bank or cloud ariſing from the weſt, before that great rain which followed the drought of three years. 1 Kings 18. 43.

V. 56. Ye hypocrites] See on chap. 13 15.

that ye do not diſcern this time] As if he ſaid; you have wiſdome to obſerve naturall cauſes, and ſignes; why can you not conſider ſpiritual things, of far greater conſequence, that is, this accepted time, and day of ſalvation, wherein God offereth you ſuch abundant meanes thereto.

V. 55. why of your ſelves judge ye not?] He diſcovereth the fountain of their impiety and ſecurity: they would not deſcend ſeriouſly to examine their own conſciences, neither would they there enquire, as in the ſight of God, what was right: therefore had they much more underſtanding, for any thing, than for matters divine and heavenly: if they were ſued, or in danger of arreſts, they would preſently make means to compound with their adverſary, leſt they ſhould be put to more charge, or fall into greater dangers: but for reconciliation with the holy Majeſty of God offended, they cared not; Proſp. cont. collat. well obſerveth here, that Chriſt did not ſpeak this, as intimating that they had either freedom of will, or poſſibility thereby to that which was good of themſelves: but that they might know that they had loſt it ſuo vitio, by their own fault of ſin, and that therefore Gods exaction was not unjuſt, though they were not able to perform that which they ought; but that man, (à litera occidente, confugiat ad ſpiritum vivificantem, & facultatem, quam ante non invenit in natura, quærat ex gratiâ) might from the killing letter (of the law) flye to the quickening ſpirit, and ſeek that ability of grace which he could not before finde in nature: which if he did, he ſhould finde, that great is the mercy of God: if he did not, that the puniſhment of his ſinne is juſt.

V 58. When thou goeſt with thine adverſary] See on Mat. 5. 25. The meaning is, break off contentions with thine adverſaries, before thou come to dangerous iſſues: repent thee quickly of all thy ſins, for which God hath a controverſie with thee: believe in Jeſus Chriſt, the onely Mediatour between God and man, and the price of our redemption; that being juſtified by faith, thou mayeſt have peace with God, (Rom. 5. 1.) in this life, abuſe not the patience and long-ſuffering of a gracious God, leſt he judge thee according to the rigour of his juſtice, which thou canſt never ſatisfie, which is here meant by the laſt mite. See on Mat. 1. 25.

mite] See on Mark 12. 142. Theophylact on this place well ſheweth, that the torments of the damned ſhall never end, becauſe they can never by ſuffering, pay the laſt mite, or ſatisfie the juſtice of God.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſe 1. WHoſe blood Pilate] We finde not in any other ſcriptures, mention of this fact: it ſeemeth he cauſed them to be ſlain, as they were ſacrificing, ſo that their blood was mingled with the blood of the beaſts which they offered: not that they were ſlain in Galilee, whereof Pilate was not Governour: but it may be that theſe were of the ſect of Judas the Galilæan, mentioned, Acts 5. 37. as Anaſtaſius ſinait. quæſt. 146. affirmeth they were; Chriſt here correcteth the rigid cenſures of hypocrites, over-quick and ſharp in cenſuring others in their afflictions, forgetting that the ſame rod is over themſelves for their ſecurity in ſin: whereas we ought by ſuch examples to examine our own corruptions, and by preſent repentance to prevent Gods judgments: however we may not judge of mens final conditions, by their preſent calamities, for God many times ſo afflicteth his dear ſervants, as thereby to bring them home to him in repentance, and newneſſe of life; while he giveth fulneſſe and proſperity to others, who by their abuſing the ſame, finde the broad and eaſie way to deſtruction eternal.

V. 2. ſuppoſe ye that theſe, &c.] As if he ſaid, you may not think that God alwayes layeth the moſt heavy ſecular puniſhments, on the greateſt ſinners; he doth not preſently ſmite all great ſinners: but he maketh ſome exemplary, that thereby others may be moved to amend the like faults, See Numb. 16. 32. Acts 5. 3, 5. &c.

V. 3. I tell you nay] Becauſe men are too apt to condemn thoſe as plagued of God, whom he exerciſeth with temporal puniſhments, without regarding their own faults; he admoniſheth every one to look home to his own deſerts.

V. 4. the tower in Siloe fell] Neither do we read this hiſtory any where elſe in ſcripture: it ſeemeth to have been one of the towers on the vvalls of Jeruſalem, which ſtood by the waters of Siloe. See John 9. 7. Iſaiah 8. 6.

think ye they were ſinners] Gre. ὀφειλέται Debtors, that is, ſinners. See Mat. 23. 16. ſo the Syriack tranſlateth it; and ſo the word is uſed, Mat. 6. 12. Luke 11 4.

V. 6. ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh] The word ὁμοίως, which the Syriack giveth, as they, doth not here ſignify the ſame kind of judgement; but is to be underſtood of puniſhment in general, hanging over the impenitent; as if he ſaid all impenitency is under the curſe temporal and eternal; as may appear in the following parable of the barren fig-tree. See alſo Mat. 3. 12. Epheſ. 5. 5. ye ſhall all (whether Jevves, Galileans, or Samaritans) be judged alike, by the impartial God, who reſpecteth not perſons. 1 Pet. 1. 17. Rom 2. 5

V. 6. this parable] See Mat 21 19.

A certain man had a fig-tree] This parable our Saviour ſpake as prepoſſeſſing a ſecret objection which a ſecure ſinner might make againſt that which he ſaid: the ſcope is to ſhew that many impenitent ſinners who are worthy of preſent deſtruction, are yet ſpared for ſome time; all which ſhall but adde to their final ruine, except they truly and timely repent: continuance in ſin is an high abuſe of Gods long-ſuffering, whoſe juſtice ſleepeth not; neither is he ſlack, but patient. See 2 Pet. 3. 9. Romans 2. 5. as the planter will try all means to make the barren tree fruitfull: ſo the good God will not preſently cut down and deſtroy men; but uſe all means to better them: when nothing will ſerve, then he layeth the axe to the root. See Iſaiah 5. 4. &c. Mat. 3. 10.

V. 7. theſe three years] That is, theſe many years; it ſignifieth the patience and long ſuffering of God toward ſinners: ſome underſtand the time before, and under the law, and Goſpel. Greg. hom. 31. See Irenæ. l. 4. c. 7.

why cumbreth it the ground?] καταργεῖ ſignifieth, among other things, to conſume or work out the heart of the ground: the meaning is, that they who are not fruitful in good works, do but make others barren by their example; and as Gregory ſaith, aliis operandi occaſionem negat, deny others the occaſion of working, and poſſeſſe the place on which others might be planted, which would bring forth better fruit. See Rom. 6. 6. & 7. 8.

V. 8. He anſwering ſaid] This deſcribeth the affection of thoſe who faithfully plant in Gods vineyard; they do not forthwith deſpair when they ſee not preſent fruits of their labours, but take the more pains with their plants, their auditours, by how nearer they perceive Gods judgments are on their barrenneſſe; and pray the Lord to ſpare them. See 2 Tim. 24. 25. Exod. 32. 31. Amos 7. 2. 5.

V. 9. then after that thou ſhalt cut it down] The Syriack readeth and if not, why ſhould it live? thou ſhalt cut it down: Chriſts purpoſe is hereby to ſhew the Jews, and in them, all others planted in Gods vineyard, the Church, what God looketh for, that is, our fruit. Iſaiah 5, 2. and what they muſt look for, who after much pains and culture beſtowed upon them by the Miniſters, remain yet unbettered and unfruitful; that is, cutting up and deſtruction of body and ſoul. See 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16. Jer. 1. 10. Iſaiah 5. 5, 6. Mat. 3. 10.

V. 10. on the Sabbath] Signifying that this miracle was done publickly, when the multitude were aſſembled.

V. 11. a ſpirit of infirmity] It was not any natural infirmity, but by the malicious working of the devil; who delighteth in the miſery and infirmity of man, and therefore doth not only infect and afflict the mind, but alſo the body; where and as far as he can obtain leave to hurt, as may appear in the hiſtory of Job, and many in the Goſpel.

V. 12. thou art looſed] It hath reference to that which is ſaid, verſe 16. (whom Satan hath bound) and to ſhew that he had power to diſſolve the work of the devil, and to reſcue his captives, and the key of the bottomleſſe pit, with the chain to binde Satan. Rev. 20. 1, 2.

V. 13. immediately ſhe was made ſtraight] Syr. She ſtretched out her ſelf, ἀνωρθώθη, ſhe ſtood up ſtrait again: this ſheweth that it was the immediate power of God, which perfectly cured her, without any ordinary means applyed.

and glorified God] This is an effect of faith, to give God the honour of all the bleſſings which we receive. See Chap 17. 16, 17. and it ſheweth that this was no obſcure work, but an evidence of Gods power and mercy.

V. 14. the ruler of the ſynagogue] That is, one of the rulers, for it ſeemeth there were divers, Mark 5. 22 Acts 13. 15, the Syriack calleth him רב Rab, which in the Chalde and Syriack ſignifieth great, major, doctor, Prince, or ruler. See on Acts 18. 8.

there are ſix dayes] concerning the errour of Phariſees prohibiting works of mercy on the Sabbath day, See chap. 6. 2. obſerve here, that there can be nothing free from the cenſure of malicious ignorance, the moſt ſacred and Divine actions of Chriſts mercy doth Satan ſtrive to black over with ſome imputation of evil, leſt the ſpectators ſhould believe and be ſaved.

V. 15. Thou hypocrite] ὑποκριτής ſignifieth alſo that which the Latines call, hiſtrio, an acter or perſonator of others, as ſtage-players, in habit, words and actions imitate or counterfeit that which they are not, but for preſent would by all means ſeem to be: ſo do hypocrites, counterfeit, ſeem, or reſemble Saints; when they are indeed and truly no more ſuch, than he that acteth an Emperour on the ſtage, is an Emperour in power, Eſtate, and honour; the Syriack excellently expreſſeth it, by נסב באפא naſeb baphe aſſumens vultum, or accipiens perſonam, faciem, &c. thou who aſſumeſt the countenance, or takeſt on thee the perſon or face of another. Mat. 7 5. Luke 6 42. this diſſembling of the ruler (who under pretence of much zeal to the ſanctification of the Sabbath, calumniated Chriſt the Lord of the ſabbath) Chriſt here reproveth: as alſo their perverſe zeal, who did not think the ſabbath violated, by works of mercy towards their beaſts, but towards men: thus he convicteth them by their own practice.

V. 16. daughter of Abraham] She was ſuch, either by nature, or imitation, (Rom. 2. 12. Luke 19. 9.) or both: in any of which reſpects they were extream perverſe, in denying that comfort to a Saint of God, bound 18. years together, with the bonds of Satan; in great affliction, and pain of body, which they would not deny to a beaſt, by themſelves tyed up with the bonds of men, for their own good, and for a convenient time only; malice is ever blinde, and impiety unreaſonable.

theſe eighteen years] The time of her ſuffering which Chriſt well knew, he reciteth; as to convince their peeviſh malice; ſo to comfort thoſe who ſuffer long: God meaſureth all, and in due time will help. Pſal. 9. 10. long this afflicted woman ſuffered, long the lame man. John 5. 5. 9. much longer Iſrael in Egypt; yet God delivered at laſt. Gen. 15. 13. Acts 7. 6. See Habac. 2. 3.

V. 17. All his adverſaries were aſhamed] They were aſhamed as convicted of calumny: it doth not appear that they were converted: but a more happy effect of this miracle appeared in the reſt who rejoyced for the power and mercy of God ſhining in theſe works of Chriſt.

V. 18. Unto what is the kingdom of God like] Mark 4. 30. that kingdome of God which is now offered unto you which he governeth by the ſceptre of his word, ſhewing the vvay thereto.

V. 19. Like a grain of muſtard ſeed] This he ſpeaketh to declare the admirable encreaſes and power of the Goſpel, whoſe beginnings were ſo ſlender, and that the Church hath divers ſtates, ſometimes it is ſmall and hardly diſcerned for the paucity of profeſſors and true believers (Revel. 11. 12) ſometimes glorious with multitudes, and by them very conſpicuous, ſtretching out her branches. Pſal. 80. 9 10, 11. to the river, and her boughes to the ſea.

V. 20. Whereunto ſhall I, &c.] Mat. 13. 33. See Luke 7. 31.

V. 21. It is like leaven] This ſimilitude is to the ſame purpoſe. See chap. 12. 1. to ſhew the admirable increaſe of Gods kingdom of grace.

V. 22. Journeying towards Jeruſalem] Mat. 9. 35 the firſt part of this verſe ſheweth the unwearied induſtry of Chriſt in teaching the people the way to ſalvation, in the ſecond appeareth his zeal to the ordinances of God: for in that he made journeyes to Jeruſalem, it ſeemeth to have this meaning, that however he preached conſtantly in the towns and villages, yet ſo often as their appointed feſtivals approached, he went up to the ſolemn aſſemblies to worſhip at Jeruſalem.

V. 23. Are there few that be ſaved?] This ſeemeth a captious queſtion, occaſioned by Chriſt his preſſing repentance: as if it had been ſaid; what ſhall become of the Iſrael of God if ſo few as you pretend, ſhall be ſaved? therefore he anſwereth not directly, but admoniſheth rather to be very careful for their own ſouls health (Mat. 7. 13.) than inquiſitive after the counſels of God concerning the number of the elect: and to avoid that common read to hell, following multitudes to ſin. See Exod. 23. 2.

V. 24. Strive to enter in] See on Mat. 7. 13. Chriſt according to his uſual manner, anſwered not directly to their queſtion, to ſetisfy their curioſity, but to that which more concerned them to know and do.

many, I ſay unto you will ſeek] That is, they will endeavour for ſalvation, by a blinde deſire thereof, but not uſing the right means, nor going the right way (by Chriſt the onely door thereto) ſhall not attain it. See John 7. 34. & 8. 21. & 13. 33. Rom. 9. 31, 32. many ſhall ſtrive in vain, as they who ſeek righteouſneſſe and ſalvation by their own merits and works of the Law, not by faith in Chriſt: or who continue wilfully in known ſins: yet muſt ſtrive in that way of faith which worketh by love. Gal. 5. which God hath appointed, in whom our labour is not in vain. 1 Cor. 15. it is true, few ſhall be ſaved, in reſpect of the multitude of unbelievers which ſhall periſh: there is little wheat in reſpect of the chaffe, yet enough to fill Gods granary: as many as are written in his book of life: that certain number, whoſe election is ſure and immutable, having this foundation, the Lord knoweth who are his: our wiſdom therefore ſhall be, not to trouble our ſelves with thoſe things, which are within the vaile, and ark of Gods ſecret counſel, but to ſtrive to make our calling and election ſure to our own conſciences (which is ſure in Gods decree) by doing thoſe things which may as happy fruits of our election, calling and regeneration, aſſure us that we ſhall never fall. 2 Pet. 1. 9, 10.

V. 25. And hath ſhut the door] He meaneth, that God affordeth us time, and opportunity of ſalvation which if we omit, we ſhall be ſhut out like thoſe fooliſh virgins. Mat. 25. 10. Pſal. 32. 6. Iſai 55. 6.

I know you not] That is, I own you not for mine.

V. 26. We have eaten] He meaneth here the Jewes, who had opportunity of ſalvation offered them, by Chriſts preſence, and familiar converſing with them; and yet they neglected it, it ſhall [illegible] profit to have eaten and drunk with Chriſt on earth; nor to [illegible]e heard him preach; except we believe, and forſake our ſins: Judas, and the Phariſees heard him, yet were ſons of perdition.

V. 27. But he ſhall ſay] See Mat. 7. 23.

depart from me] Mat. 25. 41.

V. 28. Weeping and gnaſhing of teeth] Mat. 8. 12. & 13. 42. & 24. 51. This expreſſeth the miſerable and hopeleſſe condition of the damned; who ſhall indeed riſe again to eternal ſorrows which the ſcripture expreſſeth in ſeveral terms; everlaſting torments in hell fire, unquenchable; the worm that dieth not, utter darkneſſe, and here weeping and gnaſhing of teeth: that is the moſt intenſe ſorrowes and torments of ſoul and body, the pœna ſenſus and pœna damni, in that they ſhall be ſenſible of the bleſſedneſſe of the Patriarks, Prophets, and all the elect, in the preſence of God, which they wilfully loſt. See Mat. 8. 11.

V. 29. Come from the eaſt] He ſeemeth to ſpeak here principally concerning the Gentiles, alluding to Iſai 43. 5, 6. the ſenſe being, God will call his elect out of all nations, and they ſhall have eternal life and bleſſedneſſe with faithful Abraham, which he expreſſeth by the ſimilitude of a feaſt or banquet, as chap. 14. Mat. 22. Mat. 8. 11. Luke 22. 20.

V. 30. There are laſt, which ſhall be firſt] Mat. 19. 30. & 20. 16. Mark 10. 31. in this ſpeech he overthrows the vain confidence of the Jews, who ſo pretended to be the peculiar people of God, that they would diſintereſt all other nations, whom they deſpiſed as caſt-aways, themſelves preſuming on Gods favours, as if he were bound to them, however they degenerated from holy Abraham; he telleth them here, that ſhortly that order ſhould be changed; the Gentiles being preferred before them, and they through their invincible obſtinacy and unbelief, being rejected, and becoming a ſcorn and reproach to all nations.

V. 31. Herod will kill thee] Herod Antipas: This ſeemeth not advice proceeding of any good will to Chriſt, but in hope to rid him away, that he might not teach there. See Amos 7. 12.

V. 32. Tell that fox] He calleth him ſo, for his ſubtilty, and fraudulent diſpoſition (See 2 Tim. 4. 17.) which Chriſt hereby intimateth was well known to him, though Herod lurked like a fox, to finde advantage to hurt.

I caſt out devils] intimating that he had no cauſe to fear Herods power, who commanded the powers of hell: and his ſelf had taught, that in the ſervice of God, they are not to be feared who can only kill the body: which muſt teach us conſtancy in our miniſtery. See on chap. 12. 4.

to day and to morrow] That is, for a ſhort time by God appointed; and therefore not in the power of man to prevent or abridge.

be perfected] namely in being offered up, and perfecting the work of mans redemption. See John 19. 28. 30.

V. 33. Periſh out of Jeruſalem] He ſheweth that he muſt ſuffer at Jeruſalem, where ſo many of the Prophets had been murdered, that few, or none in reſpect of them, periſhed elſewhere; the ſenſe is, as if he ſaid, tell you me that Herod will kill me? nay but more bloody enemies are you and your high Prieſts.

V. 34. O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem] Mat. 23. 37.

how often would I have, &c.) In this ſimilitude he declareth, as the tender love of God to them (John 11. 25.) ſending them many Prophets to inſtruct them (Jer. 7. 2. Chron. 36. 15,) ſo alſo their obſtinacy in contemning his counſel againſt themſelves: here is no freedom of will to good, but only ſelf-deſtruction by ſin.

V. 35. Behold your houſe is left unto you deſolate] See Mat. 23. 38. that is, the temple in which you glory. Jer. 7. 12. this city Jeruſalem, and this whole people ſhall be ruined, here is uſed the preſent for the future, both for the certainty of that he ſaith, and alſo becauſe it was then hard at hand.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſe 1. O*Ne of the chief Phariſees*] Either one of their Sanhedrin, or chief councel in matters Eccleſiaſtical; or elſe one of the rulers of a Synagogue: for Mat. 9. 18 Jairus is called ἄρχων, a Ruler, who Mark 5. 22. is named ἀρχισυνάγωγος, a Ruler of a Synagogue: alſo there was a difference between theſe; Elders, Scribes, and Chief Prieſts; as between the offices of civil and Eccleſiaſtical rulers. See c. 24. 20. Acts 4. 5. as Moſes alſo diſtinguiſheth them. Deut. 19. 17. for all rulers of Synagogues were not Phariſees, John 7. 48. for Phariſee was a name of a Sect, of פרש pharaſh ſeparavit, or expoſuit פרושים as it were, ſeparated from others ſociety in ſanctimony of life (at leaſt in their own opinions) as Luke 18. 11. ſo Theophylact ſaith they were ſeparating from others. See Epiphan. lib. 1. 16. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 3. & lib. 18. cap. 2. ſo alſo Suidas interpreteth φαρισαῖοι, by ἀφορισμένοι, ſeparates thoſe who derive the name from interpreting, muſt conſider, that their interpreters and doctors were called סופרים Sopherim, ſcribes, from the word ספר ſaphar ſcripſit, but the Phariſees obſerved the law and expoſition thereof from tradition of their elders. See Ezra 7. 12. 21. 25.

to eat bread] This known Hebrew phraſe importeth to dine or ſup, the like Hiſtory we have chap. 7. 36. why he would eat with ſuch treacherous inviters, the cauſe might be, leſt he ſhould ſeem to hate their perſons, or eccleſiaſtical order, and that in his affability, he might finde occaſion of converting or convincing them, and leaving them without excuſe at the day of judgement.

they watched him] They obſerved his words and behaviour, that they might finde ſomething to accuſe him of.

V. 2. Which had the dropſie] Whether he came of his own accord, or was ſent in by the Phariſees, for that frequent occaſion of quarrrel about the Sabbath, it is not certain: the diſeaſe is mentioned; he was ὑδρωπικὸς, ill of the dropſie, either a Timpany, or that which is the Anaſarcha, or dropſie, univerſally ſpread over the whole body, the ſwelling fleſh becoming ſpongie and ſenſeleſſe; and ſo much the more uncurable by how much longer time, the crude humour from the corruption of the liver, hath prevailed, and ſetled an evill habit upon every part: whatever, how deſperate ſoever to man; he that made man, can repair any ruine in man, and perfectly cure him; but here Chriſt provoketh the Phariſees to a diſpute concerning the Sabbath; firſt, becauſe he knew their thoughts who watched what he would do; again becauſe on the like occaſions, he formerly had ſundry conteſts with them.

V. 3. Jeſus anſwering] The Hebrew manner of ſpeaking many times ſignifieth, he began to ſpeak.

is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day?] Mat. 12. 10. as if he had ſaid, what is your opinion in this caſe? is it any breach of Gods law to cure and heal the ſick and diſaffected on the Sabbath day? or is ſuch a work of mercy to be accompted a Sabbath dayes work? he asketh this, not as doubting, for he beſt knew the intent of the law, who was the authour thereof; but that by this prepoſſeſſion he might correct their errour who thought otherwiſe; that thereby he might ſhew the unjuſtneſſe of their calumny foreſeen, who would be bitterly incenſed at his doing ſuch a work in their preſence who were of a contrary judgment, and took themſelves to be the only knowing interpreters of the law.

V. 4 They held their peace Not able to contradict as verſe 6. nor daring to incur the hatred of the people, for whom Chriſt wrought ſo much good; or thinking there was no preſent danger of death in the ſick man, and having alſo been ſo lately put to ſhame in the ſame argument. See chap. 13. 17.

V. 5. Which of you ſhall have an oxe, &c.] See chap. 13 15. which of you is ſo unreaſonably unjuſt, as that he would not, without making any ſcruple of conſcience, relieve and ſave a poor beaſt on the Sabbath day: how much rather is mans life and ſafety (for whom God made all the creatures on earth) to be regarded and preſerved? See Mat. 12. 11, 12.

V. 7. A parable] Matthevv 13. 3. 9. That is, a dark ſpeech covertly to taxe their ambition, and to teach them humility.

chief rooms] Gr. πρωτοκλισίας, κλισία, as Suidas ſaith, is κλίνη, or κράββατον a bed on which they lay down: though that ſame diſcubitorius lectus in Plinie. l. 33. c. 11. on which they uſed to ſup, differed from the bed on which they ſlept, as alſo their triclinia, which were three beds or pallets ſet together to lye down and to eat on, ſpecially at their feaſts: the Syriack word here uſed is of סמך Semach: as John 13. 23. Mat. 26. 7. 20. Luke 7. 37. & 22. 27. 1 Cor. 8. 10. &c. the ſame which the Hebrew סמך Samach: in the pallets, it ſeemeth there was (as at our tables) ſome obſervation of places for gueſts reſpectively to be ſet, which ſome ambitiouſly affected, as thinking themſelves more worthy than others preſent, this Chriſt reproveth as an effect of pride, and occaſion of many breaches of charity.

V. 8. Sit not down in the higheſt] This he ſaith to beat dovvn ambition, and to perſwade to modeſty and humility, as the Apoſtle admoniſheth. Phil. 2. 3. that in lowlineſſe of minde they eſteem others better than themſelves.

V. 9. He that bad thee, &c] See Prov. 25. 6, 7. that is, he that invited thee to his houſe, or otherwhere to eat with him.

V. 10. Sit down in the loweſt] ἀνάπεσον, of ἀναπίπτω decumbo, according to the cuſtom of thoſe countreys. See on chap. 7. 36. he giveth not this as an univerſal rule to all men, but forbideth ambition in all. See on chap. 11. 43. Mat. 12. 38.

V. 11. For whoſoever exalteth himſelf] Mat. 23. 12. Job 22. 29. Prov. 29. 23. Luke 18. 14. Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. whoſoever arrogateth to himſelf, or thinketh too highly of his own worth.

he that humbleth himſelf] to humble ones ſelf, is to think lowly of ones ſelf, attributing all the good he hath to God: which Samuel expreſſed by קטן בעיניך katon behenecha, little in thine own eyes, 1 Sam. 15, 17. not overvaluing thy ſelf, he ſaith not, he that is humbled, &c. but he that humbleth himſelf, it may be no fault to be exalted, and ſo no vertue to be humbled, therefore he ſpeaketh not here of that humility which is ex triſtitia or neceſſitate, as Bernard ſup. Cant. ſerm. 34. ſpeaketh, for that may be with pride and an unſubdued mind, but that which is, ex voluntate, of a will either meekly bearing afflictions, or humbly enjoying proſperity, the ſum is, that which Fulgentius; de prædeſt. ad Monim. l. 1. ſaith, ſicut ——fit elatione humilis: ſic fit humilitate ſublimis, as a man is made low by pride, ſo is he exalted by humility: for God reſiſteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. 1 Pet. 5 5. not that God findeth any thus humble before he giveth them grace, but becauſe dando gratiam, humiles facit: by giving grace, he maketh them humble.

V. 12. When thou makeſt a dinner or a ſupper] This forbiddeth not entertainment of Parents brethren or friends, but condemneth the errour of Phariſees, who thought thereby they ſatisfied the law of charity, which is indeed in relieving the poor and needy.

V. 13. Call the poor] For theſe are the objects of charity: the good thou doſt to theſe, Chriſt taketh as done to him. Matthew 25. 35.

V. 14. For they cannot recompence thee] meaning, that in juſtice, a recompence ſhall be made, which, becauſe the poor cannot, God certainly will.

at the reſurrection of the juſt] Where the juſt ſhall receive reward (the wicked ſhall riſe again, but to eternal puniſhment) ſee Mat. 25. 34. Eccleſ. 11. 1. Prov. 19. 17. the poor mans hand is gazophylacium Chriſti, Chriſts treaſury, and a bill of exchange for heaven, whereby we may there lay up treaſure, where we ſhall be ſure to find and enjoy it, in tuto hæreditas ponitur, quæ Deo cuſtode ſervatur. Cyprian. de ep. & miſericord. in ſafety is that inheritance laid up, which God keepeth.

V. 15. Bleſſed is he] Rev. 19. 9. It appeareth that this was one of the ſect of the Phariſees who acknowledged the reſurrection of the dead, and the bleſſedneſſe of the juſt in the kingdom of God; and it ſeemeth that he was affected with ſome apprehenſion thereof, in that he took occaſion from the preſent diſcourſe to break out into theſe words; though whether he underſtood the ſtate and condition of glorified bodies free from neceſſities of eating, drinking, &c. it appears not.

that ſhall eat bread in the kingdom of God] chap. 13. 29. the Hebrews by this manner of expreſſion meant, to be partaker of the joyes of heaven: poſſibly this ſpeaker dreamed of ſome imaginary heaven in which men ſhould eat and drink: but Gods kingdom conſiſteth not in ſuch things.

V. 16. Then ſaid he unto him] Mat. 22. 2. upon this ſpeech, Chriſt taketh occaſion further to inſtruct him and others concerning the kingdom of God, and that it ſhould indeed be happy for them who ſhould enjoy the ſame, but that againſt the common opinion of their Doctors, who thought themſelves and their ſectatours the only heires apparent of the kingdom of heaven, that the generality and chief of them, though thereto firſt invited, yet for their love and ſtudy of things ſecular, contemning, ſlighting, and neglecting Gods merciful invitations thereto, ſhould be excluded from that happineſſe, and that the deſpiſed party of Jewes and Gentiles ſhould enjoy the ſame. See verſe 21. See 1 Cor. 1. 20. 26, 27 28.

a certain man made a great ſupper] that is, God rich in mercy, who by his ſervants inviteth man, propoſing the bread of life, which remaineth to eternity. John 6.

bade many] Mat. 22. 1. many were and are called to the knowledge of God, of the Jewes and Gentiles: in reſpect whereof it is called a great ſupper, or feaſt, as alſo in regard of that which is ſet before them, which is eternal life and compleat happineſſe in Chriſt, See Mat. 22. 14. Rom. 10. 18. this is a great feaſt which laſteth not for ſome dayes only, as did Solomons, 2 Chron. 7. 8. Nehemiahs. Nehem. 8. 18. or that of Ahaſhueroſh, Eſther 1. 3. 5. and 2. 18. but to eternity: neither is it for the nation of the Jews onely, Rom. 3. 29. or like Belſhazzars Dan. 5. 1. to a thouſand lords, but to all nations and people, without acceptation of perſons. Acts 10. 34, 35.

V. 17. Sent his ſervant] Meaning his Prophets; who though many, yet having one commiſſion, meſſage and Spirit by which they all ſpake are here ſignified by the name of a ſervant.

come, for all things] Prov. 9 2. 5. intimating ſpeed, and undelayed apprehenſion of Gods mercy offered in the Miniſtery of the Goſpel, as Hebr. 3. 15.

V. 18. All with one conſent] with one accord, though they alledge ſeveral cauſes, yet they all agree in refuſing to come.

V. 19. Another ſaid I have bought] In theſe excuſes, it appeareth, how dangerous a Remora and obſtacle to the kingdom of Chriſt, the care of ſecular things is, and that all things and buſineſſes of this world, however ſeaſonably lawful and neceſſary, in their due times muſt yet give place to thoſe, which concern Gods honour, and our eternal life and ſalvation.

V. 21. Maſter of the houſe being angry] Mat. 22. 7. is mentioned the injury done to the ſervants ſent to invite the gueſts (meaning the perſecutions of the Prophets and Miniſters) and the juſt puniſhment inflicted; deſtruction of the fooliſh and ingrateful people who ſo requite the Lord; which Luke omitteth.

into the ſtreet and lanes, &c.] Hereby ſignifying the calling of the Gentiles, wretched unregarded ſinners, intimated by the poor, lame and blinde (See Rev. 3. 17.) and a people gathered as it were from the high-wayes and hedges.

the poor] The poor in ſpirit, Mat. 5. So, Peccatores ſuperbi reſpuuntur, ut peccatores humiles eligantur, Greg. hom. 36. Proud ſinners are refuſed that the humble may be choſen. God cho[illegible] to thoſe whom the world deſpiſeth: the infirm and deſpicable [illegible] of World, commonly do more readily hearken to the voyce of God, by how much leſſe they have in the World to pleaſe and diſtract them: ſo hold all worldly things, that you be not thereby held from God, ut terrena res poſſideatur, non poſſideat, Greg. qu. ſ. that you may poſſeſſe earthly things, but not be poſſeſſed thereby.

V. 22. and yet there is room] Many being collected of the Jews, yet was there place left for a greater fulneſs of the Gentiles, Auguſt. de verb. Dom. ſer. 34 nicely diſtinguiſheth, the Gentiles came from the Streets, and Hereticks from the Hedges. The meaning is, to ſhew Gods inexhauſtible mercy to all ſorts of penitent ſinners.

V. 23. compel them] Not by violence, but by the power of preaching; ſo Theophylact underſtandeth it, as Rom. 1. 16. God compelleth no man to ſanctity, but enclineth the will thereto: he forceth none by violence, though he draw them by perſwaſions, promiſes, or threatnings, which is the ſpiritual compulſion here intended, when the rigour of the Law preached terrifieth the ſinners conſcience, and ſo fear of judgemenrs forceth him to ſeek ſalvation and comfort in Chriſt. So John Baptiſt compelled his hearers, by telling them, that the axe was laid to the root of the tree, Matt.3 10. So Miniſters are commanded to do, 2 Tim. 4. 2. So God draweth us to Chriſt, John 6. 44. which is never done. Sine inclinatione mobilis, without the inclination of him that is moved, it being an immediate effect of the will ſanctified, moved, and enabled by the Spirit of God. This he doth, ſaith Bernard, de gra. & lib. arbitr. Cum terret aut percutit ut faciat voluntarios, non ſalvet invitos, when he terrifieth or ſmiteth to make them willing, not to ſave them againſt their wills: when he changeth the will from evil to good, he doth but change, he doth not take its liberty away: as for the coercive or compulſory power of Magiſtrates, it belongeth not to this place, becauſe, not to Miniſters: certainly the civil Magiſtrate beareth not the Sword in vain, Rom. 13. 4 Therefore ought he to revenge all wickedneſs, ſpecially, that wherein Gods honour and truth are intereſſed: yet it is moſt requiſite, that a tender hand be uſed toward the weak, on the Miniſters part, as is commanded 2 Tim.2.24. On the Magiſtrates, by providing all proble means to enform them better, ever conſidering the difference between him that erreth out of that which they call invincible ignorance, and him, that not onely erreth wilfully, in fundamentalls, but alſo ſeduceth others therein. See Deut.13.6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15. Deut. 17. 7. and it is by proportion conſiderable, if he that murdereth the body, may not be ſpared, (Numbers, 35. 31, &c.) much leſſe may he, who murdereth bodies and ſouls to Eternity, by making their Proſelytes children of Hell, Matthew, 23.15.

V. 24. none of theſe men which were bidden] None of thoſe who abſolutely and finally refuſed the grace and mercy of God offered in the Goſpel. He meaneth not here, an abſolute, but a generall rejection of the Jewes; as if he ſaid, few of them (in reſpect of the multitudes of the Gentiles to be called) ſhall be ſaved. See Rom.11.1.&c.

V. 25. ſaid unto them] There were many followers of Chriſt preſent, but not all of one minde and reſolution: he who ſaw all their thoughts, addreſſeth his ſpeech to ſome of them: and ſo proſecuteth the former argument concerning mens excuſing themſelves from Gods ſervice, by ſecular buſineſſes: ſhewing, that except men can put off that mind and vain love of this world, they cannot be any true Diſciples of Chriſt.

V. 26. if any man come unto me] Matt.10.37. Matt.16.24.

and hate not his father] That is, removeth not all carnall affections, contrary to the calling of God; or he who is not diſpoſed (where theſe loves are incompatible) to hate Father, and all for the love of Chriſt, can be none of his: ſo that theſe things are by no means ſimply to be underſtood (as if the ſervice of Chriſt required any violation of the Lawes of God and Nature) but comparatively: I ought dearly and tenderly to love Father and Mother; but to preter my Creatour and Saviour before all: as Ambroſ. orat.funebr.de ob.Valent. very well ſaith, Debeo affectum parenti, ſed magis obſequium debeo ſalutis auctori. I owe affection to my Parent, but I rather owe obedience to the Authour of my ſalvation.

V. 27. bear his Croſſe] That is, (as may appear from the following compariſon) when the Lord ſhall call men thereto to be ready and willing to endure afflictions for Chriſts ſake. The Croſs here, as elſewhere, ſignifieth torments, miſeries, calamities, in alluſion to thoſe ſorrows and torments which Chriſt on the Croſſe ſuffered for us, though all that we can ſuffer are incomparably leſs than thoſe. And in this manner of ſpeaking he intimateth that we cannot reaſonably expect, that the condition of us ſervants ſhould be better than Chriſt our Lord and Saviour. See Matthew, 10.38.

V. 28 ſitteth not down firſt] This ſheweth the means how to bear the Croſs patiently and conſtantly; that is, by reſolving beforehand ſo to do. That which maketh men ſtartle away in afflictions, is principally their unpreparedneſs thereto, and vain hope of ſecular proſperity. Concerning preparation hereto he propoſeth two ſimilitudes: Firſt, of the unconſiderate builder, who for want of forecaſt, loſeth much charge on that which he is not able to perfect: So ſhall they who do much in Chriſts ſervice if they reckon not upon the Croſs if need require. Secondly, of the unadviſed Souldier, who will not timely conſider the power of thoſe with whom he muſt encounter: this life is a warfare, and that truceleſs; it is great folly ever to be ſecure.

V. 33. forſaketh not all that he hath] That is, when Gods glory ſo requireth, for otherwiſe, as appeareth in ſundry inſtances, the Diſciples of Chriſt, did not in their following him, leave all their proprieties in that they had; though they were ready ever ſo to have done, vvhen Gods honour, and the teſtimony of the truth ſhould require them thereto, or to lay dovvn life it ſelf for the ſame: See on Matt.8. 14 and 19. 27.

V. 34. Salt is good] By Salt, he meaneth the uncorrupted integrity and vigour of mind in the midſt of afflictions (vvhich ſeaſoneth, hardneth and keepeth from corruption of fleſh and blood, ever indulgent to its own eaſe) without which, we can be profitable for nothing: eſpecially, if Miniſters be not wiſe to ſeaſon themſelves, and others herewith, they are utterly unprofitable.

but if the ſalt hath loſt his ſavour] Matt. 5. 13. Mark 9. 50. The Diſciple of Chriſt muſt be as Salt, not onely good in himſelf, but alſo by his Miniſtery communicating that ſavour to others, that they may be ſound: as it is written, Titus 1. 13. Rebuke them ſharply that they may be ſound in the faith.

V. 35. He that hath ears to hear] He that heareth, let him mark diligently. This admonition, as we have continually need of, when ever we heare any part of Gods Word, ſo ſpecial vvhere this ſubject, the Doctrine of the Croſſe is preached; vvhich vve moſt unvvillingly hear of.

CHAP. XV.

Verſe 1. DRew near unto him all the Publicans, &c.] Who were odious to the Jews, becauſe they gathered up the cuſtomes and taxes for Cæſar: by all, he meaneth many: or all that came to him to be converted: Of ſinners there were (and are) two ſorts: Some acknowledged or were aſhamed of their ſin and miſery; ſome were juſt in their own eyes. Of the firſt ſort were thoſe who came to hear Chriſt preaching mercy to penitent believers in him. Of the ſecond ſort were the Scribes and Phariſees, who highly valued their own merits, and pretended righteouſneſſe by the works of the Law; therefore they embraced not the faith in Chriſt for their juſtification. So that Chriſt came not to call them, but thoſe other ſinners, Mat. 9. 13, by ſinners here underſtand notorious ſinners; for all are ſinners.

to hear him] They came not to make their liberty from the curſe of the Law, a cloak for ſin, but to hear his Doctrine and to convert: they came as the ſick to the Phyſician, to be healed and ſaved. Feeling the reſtleſſe ſtings of their own conſciences, againſt which the rigour of the Law could afford them no eaſe or relief, but rather cauſe of greater terrour and unreſt, they come to Chriſt who preached to them the comfortable doctrine of iuſtification by faith, repentance, and remiſsion of ſins, with deliverance from the ſevere curſe and rigour of the law; which doctrine is therefore called εὐαγγέλιον, gladſome tidings.

V. 2. murmured, ſaying, this man, &c.] They calumniated Chriſt among the people; which he perceiving, anſwered as in the following Parables. they, being puffed up with vain opinion of their own righteouſneſſe, blamed him: firſt, for admitting ſinners into his company: Secondly, for eating with them: this οὗτος, this Man, is emphatical: as if they had ſaid; this your excellent Doctor, whom you count the Meſſias and teacher of righteouſneſs, look what company he keepeth, Publicans and notorious ſinners. Pride and Malice are ever cenſorious and blinde. See cap. 7. 39. And in this example it appeareth, that it is more poſsible to be without fault than unjuſt cenſure.

V. 4. What man of you] Here is a kind of appeal to their own conſciences, as chap 14. 5. The ſcope of all theſe Parables, is to teach the bounty of God, and his care of poor ſinners recovery, and how they that are truly ſanctified, are ſo farre from envying the converſion of other ſinners, that they heartily rejoyce thereat.

having an hundred ſheep] See Mat. 18. 12. He compareth ſinners to ſheep going aſtray. So Pſal. 119. 176. Iſaiah 53. 6. and himſelf to a careful ſhepherd, as John 10. Ezek. 34. 15. Acts 20. 28. he leaveth ninety and nine for a time; not meaning any deſertion of the flock, but a ſolicitous intending the recovery of that which is ſtrayed, ſpeaking to mans ſenſe. He compareth Publicans and ſinners to ſtray cattel, intimating his care to ſave the elect, and joy in their recovery from Sin and Death. Wherein he ſecretly taxeth the envy of Phariſees for impious and Satanical, which ſo much differed from the joy of holy Angels in the preſence of God at ſinners converſion: So layeth he down a ſingular ground of comfort to the converted: for if God bear ſuch love to the elect, that he would own them, and ſeek them, who had no hearts to ſeek him, being yet dead in treſpaſſes and ſins: how ſhall he not much more know them and hear them, when being found of him they ſeek him in truth. See Eſay 65. 1. Rom. 5. 10. Rom 8. 32. & 10. 20.

untill he finde it] Chriſt the good ſhepherd came to ſeek that which was loſt, and will never give over his work unperfected: the ſinner is then prevented by Gods grace, and enabled to ſeek him, as Fulgentius de incarn. & grat. Dom. Jeſu ſaith, quando illuminatur ut credat, when he is illuminated that he may believe.

V. 5. layeth it on his ſhoulder, rejoycing] Hereby alſo Chriſt declareth his love and care of ſinners, who hath born all our infirmities, Matth. 8. 17. And the duty of Paſtours which is to labour, as well to recover the loſt, as to preſerve the remainder of their flock. See 2 Tim. 2. 24, 25, 26. Matt. 18. 14, 15, &c.

V. 7. joy ſhall be in heaven] Which he interpreteth v. 10. joy in the preſence of the Angels of God; and thus he accommodateth his ſpeech to vulgar capacities: underſtanding by juſt perſons, thoſe who ſeem ſo to themſelves, having no ſenſe of their ſins and need of repentance. See Prov. 30. 12. Eccleſ. 7. 22. or thoſe who continue in the right way, Pſalm 119. 1. Thoſe who being juſtified by faith, yet dayly pray, forgive us our treſpaſſes. This underſtand, as joy is defined, an affection ariſing from ſome freſh or new good: Hence we may conceive how God and his good Angels are diſpleaſed at ſins, whereas his Spirit is ſaid to be grieved at them, Epheſ. 4. 30. Ezek. 18. 23.

V. 8. ten pieces of ſilver] This ſimilitude is to the ſame purpoſe, Drachma's, here tranſlated, pieces of ſilver, is the eighth part of an ounce, which cometh to ſeven pence half penny, and is equal to the Roman penny, Matt. 18 28.

if ſhe looſe one] As if he ſaid, you would all juſtifie that care and pains which were beſtowed in ſeeking that ſecular thing which is loſt, abroad or at home: would you allow the ſeeking of loſt beaſts, and not of loſt man? Is it juſtifiable to uſe all lawfull means for the recovery of a little piece of ſilver with Caſars Image upon it; and is it with you condemnable to ſeek a loſt man, who hath Gods Image on him? By this reaſon he evidently convinceth their malice: So doth he admirably comfort the Elect, intimating, that God will leave no means unattempted for the recovery of them.

V. 9. calleth her friends] Here he proveth by an Argument, from the leſſe to the greater, that the Angels rejoyce at the converſion of a ſinner; becauſe they have greater love and joy than man: alſo he ſheweth what the captious Phariſees ſhould have done, if they would imitate the Holy Angels, who were ſo far from envying any mans ſalvation, that they rejoyce with one another for it: alſo here appeareth the great pains and care which ought to be taken for the recovery of loſt ſinners, contrary to the courſe of proud Phariſees, who ſwelling with a deluding conceit of their own Holyneſs, eſteemed penitent ſinners and Publicans no better than forlorn caſtawayes.

V, 11, a certain man had two ſons] By this third ſimilitude, he declareth the wretched condition of thoſe who live in ſin and unbelief, which he propoſeth in the younger brother: as alſo how ready God is to forgive the penitent.

V. 12. Give me the portion of Goods] That which thou intendeſt to give me for my portion: by this, τὸ ἐπιβάλλον μέρος, the portion of goods which falleth unto me, he meaneth that part, which jure haredis, or filii, was to fall to his ſhare: Syriac, qua redit ad me ex domo tua; as if he ſaid, I am now of age to mannage an eſtate; grant me now the free uſe thereof, that I may trade for my ſelf.

he divided unto them his living] Τὸν βίον importeth here, as elſewhere, that by which life is maintained, which the Syriac interpreteth, his poſſeſſion. See Mark 12. 44. Here is a Character of an evil ſon. Firſt, in deſiring a diviſion of the eſtate, his Father being yet alive. Secondly, in that having poſſeſſion of his portion given him, he preſently forſaketh his Father. Thirdly, in that he quickly conſumed all in riotous living: in all which is ſeen an image of man fallen into ſin; when ambitious (as it were) of ſharing with God, and ſeeking happineſſe in himſelf, and his owne fooliſh wayes and inventions, rather than in God, the onely Fountain of true Happyneſſe, he departed from God, ſin ſeparating him: thus evilly uſing that freedome of Will which God gave him for good, he loſt himſelf and all Will and ability to doe good: Hence flowed in that Deluge of ſin and miſery on men, God permitting the Heathens to their own luſts and errours, Romans, 1. 24. Hence alſo thoſe miſeries ſhadowed under this young mans poverty and extream want.

V. 15. he ſent him into his fields to feed ſwine] Here in the letter appeareth the ſad condition of ungoverned young Prodigals, to be viliſied moſt by them, on whom they vainly ſpent their Eſtates: as alſo the juſt judgement on the raſh and diſobedient: He that would not cleave to a loving Father, that it might have been well with him, is compelled to adhere to an unkind ſtranger, and to be made a ſtranger, and to be made a ſervant of the vileſt beaſts, who undervalued the dignity of a ſonne: He that would not underſtand the bleſſing of plenty, is better inſtructed by extream want: and in the Moral, the baſe ſervitude which the Devil putteth his ſervants to, in feeding and communicating with the moſt unclean affections.

V. 16. and would fain have filled his belly with the huskes] by theſe κεράτια, huskes, whether we underſtand thoſe ſiliquas or pods of pulſe, peaſe or beans: or, as Theophylact ſeemeth to underſtand, and others ſay, of the fruit of the carob tree, which beareth a pleſant fruit in pods alſo, it skilleth not much; though the latter ſeem a very probable opinion, the Syriac reading here חרובא charubo, ſome give it χαρρούβια: Siliqua dulcis, a ſweet pod. Strabo cited by V. Shindler, Penteglot. ſaith, multum hac cognita Nicea, & maris Liguſtici accolis, ubi eam eſitant, pueri, etiamque porci: this is much known in Nicea, and to thoſe who dwell by the Sea of Liguria, where children, and alſo hogs uſe to eat thereof. Galen alſo mentioneth this tree bearing theſe κεράτια, by later Writers called the Carob tree, and the fruit thereof Saint Johns bread; (that which John Baptiſt eat, Matt. 3.) or Locuſts. See John Gerard. hiſt. plant. lib. 3. cap. 82. J. Druſ. praterit lib. 3. Plin. lib. 15. c. 24. whatever they were, no man gave unto him: as if he ſaid, they who allowed their Swine a certain meaſure thereof would not allow him to fill his belly therewith. The Moral is, that in Gods Houſe his children are ſatisfied, as it were with fatneſs, Pſalm 63. 5. there is diſtributed the bread or portion of ſons, Matt. 15. 26. 32. but out of his Family, huskes of unclean Swine, the lying fables of traditions, which do rather puffe up with vain pride, than nouriſh to Eternal life: ſo are prophane men compared to Swine, 2 Pet. 2. Of the famine of Gods Word. See Amos 8. 11. See Theophylact hereon.

V. 17. when he came to himſelf] Hitherto he was beſide himſelf like a mad or drunken man, not knowing what he did, but neceſſity brought him to his right mind: Happy affliction which bringeth men to God by ſerious repentance and newneſs of life; truely may ſuch a one ſay with David, Pſalm 119. 71. it is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy Statutes.

have bread enough] The moral is, the meaneſt in Gods family abound with ſpiritual comforts, and are in a condition incomparably better than any out of it. See Pſalm 84. 11. which God maketh them at laſt to underſtand, to whom he giveth an heart to know their own condition, and to convert.

V. 18. I will ariſe and go, &c.] Not that any ſinner can prevent Gods grace, ſee John 6. 44. Jer. 31. 33. Ezek. 11. 19. 20. God alone giveth repentance, who in Chriſt forgiveth the penitent: the ſinner indeed ſaith in his heart, as this young man, I will ariſe and go, &c. but never untill God works ſuch a Reſolution on him. See Phil. 2. 13. So that here are repreſented the effects of Gods mercy in the converſion of a ſinner. 1. Diſlike and deteſtation of the former courſes of life. 2. Ariſing from the drunken ſleep and dotage of ſinne. 3. Certain purpoſe to leave ſinne, and to return to God in newneſſe of life. 4. Confidence of Grace and merciful reception with our Heavenly Father. 5. Ardent and longing deſire of the ſweet and true comforts which are in Gods Houſe and Family. 6. Ingenuous confeſſion of our ſinne before God. 7. Humble acknowledgement of our unworthyneſſe (I am no more worthy to be called thy ſonne) I have indeed forgotten the duty of a ſon, yet, O unchangeable God of mercy, forget not thou the love of a Father. See Pſalm 130. 3. 4.

againſt heaven] againſt God, whoſe Throne is in Heaven, where his Divine Majeſty and glory moſt evidently ſhineth and is manifeſted to the creatures there being.

V. 19. As one of thy hired ſervants] Let me be any thing, ſo I may be thine. See Pſalm 84. 10. I am unworthy of that firſt dignity of thy ſon, from which I wilfully departed, of which I fooliſhly deprived my ſelf, it ſhall be of thy abundant mercy to forgive me, and to admit me to any ſhare of that grace of thine, whereof the meaneſt of thy ſervants partake.

V. 20. He aroſe and came] This action deſcribeth an inſeparable condition of true Repentance, which is not ſo much in reſolving, or ſaying, as in doing according to Holy reſolutions of turning to God.

yet a great way off] this intimateth Gods preventing grace toward us. So are all ſinners of themſelves, far of from God, (for their iniquities have ſeparated between them and their God, —— Iſa. 59. 2.) and far from any thought of good, (2 Cor. 3. 5.) or reſolution to leave their ſins and impious courſes of life to return unto the Lord in newneſs and ſincerity of living.

his father ſaw him and had compaſſion, &c.] the meaning is, as if he ſaid; if men naturally deſirous of revenge, and too tenatious of priviledge in puniſhing, can yet out of fatherly affection, ſo eaſily forget childrens offences, and be reconciled; how much more will God, who is of infinite mercy and pitty, receive penitent ſinners? certainly (ſaith Salvian. ep. Ypatio, &c.) though Parents have juſt cauſes of being angry, yet nothing can more happily, or which they more wiſh, fall out; than that their children may ſo ſatisfie for their faults, ne neceſſe habeant vindicare, that they need not to revenge, the word ἐσπλαγχνίσθη, had compaſſion, ſignifieth, a vehement moving to pitty, ſuch as procedeth ex intimis viſceribus from the bowels and earning of the heart. See Pſalm 103. 13. Iſa. 49. 15. Ezek. 16. 6. Jer. 2. 2.

V. 22. Bring forth the beſt robe] ſignifying the Robe of Chriſts Righteouſneſs; which is incomparably, and in infinite reſpects the beſt. We all are as an unclean thing, and all our Righteouſneſſes are as filthy rags —— Iſai. 64. 6. No wonder that Paul touching the Righteouſneſſe which is in the Law, blameleſſe, yet counted all things but loſſe, for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus, —— and but dung, that he might win Chriſt, and be found in him not having his own righteouſneſſe which is of the Law, but that which is of the Faith of Chriſt, the Righteouſneſſe which is of God by Faith, Phil. 3. 6. 7, 8, 9. this is the beſt robe; in which onely the bleſſing of eternall life and ſalvation is to be attained. See Romans, 9. 30, 31.

a ring on his hand] it may import the riches of Gods bounty, as alſo the Saints honour and ornament, the pledge of Gods love, or ſeal of faith.

and ſhoes] the moral may be that vvhich the Apoſtle expreſſeth, Epheſ 6.15. in all theſe things are ſignified Gods goodneſs and our happyneſs in our converſion; vvherein ſo much more is reſtored than vvas loſt, by hovv much more excellent that ſtate is, vvhence vve ſhall never fall, than that from vvhence vve all did fall.

V. 23. And kill it] That is, Chriſt to be offered in ſacrifice on the Croſſe, when the Gentiles (the younger brother Japheth) returned to the Tents of Shem, and to the God of the Fathers: and he is brought (as it were) to be ſlain for every believer, when the Goſpel is preached to him. See Galat. 3. 1. Auguſtine To. 4. quaſt. ſup. Evang. lib. 2. cap. 33.

V. 24. this my ſon was dead and is alive] The unregerate is dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, Epheſ. 2. 1. converſion and regeneration is a reſurrection from the dead works of ſin, to newneſs of life, Revel. 20.6. Rom 6. 11. 13, &c.

they began to be merry] This is the ſame which is expreſſed, verſe 7. 10.

V. 25. his elder ſon] By which is meant, he that taketh himſelf to be juſt, as verſe 29. or is ſo accounted of others; who never ran out into any apparant exorbitancy, as the Gentiles did, and ſo the elder brother might ſignifie the Jews, or thoſe that continued in an upright courſe of life: indeed the proud Jews envied the mercy which God ſhewed the penitent Gentiles, as Acts 10. 13. So Auguſtin. q. ſ. underſtandeth it: Theophylact of the Phariſees envying the reception of ſinners.

V. 27. ſafe and ſound ὑγιαίνοντα, in health and ſafety: In the morall it importeth the ſafe and bleſſed condition of the Gentiles believing in Chriſt, who freely juſtifieth ſinners, and ſanctifieth thoſe whom he juſtifieth.

V. 28. would not go in] That is, would not believe and partake with the Church of Chriſt, ſpecially of the Gentiles, whom they counted deſperate ſinners, unworthy of Gods favour, as Rom. 11. 28. 31.

his father came out] Signifying that God left no means unattempted to win the Jews to Chriſt: but ſent his Miniſters to preach the goſpel to them firſt, untill they put the Word of God from them, and judged themſelves unworthy of everlaſting life; Acts, 13. 46.

V. 29. theſe many years] This ſhadoweth out the arrogancy of the Jews, preſuming on their merits and righteouſneſs by the Law; not that they did not continually tranſgreſs the Law of God, and provoke him to anger, but becauſe they had been many years his Church, and peculiar People; and becauſe they were as high minded, as if they had never ſinned and as unthankfull, as if God never had done any thing for them worthy of their ſervice.

V. 31. all that I have is thine] Intimating his abundant goodneſſe toward that nation. See Pſalm 147. 20. Iſaih, 5, 4. &c. Deut. 32. 7. Jer. 31. 9.

V. 32. was loſt, and is found] This importeth the dangerous alienation of ſinners ſpecially of the Gentiles, from the Covenant of grace, until they were called by the Goſpel according to the Propheſies; wherein Noahs prophetical prayer took effect, and Japheth (of whom came the Gentiles) was perſwaded by the Word and Spirit of God, to dwell in the tents of Shem, Geneſ. 9. 27. that is, with that people of the Jews which believed in Chriſt.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſe 1. T*Here was a certain rich man*] So verſe 19 the drift of that which followeth, is to ſhew us, that they who beſtow their riches or other gifts of God on their pleaſures; or worldy intereſts onely, muſt give account to God for them: and that Charity ſhall ſtand us in ſuch ſtead in the day of judgement, that God will accept thereof, and abundantly requite it.

V. 2. give account of thy ſtewardſhip] By this manner of ſpeaking, he mindeth us, that we are Gods ſtewards of all thoſe temporal goods, which he putteth into our hands for a time, to uſe them to his glory, others good, and our own comfort: and that we muſt at laſt give a ſtrict account hereof to God, See 1 Pet. 4. 9, 10. Hag 2. 8. Pſalm. 59. 10.

V. 4. I am reſolved what to do] This perverſe reaſoning of his, is not propoſed to our imitation, neither ſuch robbing of his maſter, by deceiving truſt, and making up falſe accounts: that being forbidden of God, and the contrary commanded. See Pſalm 37. 3. Epheſ. 4. 28. 2 Theſ. 3. 10, 11, 12.

V. 6. an hundred meaſures of oyl] ἑκατὸν βάτους, Syr. Interpreter, metretas: the Hebrew word בת bath, ſignified a meaſure of liquid things, Oyl, Wine, &c. Iſai. 5. 10. 1 Kings 7. 26. 2 Chron. 4. 5. it contained nine galons three quarters: the ſame in quantity with the Ephah, a common meaſure among the Hebrews, the חומר homer, contained ten baths (Ezek. 45. 14.) or ephahs; and the ephah contained ten עמר omers, Exod. 16. 36 ſo that it contained about nine gallons: ſome ſay much leſſe. See Godwin. Moſes and Aaron, lib. 6. cap. 9.

V. 7. an hundred meaſures of wheat] ἑκατὸν κόρους, Solomons proviſion for a day (1 Kings 4. 22.) of fine flower, was thirty כורים chorim, meaſures. See Ioſeph. Antiq. lib. 8. cap. 2. and lib. 15. cap. 12. where he ſaith, corus autem capit decem medimnos Atticos. It contained as much as the homer, Ezek. 45. 14. which ſome reckon five buſhels and five gallons (See Godwin q. ſ. Io. Druſius præterit. lib. 3. in loc.) Some about 14 buſhels, ſome much more.

V. 8. commended the unjuſt ſteward] We muſt not ſtrain ſimilitudes beyond the intent of the ſpeaker to make every particular agree: the meaning is, that God commonded them, who ſo uſed their temporall goods that thereby they might prepare them treaſure for the life to come, Matthew 6. 19, 20. 1 Timothy, 6. 18, 19.

are in their generation] Meaning that worldly men commonly ſhew more care and providence for ſecular things, than others for things eternal: υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου children of this world; is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, ſignifying thoſe that are wholly addicted to the care and ſtudy of things ſecular. So the Syr. hath it, filii ſeculi hujus, thoſe that love, ſerve and imitate the world and worldly men, not much caring or regarding what becomes of them in the next world, to whom he oppoſeth in a contrary quality and condition——— children of light.

children of light] That is, the children of God illuminated by his Word and holy Spirit: the ſum is, that the maſter of that ſteward (commending the wit, not the fidelity of his ſervant) repreſenteth Chriſt ſtirring up our minds to a prudent and careful providence for our future ſafety ſeeing that even the blind worldlings (who mind onely ſecular things) are ſo circumſpect for things which periſh in uſing.

V. 9. make to your ſelves] This figurative manner of ſpeaking, is accommodated and fitted to the allegory: the meaning is, by your beneficence to the poor, give them occaſion to pray for you, and make your advantage of being rewarded by God. See Proverbs, 19. 17.

Mammon of unrighteouſneſſe] The Greek calleth that here μαμμωνᾶ, which the Syriack calleth ממונא mamuno: ſo they ſaid, mammon, mamuna, or mamonas: as Satan, Satana, or Satanas. See Jo. Druſ. ad voc. N. T. com. 1. and ib. com. 2. cap. 14. Irenaus lib. 3. cap. 8. Auguſtin. de verb. Domini ſer. 35. and lib. 2. ſ. ſerm. Domini in monte, ſaith, that mamon in the Punick tongue ſignifieth gaine: or as he de verb. Dom. in Luc. ſerm. 35. and quaſt. Evang, lib. 2. cap. 34. divitia ſeculi, riches of this world. Suidas interpreteth μαμμωνᾶς, χρυσὸς, γήϊνος πλοῦτος, ὁ περιττὸς, καὶ ὑπὲρ τὴν χρείαν, gold, earthly riches, ſupervacaneous or more than neceſſary: ſo Anaſtaſ. Sinait. q. 12. M. Troſtius deriveth it from the Heb. אמן aman, among other things ſignifying nutrire, ſuſtentare, and ſo mamon ſignifieth food or ſuſtenance for this life: as alſo it may come of the ſame root, as it ſignifieth credere, becauſe men uſually truſt therein: See Pſal. 37. 3. and Jo. Buxtorf. Jun. lex. Chald. & Syr. ממן, it is called here mammon of unrighteouſneſſe: not that we ſhould give for almes or holy uſes goods unjuſty gotten: (for all ſuch muſt be reſtored again to their right owners; and as Baſil ſaith well, Reg. Fuſius expl. ἐξ ἀδίκων κερδῶν, almes given of goods or gains unjuſtly made,——are not acceptable to God, though almes be a ſacrifice wherewith God is pleaſed, Heb. 13. yet as Iſidor. epiſt. ad Euſeb. Epiſc. noteth: οὐ χρῄζει ὁ Θεὸς ἐξ ἀλλοτρίων θυσίας, he hath no need of ſacrifice out of other mens goods, but abominateth it, as him that offereth a dog, or buildeth up Zion with blood) but riches are ſo called, becauſe commonly either in their getting, uſing or keeping, they adminiſter matter of ſin, 1 Tim. 6. 9, that when ye fail] That is, when ye dye, or when your intereſt in, or further uſe of theſe things (of which ye are for preſent appointed ſtewards) ſhall fail you, which may be in this life, in death it muſt be: the ſhort time of this life, and uncertainty of ſecular diſpenſations of thoſe things which Gods providence allotteth us, ſhould teach us to hold all that we have here with a looſe hand; and not to be fooliſhly tenacious of that which may ſodainly, and moſt certainly at laſt be taken from us.

everlaſting habitations] What manner of habitations theſe ſhall be in heaven whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh, John 14. 2. potius debet credi, quam dici, Proſper. de vit. contempl. lib. 1. cap. 2. See 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10. the meaning of this place is not, that we ſhall merit to finde favour with God by our almes, for he was our friend, when we were his enemies, (Rom. 5. 10,) and of no ſtrength to do any good: and merit is between them where there is no debt, or grace: but here, where man can never diſcharge his debt of ſin, all our merit is Gods mercy: the meaning therefore is; if the unjuſt ſteward wanted not friends for giving his maſters goods; how much leſſe ſhall we, if we give ours to relieve Gods poor, for whom God hath promiſed repayment? Works of mercy ſhall both here teſtifie to the givers conſcience, that he is the elect of God, who hath given him ſo happy an uſe of thoſe ſecular riches he gave him, and it ſhall be rewarded in the everlaſting life to come, Mat. 25. 2 Pet. 1. 10. James 2. 22, 23.

V. 10. he that is faithful, &c.] This ſeemeth a proverbial ſpeech, commonly true: as if he ſaid: he that is found unfaithfull in a little, ſhall not be truſted with much: he that is true and truſty in a little, ſhall be truſted in much: if you uſe ſecular things well, whereof God hath made you ſtewards for a time, he will give into your hands heavenly and eternal riches.

V. 11. unrighteous mammon] If you abuſe Temporal riches, whereof ye are but ſtewards to an omniſcient God, how can you hope that he will truſt you with ſpiritual and heavenly, which are true riches.

V. 12. That which is another mans] He calleth external goods another mans, becauſe we are but ſtewards thereof, and muſt leave them to others ſpiritual goods are our own, becauſe they ſhall never be taken away; not but that God gave them all, nor that we my uſe them any otherwiſe than to Gods honour.

who ſhall give you that which is your own?] That is, God will not give you, in whoſe power alone it is to give: this manner of ſpeaking by interrogation, was with the Hebrewes very emphaticall, and here is as if he had ſaid, aſſure your ſelves none will give you, that which is your own, importeth here heavenly and eternal riches; not that we have them of our ſelves, or not of God, but in regard of our eternal intereſt therein, for being once had and poſſeſſed, they ſhall never be loſt again, becauſe God who giveth us grace, therewith ever giveth us perſeverance: ſo that the ſeeming grace which ever faileth or falleth quite away, was never true grace of God, whoſe gifts of this kind, are without repentance. Rom. 11, 28.

V. 13. can ſerve two maſters] See on Matt. 6.24.

yee cannot ſerve God and Mammon] You may poſſeſs and be ſerved of riches, and withall ſerve God, and lay up a good foundation for your ſelves, 1 Tim. 6. 19. treaſures in Heaven: but you cannot ſerve riches, but with Gods diſſervice: to ſerve riches is to be an idolater, and ſo, no ſervant of God. See Col. 3.5.

V. 14. And they derided him] As the manner of carnal men is, in any thing which croſſeth their corrupt minds: theſe men thought none happy but the rich, ἐξεμυκτήριζον, naſo ſuſpendebant, Clem. Roman. ep.ad Corinth.p.51. ſaith, χλευάζουσιν ἡμᾶς καὶ μυκτηρίζουσι, Suidas interpreteth it by ἐξουθενεῖν, to contemne as a thing of nought, and unconſiderable: therefore theſe men being rich, covetous, and making wealth their God, and derided him, as if he broached vain Paradoxes, excentrick, and far out of the way to the worlds affections: and ſuch eſteem have all covetous men of the doctrine of alms, and an holy contempt of the world

V. 15. ye are they which juſtifie your ſelves] Who magnifie or excuſe your ſelves: or you would fain ſeem juſt before men: here he toucheth the ſecret cauſe of their contempt of his Doctrine, their impious pride: and thus he as it were conventeth them before Gods Tribunal, by the teſtimony of their own Conſcience, ſhewing that ſuch pride and hypocriſie, is abominable before God the ſearcher of hearts, however beguiled men applaud or canonize them. See Job 10.4. 1 Sam. 16. 6. Matth. 23.25. Iſai. 5. 15. and on Matt. 6. 2.

V. 16. the Law and the Prophets,] Matt. 11.11. when Iohn Baptiſt ſhewed Chriſt preſent, all propheſies concerning his coming ceaſed, and all the types prefiguring him in their accompliſhment, μετ' ἐκεῖνον γὰρ οὐδεὶς ὅλως προφήτης παρ' ὑμῖν γεγένηται ſaid Juſtin Martyr, to the Jevv after him (that is, Iohn Baptiſt) vvas there not one Prophet born amongſt you, vvhich is true, if he mean none ſpeaking of a Meſsias to come.

preſſeth into it] See Matth. 11. 12. every one vvho doth believe zealouſly follovveth the Goſpel: Greek εἰς αὐτὴν βιάζεται, preſſeth as a man in a throng; ſo the Syr. premit ut ingrediatur; the vvord ſignifieth, vi contendere; here, as it vvere forcibly by might and main, all poſsible endeavours to enter into the Kingdome of God; See Matt. 11. 12.

V. 17. eaſier for heaven and earth to paſſe, &c.] See on Matt. 5. 18. Gods Decree for our ſalvation ſhall not fail.

V. 18. whoſoever putteth away his wife] See on Matt 5. 32. and 19.9. Mark 10.5. 1 Cor 7.11. except in caſe of adultery: the Bill of Divorce vvas permitted for a time, becauſe of the hardneſs of their hearts, and cruelty tovvards their Wives, Mal. 2. 15. 16. and that by their judicial Lavv, not by the Moral, vvhich admitteth of no diſpenſation: and therefore Chriſt recalleth all his to the firſt Inſtitution.

V. 19. there was a certain rich man] Having ſpoken concerning the right uſe of temporal goods; now he proceeds to ſhew the horrible puniſhment of thoſe vvho do not uſe them vvell: this vvas one of thoſe rich men, vvho (as Cyprian. l. 2. ep. 2. ſaith) poſſident ad hoc tantum, ne poſſidere —— alteri liceat, poſſeſſe goods onely to keep others from poſſeſsing them.

in purple and fine linnen] By theſe things vvhich vvere in uſe among them, he deſcribeth the luxury of vvorldly men, as Revel. 18. 16. alſo their unhappineſſe vvho abuſe riches, and their happineſſe who make an Holy uſe of poverty; which he doth by propoſing one, as Fulgentius ſpeaketh, ad Gal. ep. 2 in divitiis & ſanitate miſerum; and another, in egeſtate & vulnere multum beatum, one unhappy in wealth and health, the other abundantly bleſſed in wants and ſores. The abuſe of his riches was, 1. in curious clothing: 2. in gluttony: 3. in neglect and contempt of the poor. Clem. Alexandrinus, Pæd. l. 2. ſaith the ancient Lacedemonians, were wont to permit whores onely to weare gorgeous apparrel. See 1 Peter, 3. 3, 4.

V. 20. a certain beggar named Lazarus] Some write the name Eleazarus, Tertul. de idolatr. cap. 13. (as ſome copies have it) Hebr. אלעזר Eleazar; and the Syr. לעזר lahazar, this was a poor diſeaſed man, therefore not that Lazarus, John 11. the brother of Mary and Martha. In theſe we ſee an Image of the World, wherein the wicked flouriſh, and the righteous often want: the antitheſis is remarkable; in the one riches, in the other, poverty and beggery; he clothed with purple and fine linnen, this with rags; he feaſting, this lying hungry at his gate, deſiring but ſome crumbs or ſcraps falling from the rich mans table, or left after meals; this full of ſores, a pitifull creature, he more pitileſs than his dogs.

V. 21. dogs came and licked his ſores] Sine cibo, ſed non ſine Chriſto: canibus expoſitum, ſed ſocium Angelorum, ſaith Fulgent. q. ſ. ad Gallam. ep. 2. without meat, not without Chriſt: expoſed to the dogs, yet accompanied with Angels.

V. 22. into Abrahams boſome] He meaneth the communion of Saints and faithful, who walked in the ſteps of Abrahams faith and ſanctity, and therefore called his ſons, Rom. 4. 12.16. Gal. 3.7.9. Luke 19.9. ſinus Patriarcharum, receſſus quidam eſt quietis æternæ, Ambroſ. orat. Funebr. de obit. Valent. the boſome of the Patriarchs is a certain retiring place of eternal reſt.

the rich man alſo died] This is common to all eſtates and conditions: poor and rich die alike: See Pſal. 49. 10. the future maketh no difference: to the one, whom men regarded not living, in his death the Angels are miniſtring ſpirits to conveigh him ſafe to Heaven: (a precious ſoul is ſometimes lodged in a diſeaſed body; the graces of Gods Spirit, are ſo covered with the deformity of afflictions, as that carnal reaſon can ſometimes diſcern nothing therein, but the appearance of the curſe) he ſaith no more of the rich man, than that he was buried, leaving his paſſage to be gathered from verſe 23.

and was buried] Poſſibly with great pomp; no funerals or tombs can ſhelter men from the wrath of God.

V. 23. in hell lift up his eyes] Gr. ἐν τῷ ᾅδῃ, in that lightleſſe or dark place where nothing can be ſeen, elſewhere called utter darkneſs, Matt. 25 30. Syr. בשיול baſhejul, Heb. בשאול, in hell, the place of the damned, Numb. 16.33. ſometimes it ſignifieth horrour of mind, Pſalm 116.3. ſometimes the grave; ſo Gen. 37 35. Iacob ſaith, I ſhall go down שאלה, Chald. לשאול 70. εἰς ᾅδου ſubaud. οἶκον or τόπον, to the houſe or place of the grave. The Greek Fathers uſed this term, as the Latines, apud inferos, promiſcuouſly for any ſtate or condition of the dead. See Irenæus lib. 5. c. ult. Tertul. de Idolatr. cap. 13, &c. Chryſoſt. hom. de divite, &c. (in that lifting up the eyes, is attributed to a ſpirit, it muſt either be humanitus dictum, as Phil. 2. 10 bowing the knee is ſpoken by things in Heaven: or it muſt conclude this rather a Parable than an Hiſtory) ſometimes the word importeth an afflicted, wretched, hopeleſſe, and irreparable condition. See on Matt. 11. 23. Act. 2. 27. here it expreſſeth the torments of the damned, aggravated v. 25 by their remembrance of worldly proſperitie and the conſideration of the Elects happineſſe whom they formerly deſpiſed.

V. 24. and he cried] The meaning is, that they who will not now hear and pity the cries of the poor, ſhall cry in hell and not be pitied: See Matt 25.11. Prov. 21 13 James 2 8 he that would not give the crumbs which fell from his Table, ſhall cry in hell for a drop of water, and not obtain it; that is, the leaſt comfort to aſſwage his torment ſhall be denied him, though he eternally beg for it: flammæ infœlicium mortuorum divitiis non refrigerantur hæredum; the flames of the unhappy dead, are not cooled by the riches of their Heirs. Tim. ad Eccleſiam Catholicam lib. 3.

V. 25. Son remember] This is a common manner of ſpeaking; otherwiſe, the wicked are not to be accounted ſons of Abraham, Iohn 8. 39. Gal. 3. 9. This title, ſon, hath in it a tacite reprehenſion, ſeeming to have this ſence; thou calleſt Abraham Father, admit thou art of his carnal ſeed, this prerogative can profit thee nothing, who livedſt ſo unlike holy Abraham: he was commended for beneficence and hoſpitality, Gen. 18. 2, 3, &c. but thou uſeſt to ſhut thy gate againſt the poore and needy: If thou wert indeed a ſon of Abraham, thou wouldſt have done the works of Abraham. See Iohn 8 39.

receivedſt good things] In the end, that appeareth true which Chryſoſtome proveth, conc. 3. de Lazaro, proſperous impiety is very dangerous: There are two reaſons of his denyal. Firſt, from Equity: thou haſt had thy part of comfort on Earth, where Lazarus hath been afflicted; it is but equal, that now, thou who ſo much abuſedſt proſperity, ſhouldſt be afflicted, and Holy Lazarus comforted. See 2 Theſſalonians, 1. 6. Secondly, from impoſſibility, there is a vaſt diſtance, ſo that none can paſſe from Heaven to Hell, nor from Hell to Heaven: as the bleſſedneſſe of theſe, ſo the miſery of the other, is unchangeable, and Eternall.

V. 27. ſend him to my fathers houſe] Herein is deſcribed their vain deſires, who tempt God in the neglect or contempt of his Ordinances, requiring miracles or teſtimony from the dead, to perſwade them; whereas God (the onely ſufficient witneſſe, and teacher of things Divine and Heavenly) ſendeth all men to the Law, Prophets and Holy Scriptures. See Iſaiah 8. 19, 20. Iohn 5.

V. 28. may teſtifie unto them] That he may teſtifie to them what wofull torments are in this place, that they may not come hither by their ſins and unbelief.

V. 29. Moſes and the Prophets] That is, the Law given by Moſes miniſtry:

miniſtery: and the writings of the Prophets, and alſo preachers of the ſame word.

V. 31. neither will they be perſwaded] He that will not believe the Spirit of God ſpeaking in the prophets, will not belive a man pretending that he came from the dead, and telling what the wicked ſuffer there; for who could belive a creature, who cannot reſt aſſured in the infallible teſtimony of God himſelf? neither would the Jews believe Lazarus, who had been four dayes dead, and was raiſed again from the dead, John 11.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. It is impoſſible] Matth. 18. 7. It muſt needs be that offences or ſcandals come: or, I foreſee it will be ſo, becauſe of mens wickedneſſe, σκάνδαλα· σκανδαλίζω is of σκάζω, claudico: it importeth impingere facio. See 1 Pet. 2. 8. Theophylact interpreteth here, by τὰ κωλύματα τῆς ἀγαθῆς καὶ θεοφιλοῦς πολιτείας, hinderances to a good and godly life, and that which is pleaſing to God. Nazianzen Orat. 1. interpreteth by πρόσκομμα, offendiculum, as λίθος προσκόμματος a ſtone of ſtumbling, 1 Peter 2. 8.

V. 2. offend one of theſe little ones] That is, to make them halt, or fall away from God: he diſcovereth the ſinne of thoſe times (which was to think it little or no ſinne, by their pride and imperious importunity, to ſcandal an infirm, poor, or inferiour brother) here he telleth alſo of the puniſhment; ſpeaking of ſcandals given by Hereticks, Schiſmaticks, apoſtates, or the like, whether in word or deed: (See Rom. 16. 13. Titus 1. 16.) for otherwiſe offences are often taken, by perverſe and ignorant men, from good and laudible things done or ſpoken, becauſe they croſſe their blinde and corrupt opinions: ſo were the Scribes and Phariſees; were ſcandaled, and offended at Chriſts doctrine and works of mercy: but bleſſed are thoſe, who are not offended in Chriſt, Matth. 11. 6. It were better, or more tolerable (as the Syriac hath it) for a man thus ſcandaling one of the meaneſt of Gods children, to be caſt into the moſt deſperate or helpleſſe condition of this life, than to endure the eternal torments which await him in Hell.

V. 3. take heed to &c.] This may be referred either to that he ſaid of ſcandals, or that which he will now ſay concerning love and mercy, ſeeing there is the like hazard in both.

if thy brother treſpaſſe] See Mat. 18. 21. This is ſpoken concerning private or perſonal offences, of the publick, See 1 Tim. 5. 20. Mat. 18. 15. are layed down certain degrees of admonition and Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline.

rebuke him] Or repreve him: both are joyned, 3 Timothy 4. 2. but it muſt be done reſpectively, or with regard had to the perſon. See 1 Tim. 5. 1. for charity muſt not connive at ſinne, but diſcreetly reprove it. See Lev. 19. 17. Epheſ. 5. 11. 1 Cor 5. 6.

if he repent forgive] That is, call him not into queſtion or ſue him not: forgive as much as concerneth thee, yea, though he offendeth thee not onely ſeven, but many times; if he do not acknowledge his fault to thee, yet let thy heart be ready to forgive: commit thy cauſe to God: as often as he offendeth, forgive, which is meant by ſeventy times ſeven times Mat. 18. 22.

V. 4. ſeven times] Many times. See verſe 3. as often as he offendeth and repenteth.

V. 5. encreaſe our faith] Herein they acknowledged that faith is his gift, as Epheſ. 2. 8. and that their faith wanted confirmation: for, ſaith Fulgentius ad Prob ep. 4. though the Lord give new ſtrength to his, in their conflicts, leſt they ſhould fail, permittitur tamen fatigari, propriæ infirmitatis onere, &c. yet overladen mortality is permitted to be wearied with the burden of its own infirmity; that, finding no ſtrength in it ſelf, it may quickly addreſſe it ſelf to implore aid and Divine aſſiſtance.

V. 6. and the Lord ſaid] Mat. 17. 20. Mark 11. 23.

it ſhould obey you] See Mat. 17. 20. This manner of ſpeech he uſeth to ſhew the admirable power of faith; to wit, that it ſhould overcome all difficulties, as Mark 9. 23. All things are poſſible to him that believeth: certainly the effects of faith in fervent prayer have been more than removing trees, or mountains. See Hebrews 11. 29, 30, 33. &c. James 5 15, 17, 18. 1 John 5. 16. John 10. 12, &c. Exod. 17. 12. By a grain of Muſtardſeed is meant the leaſt meaſure, Mat. 13. 32. by be thou plucked up by the root he meaneth that they ſhould do wonderfull things.

V. 7. which of you having a ſervant plowing] By this ſimilitude taken from the duty of ſervants to their maſters, he preventeth a concluſion, which haply the Apoſtles would have gathered from their merit, who had followed Chriſt, and therefore might expect ſo much favour of him, as to give them ſuch faith to do great works: but he ſheweth them that God is debter to none, (Rom. 4. 4, 5.) that they muſt do all their duty, and expect Gods leiſure for the reward, as alſo to referre all to the good pleaſure and providence of God concerning the meaſure of grace, which he beſt knoweth to proportion unto them, ſo as ſhall moſt make for the advancement of his glory and the good and ſalvation of his ſervants.

V. 10. we are unprofitable ſervants] ἀχρεῖοι] this title is alſo given to evil ſervant, Matthew 35. 50. Phil. 11. to ſhew us what our merit is if God ſhould be ſevere, Job 22. 2. Pſalm 143. 2. See alſo Job 35. 7. and Pſalm 16. 2. as alſo by an argument from the leſſer to the greater, to ſhew that we cannot merit any good at Gods hand, for if a ſervant be ſo bound in duty to a mortall and ſinfull maſter, that whatſoever he doth, and how diligently ſoever he ſerveth, yet ſhall he not deſerve ſo much as thanks at his maſters hands: much leſſe can we, (that are not onely ſervants, but unprofitable ſervants, continually falling ſhort of our duties, and alſo creatures of God, with all our beſt endeavours) merit at Gods hands: we owe our ſelves, and all that we have, are, and poſſibly can do, to Gods ſervice, by whom we live and are: thou therefore that dreameſt of meriting, renounce thy intereſt in, and claim to grace, (for grace and merit are incompatible, Rom. 4. 4. Rom. 11. 6.) and as Ambroſ. de pœnit. l 2. c. 8. ſaith (if thoſe books be his) prius ſolve debitum, ut quod ſperaveris impetrare merearis. Firſt pay thy debt, that thou mayeſt deſerve to obtain that thou hopeſt for. We are indeed faiththful, good, and profitable ſervants, not of our ſelves, or by any works which we can do, but by the free imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſs. See Heb. 13. 21.

V. 11. thorow the midſt of Samaria] Omri King of Iſrael, 1 King 16. 24. bought the hill Samaria of Shemer, and built thereon, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer owner of the hill, Samaria, Hebr. שמרון, Shomeron, 70. τὸ ὄρος τὸ σεμερών, See Anaſtaſius Sinait. qu. 45.

V. 12. which ſtood afar off] As unclean perſons were to do, leſt they ſhould infect others. See Levit. 13. 45, 46. theſe lepers hearing of the fame of Jeſus, that he cured all diſeaſes, and was moſt ready to ſhew mercy to all thoſe who came to him for help, and poſſibly hearing that Jeſus paſſed by that way, would not foreſlow their oportunity of coming to entreat him to heal them. It ſeemeth that their diſeaſe brought them acquainted, and ſo they joyned in petition, for otherwiſe, the Jews have no commerce with Samaritans, John 4. 9. and one of this company was a Samaritan, verſe 16.

V. 13. and ſaid, Jeſus Maſter, have mercy] It was a cauſe common to them all, and they joyned in one and the ſame petition, ſhort, but pithy: they ſay not wherein they deſired him to inſtance his mercy: their miſery was evident, and ſpake their meaning, for a cure which they were confident he could work: however, they believed (as often it cometh to paſs) ingratitude in nine of them extinguiſhed the ſparks of grace, or miſerably obſcured and weakned them in theſe nine.

V. 14. ſhew your ſelves unto the prieſts] See Lev. 14. 2. to them it belonged to judge of the Leproſie, and hereby the unbelieving Prieſts might be convinced: it may alſo teach us humility and ſubjection to authority: Sacerdotem adhuc appellabat quem ſciebat ſacrilegum eſſe, Cyprian lib. 3. ep. 9. he yet called him Prieſt, whom he knew to be ſacrilegious.

V. 15. turned back] Whether he came back to Chriſt before he had ſhewed himſelf to the Prieſt, as Chriſt enjoyned him, it is not certain. It is moſt probable that theſe were not ſent to the Prieſt to know that they were clean, or to pronounce them ſo, for that evidently appeared, but to convince the Prieſts unbelief, ſeeing that Chriſt had done ſuch evident things to confirm his doctrine.

V. 16. fell down on his face, at his feet] So adored he the divine power of Chriſt: and this ſheweth that he was perfectly cured, otherwiſe he ought not to have come ſo neer.

and he was a Samaritan] Theſe words condemn the Jews of high ingratitude, who being inſtructed in the Law of God, and having received the ſame favour from Chriſt to be cured, yet not ſo much as came back to thank Chriſt, which this Samaritan did, though he were a ſtranger from the Common-wealth of Iſrael, and of a Nation which they condemned as moſt impious, and vile, ſo that they held no commerce with them, John 4 9.

V. 17. where are the other nine] As if he ſaid, I have healed ten of you, will none be thankful but this ſtranger? Not that he did not foreſee their ingratitude, but that he might note and declare it unto others then preſent, to the intent, that they might learn to beware of that moſt ignoble ſin of ingratitude to God, or man.

V. 18. there are not found] He compareth the Jews with this ſtranger: when the Samaritan ſhewed himſelf not only thankful in his own perſon, but modeſt in not accuſing the reſt: Jeſus thus ſpeaketh to his diſciples and others preſent; there are not found, that is, no man appeareth thankful.

to give glory to God] By confeſſing that Chriſt had cured them by a Divine power, for this mercy was ſhewed them not for their ſakes, but that the power; and mercy of God in Chriſt might therein be manifeſted and declared; therefore this their ingratitude was ſacrilegious, for as much as their ſilence robbed God of his honour due; and Chriſt of the teſtimony of the truth of the goſpel which he preached and confirmed by this and other like miracles.

ſave this ſtranger] For the Samaritans were Colonies brought into thoſe parts by Salmanaſar King of Aſſyria out of divers Provinces. See 2 Kings 17 24. &c. he calleth him ſtranger, not to diſgrace him but to ſet off the fault, and to condemn the ingratitude of the Jews; that no ſtranger might deſpair, nor any glory of holy parents, if their ſelves be degenerate.

V. 19. ariſe, go thy way] He graciouſly raiſeth him that was proſtrate before him, neither doth he diſmiſſe him without commending his faith and gratitude; and it is moſt likely, that Chriſt, who ſhewed him this mercy, would not leave his own work imperfect, diſmiſſing him without further inſtructing him in the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation.

V. 20. the Phariſees] See on c. 14. 1.

not with obſervation] Or with outward ſhew: meaning that it ſhould not be, as they dreamed, a kingdom temporal and glorious, with external pomp and Majeſty; but ſpiritual, and ſo not to be diſcovered or obſerved by the world: for otherwiſe it appeared to the faithful by many evident ſignes and demonſtrations, that Jeſus was indeed that long expected Meſſias, and King of Iſrael, John 1. 49.

V. 21. within you] Or among you, in the Goſpel preached, which is the ſcepter of his kingdom: and the Meſſias, whoſe kingdom you have with ardent votes deſired, is now among you in your houſes and Synagogues, and ye acknowledge him not, John 1. 7. and the ſpiritual kingdom of God is alſo in the hearts of the faithful, and ſo to be diſcerned by them only, who are ſubjected thereto, Rev. 2. 17. See Rom. 14 14.

V. 22. when ye ſhall deſire to ſee, &c.] For the great afflictions which ye ſhall ſuffer, ye ſhall after my departure out of the world, deſire this my bodily preſence with you again, to comfort you. See Matthew 9. 15. John 17. 12. but I ſhall be no more converſant on earth, after my aſcenſion, untill I come again to judgment: therefore beware of ſeducers coming in my Name.

V. 23. and they ſhall ſay] See Mat. 24. 23 Mark 13. 21.

go not after them] He ſpeaketh here of ſeducers and falſe Apoſtles, whereof he warneth. See alſo Deuter. 13. 3. 8. Jerem. 23. 16. Jerem. 27. 9. It is a dangerous thing to tempt God, by liſtning to the tempter: God oftentimes therefore giveth them over to ſtrong deluſions, to believe lies and be damned, who believed not, neither reſted contented with the truth, 2 Theſ. 2. 11, 12.

V. 24. as the lightning] Meaning, that it ſhould be ſudden, which Matth. 24. 27. ----- is expreſſed by,——out of the eaſt, and ſhineth even unto the weſt. See the like manner of ſpeaking, Deut. 4. 32.

ſo ſhal alſo the Son of man be in his day] He ſpeaketh here of Chriſts ſecond coming, which verſe 30. is called the day wherein the Son of man, Chriſt, ſhall be revealed: the Apoſtle calleth it the day of the Lord, 1 Theſ. 5. 2 and Jude 6. the great day, and Paul, 1 Cor. 1. 7. the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. See alſo 2 Theſ. 1. 7. 1 Theſ. 4. 14. &c. Mat. 24. 30. this ſhall be ſudden, as the appearance of lightning in the air, in the twinkling of an eye, 1 Cor. 15.

V 25. firſt muſt he ſuffer] See Mark 8. 31. Luke 9. 2. that is, Chriſt muſt firſt ſuffer.

and be rejected] That is, be diſallowed, contemned and deſpiſed of the Iews, as evil or unprofitable; which phraſe ſeemeth to relate to Pſal. 118. 22. See alſo Mat. 21. 42, 1 Pet. 2. 4. in theſe words Chriſt would remove the ſcandal of the croſſe, telling them before hand what he muſt ſuffer, leſt they ſhould ſtartle and be offended at it, when they ſhould ſee him ſuffer: he would alſo teach us patience in his own example, and confute the vain dreams of Jews concerning his temporal kingdom and glory: for as the Prophets foretold of his ſufferings, ſo did he enter into his kingdom of glory, through ignominy, ſufferings, the Croſs, and Death. See chap. 24. 26. 1 Pet. 1. 11. Mark 8. 31.

V. 26 in the dayes of Noe] Gen. 7 Mat. 24. 37. 1 Pet. 3. 20. as if he ſaid, no warnings could then perſwade men, to leave their ſins and turn to God, in newneſſe of life, but ſecurely flattered themſelves, until they all periſhed: ſo ſhall it be when I come to judgement. Auguſtin ſaith truly, de verb. Dom. Luc. ſer. 37. Sæculi lætitia, eſt impunita nequitia, the joy of this world, is unpuniſhed wickedneſs: How ſhort and beguiling muſt that needs be, ſeeing man is ſo ſhort lived, and God ſo inevitably juſt? magnæ miſerecordiæ eſt, nequitiæ impunitatem non relinquere; it is Gods great mercy not to leave wickedneſſe unpuniſhed here, leſt he ſhould be compelled at laſt to condem to Hell, he now vouchſafeth to correct with the rod, that he might by correction amend us, and not deſtroy us in the rigour of his juſtice.

V. 27 they did eat and drink] Chriſt doth not herein condemn any holy uſe of the creatures or the ordinance of God. but ſecurity in ſinne, and contempt or neglect of Gods warnings, as 2 Peter 3. 4, 9, 10. &c. 2 Peter 2 5, 6. &c. there is a time and meaſure to eat and drink: a time and meaſure for all things, Ecclеſ. 3. 1. 1 Cor. 7. 5. So that we ſuffer not our hearts to be ſurcharged hereby, and that day of the Lord come upon us unawares, chap. 21. 34.

V. 28. likewiſe alſo, &c.] Geneſ. 19. by another example he ſheweth the ſame which he had before taught them, that at his ſecond coming he ſhould finde a ſecure world unprovided for judgment, the generality thereof thinking of nothing leſſe than their deſtruction, which ſhould ſodainly come on them, as thoſe ſhowers of fire and brimſtone upon Sodome and Gomorra; while they were eating, drinking, or following other worldly affairs.

V. 30. is revealed] From heaven, coming in flaming fire to render vengeance to the ungodly, 2 Theſ. 1. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Matth. 24. 30.

V 31 he which ſhall be on the houſe top] Mat. 24. 17, 18. theſe things are related as ſpoken promiſcuouſly concerning the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, and the coming of Chriſt to judgement: this place mentioneth them as ſpeaking of the general judgement: ſome things in Mat. 24. are to be underſtood as peculiar to the deſtruction of Ieruſalem; ſome things as common to both: that is ſudden deſtruction, and vain care to flie, reſiſt, or ſave any temporal poſſeſſion out of the flames.

V. 32. remember Lots wife] Gen 19. 26. A memorable example is propoſed in her, who contrary to Gods command, but looking back to that which ſhe unwillingly left behind her, was thereby overtaken with the judgement: and the monument thereof remained after the time of Chriſt. Clem. Rom. ep. ad Corinth. p. 15. σημεῖον ἐτέθη, ὥστε γνῶναι αὐτὴν στήλην ἁλὸς ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης, ſhe was for a ſigne being turned into a pillar of ſalt (which, ſaith he) continueth unto this day.

V. 33. whoſoever ſhall ſeek to ſave, &c.] See Mat. 16. 25.

V 34. there ſhall be two] Mat. 24. 40. he calleth it night, in reſpect of the dreadful afflictions and horror of mens ſouls.

V. 35. two women] Mat. 24. 41.

V. 36. two men ſhall be in the field] Meaning, that no ſociety of man in this world ſhall not then be diſſolved, neither ſhall any be joyned in their future condition, as in this preſent, in reſpect of temporal relations.

one ſhall be taken] It importeth a reception to ſafety, as Pſal. 27. 10. the Lord יאספני Iaaſpheni, will gather me.

V. 37 they anſwered] That is, the Diſciples.

where Lord?] Mat. 24. 28. in v. 22. he addreſſeth his ſpeech to the Diſciples: now they having heard him ſpeak of the taking of ſome, ask him where they ſhall be taken.

thither will the eagels] Chriſt anſwereth them by a ſimilitude, and ſentence taken out of Job 39. 30. uſed alſo Mat. 24 28. ſignifying by the flight of the Eagels, the ſudden aſſembling of the Saints unto Chriſt coming unto judgement, whereof ſee 1 Theſ. 4. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 52.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſe 1. A*Lwayes to pray*] That is, in every opportunity, ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ; as often as need and ſeaſon require: this πάντοτε, is that which 1 Theſ. 5. 17. the Apoſtle expreſſeth by ἀδιαλείπτως; without ceaſing, which the Syriac giveth by omni tempore, as Pſ. 34. 1. Hebr. בכל עת becol gheth, at all times. 70. ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ in every oppertunity: according to that of Auguſtine ep. 121. c. 10. the brethren in Egypt are wont, Crebras quidem habere orationes, ſed eas tamen breviſſimas & raptim quodam modo jaculatas, to have frequent prayers, but very brief, and in a manner ſuddenly ejaculated. The meaning here is, the next words interpret, and not to faint; not to be diſmayed by the length of any afflictions, ſo as to let go their hope and exerciſe of prayer. but to watch therein. See on c. 2. 37.

V. 2. there was in a city a Iudge] The ſum and ſcope of this place is to encourage us to fervency and conſtancy in prayer: by an argument from the leſſer to the greater: if the unrighteous judge, which neither feared God nor reverenced man, was intreated by the importunity of the widow, to do juſtice to her whom he regarded not; how much more will God be intreated to relieve his dear children, whom he ſo loved, that he gave his only Son to death for them, whoſe neceſſities he knoweth before they ask? See Iſaiah 65 24.

neither regarded man] He deſcribeth a wicked judge, firſt by the cauſe of all ſuch injuſtice, want of the fear of God. See 2 Chron. 19. 6, 7. next by a miſchievous effect thereof come to ſuch an highth of impudency and preſuming to abuſe power and law, that (all bonds of modeſty broken down) he would not ſo much as vail or diſſemble his injuſtice: but (as out-daring cenſure, and not caring who knew it) openly exerciſe it. So the Syriac giveth this, neither reverenced man, and from the ſons of men לא מחכהר הוא non ſe abſcondebat, he concealed not himſelfs He was ſo openly wicked, that he feared not the judgement of God nor man. See Hoſ. 4 18.

V. 3. and there was a widow] In the deſcription of this Widow are certain degrees of comfort to be gathered, and motives to perſeverance in prayer. 1 She was a widow: by ſo much more helpleſs; therefore God cautioned in his law for ſuch, Exod. 22: 22. Deut. 24. 17. Iſa. 1. 17. 2. She was injured. 3. She had a wicked judge to appeal unto, and ſo little hope of relief. 4. ſhe complained long without anſwer: yet her importunity at laſt prevailed; how much more ſhall Gods children for mercy, which he is readier to ſhew, than we to ask?

V. 4. though I fear not God, &c.] This further encourageth us to prayer: the Judge, who could ſay to his own conſcience, that he neither feared God, nor reverenced man; whom neither equity of the cauſe, pity to the widow, loathing of injury, zeal of juſtice, nor love of any good, could move; yet had another motive to make him judge for the widow, leſt ſhe ſhould, by continuall ſolicitation, weary him: the word ὑπωπιάζῃ, here uſed, is borrowed from combatants, and ſignifieth, leſt ſhe ſhould, as with continual ſtrokes, beat my ears: the Latines expreſſe it by obtundere.

V. 7. though he beare long] Though he long ſuffer the wicked to inſult, and though he long delay the execution of his judgements; yet will he hear his elect, and be their refuge in due time. Many times, quod dare vult, differt he deferreth that which he will give, that we may the more fervently deſire that which is delayed, ne vileſcat cito datum, leſt that which is quickly given ſhould be undervalued. Aug. de. verb. Dom. ſerm. 9.

V. 8. he will avenge] When he knoweth it moſt ſeaſonable, Pſal. 9. 9. Hebr. 10. 37. 2 Pet. 3. 9. So is it on Gods part, μακροθυμία long-ſuffering, verſe 7. (See Exod. 34. 6. Num. 14. 18. Rom. 2. 4. Rom. 9. 22. 1 Pet. 3. 20. 2 Pet. 3. 9.) but on the ſinners part ſpeedy vengeance, verſe 8. becauſe it cometh long before they would or did expect it. See Mat. 8. 29. 1 Theſ. 5. 3. Prov. 24. 22. & 29. 1. Eccleſ. 9. 12. Iſai. 29. 5. & 30. 13. Hab. 2. 7. Jer. 50. 24. Mat. 24. 44. Luke 12. 39. Rev. 3. 3.

when the Son of man cometh] When Chriſt ſhall come to judge the world, he ſhall finde few truly faithful on earth: and therefore wonder not at the evil of the times. See Mat. 24. 12. where the immediate cauſes of ſo general an apoſtacie ſeemeth to be rendred: that is, perſecution of Gods miniſters: breaking out of falſe Apoſtles, or Prophets: malice, the grand nurſe of all impiety: abundance of iniquity, and charity (without which faith is dead, Jam. 2. 20.) growing cold; it muſt needs be hard to finde faith where theſe things are found: yet ſtill God will have a reſerve, his elect, here to be excepted, as alſo in judgement, Ezek. 9. 6 Rev. 7. 3.

V. 9. which truſted in themſelves, &c.] Or, as being righteous; that is, in their own merit and worth, as if for that God were bound to hear them; whereas indeed this is a certain effect and ſigne of their ſpirituall blindneſſe, ſecurity, hypocriſie and pride, all which is abominable before God; for ſaith Salvian de gub. Dei lib. 3. though one ſtudy to pleaſe God, yet this is a kinde of the greateſt wickedneſſe, ſi ſe juſtum præſumat if one preſumeth that he is juſt: and again, lib. 4. he ſaith, the greateſt accuſer of guilty men, is that arrogance which uſurpeth (a ſhew of) innocency; for among many who are guilty of the ſame crimes, nullus eſt criminoſior, quàm qui ſe non putat criminoſum: none is more guilty than he who thinketh not himſelf guilty: this onely can we adde to our ſinnes, that we judge our ſelves not ſinners.

and deſpiſe others] ἐξουθενοῦντας ἐξουθενίζω, pro nihilo duco: here is meant ſuch a deſpiſing: as counteth others as nothing worth; ſo do proud hypocrites undervalue all but themſelves, the worſt of all.

V. 10. into the temple to pray] For that was, בית תפלה beth tephilla, an houſe of prayer, Iſaiah 56. 7. οἶκος προσευχῆς, Matth. 21. 13. See Acts 3. 1. they went up becauſe the temple ſtood on mount Moriah, 2 Chron. 3. 1. in the threſhing floor of Ornan. See 2 Sam 24. 16. 22. where Abraham would have ſacrificed his onely beloved ſon Iſaac (Geneſ. 22. 2.) a type of Chriſt: hither came ſaints and hypocrites (as the clean, and unclean into Noahs ark) the juſt and wicked pray: but with much different ends and effects. Prayer was ever eſteemed a principall part of Gods worſhip: ſee 1 Kings 8. 29, 30. Pſalm 138. 2. here God is ſaid to have put his name, 1 Kings 8. 16 not that God hath confined his grace and mercy to that place See 1 Tim. 2. John 4. 21, 22, 23.) but that the people of God might be reſtrained from the temples and ſervice of idols: and that this temple might bear a repreſentation of him who was to come thither, Mal. 3. 1. through whom alone the prayers of the faithful are heard, John 14. 13. John 16. 23. Matth. 7. 7. Mark 11. 24.

the one a Phariſee, the other a Publican] The Phariſees being of a ſtrict life, ſwelled with great opinion of their own ſanctity: the Publicanes were eſteemed of the Jews, an impious, ungodly, and prophane people: See concerning Phariſees, Chap. 14. 1. Chap. 15. 1. and of Publicans, Chap. 3. 12. Chap. 15. 1, 2. yet Chriſt ſaid, except your righteouſneſſe exceed the righteouſneſſe of Scribes and Phariſees, ye ſhall not enter into the kingdom of heaven, Matth. 5. 20. and here the humble Publicane is juſtified before the proud Phariſee: ſo much do Gods judgements differ from mans.

prayed thus with himſelf] σταθεὶς πρὸς ἑαυτὸν, ſtanding or ſetting himſelf apart: or by himſelf: ſo the Syriac interpreter giveth it, he ſtood alone: this ſcripture ſheweth his proud heart, as far from the true fear of God, as his opinion had ſet him from the vulgar, whom he counted wicked and unclean: See Iſa 65. 5. This word σταθεὶς here determineth not any poſture or bodily geſture, (for they uſed alſo to kneel in prayer, 1 Kings 5. 24. Mic. 6. 6. Dan. 6. 10. Luke 22. 41. Acts 7. 60. and 9. 40. and 20. 36.) it alſo importeth a commencement or beginning of an action, or perſeverance therein: he ſtood (ſome think) alone, above in the temple, leaving the deſpiſed Publican in the utmoſt porch, or court of the people; ſo far it was lawfull for reputed ſinners to come, and ſtrangers alſo. See Joſeph. contr. Appion. lib. 2. 1 Kings 8. 41. he prayed thus, Greek ταῦτα, theſe things; ſo Syriac: inſtead of a prayer, he ſayed theſe things.

God I thank thee] Though he attributed to Gods grace all the good he ſpeaks of himſelf: yet becauſe he placed not all his confidence in the free mercy of God through Chriſt, in humility accounting all that he had, loſſe for Chriſt, (Phil. 3. 7, 8.) that he might not be found in his own pretended righteouſneſſe, which was of the law but in that which is through the faith of Chriſt; he was not juſtified: though he did not here proclaim his merit unto men, but ſpake to God: yet the ſearcher of hearts condemned that ſecret pride, and confidence in his own merit, which ſhewed it ſelf: 1. in contempt of others (whom he counted ungodly) 2. in magnifying himſelf as free from the ſins of others, and juſt in doing thoſe things he ſpake of, which probably he did, and poſſibly might be unreprovable herein before men. (See Phil. 3. 6.) how dangerous is ſpiritual pride, even in the moſt glorious and greateſt excellencies of men? humility is a ſafe vertue: leave all to God, who is a plentiful rewarder of the holy, and will abundantly crown his own gifts: and be aſſured thou ſhalt loſe nothing thereby: See Matth. 25. 34. &c. Hebr. 6. 10 Hebr. 10. 35. & 11. 26. 2 John 8. Rev. 22. 12.

as other men, extortioners, &c.] As if other mens vices were his vertues; to juſtifie himſelf, he contemneth and condemneth others: his ſelf being by ſo much worſe than others, by how much more proud than others: he confeſſeth no faults, but as faultleſſe caſteth ſtones at others: which is, as if the ſick man ſhould onely tell what parts of his body were well affected and ſound: it ſeemeth he praiſed God, (as hypocrites uſe) only to colour his oſtentation.

or even as this Publican] Hypocriſie is blinde at home, and too quick-ſighted abroad: it is natural to the malitious, to judge all thoſe evil, whom they hate, when proud hypocrites cenſure the juſt, God yet ſeeth how much more damnable the judge is, than the condemned.

V. 12. I faſt twice in the week] That is, on the ſecond day of the week, to which our munday anſwereth; and the fifth, which is on our thurſday, according to the tradition of the Phariſees as their writers ſay; he that had reckned others faults, will be ſure to put his own pretended vertues to account; as if he had perfectly learned that precept, Iſai. 1. 16, 17. Ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well; yea more than the Law required; as though he were better than the beſt: he mentioneth two things of which the Phariſees much gloried, faſting and paying tithes. See Matth. 9. 14. and 23. 23.

I give tithes of all] See on Chap. 11 42.

V. 13. the Publican ſtanding afar off] In that part of the temple, where all ſorts of people, Publicanes and ſinners might come, 1 Kings 8. 41. here he ſtood in humilitie, and deep ſenſe of his own unworthineſſe, far from the altar, and holy of holies, where God more evidently manifeſted his preſence; yet not ſo far off but that the Phariſee had him in ſight, when he ſaid, or even as this Publican, verſe 11.

not lift up] This was alſo an argument of an humble and lowly heart, as a ſelf condemning ſinner, he durſt not look up toward the throne of God (the courts of the temple were all open, as they ſay, ſub Dio, whereof Florus lib. 3. c. 5. ſaid — vidit illud grande impiæ gentis arcanum patens, ſub aureo uti cælo) now as this poſture of his ſignified, dejection of minde and diffidence in his cauſe, ſo lifting up the head, or looking up importeth boldneſſe and confidence of favour and indemnity, as chap. 21. 28 when theſe things begin to come to paſſe, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh, but this Publican would not lift up his eyes to heaven, judging them, ſaith Theophylact, ἀναξίους, unworthy to look up to heaven, who had ſet them ſo much on earthly things to enjoy them; viz. which contempt of the heavenly.

ſmote his breaſt] See Chap. 23. 48. as it were correcting and puniſhing his heart ὑπὲρ τῶν πονηρῶν βουλευμάτων, for its evil thoughts, and as to awaken it from its ſleep and ſecurity in ſinne. Theophylact.

God be merciful to me a ſinner] He well maketh haſt to his ſins remiſſion, who is diſpleaſed with himſelf; for with the juſt and merciful judge, qui ſe accuſat, excuſat; he excuſeth, who accuſeth himſelf. Proſper.

V. 14. juſtified rather than, &c.] Acquitted of his ſins, and received to mercy; ſo was not the other, becauſe he juſtified himſelf, and was ſo far from forſaking his ſins, that he did not ſo much as confeſs them. See Prov. 28. 13.

for every one that exalteth himſelf] Mat 23. 12 Luke 14. 11. ſo that it is true which Proſper ſaith after Auguſtine Melior eſt in malis factis humilis confeſſio, quam in bonis ſuperba gloriatio; humble confeſſion in evil deeds, is better than proud boaſting in good.

V. 15. brought unto him alſo infants, &c.] Mat. 19. 13. Mar. 10. 13.

touch them] Lay his hands upon them, bleſſe, or pray for them: for impoſition of hands was anciently a ſigne thereof. See Gen. 48. Exod 29. and a common ſymbolum of bleſſing among the Jews.

they rebuked them] That is, thoſe that brought them : as Mark 10. 15

V. 16. called them] Thoſe that brought the infants.

for of ſuch is the kingdom &c.] Meaning infants, and thoſe who in ſimplicitie, humility contempt of the world, innocencie, harmeleſſeneſſe, freedom from malice, ſoon forgetting injuries, and the like, become like little children; if the inheritance of the kingdom of heaven be theirs, who can reaſonably barre them of the ſeal of adoption, baptiſme ? of which it may not improperly be ſaid (which Jacob ſaid of the place he reſted in) this is the gate of heaven, Geneſ. 28. 17. where did God ever forbid children to be baptized ? It is a true ſpeech of Optatus, lib. 7. Quicquid enim Deus fieri noluit, ore ſuo prohibuit; whatſoever God would not have done, he hath forbidden with his own mouth : that is, the holy Scripture.

V. 17. whoſoever ſhall not receive, &c.] Mark 10. 15.

V. 18. a certain ruler asked him] Mat. 19. 16. Mark 10. 17. See alſo on Chap. 14. 1.

V. 19. Why calleſt thou me good, &c.] Becauſe they commonly abuſed this word, Jeſus ſheweth him that he could not confeſſe him to be good, except he alſo acknowleged him to be God.

V. 20. Thou knoweſt the commandments] It was a very neceſſary queſtion which he asked concerning a way to eternal life, and a bleſſed care of a young man : neither doth he put it on good words, or any thing leſſe than good works really to be done : yet becauſe he asketh a legall queſtion, verſe 18 What ſhall I do? Chriſt accommodateth his anſwer thereto : thou knoweſt the commandments : but when the terrified keeper of the priſon asked Paul the like queſtion, he anſwered, believe in the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved; Acts 16. The ſcope of this ſpeech is to ſhew, that it is but vain to enquire for the way to heaven, while men truſt in their own holineſſe, or have their hearts ſet on this world. Here good works and obedience to the Law are propoſed, as Levit. 18. 5. Deut. 30. 19. as the whole Law, that ſhewing us our ſin, Rom. 7. 7. and miſerable condition and diſability to be juſtified by the Law, it may be our Schoolmaſter to bring us to Chriſt. Gal. 3. 24. teaching us that we can no wayes be ſaved, but by his merits: thus Chriſt would convict the dangerous confidence of this man by remitting him to the ſecond Table of the Law, againſt which mens ſins are more evident and apparent.

Do not commit adultery] Exod. 20. 13. &c.

V. 21. All theſe have I kept] This anſwer is full of youthful confidence, wherein he was neither ſenſible of the rigorous weight of the Law : nor his own diſability to avoid the curſe thereof, nor his own many ſins whereof he was guilty; and ſtood charged before the tribunal of the all-ſeeing God; for there is no man that liveth and ſinneth not, 1 Kings 8. 46,

V. 22. Yet lackeſt thou one thing] This he ſpeaketh, firſt by way of conceſſion, admit it be as thou ſayeſt; next he tryeth him by this one precept, that he might make the corruption of his heart appear, who pretended unto ſo abſolute an obedience to all the commandments.

V. 23. he was very ſorrowfull] Becauſe he loved the world, and yet would fain be ſaved in the world to come; it grieved him that he could not have both : carnal goſpellors would fain go to Heaven, if they could find a cheap way, thereunto : otherwiſe they wil not purchaſe the hope of future bleſſedneſſe, with a preſent price : the reaſon is, becauſe they do not ſo much hope for ſalvation; as fear damnation.

V. 24. how hardly ſhall they that have riches, &c.] That is, as Mark 10. 24. they that truſt in riches, love them, ſet their hearts on them, ſerve them, and ſo give them that place in their hearts, which God alone ſhould have.

V. 25. it is eaſier for a camel, &c.] This ſeemeth to have been a proverb, whereby they ſignified ſome impoſſibility : this he ſaith, arguens cupiditatem ejus, taxing his covetouſneſſe. Irenaus lib. 4. cap. 26.

V. 26. Who then can, &c.] That is, what rich man can be ſaved?

V. 27. are poſſible with God] Who ſo governeth the hearts of his, that their riches do not blinde them, nor take away their hearts from God, Jer. 32. 17.

V. 28. then Peter ſaid] See Matthew 19. 27. Mark 10. 28.

V. 30. more in this preſent time] For, the ſweet fruit of the ſpirit, and aſſurance of eternal life, which the faithful here receive, is more to them than all the world, Phil. 3. 8.

V. 31. then he took unto him the twelve] Matthew 20. 17. Mark 10. 32. He ſpake not concerning his paſſion before the multitude, but to his diſciples apart : for the multitude was not yet capable of this great myſtery, neither did his diſciples underſtand it, when he told it them plainly, verſe 34. for two reaſons ſaith Theophylact : firſt that he might ſhew them that he ſhould ſuffer, ὐκ ἄκων ὐδ᾽ ὡς ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος, neither unwillingly, neither as mere man, not knowing that he ſhould be crucified : ſecondly, to teach them to bear patiently, that which was to come, being thereof foretold.

we go up to Jeruſalem] There he was to ſuffer, that the truth might anſwer the type, which ſo many ages before preceded in Iſaac, Gen. 22. and here he foretelleth certain degrees of his paſſion : 1. how ſhe ſhould be delivered to the Gentiles, Pilate and the Roman Souldiers : 2. how he ſhould be mocked and ſpitefully entreated, and ſpitted on : 3. how he ſhould be put to death after ſcourging, &c. Theſe things are fulfilled, and to balance theſe ſad things, he propoſeth three things conſalatory : 1. that he foreſaw, and foretold what he was to ſuffer; ſo that it was neither fortuitous, compulſory, nor by the counſel of man; but voluntary, and by the determinate counſel of God for mans redemption. See Acts 2. 23. Acts 4. 28. 2. that herein ſhould be fulfilled all that God had declared (concerning theſe ſufferings of our Redeemer) by his Prophets. See Acts 3. 18 Pſal. 22. 1. Matth. 27. 46. Pſal. 69. 20, 21. Dan. 9. 26. Iſa. 53. 3, 4. &c. 3. that he ſhould riſe again the third day according to the Scriptures; Hoſea 6. 1. Pſalm 16. 10. which was prefigured in Jonahs being three dayes and nights in the belly of the whale, Matth. 12. 39. Luke 11. 29. 30.

V. 32. the Gentiles] See on verſe 31.

ſpitted on] See Mat. 26. 67.

V. 33. they ſhall ſcourge him] Matthew 27. 26. John 19. 1.

V. 34. this ſaying was hid from them] It was the great infirmity of the diſciples ſtill dreaming of Chriſts temporall kingdom, and reſtitution of Iſraels proſperity by ſome glorious victories over their enemies, which errours after Chriſts reſurrection, being cleared by the holy Ghoſt, better inſtructing them, they remembred what Chriſt had ſaid unto them, John 2. 22. thus we ſee how blinde carnal reaſon is, (ſpecially being infected with ſome perverſe opinion) untill it be illuminated by the ſpirit of regeneration : the things here mentioned, were plainly preached without any trope; yet that which they had once fancied concerning a temporall kingdom, ſo prepoſſeſſed them, that they could not at preſent underſtand any thing ſpoken concerning Chriſt's death and paſſion; but poſſibly they ſuppoſed that he ſpake concerning ſome other perſon, or ſome other myſterie.

V. 35. it came to paſſe] Mat. 20. 29. Mark 10. 46.

nigh unto Jericho] Jericho was a city in the tribe of Benjamin, Joſhua 18. 21. once great and populous. See concerning it, Joſhua 2. 1. and 6. 1. it was deſtroyed by Joſhua, and there was a curſe pronounced on the repairer thereof, Joſhua. 6. 16. it was redifyed by Hiel, 1 Kings 16. 34. in the ſiege of Jeruſalem by the Romans, propter perfidaim civium, for the perfidiouſneſſe of the citizens (ſaith Jerom de loc. Hebraic.) it was taken and deſtroyed, and repaired again, a third city being there built, which Jerom ſaith, remained to his time.

a certain blind man] Bartimeus, Mark 10. 46. this Evangeliſt nameth one blinde man, (ſo doth St. Mark alſo) who, it ſeemeth, was beſt known of the two mentioned by Matthew 20. 29. that which is here hiſtoriſied of Bartimaus, verſe 35, 36, 37, 38. probably was at Chriſts entrance into Jericho, but that which followeth to the end of the Chapter, concerning reſtoring his ſight, &c. was done at his going away from the city, as the other two Evangeliſts write.

V. 36. hearing the multitude paſſe by] Matth. 20. 30. by the noiſe of their feet, and confuſed voices (ſuch as uſe to be heard of men talking one with another) as they went along. So the Syriac expreſſeth it, & audivit קל כנשא vocem turba tranſeuntis. Some of the multitude telling him upon his enquiry, that it was Jeſus of Nazareth, whom ſuch a confluence of people attended, paſſing by.

V. 38, Jeſus thou Son of David] Matthew. 20. 30. See on verſe 39.

V. 39. rebuked him] Matth. 20. 31.

but he cryed ſo much the more] The multitude reproved him, and enjoyned him ſilence, as not willing that he ſhould trouble Chriſt with clamours; but he cryed ſo much the louder; not that his mercy needed to be awakened with ſuch cries, nec clamoribus admonendus eſt, qui cogitationes videt, Fulgentius de perſona Chriſti lib. 2. neither is he to be admoniſhed with clamours; which ſeeth the thoughts : but this was an effect of the petitioners confidence : true faith (like water ſources) by ſo much more ſtrongly breaketh over all lets, by how much more it is dammed up: all oppoſitions ſtrive with it. as the winde with the fire, enflame it more : let not afflictions ſtop our mouths, but rather adminiſter matter of more fervencie in our prayers. See Chap. 22. 44.

thou Son of David] They uſed to ſtile the Meſſias, becauſe they knew he ſhould come of the ſtock of David, Pſalm 132. 11. Acts 2. 30.

V. 40. Jeſus ſtood and commanded] Chriſt loveth the importunity of faith, as verſe 1. See Pſalm 9. 18. See Mat 20. 32.

V. 41. what wilt thou, &c.] Thus he ſpeaketh, not becauſe he was ignorant what the blinde man deſired, who could reſtore him ſight (See Matth.6.) but for the ſpectatours ſake, that they might take the more notice of the miracle done: God beſt knoweth what we want, but will have us perform our duty in asking (ut cor ad orationem excitet, Greg. hom. 2. that he may ſtir up, and awake our heart to prayer) and as occaſion ſerveth, teſtifie to others what we beg of him, that others may with us be moved to praiſe and glorifie him.

V. 42. thy faith hath ſaved thee] Here, as in many other like places, chap. 7. 50. chap. 17. 19. &c. he attributes that to faith, which is proper to Chriſt, whoſe power to ſave, faith apprehendeth, and applyeth to us for our ſalvation.

V. 43. and immediately he received his ſight] This ſheweth that he is that eternal word, John 1. 1. which made all things, and who alone can repair that which is decayed: and thus he exemplieth his promiſe; Ask and ye ſhall have, Matth.7.

glorifying God] This is the double effect of the miracle: he aſcribeth the power and mercy which cured him to God: here was his gratitude. So did that Samaritan, chap. 17. 15. and the people which ſaw it, they praiſed God on his behalf, while their blaſphemous doctors, attribute that which he did, to Beelzebub.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſe 2. CHief among the Publicans] That Chriſt vouchſafed his preſence in Jericho (once ſubject to ſo grievous a curſe, c. 18. 35.) exemplifieth two notable things. Firſt, that he who came to ſave ſinners, and deliver from the curſe, called and ſaved ſome out of the moſt infamous and deſpicable places, as Samaria, John 4. 39 Galilee, Mat. 4. &c. that we may know, that in Chriſt, there is neither Jew nor Grecian, bond nor free; all are one in him, who is rich in mercy to all that call upon him. See Rom. 10. 12. Gal. 3. 28. Secondly, that it was poſſible for rich men to be ſaved, he demonſtrateth in the example of Zacheus; becauſe, though it be very rare, yet it is poſſible that God ſhould touch the heart of rich men, cauſing them to give liberally to the poor and to reſtore all that which they have evilly gotten, or detained from others; ſo repenting and believing they may be ſaved. Zacheus is here called ἀρχιτελώνης, a chief Publican, or chief Officer among them, or a Collector-general for that place.

V. 3. who he was] That is, what manner of perſon he was, of whom he had heard ſo much.

becauſe he was of a low ſtature] Having heard much of the fame of Jeſus, and by the multitude attending him, that he was now come into Jerico, he might poſſibly out of a natural deſire to ſatisfie his own mind, reſolve to overcome the lets thereto: but God had another work in hand, which was to bring ſalvation to his houſe; and therefore by his ſecret providence, all hinderances wrought to the greater evidence of Zache's converſion: ſo his low ſtature ſending him up into the Sycamore-tree: and his wealth (which was a common impediment to others) being the matter of almes and reſtitution rendred him the more exemplary to the multitude, and conſpicuous, to Gods glory, his own and others comfort, who can imitate him. So all things work together for good to thoſe who love God, Rom. 8. becauſe he loveth them firſt, 1 Joh. 4. 19 yea thoſe very things which to carnal reaſon ſeemed impediments thereto.

V. 4. into a Sycamore] It concerneth not much preciſely to know what tree this was, concerning which there are ſo many opinions: It was not of that kind which is mentioned c. 17. 6. that was συκάμινος, a Sycomine-tree, a kind of Mulbery-tree. See Dioſcorid. l. 1. c. 144. Galen de aliment. l. 2. But this is, συκομορέα (as Suidas and Theophylact writeth it) or συκομωραία. So Greg. Nazianzen, orat. 39. readeth. The Syriac calleth it תאחא פכהתא titho phacchibotho, a wilde Fig, Hebr. שקמים, which grew plentifully in thoſe champain countries, 1 Kings 10. 27. 2 Chron. 1. 15. See Chryſoſt. Tom. 7. p. 404. edit. Savil. Gregor. Nazianzen orat. 29.

V. 5. to day I muſt abide at thy houſe] Chriſt expected not his invitation, but in mercy prevented him, who probably durſt not have invited him: he that was ambitious but to ſee Chriſt, obtaineth much more, to entertain him at his houſe, and to hear him open the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation: God every where preventeth us, ſaith Theophylact, he is a plentiful Rewarder of them that ſeek him, giving them who but ſet themſelves in the way, more than they could ask or think, Eph. 3. 20. See c. 1. 13. 1 King. 3. 12. 13. when Chriſt asketh of us, he meaneth to give ſome unvaluable bleſſing to us.

V. 6. and he made haſte and came down] Chriſt had made him willing, præparavit ſibi ejus animum cujus elegit hoſpitium, Proſper. cont. Collat. he prepared his mind to receive him whoſe entertainment he choſe. Thus Zache's faith brake out, in a ready and ſpeedy obedience. So Gen. 22. 3. Mat. 4. 22. And ſecondly, in the joy which he conceived at Chriſts calling him. See Acts 8. 39 Rom 14. 17. Gal. 5. 22. true faith cannot be concealed, its own flame will diſcover it.

V. 7. they all murmured] That is, the moſt part of thoſe preſent, which were adverſaries; neither entertaining him their ſelves, nor willing that others ſhould, that he might ſhew them mercy: the main cauſe of their murmuring was, their malice to him, and envy to others who believed in him: theſe murmuring ſpeeches they caſt out in hope to poſſeſſe the people that he could not be the Meſſias, who frequented the company of ſinners. So c. 5. 30. Mat. 9. 11. Luke 7. 39 This was upon the matter to murmure, quod in domum ægroti intravit medicus, Auguſt. de verb. Apoſt. ſer. 8. that the Phyſitian went into the ſick mans houſe; they arranged Publicans with notorious ſinners.

V. 8. And Zacheus ſtood] Doubtleſſe Chriſt ſpake many things to inſtruct him: and poſſibly Zache might ſay many, which are not here recorded in the Goſpel, whoſe ſcope is to ſet down that which may ſerve to bring us to faith and ſalvation, John 20. 30 31. This was a ſure ſign of Zache's converſion, effected by the providence of God, to ſtop the mouthes of murmuring and unbelieving Jewes.

I reſtore him fourfold] According to the Law Exod. 22. 1. Numb. 5. 7. And this is true repentance in caſe of injurious taking away, or detaining anothers goods, which without reſtitution, were but counterfeit and vain.

V. 9. this day is ſalvation come to this houſe] In his converſion and doing the works of holy Abraham, by Gods mercy ſhewed to him and his Family: as if he had ſaid, heretofore Zache went with the periſhing world in the broad way of deſtruction; his main care, ſtudy, and endeavour, being to get wealth by right or wrong: but this day God hath ſhewed mercy in his converſion, ſo that now he doth loath his former life and converſation: now he hath choſen the better part; reſtoring that which he had by any means injuriouſly gained, that it may appear that his repentance is true, and ſo acceptable to the God of mercy; and giving ſo largely to the poor that he may lay up treaſure in heaven, Mat. 6. 19. and a good foundation in ſtore againſt the time to come, that he may lay hold on eternal life, 1 Tim 6. 19. by faith (in Chriſt the onely Saviour) which worketh by love, Gal. 5. 6. Salvation is come to this houſe wherein the Saviour of the Elect, Chriſt, is this day entertained, heard, and beleeved; this houſe whoſe maſter is become of a Publican, a Convert; of a ſinner, a Saint: ſalvation; the means to, and aſſurance of eternal life and true bleſſedneſſe, therein to be enjoyed; his ſins free remiſſion, his peace with God, and his juſtification, is this day ſealed unto him by the ſpirit of regeneration.

is the ſon of Abraham] To be a ſon of Abraham, is to be choſen freely, Rom. 9. 8. to walk in the ſteps and faith of Abraham, Rom. 4. 11, 12. and generally to do the good works of Abraham, John 8. 39. whereby we may be aſſured of our election to eternal life, Rom. 8. 29. 30. 2 Pet. 1. 10.

V. 10. the ſon of man is come to ſeek, &c.] Mat. 18. 11. Hereby he confuteth their murmuring; ſhewing the end of his coming into the World, which was to ſeek and ſave ſinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Mark 2. 17. Mat. 9. 31. therefore among the reſt he came to call Zacheus. That which was loſt by original, as alſo actual ſins, as Auguſtine ep. 106. underſtandeth. As alſo Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 7. 15. and Proſper. adverſ. Collat. c. 18 and ſo as Fulgentius ſaith, de incarnat. &c. c. 8. pro mortuis natus eſt ad mortem: He was born to dye for the dead, that we after the death of our firſt nativity which we have of the fleſh, by the grace of the Spirit might be born again to life eternal.

V. 11. kingdom of God] Meaning a temporal and earthly kingdom, ſuch as they expected by the Meſſias, which they ſuppoſed ſhould be manifeſted now in his approach toward Jeruſalem. They might think that by doing ſo much good among the people in ſeveral divine miracles, he had gained ſo much honour and good will, that the people were generally his; and there remained little more now to be done, but going to the Imperial City, and aſcending into the Throne and ancient honour of his Father David. Thus ſtill dreamed they of a ſecular kingdom of Chriſt the Meſſias: to correct this errour, he addeth, to that he had plainly ſaid, this parable; wherein he teacheth them, that he ſhould indeed very ſhortly begin and enter into his Kingdom, but in heaven, into which he muſt go by his death and paſſion; ſo that the glory thereof ſhould not appear until in the end of time, he ſhould come again to judgement.

V. 12. he ſaid] See Mat. 25. 14.

went into a far countrey] By this parable he deſcribeth his going up again into his kingdom of glory, and his return to judgement: by the ſervants are meant the faithful and Miniſters of the Church: by Citizens, verſe 14. the Jews who rejected them: by the money, their ſeveral gifts: by their trade, the uſage of the ſame to Gods honour, and the ſalvation of his people.

V. 13. pound] Mina here tranſlated a pound, is twelve Ounces and an halfe: which pound according to five ſhillings the Ounce, is three pound two ſhillings and ſix pence Sterling money.

V. 14. we will not have this man reign over us] By this he taxeth the rebellion of the wicked againſt Chriſt; to whoſe power they ſhall be unwillingly ſubject, if they will not willingly be ſo to his kingdom of grace.

V. 15. when he was returned] That is, Chriſt coming in glory to judge the quick and the dead.

V. 16. then came the firſt, ſaying] In theſe ſeveral ſums and accounts, he deſcribeth the ſeveral graces and gifts of God of which there muſt be variable accounts at the day of judgement: the firſt greatly advanced Gods glory; he ſhall have a proportionable reward: the ſecond endeavoured according to his gifts; though far ſhort of the firſt, he ſhall have a proportionable reward, and be full of glory and bleſſedneſſe, though leſſe than the other. See Dan. 12. 3 1 Cor. 15. 41. The third is the negligent ſervant, who making no good uſe of thoſe gifts which he had received, with his vain excuſes, is condemned out of his own mouth: and that is taken away which was entruſted to him, as was the Goſpel from the Jews, Mat. 21. and given to the Gentiles, as Acts 13 46. See Luke 8. 18. And the Spirit from Saul, 1 Sam. 16. 14. which was beſtowed on David; and the gifts and Apoſtleſhip from Judas beſtowed on Matthias, Acts 1. 26.

V. 17. well thou good ſervant] See on Mat. 25. 21.

V. 18. the ſecond came] Mat. 25. 22. See on v. 16.

V. 19 over five cities] This is to ſigniſie, that the glory of his kingdom in his ſecond coming ſhould be much differing from that which now appeareth. We now painfully, through ſcorn, injury, and contempt of the World, negotiate (as it were) for our abſent Maſter; but then we ſhall be full of glory, joy, and happineſſe, which Mat. 25. 23. is more plainly expreſſed, by enter thou into thy maſters joy.

V. 20. and another came] Mat. 25. 24.

V. 21. I feared thee] Mat. 25 25.

V. 22. out of thine own mouth, &c.] By the confeſſion of thine own conſcience, which telleth thee that thou oughteſt not to ſuppreſſe the gifts of God, and live in idleneſſe.

V. 23 my money into the bank] ἐπὶ τὴν τράπεζαν, that is, τοῖς τραπεζίταις, to the common ſtock of Bankers, which made profits of monyes by exchange, and lending out for intereſt.

V. 24. take from him] See Mat. 25. 28 and on v. 16.

V. 25. Lord he hath ten, &c.] He is rich enough or hath grace and glory enough: which we may not conceive Men or Angels ſhall ſay in the laſt judgement, as envying the fulneſſe of glory or bleſſedneſſe given to any of the Elect, but as witneſſing and admiring the abundant liberality of God.

V. 26 to every one that hath] Mat. 13. 12. and 25. 29. Mark 4 25. Luke 8. 18.

from him that hath not, &c.] The meaning of all is, he that faithfully uſeth the graces of God, ſhall have them increaſed: but even the common graces ſhall be taken away from him that uſeth them not to Gods glory. Some underſtand here want of charity making all gifts and excellencies void: Quiſquis charitatem non habet, etiam dona quæ percepiſſe videbatur amittit, Alcvinus (after Gregor.) de confeſ. whoſoever hath not charity, loſeth alſo thoſe gifts which he ſeemed to have obtained. See 1 Cor. 13. 1. &c.

V. 27, and ſlay them before me] He alludeth to the manner of men, executing rebells: the meaning is, that eternal deſtruction is prepared for Gods enemies, as Mat. 25. 41. this Chriſt ſpeaketh to comfort the perſecuted and others who obſerve that the wicked flouriſh, and ſecurely deſpiſe Gods laws; aſſuring them, that though he ſuffer them to go on for a time, he will yet once appear a ſevere revenger of iniquity.

V. 28. he went before] Mark 10. 32. Toward Jeruſalem, where he knew he ſhould ſuffer death, as he had often enformed his diſciples that they might know that he willingly ſuffered for the redemption of man, for whom he hath poured out his ſoul unto death, Iſa 53. 12.

V. 29. when he was come nigh unto Bethpage, &c.] Mat. 21. 1. Mark 11. 1 Here is deſcribed his laſt going up to Jeruſalem. Bethpage was a little Village of the Prieſts at the foot of the Eaſt-part of the Mount of Olives. See on Mat. 21. 1. of Bethany. See John 11. 1.

V. 30. at your entring you ſhall find, &c.] Mat. 21. 5. Chriſt being omniſcient God, as well as truly Man, ſaw the abſent as if they had been preſent. See John 1 48. all this was done that that might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet Zachary, 9. 9.

V. 31 if any ask you] Chriſt preventeth ſuch difficulties as might in the execution of his command have troubled his Diſciples; though he were Lord of all, yet would he not deſtroy the civil rights of men, by taking away any thing without the owners conſent. See Mat. 21. 3

V. 32. and they that were ſent, &c.] Mat. 21. 6. Mark 11. 4.

V. 33. the owners thereof] Mark 11. 5. They did but rationally require an account of their own goods until they knew, what they were that looſed the colt, and that Jeſus had ſent them ſo to do; then they conſented, and we read of no more they ſaid. See Mark 11. --- and they let them go.

V. 34. the Lord hath need of him] Mark 11. 6.

V. 35. and they brought him to Jeſus] Matthew 21. 7. Mark 11. 7.

V. 36. they ſpread their clothes in the way] That is, they who were come to the feaſt, John 12. 12. this was a token of honour done unto him, as to their King, poſſibly they ſuppoſed that he now went up to Jeruſalem to take the kingdom upon him, which might cauſe this their extraordinary rejoycing and acclamations, verſe 37, 38. See John 12. 13.

peace in heaven] That God may be reconciled unto us by the Meſſias: that all glory may be given to him for his mercy ſhewed us in theſe works of Chriſt: and that the Angels, formerly our enemies for our ſin, may become friends and miniſters of our ſafety. See Coloſ. 1. 20

V. 39. Maſter, rebuke thy diſciples] Mat. 21. 15. That this acclamation ceaſed not in the way but came into the very Temple, the children there crying Hoſanna, it ſtung the hearts of envious Phariſees, ſo that they came to Chriſt to ſilence them.

V. 40. the ſtones would immediately cry out] Meaning that they laboured in vain to ſuppreſſe his teſtimony; for God would rather cauſe the ſenſeleſſe creatures to teſtiſie for him (as in the renting of the vail of the Temple, in his paſſion, and of the Rocks, &c. Mat. 27. 51.) than that his will ſhould not be done by him: and indeed Chriſts perſon, doctrine, and miracles, was ſo evident, that they could not be concealed.

V. 41. he beheld the city and wept over it] In his love to the people of Iſrael, zeal of their ſalvation, and knowledge of their final deſtruction at hand; in grief and pity he burſt out into tears: plangit eos qui neſciunt cur plangantur, Gregor. hom. 39. in Evang he bewailed them who knew not why they ſhould be bewailed, who rejoyced when they did evil: all this ſheweth that he took on him, as our nature, ſo all our affections without ſin: ſo oft-times the Deity (as it were) reſted and clouded it ſelf under the vail of his humanity, when the accompliſhment of the work of our redemption required his paſſion, or compaſſion. See Heb. 4 15. He was the Miniſter of the circumciſion, Rom. 15. 8 ſent to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Mat. 15. 24. Seeing therefore how wilfully they periſhed, for whoſe ſalvation principally he was ſent; and that the elect city which God had choſen to put his Name there, rejected their Saviour, out of a fatherly and deep compaſſion, he wept for them who were not ſenſible of their own miſery.

V. 42. if thou hadſt known] It is a pathetical ſpeech, and therefore abrupt: abundance of affectionate thoughts, as it were thronging the heart, like ſome violent preaſe of people at a door, hinder each others paſſage: the ſentence may be ſupplyed with would God, or how happy were it for thee if, &c. The ſum is, I do now preſent the fulfilling of the promiſe for thy ſalvation; but thy deſtruction is near, becauſe thou wilt not receive it, nor underſtand that which is ſo plainly taught thee: thus hath your pride, who ſay you are wiſe and holy, blinded you. Extremæ dementiæ eſt, imprudentiam ſuam non ſentire, & iniquè agentes, non agnoſcere peccatum, it is extream dotage not to be ſenſible of ones own folly, and ſinning, not to acknowledge our iniquity. (Theodoret in Jer. 8.) and to be unwilling to learn: for as Chryſoſtom de reprehenſ. ferend. ſaith, it is no fault to be ignorant, but to be unwilling to learn.

the things which belong unto thy peace] Which thou now heareſt ſpoken, and ſeeſt done by me; all but for thy malice and obſtinacy blinding thee ſhould bring thee to beleeve, to be juſtified, and to have peace with God.

but now are they hid from thine eyes] Through the hardneſſe of thy heart and incredulity, ſee Iſa 6 9 Mat. 13. 14, 15. John 12. 4. Salvian. de gub. l.* 6. providence is taken from them, leſt they which muſt periſh, ſhould eſcape.

V. 43. Thine enemies ſhall caſt a trench] Which was done by Veſpaſian the Roman: (as it was foretold by Daniel c. 9.) and the city and temple demoliſhed, by his ſon Titus.

V. 45. he went into the temple] Mat. 21. 12. Mark 11. 15 this was not his firſt going into the temple mentioned, John 2. 14. but another after that.

V. 48. Were very attentive] ἐξεκρέματο, that which the Latines expreſſed by pendebat ab ore ejus, they depended on his mouth, or attentively harkned unto him, as taken with aſtoniſhment at his doctrine. See Mat. 7. 28, 29. John 7. 46. the Syriac giveth it, all the people appenſus erat ei, ut audiret eum, where, all, is put for a great or major part of them that heard.

and the Scribes] γραμματεῖς: Suidas interpreteth this by νοτάριος: a Notary, whoſe office was to write, and recite the written publich acts: but in the New Teſtament, they were interpreters of the Law alſo: There were of thoſe two ſorts. 1. Laiks which were called γραμματεῖς τοῦ λαοῦ: Scribes of the people, Mat . 4. publick Notaries in drawing up Deeds, Contracts, and ſuch like ſecular writings. To theſe Pſal. 45. 1. alludeth, My tongue is the pen (סופר מהיר ſopher mahir. 70. γραμματέως ὀξυγράφου) of a ſwift writer : out of theſe poſſibly the Kings choſe ſome to be Secretaries of State :. ſuch were called γραμματεῖς τοῦ βασιλέως, 2 Kings 12. 10. ספר המלך ſopher hammelech. So, 2 Sam. 20. 25. 2. The other ſort were Eccleſiaſticks : their office was to tranſcribe, read, and expound the Law of God, and therefore were called δευτερωταὶ τοῦ νόμου. Epiphan. adv. hæreſ. lib. 1. cap. Interpreters, and Doctors of the Law. So was Saphan, 2 Kings 22. 3. סופר בית יהוה ſopher beth Jehova, a Scribe of the houſe of God. So was alſo Ezra, Ezra 7. 6. סופר מהיר בחירת משה, A ready or a ſwift Scribe in the Law of Moſes : Theſe being converſant in Scriptures, were principally Text-men, cleaving to the written word of God, whereas the Phariſees were mainly for traditions of the Elders. And it is obſervable, that the Scribes and Phariſees, agreeing in one reſolution of malicing and calumniating Chriſt, yet much differed in their grounds. So Mat 9. 3. the Scribes accuſed him of blaſphemy; but verſe 11. the Phariſees accuſed him of eating with Publicans and inners : So Mark 7. 3. &c. They queſtion him concerning the breach of traditions.

came upon him] Gr. ἐπέστησαν : the ſame word is uſed c. 2. 9. though there concerning good, but here for evil. The Syriac giveth it, there aroſe up againſt him ; ſee Mat. 21. 23. Mark 11. 27. See note on c. 14. 1.

V. 2. by what authority] See Mat. 21 23. Mark 11. 28. Gr. ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ by what power, ἐν. here ſignifieth by, as alſo Hebr. 1. 1. he hath ſpoken unto us ἐν υἱῷ, by his Son, becauſe he caſt out the buyers and ſellers out of the temple, and alſo taught the people; they not knowing or acknowledging him to be the Meſſias ; and conceiving that the government of the temple, and matters of Religion were in their power and diſpoſing, queſtion him by what authority he did thoſe things. See 1 Kings 22. 24

V. 3. I will alſo ask you, &c.] See Mat. 21. 24.

V. 4. the baptiſm of John, &c.] By baptiſm he ſignifieth the doctrine and whole miniſtery of John, bearing witneſſe to Chriſt.

was it from heaven or of men ?] That is, of divine, or humane inſtitution ? See Acts 5. 38. Chriſt underſtanding their intention to be onely that they might calumniate, not that they might learn and beleeve ; anſwereth their queſtion by a queſtion, and that very ſatisfactory, if they would have underſtood : for ſeeing John Baptiſt teſtified concerning Chriſt, that he was the promiſed Meſſias, the Son of God ; they ought to have beleeved John, whom they beleeved ſent of God : and in ſo doing, they ſhould not have doubted Chriſts authority to purge his temple, and to preach : withal he taxeth their preverſe unbelief, who knowing in their conſciences that Johns doctrine was from heaven, and that he baptized in the name of Chriſt, yet would not beleeve his teſtimony concerning Chriſt. See John 3. 36.

V. 5. they reaſoned with themſelves, &c.] Mat. 21. 25.

V. 6. but if we ſay of men] Mat. 21. 26 They feared to be ſtoned by the people as blaſphemers ; but feared not Gods judgement on their hypocriſie, who withheld the truth in unrighteouſneſſe : diſſembling their knowledge, leſt their ſecular gains or reputation ſhould be impeached.

V. 7. they anſwered that they could not tell] Mat. 21. 27. thus doth Gods wiſdom non-plus mans, and drive it into unrecoverable ſtraits and diſadvantages, whence it cannot unwinde it ſelf. See 1 Cor. 3. 19 here was a miſerable refuge to lye againſt their own conſciences, before him who is greater than all hearts, and knoweth all thing , 1 John 3.

V. 8. Neither tell I you] You diſſemble this becauſe you would not confeſſe your wilful unbelief, and therefore I will not anſwer you. Mat 21. 27.

V. 9 a certain man planted a vineyard] Mat. 21. 33. Mark 12. 1. Iſaiah 5. 1. Jer. 2. 21. which is interpreted, Iſaiah 5. 7. to be the Jewes : the noble vine which God brought out of Egypt, Pſal. 80. 8.

forth to husbandmen] That is, committed it to the care of governours and Prieſts : It was a long time that they had the managing of his vineyard the Church, even from the people of Iſraels coming into the land of Canaan, unto the coming of Chriſt in the fleſh : or as ſome underſtand it, unto the final deſtruction thereof in the demoliſhing of the temple and city by Veſpaſian, and Titus.

V. 10 ſent a ſervant] To require in the name of God, fruits worthy amendment of life. See Mat. 21. 34 By ſervant, he meaneth the Prophets ; who, though many perſons, were but one in office of declaring Gods will for mans ſalvation, ſpeaking one truth, as being inſpired all by one Spirit of God beat him, and ſent him away empty] Mat. 21. 35. the meaning is, they abuſed, and perſecuted the Prophets. See 2 Chron. 36. 16. &c. and ſent them away empty, without the fruits which God expected ; which fruits are ſpecified, Iſa. 5 7. Gal. 5 22, 23. in general, their ſalvation, the fruits of preaching : otherwiſe they have not laboured in vain, their work and reward being with God, Iſa. 49. 4.

V. 11. he ſent again, &c.] See Mat. 21 36.

V. 12. he ſent the third] By this definite number is meant many Prophets, at ſeveral times, and in ſeveral ages: for as he ever had a Church, ſo he never left them deſtitute of competent teachers, though ſometimes for the wickedneſſe of the people, their contempt of the word, and abuſe of the Prophets, the word of God became precious, as in a famine thereof. See 1 Sam. 3. 1. Amos 8. 11.

V. 13. it may be they will reverence him] This ſheweth how Gods invincible goodneſſe ſtriveth with mans wickedneſſe, their unbelief cannot make void his truth, Rom. 3. 3. God had promiſed them a Saviour, and now he ſent him, to confirm and accompliſh the promiſes made unto the fathers Rom. 15. 8. this ἴσως, it may be, importeth not ignorance of the event, which God foreſaw : but as it is uſually in parables, he thus accommodateth humane affections to God, that it might more evidently expreſſe their deſperate impiety in raging againſt Chriſt, whom God ſent into the world to ſave them.

V. 14. that the inheritance may be ours] Mat. 21. 37. This is to ſhew the vain and impious hope of Jewes crucifying Chriſt ; wherein they thought, that by taking him away, who by his mighty works appeared to be the Son of God, they ſhould keep the holy city, honour of the prieſthood and domination over the Saints, in their own hands : two things are here remarkable. 1. The blind ambition and avarice of the Prieſts, who would fain their uſurped authority and tyranny over mens conſciences might ſtill be upheld, to which rather than their deſires ſhould fail of effect, they would make way through the precious blood of the Lord of life. 2. The admirable goodneſſe of God which could not be defeated by ſo matchleſſe wickedneſſe of men ; all which he well foreſaw : but in mans greateſt malice, he made his love moſt clearly ſhine, turning it to his glory in our redemption and ſalvation what therefore ſhall the Lord of the vineyard do to them ?] Mat. 21. 40. It is a kind of appeal to their own conſciences ; as if he had ſaid, Make the caſe your own, and tell me, what would you do to ſuch tenants ? See the like, Iſa. 5. 3 &c. Gods judgements are ſo clear, that the ſinners own conſcience ſhall acknowledge their equity, in their own ſelf-condemnation.

V. 15. they caſt him out of the vineyard] Thus did they, when apprehending Chriſt, they delivered him as a blaſphemer and excommunicate perſon to the power of the Gentiles to be crucified. See Chap. 23. 1, 2. 21 23 John 9. 22, 28.

God forbid] Mat 21. 41. Chriſt firſt extorted this confeſſion from themſelves : thy ſaid unto him, he will miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked men, &c. which they ſaid when at firſt they thought ſome others, not themſelves concerned in this parable : but perceiving that themſelves were the wicked men herein perſonated, they retract their ſentence, and ſay to Jeſus, pronouncing the ſentence from their own mouth (which this Evangeliſt, and Mark 12. 9. record) μὴ γένοιτο, let it not be, God forbid : the Syriac giveth it, this ſhall not be. We ſhall not kill the Son of God, &c.

head of the corner] Mat. 21. 42. The Syr. interpreter hath præcipuum cornu anguli, קרנא here uſed as the Hebrew קרן keren, among other ſignifications, importeth an high and eminent place, ſtrength, power, &c. So Chriſt uniteth two walls together, meeting in one angle of the corner ſtone, by which is ſignified, that Chriſt is the moſt high and powerful head of the Church of Jewes and Gentiles to be united into one. See John 10. 16. Epheſ. 2. 15.

V. 18. ſhall fall upon that ſtone] They to whom he ſhall prove a rock of offence through their unbelief, 1 Cor. 1. 23. and thereby alſo provoke Chriſt to fall upon them as a ſevere Judge to their utter deſtruction.

V. 19. againſt them] Greek, πρὸς αὐτοὺς : the Syriac giveth it, concerning them : the word is often uſed as here, for againſt : as they ſay, πρὸς φάρμακα θανάσιμα, againſt deadly poiſon ; ſo was this monition of Chriſt to them, whol ſome againſt their ſelf-deſtructive malice ; had they not (by deſpiſing the counſel of God againſt themſelves) made that to be againſt themſelves, which otherwiſe would have been for them, becauſe it was againſt their ſin, which had infected and poyſoned their ſouls.

V. 20. ſent forth ſpies] Mat. 22. 16. Mark 12. 13. they are named Phariſees and Herodians, a ſect inſtituted by Herod the great, who among other errours wherewith they mixed and corrupted the truth of religion took Herod to be the Meſſias: Of which opinion, though it have many grave Authors, yet others juſtly doubt: let thoſe who will be further ſatisfied herein, read *D. V. 22. is it lawful for us] For us who are the peculiar people of God, who gave us this land according to his promiſe: thus they and the Herodians (who, as Hierom on Mat, 22. 16. ſaith, ſtood mainly for payment of tribute to be made to Cæſar) would have found ſomething in Chriſts anſwer, whereof they might accuſe him to the Romans, to whom they were now become tributary.

V. 23. he perceived, &c.] See Mat. 22. 18.

V. 24. a peny] Mat. 22. 19. and 18. 28.

V. 25. Render therefore, &c.] God commanded to give every man his due, tribute to whom tribute, cuſtom to whom cuſtom is due, Rom 13. 7. they are deceived who think ſtealing of cuſtoms due to Princes or States is no ſin, becauſe a penal ſtatute lieth thereon; if they be taken, to forfeit all: for in the Levitical Law, it was penal to reſtore fourfold, for him that was found, or convicted of ſtealing ox or ſheep, &c. Exod. 22. 1, &c. yet ſuch ſtealing was no leſſe theft then before God, than now; the moral Law ſaying, Thou ſhalt not ſteal.

V. 26. could not take hold on his words, &c.] Their purpoſe being to render him odious unto the people, they hoped by this queſtion to have enſnared him, whatever he ſhould have anſwered; as if he had ſaid, It is not lawful; then they would poſſibly have cryed; Behold a ſeditious man, who (like that former Galilean) would imbark us in rebellions againſt Cæſar, and ſo bring the Roman ſword upon us; if he had ſaid, it is lawful: they would have murmured among the people that he was a flatterer of Cæſar endeavouring to confirm the ſervitude and oppreſſion of Gods people; and in caſe they could have wrought but an ill opinion of him in the people, they might deſtroy him without tumult: their chief aim was that they might find ſome occaſion to have given him up to power and authority, to deſtroy him whom their ſelves durſt not deſtroy for fear of the people, or the Romans who permitted them not the power of judicature in matters capital, or concerning life and death.

V. 27. came to him certain of the Sadduces] Mat. 22. 23. Mark 12. 18. The Sadduces held ſome things with the Samaritans, though they were Jews: here we may note, that they derived a vain ſcruple out of Moſes law, that they might tempt Chriſt: but he knowing that they held none of the Prophets as Canonical, but onely Moſes, produced no teſtimony to confute them, but onely out of Moſes whom they received, Hierom in Matth. 22. V. 33. Whoſe wife of them is ſhe] One abſurdity by them received, begat them many: they beleeved no reſurrection: thinking, that if they ſhould grant a reſurrection, they muſt hold alſo that it muſt be to an eſtate like unto this preſent; ſubject to infirmities and neceſſities: whereas Theophylact ſaith well, marriage is βοήθεια τοῦ θνητοῦ, an aid of the mortal, and ſupplement of that which periſheth in time: where then all are eternal, what needeth marriage? alſo they poſſibly thought that if they ſhould have confeſſed that there were any angels or ſpirits, ſubſiſting without a body, then they muſt alſo have confeſſed, that ſeparated ſouls might live; therefore they denyed all: that is, the being of angels and ſpirits, and the reſurrection of the body, and immortality of the ſoul, which the ſober Heathens beleeved. See Mat. 22. 29. Chriſt ſheweth them the cauſe of their groſſe errour, ignorance of the Scriptures, and power of God to raiſe the dead.

V. 34. children of this world] Men and women here living in this preſent world: for we muſt not underſtand, children of this world, here as chap. 16. 8. for men addicted and given over to the care and love of this world, but for all that live in this world: for the children of light do marry as well as others: the ſenſe is, that there ſhall be a great difference between this preſent life ſubject to many neceſſities, and that which is to come, ſubject to none: there ſhall be no more encreaſe of Gods Kingdom, the number of the Elect being accompliſhed; there all ſecular relations, and intereſts ſhall ceaſe, and be no more.

V. 35. ſhall be accounted worthy] He ſpeaketh principally of the elect, in whom he here inſtanceth. The wicked indeed ſhall riſe again, but to eternal miſery (Dan. 12. 2. Joh. 5. 29.) ſhame and condemnation, which is not worthy the name of life; and therefore as the Scripture calleth an impious life, death, 1 Tim. 5. 6. So ſtileth it the unhappy life of the damned, raiſed from the dead, the ſecond death, Rev. 20. 6.

V. 45. in the audience of all, &c.] Hypocriſie being, as it were the canker at the root of Religion, eating up the life and power thereof: It concerned his diſciples and all men, to beware of it: therefore he here did, that which his ſpirit enjoyneth by Saint Paul, 1 Tim. 5. 20. Thoſe that ſin rebuke before all men, that others alſo may fear.

which deſire to walk in long robes] He condemneth not the uſe of any civil and convenient garments, but the exceſſe and abuſe thereof. The Eaſtern people did uſe, and ſtill do uſe long robes: and the Prophets had a kind of mantle, or proper garment diſtinguiſhing them from other men; and it was meet for the teachers ſo to be clothed, that in their habit there might appear more than vulgar gravity: but the Scribes (as ſome ſince) abuſed this to pride and oſtentation: placing Religion chiefly in the outward appearance, wherewith they veiled their deteſtable impiety.

V. 47. which devour widows houſes] Mat. 23 14. who under pretence of holineſſe, long prayers, and other religious exerciſes, conſume their eſtates who entertain them: Or by deceiving the truſt which friendleſſe widows repoſe in them, whom they took to be ſo religious. the treaſury] See on verſe 4. there were other treaſuries about the temple; but this was a cheſt ſet at the Eaſtern door, through which all the people paſſed in and out, that every man with his own hand, might caſt in that, which either was taxed upon him, or he voluntarily offered, or gave unto the poor. See 2 Kings 12. 9. 2 Chron 24. 8. Nehem. 10 38.

V. 2. two mites] Mark 12. 42. the leaſt money they had in uſe among them, which they called χαλκοῦς, Syr. octavas, octaves, or eight part of that which they called ὀβολοὺς. Theophylact. See hereof Beza major. annot. in Marc. 12. 42.

V. 3. more than they all] More in proportion, conſidering her eſtate and theirs: and becauſe God eſteemeth not the gift by mans value thereof, but by the givers heart.

V. 4. The offerings of God] That is, thoſe things which as free-will offerings were conſecrated to God, for the uſe or ſervice of the temple, and his publick worſhip: we may take this εἰς τὰ δῶρα, for ἐν τοῖς δώροις, among the gifts: or the treaſury and continent, for the treaſure contained therein: that is, their ארון aron, mentioned 2 Kings 1 .10. (as the Chaldees called it, and the name was now in uſe, קרבן Corban, which Joſephus lib.4.c.4.Antiq. interpreteth, the gift of God) ſo is it interpreted, Mark 7.11. κορβᾶν (ὅ ἐστι δῶρον) and Matt. 15.5. where the Greek hath δῶρον, the Syriack hath קורבני curbanni, my gift, or oblation, of the Hebrew קרב kerab: Ioſephus, alſo lib.1. adv. Ap. calleth it δῶρον Θεοῦ. So here verſe 5. ſuch gifts are called ἀναθήματα, gifts conſecrated to God and Holy uſes: yet by a Synechdoche, this alſo imported their treaſury in which they kept the gifts offered to God, Matt.27.6. it is not lawful to caſt it εἰς τὸν κορβανᾶν which there the Syriack calleth בית קורבנא beth Curbono, the houſe of oblation: for which Mark 1 . 41, 43. is ſet, γαζοφυλάκιον, the treaſury of the Temple: So Suidas ſaith, Κορβονᾶς, παρὰ Ἰουδαίοις ἱερὸς θησαυρός: the Corban with the Jews was the ſacred treaſury.

V. 5. and as ſome ſpake] Matt.24. 1. Mark 13.1. As ſome of the Diſciples ſpake in admiration of that beautiful ſtructure.

and gifts] As plate, jewels, or the like precious things dedicated to the uſe or ornament of the Temple, by the devotion of them who came thither to worſhip: See on verſe 4. the word here uſed, ἀνάθημα or ἀνάθεμα, ſignifieth that which is devoted, or conſecrated to God, and it is taken either in the good or evil ſenſe; it cometh of ἀνατιθέναι which ſignifieth to hang by or ſeperate from common uſe, as Trophies of victories, things dedicated for deliverances or other monuments of thankfulneſs, uſed oft-times to be by the walls, or on the pillars of Temples; but here the conjecture of Theophylact, is very probable, I think (ſaith he) that they ſpeak de ſculptis & tornatis ut erant Palmæ & Cherubim & Similia, of the ingraving and poliſhing, as were in the Palmes and Cherubims or the like (carved in the beautifull ſtones of the Temple) ταῦτα γὰρ ἴσως τὰ ἀναθήματα, φησὶν —— for perhaps he calleth theſe gifts.

one ſtone upon another] Chap. 19.43. God would have Jeruſalem the place which he had choſen to put his Name there, and to vvhich he had for a time reſtrained the publick ſervice, and ſacrificing, prefiguring Chriſt the Saviour to come and ſuffer there) utterly deſtroyed, with the temple, in which the Iews ſo much gloried; after that Chriſt was come, and had ſuffered there, and had accompliſhed the work of our redemption: to give the Iews to know, that now all their ceremonies were ended, he being come and having finiſhall things which they prefigured; and that they ought no more to ſtick in the now dead and antiquateed letter of that Levitical law; circumciſion, ſacrifices, &c. but to come to Chriſt the end of the law to every beleever. And becauſe God well knew, how unwillingly they would part from their rites, in which they had been inſtructed hitherto; and wherein they eſteemed themſelves more more excellent and holy than any nation in the world, to joyn the faith of Chriſt, and therein to be equalled with the Gentiles whom they deſpiſed; therefore God (who as Chryſoſtome adver. Jud. orat. 1. ſaith) every where preſent, and filling every place, yet reduced τὴν μὲν λατρείαν, εἰς θυσίας τὰς δὲ θυσίας εἰς τόπον, τὸν δὲ τόπον εἰς καιρὸν, τὸν δὲ καιρὸν εἰς μίαν πόλιν: his worſhip to ſacrifices, ſacrifices to a certain manner, that manner to a certain time, and that time to one city; and again overthrew that city, to declare the utter determination & abolition of that law and ceremonies, which were tyed to that place, and which were no where in the whole world to be uſed but there.

V. 2. how they might kill him] The cauſe of this their ſolicitous counſell is hereto annexed: they would deſtroy Chriſt, but feared the people, leſt they ſhould reſcue him: or fall on them, who aſſaulted him,who did ſo many admirable works of power and mercy among them:therefore they conſulted what probable fault they might pretend againſt him: ſo that although they would take him away, more like theeves and murderers, than Iudges; yet would they have ſome ſhew of Juſtice to colour their wickedneſſe.

V. 5. and they were glad] So ſweet is revenge where the Devil ruleth: ſo welcome is any thing to ſuch, which complyeth with their own miſchievous deſires and deſignes: probably they thought it ſome advantage to their cauſe, that one of Chriſts own Diſciples and Domeſtickes, appeared on their party againſt him: therefore how ever they might think of the Traytor, as Auguſtus Cæſar, or Aurelianus are ſaid to have done in ſuch caſes,yet they were glad of the treaſon.

V. 6. in the abſence of the multitude] or without tumult: See note on Matthew, 26. 16. ἄτερ ὄχλου without tumult, in the abſence of the multitude: ὄχλος ſignifying either; as comparing this place with Mat. 13. 36. Mat.21.8. John 7. 49. Luke 6. 17. Acts 6. 7. will make it appeare. The preſent ſenſe is, when the people which were wont to follow him were away, leſt there ſhould be any tumult or uproare about him, which might bring them in danger of the Roman governours diſpleaſure, or violence of the people, the chief Prieſts had hereof cautioned, and Iudas was impiouſly careful to comply with them herein: therefore he fitted the time when Jeſus in the ſilent night, was out of the city with his diſciples in the garden.

V. 12. a large upper room] See Mark 14. 15. the word ἀνώγεον her uſed, ſignifieth, as Suidas interpreter giveth it, cœnaculum in ſuperiore domus parte ſitum: a room in the upper part of an houſe, where they uſed to eat: ſo called in the Greek of its diſtance from the earth; ſo the Syriack עליתא halitho which coming of עלה hala aſcendit, &c. ſignifieth a room into which they aſcended by many ſteps: ſuch rooms they had, as for ordinary entertainment of ſtrangers, ſo ſpecially for the feaſt of Paſſeover.

V. 13. and found it as he had ſaid] Both the ſignes and marks told them by Chriſt, whereby they might know the place, and be aſſured of the ſucceſſe: all which was extraordinary in reſpect of the dangerous and active malice of the Scribes and Phariſees, againſt any that ſhould entertain Chriſt,or ſo much as confeſſe him. This vvas the cup of thankſgiving, vvhich they uſed alſo in other their Peace-offerings; vvherein they took up the cup of Wine in their hands, and bleſſed God, to vvich the Apoſtle alludeth, 1 Cor. 10. 16. calling the cup in the Lords Supper uſed, The cup of Bleſſing; properly, for the Lords Supper, is the Euchariſt, and *Sacrament of Thankeſgiving: So Chriſt tooke the Cup, and gave thankes, &c. Matt. 26. 27.

V. 18. I will not drinke] Matth 26. 29 Mark 14. 25.

V. 19. and he tooke bread] Matthevv 26. 26. Mark 14. 22. 1 Cor. 11. 23.

this is my Body] That is, the Sacramentall ſign of my body; for inſtituting a nevv Sacrament, he ſpeaketh after a Sacramentall manner, vvherein the things ſignified are ſpoken for the ſign; as verſe 7. the Paſſeover muſt be killed, that is, the Paſchal Lamb, the remembrance or ſign of the deſtroying Angels paſſing over, and ſparing the Iſraelites, Exod. 12. 12, &c. ſo he calleth the Cup, the Nevv Teſtament, or Covenant in his Blood; that is, the ſign or remembrance of his blood-ſhedding.

V. 20. which is ſhed for you] Underſtand this after the manner of the Prophets ſpeaking, in vvhich, things to come uſe to be pronounced *ſub enunciatione præteriti, Fulgent; object. Ar. under a Declaration of that vvhich is paſt.

V. 21. Behold the hand of, &c.] Matt. 26. 21. Pſalm 41. 9. Mark 14. 18. John 13. 21. as if he had ſaid, behold, or conſider a horrid and impious thing, although I am about preſently to ſuffer death for you; though I leave you in this now inſtituted Sacrament, the Symboles and pledges of my deareſt love to mankind (John 3. 16.) for a remembrance of my death, untill my comming again to judgement, to be obſerved in the Church; yet the hand which betrayeth me, is with me at this Table; and while he eateth with me of my bread, he is meditating how to betray me to death.

with me at the Table] That is, Judas who will preſently betray me, now at Table with me.

V. 22. was determined] By God in his eternal Counſel, Acts 4. 28. Revel. 13. 8. God determined not ſin, but he determined the ſalvation of man by Chriſt his being betraid, and being crucified: ſo draweth he good out of evil; ſo gave he Chriſt into the hands and power of ſinners, that he ſatisfiing Gods Juſtice for us, we might be ſaved: ſo God uſed that to good, which impious men deſigned to evil, and acted moſt ſinfully: obſerve the ſeveral ends here propoſed. Judas betrayed Chriſt for gain, the Devil put it into Judas heart ſo to do, in hope to take him away who deſtroyed his works: the Prieſts were inſtigated hereto by their malice and envy, becauſe their honour and gains were impeached by Chriſts preaching and miracles; Pilate gave ſentence to pleaſe the people; the people cried, Crucifie him, to ingratiate with their Rulers; the Souldiers acted as the Prieſts, Jewes and Devils moved them; but God, out of his unſpeakable love and mercy, permitting theſe voluntary agents every one herein to act as he would, bringeth all to his determinate will and councel for mans ſalvation, which none of the acters either knew, or would: nor is it the leaſt admirable effect of Gods providence that ſome of them who were to be ſaved by the death of Chriſt, ſhould be acters in, and promoters and carriers on of the ſame, which is evident, Acts 2. 36. 37, 38, &c.

V. 23. to enquire among themſelves] John 13. 22. they looked one upon another, doubting of whom he ſpake; probably enquiring among themſelves, whether any of their company knew any thing concerning any plot againſt their Maſter.

V. 24. there was alſo ſtrife] Matt. 20 24. the occaſion of contention about ſuperiority is ſet down; whether it revived again on this occaſion: or that this Evangeliſt relating the ſame thing, followeth not the ſame order of the Story, it ſkilleth not much: the ſame controverſie was on foot at other times among them, Matt. 18. 1. it was a dangerous ſymptome of a great remainder of the old man in them: ſee 1 Cor. 3. 3. which ought to be a document of caution and humility unto us; conſidering men otherwiſe ſo excellent, had yet ſuch faylings: as alſo of confidence, that God will not caſt us off for our infirmities, who tolerated ſo much in them, whom he made lights of the world.

V. 25. he ſaid unto them] Matt. 20. 25. Mark 10. 42.

called benefactors] Job 12. 21. εὐεργέται· the Hebrewes called their Nobles נדיבים nedibim liberall, beneficent, Pſalm 113. 8. Pſalm 47. 10. from נדב nadab, he gave willingly, or liberally. So was Ptolomie King of Egypt ſtiled εὐεργέτης from his beneficence to the Cities of Greece, which being at firſt given to Princes and great Lords, for their perſonall Vertue; at laſt it became common to Princes and Lords, as Auguſtus, and other titles, whether in their perſons they were ſuch or not: the meaning of Chriſt here is, that he would not have the Miniſters of the Goſpel affect any high and ambitious titles of domination.

V. 26. is greateſt among you] In gifts, authority, or other qualities: meaning that ſuch muſt carry themſelves without pride, arrogance, ambition, violence, oppreſſion, and contempt of others; and with that humility and moderation, which would become the meaneſt in the Church: not that he appointed equalitty of miniſters, for he appointed orders in the Church, which cannot be without the relations of inferiour and ſuperiour, onely he prohibiteth Tyranny and domineering, Romans 12. 8. 1 Cor. 12. 28. 1 Timothy 5. 17. Hebr. 13. 17. 24. 1 Pet. 5. 3.

V. 27. Whether is greater] By another argument he teacheth them, that they are not called to rule, and domineer, but to ſerve: as if he ſaid, I might juſtly challenge dominion: yet have I taken on me the form of a ſervant, who am Lord over all; I came to ſerve, not to be ſerved: how much leſſe ought you to dream of dominion, and worldly greatneſs?

V. 28. Ye are they which continued, &c.] Matt. 19. 28. He declareth that they who had ſhared with him in his ſuffering, ſhould alſo communicate with him in glory.

in my temptations] in my perſecutions and troubles, Hebr. 2. 18. and 4. 15. James 1. 12. You who conſtantly adhered to me, neither ſcandaled at, nor ſeparating from me for my Doctrine, as thoſe, John 6. 67. You, who neither for fear or favour of men were aſhamed to confeſſe me, as many of the chief Rulers did, John 12. 42. you who have been conſtant to me in all thoſe injuries, perſecutions and tribulations, which I have ſuffered, Matt. 19. expreſſeth this by ——— ye that have followed me in the regeneration, which here is called tentations: Indeed God, among mere men, correcteth his ſons, and exerciſeth their patience by ſundry trials and tentations, that being tried, and perſevering to doe his will in all theſe trials, they might know that of themſelves, which God foreknew concerning their conſtancy: ſo tried he Abraham, Gen. 22. 1. with that grivous precept; and theſe tentations muſt try the whole Church, which muſt through many ſuch enter into the Kingdome of God, Acts 14 22. which began in Chriſt her head, who was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin, Heb. 4. 5.

V. 29. I appoint unto you a Kingdome] As if he ſaid: your preſent contention is vain: you are appointed to an Heavenly Kingdome: onely learne patience of me: and be contented to go to that joy (as I ſhall do) by the way of temporall afflictions: ſhake off this dream of ſecular greatneſſe and lift up your minds to Eternall bleſſedneſſe: here we muſt ſerve, that we may reign there.

V. 30. That ye may eat and drinke] Matt 19. 28. from his laſt ſupper, he deriveth this manner of ſpeaking to ſignifie the effect thereof, life eternal, by their participating of him: this he ſpeaks, ἐκ μεταφορᾶς ——— Theophylact, by a metaphor taken from theſe who have the honour to ſit at Table, vvith kings; as if he had ſaid, you ſhall be highly honoured.

ſit on thorns] Matth. 19. 28. the meaning is, that you may partake with me in glory and happineſs: Now if this condition remain for you, why do you contend for a miſerable and momentary primacy in this world?

V. 31. Simon Simon] This ingemination and doubling of his name, is to ſtir him up to a ſerious attention, and to him doth Chriſt addreſs his ſpeech, before the reſt, though all of them were concerned; firſt, becauſe he foreſaw that Peter (being more fervent and confident than the reſt, and ſo more expoſed to Satans charges) would more grievouſly fall, than his fellow Diſciples: ſecondly, becauſe afterward he ſhould excel them alſo in a ſingular example of conſtancy: or as Chryſoſtom (on John 17. 12.) thinketh, becauſe he had high thoughts, as truſting to ſome merit of his more fervent love to Chriſt.

ſatan hath deſired, &c.] as if he ſaid, I have indeed told you of a Kingdome, which I intend you: but be ye not ſecure, who have a fierce and ſubtile adverſary to encounter with: ye are the good Wheat; for many tryals muſt you look, to cleanſe you that ye may not be caſt away with the unhappy chaffe to unquenchable fire, and Matt. 3. and thou Simon Peter, Satan hath deſired to overthrow thee, but he ſhall onely cleanſe and refine thee, by humbling thee in the knowledge of thy infirmity.

ſift you as wheat] this σινιάσαι Suidas interpreteth by σεῖσαι, κοσκινεῦσαι, θορυβῆσαι ταράξαι, and πειράσαι· that is to ſhake to and again, as in a ſive: to trouble, terrifie and diſcompoſe as the tumultuous waters in a ſtorme; here is the malice of Satan principally ayming at the ruine of the beſt, he paſſeth by wicked men, as his own ſlaves and vaſſals of whom he is already ſure: eos quærit dejicere quos videt ſtare. Cyprian. lib.3. ep.1. He is ambitious to caſt them down whom he ſeeth ſtanding. See Iſaiah 30. 28. Amos 9. 9.

V. 32. I have prayed for thee] not for Peter onely doth Chriſt mediate, but for all the faithful, John 17. 20. and therefore he will not ſuffer us to be tempted above that we are able: whoſoever therefore faileth not in tribulation, ab illo ſe non dubitet adjuvari. Proſper. con.Collat. let him not doubt but Chriſt ſoliciteth for him and helpeth him; ſo admirable is Gods patience quâ contemptus parcit —— he ſpareth even being contemned, never can he want mercy, quando homini & indulgentiâ conſulit, & flagello. Seeing he provideth for man, both in indulgence, and the rod. ib. Proſp. ſent.

V. 33. I am ready to goe with thee, &c.] Peter ignorant of his own infirmity, is thus confident; but having learned by experience that the beſt meaning man eaſily falleth into the moſt grievous ſin, if God take away his ſuſtaining hand, he afterward anſwered more modeſtly, Lord, thou knoweſt all things, thou knoweſt that I love thee, John 21. it is a very hard matter to excel in any gifts and not to be too confident thereof; which is the cauſe why God uſually humbleth thoſe by ſome great trials whom he furniſheth with gifts extraordinary, as Paul alſo acknowledgeth, 2 Cor. 12. 7.

V. 34. And he ſaid] Matthew, 26. 34. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 38.

V. 35. He ſaid unto them] Matth. 10. 9. Luke 10.4.

ſent you without purſe] He compareth his abſence from the Diſciples before his paſſion, with that which followed after his paſſion; noting the variation of the times; as if he had ſaid, the inſtruction which I gave you for the execution of your firſt Commiſſion (Matt. 10.9.10.) was but temporal, and for that time onely obſervable: at that time though you take no viands with you, you wanted nothing, for I did extraordinarily provide for you: by enclining their hearts to whom I ſent you, to ſupply you with all neceſſaries: I then complied with the weakneſſe of children, inſtancing my miraculous providence: now the time requireth that you be armed to encounter many difficulties, like men, to give example to ſucceeding Miniſters, who are not alwayes to expect or depend on miracles for their ſupplies in things temporal: and this which he ſaith concerning a purſe or ſword v.36 is to intimate their neceſſities and dangers imminent, which he ſpeaking of, allayeth their unſeaſonable ambition: as if he ſaid, you contend about ſuperiority; but you muſt all undergo many neceſsities and dangers: thus he warneth and armeth them againſt imminent afflictions; ſpecially, with ſpiritual arms, wherewith external means are not to be neglected.

V. 37. Muſt yet be accompliſhed in me] that is, I who am your Lord am now to ſuffer for the redemption of man, according as it was foretold by the Prophets.

he was reckoned among the tranſgreſſours] Iſaiah 53.12. Mark 15. 28. So they apprehended him as a malefactour with ſwords and ſtaves, and they crucified him among thieves.

the things concerning me] that is, which the Prophets have written, or the Law prefigured concerning me.

have an end] all is, and ſhortly ſhall be fulfilled, for the accompliſhment of your redemption, ſo that it ſhould be an Argument of your confidence, not of fear and dejection. (See Matt.27.38. Mark 15.28.) ſeeing that Chriſt doth indeed fulfil all that was foretold of him: thus Chriſt confirmeth the authority of Scriptures, the ſcope whereof is to bring us to Chriſt, eternal life and true happineſs, Iohn 17.3.

V. 38. Here are two ſwords] this ſaid they, not underſtanding of what armour he ſpake.

it is enough] thereby teaching them that he ſpake not of a bodily armour, for which, againſt a world of enemies, many thouſand ſwords had been too few.

V. 39. And he came out]Matth.26. 36. Mark 14.32. John 18. 1. He went away out of the houſe, in wich he had eaten the Paſſeover, toward the garden where he was to begin his Paſſion.

as he was wont] unto Gethſemane, Matthew 26. 36. Mark 14. 32. which is a Village at the foot of the mount of Olives (Jerom. de loc. Hebraic.) whereto he was wont to reſort with his Diſciples, John 18.2.

V. 40. And when he was] Matt.26. 41. Mark 14.38.

pray that ye enter not into temptation] as if he ſaid, if you are not ſolicitous for me now entring into my ſad Paſsion: yet be carefull for your ſelves: you alſo are in preſent danger of being ſurprized with a fearfull temptation, (of which, verſe 31. See 1 Peter, 5. 8.) to enter into temptation, here importeth to be overcome thereof: we being not able of our ſelves to reſiſt, are to beg aſsiſtance and deliverance at Gods hands in vigilant and intentive prayer.

V. 41. He was withdrawn from them] the word ἀπεσπάσθη here uſed, ſignifieth he was pulled or drawn away: it is of σπάω trabo, or evello: the Syriac interpreteth it by פרק perach, which among other ſignifications, is ſeperare, ſegregare, ſe ſecedere, and thence פריק parich. remotus, abſens, diſtans. He withdrew himſelf a ſmall diſtance from his Diſciples, that he might pray alone: poſſibly as men in bitterneſs of ſpirit, and anguiſh of mind, uſe to turn away, or withdraw from company. (See Gen. 43. 30. Gen. 42. 24.) to give their paſſion freer vent: ſo Chriſt having taken on him all our infirmities with our ſin, being now to wreſtle with this heavie agony and deep ſence of his fathers anger againſt ſinners, in whoſe place he now ſtood, withdrew a little from his Diſciples, leſt he ſhould have hazarded their yet weak faith, by their too near ſenſe and apprehenſion of his bitter ſorrows.

V. 42. Remove this cup from me] this is an Hebraiſme כוס cos, by a metaphor ſignified that condition which was prepared, and imminent, whether good or evil. See Pſalm 11. 6. Iſai. 51. 17. Lam. 4.41. Matt.26. 22. Pſal.64.8. Pſalm 16.5. and 73. 10. Ezekiel 23,33. Zach. 12.2.

not my will, but thine be done] as God, he was of the ſame will with the Father and holy Spirit: but as he was man ſubject to all our infirmities (ſin onely excepted) ſo was he of another, yet not contrary will, becauſe by the unmeaſured grace which he had received in his Divine unction, Iohn 3 34.) he ſubjected that humane will (naturally deſiring to preſerve the humanity) unto the will of the Father, even unto death; teaching us this Precept, chap. 11. 2. by his own preſent example, and as Bernard, ſaith, de. quat. mod. orandi: Deo magis committere, quàm temere aliquid apud nos definire, to commit our deſires and neceſsities to God, rather than raſhly determine any thing of our ſelves, we may and do often erre in petitioning, God cannot err in giving: we know not what to pray as we ought, Rom 8. but God knovveth vvhat is beſt to beſtovv on us: vvhat is good for the ſick, the Phyſitian better knovveth than the Patient himſelf.

V. 43. Strengthning him] Not by communication of any vertue; but by preſenting his Humanity the certain aſſurance of his ſpeedy victory and glory, while the Deity, as it were hid his light and comfortable preſence.

V. 44. In an agony] That is, a vehement conflict in his ſoul, through the deepeſt ſenſe of of his fathers wrath againſt ſinners, for whom he now ſtood as a ſurety and Redeemer, 2 Corinthians, 5. 21.

prayed more earneſtly] more fervently, for he wreſtled not onely with the terrours of death as other mere men are wont to do (for then many Martyrs might have ſeemed more conſtant and reſolute than he) but with the terrible juſtice of God powring out his anger on ſinnes, than which nothing more dreadful can be thought of; for he bare the burden of all our ſins, Iſai. 53. 4, 5, 6. and what ever puniſhments were thereto due; this conflict therefore, and paſſion of Chriſt is the ſum of our conſolation: he having therein fully overcome death and Hell for us, and the fear and horrour thereof: ſo that all this leſſened not his Majeſty; but encreaſed our aſſurance of reconciliation with God and ſalvation with Chriſt riſen from the dead, Gods juſtice, which we have provoked, being fully ſatisfied by the ineſtimable merit of Chriſts paſſion.

great drops of blood] ϑρόμϐοι αἵματος, clottered, or congealed blood: Dioſcor. l. 3. c. 44. ϑρόμϐους αἵματος διαλύει, it diſſolveth congealed blood. So Suidas ϑρόμϐοι ἁλῶν —— παχεῖς ἅλες congealed ſalt, the Syr. giveth it, droppings down of blood that is in greater and groſſer drops diſtilling.

V. 45. Sleeping for ſorrow] it ſeemeth they were ſtupified with an heavy grief, for that which he had told them: otherwiſe, ſorrow and care are uſually ſleepleſſe: mark how little truſt there is in frail fleſh and blood; they who had boldly promiſed, (and doubtleſſe meant no leſſe) to goe to priſon & death for Chriſt, could not ſo much as watch with him one houre in ſo grievous an affliction.

V. 46 Riſe and pray] Matt. 26. 41. See v. 40. as if he ſaid, it is now no fit ſeaſon to ſleep in the midſt of theſe imminent and now —— inſtant dangers, ariſe and watch in earneſt prayer, that ye fall not into temptation, but that God may be pleaſed to hear and deliver you.

to kiſs him] which was their manner of friendly ſalvation. Luke 7.45. Judas had given them that ſign by which they ſhould apprehend Jeſus, Matt.26.48.

V. 48. Betrayeſt thou the Son of man with a kiſſe] doeſt thou clothe thy treaſon with ſhews of love? Judas would after ſuch evident detection, yet vail his treaſon; therefore he would not act it openly: poſſibly he might fear, leſt otherwiſe he might eſcape their hands, as he had ſometimes done: therefore he maketh ſemblance of love and friendſhip: but Chriſt diſcovereth his vain hypocriſie, under which they could not have taken him, had he not offered himſelf to that paſsion whereby he was to redeem man.

V. 49. ſhall we ſmite with the ſword] it ſeemeth they were confident of extraordinary aſsiſtance, who durſt draw two ſwords againſt a multitude; but underſtood not that Chriſts kingdom was ſpiritual, not ſecular; and ſo not to be defended with arms and violence, but with ſpiritual armour, 2 Cor. 10 4 Eph. 6. 13, 14. &c.

V. 50. One of them ſmote] Matt. 26. 51. Mark 14. 47. this was Peter, John 18.10. who out of zeal to defend his Maſter, ſtayed not to exſpect Chriſts anſwer, but preſently ſtrooke. See Matthevv, 26. 51.

the ſervant of the high Prieſt] This was Malcus John 18. 10.

V. 51. Suffer ye thus far] Meaning that they might take him, and do what God had appointed. Mat. 26. 52. Chriſt biddeth him put up his ſword, intimating that neither Peter, nor any other private perſon or perſons might take up the ſword, to defend the cauſe of Chriſt. 1. Becauſe the jus gladii belongeth not to any private perſon, but to publick authority. Rom. 13. 4. much leſſe to the Miniſter. Secondly, becauſe they who ſmite with the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſword. Mat. 26. 52. Thirdly, becauſe Gods will muſt be done in our ſufferings, John 18. 11. Laſtly, God can, and ever will as he knoweth beſt, defend his own cauſe: he hath legions of Angels at command. Mat. 26. 53.

V. 52. Captains of the Temple] See verſe 4. they that commanded the guard of the Temple. See on John 18. 12. Acts 4. 1.

V. 53. But this is your hour] The time wherein God hath permitted you to rage againſt me; and wherein the Devil the Prince of darkneſſe, endeavoureth by you to deſtroy me, who am the light of the world.

V. 54. Then took they him] Matthew 26. 57. Mark 14. 66. John 18. 12. then when he who offered himſelf a ſacrifice for our redemption permitted them ſo to do: ſo blinde were they that they were nothing moved by the ſenſe of that power of Jeſus, which in their approach caſt them to the ground, John 13. 6. nor his preſent healing Malcus ear, to conſider either his mercy to ſave, or divine power to deſtroy, and, if he pleaſed, to fruſtrate all their power and endeavours againſt him.

V. 55. When they had kindled a fire] Mat. 26. 69. Mark 14. 66. John 18. 25. in the midſt of the hall, that they might ſit or ſtand about it, & warm themſelves who were to attend their maſters coming out.

V. 56. A certain maid] Mat. 26. 69. Mark 14. 66, 67. John 18. 17. See verſe 60.

V. 57. Woman I know him not] So dangerous a temptation is carnal fear: it was an undoubted effect of love that Peter followed Chriſt into that danger, as alſo of a violent perturbation of minde by fear, that he denied him: they that truly love God (by the grace of God) are yet of themſelves infirm; becauſe, yet, but partly fleſh Here were three immediate cauſes of Peters failing. 1. Too much confidence in himſelf. 2. The company of Chriſts enemies; with whom it is very difficult, not to fall: becauſe he ſeemeth to correct their errour, who diſſenteth from their practice. 3. The wiſdom of fleſh, here ſuggeſting to himſelf, what he once ſpake to Chriſt ſpeaking of this his paſſion. Mat. 16. 22. ἵλεώς σοι, regard, or favour thy ſelf.

V. 58. Man, I am not] Once fallen, he could not preſently recover: the falls of a ſinner take away the preſent ſenſe of ſin, and affect the mind with ſuch a ſtupor, that therein it cannot underſtand the evil done: ſo eaſie is it for the beſt to fall, ſo hard to riſe again.

V, 59. About the ſpace of an hour after, another] Satan (who never vvanteth variety of imployers,) doubleth his charges, and violently followeth his miſchievous advantages upon thoſe whom he caſteth down: it ſhould enforce the Apoſtles admonition. 1Cor. 10. 12. Wherefore let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.

V. 60. Peter ſaid, man, I know not what thou ſayeſt] Here ſeemeth much difficulty (vvhich hath vvreſted ſome learned pens into very dangerous inconveniences) in the reconciliation of the ſeeming differences between the Evangeliſts, relating the ſame ſtory of Chriſts convention before the High-Prieſt, and Peters denial, but with ſome different circumſtances: as for example.

1. The three firſt Evangeliſts relate all as acted before Caiphas, to whom Chriſt was led. Mat. 26. 57.

2. That Peter followed him thither. Mat. 26. 58. and warmed himſelf there. Mark 14. 54. Luke 22. 55.

3. That they ſtroke Chriſt in Caiaphas preſence. Mark 14. 65. Mat. 26. 64. and here v. 63.

4, That two maids accuſed Peter. Mat. 26. 69. 71. Mark 14. 66, 69. but here verſe 58. another man ſaid: which was the ſecond charge.

5. That John 18. 24. ſaying, Annas had ſent him bound to Caiphas; yet he ſaith v. 25. Simon Peter ſtood and warmed himſelf: and then upon a ſecond charge denied Chriſt, and upon a third v. 26. 27. that he denied a third time.

For the reconciliation of theſe ſeeming difficulties, we muſt know. 1. That all the word of God is infallibly true, and ſuch as there cannot be any errour or falſhood in it. 2. That one of the Evangeliſts reciteth ſome things, which another, or all the reſt omitted. So that, all that which they or any of them wrote, is certainly true, though neither any one, nor all of them wrote all that which was true. See John 20. 3. and 21. 25. for inſtance: John wrote concerning Chriſts being carried to Annas firſt, (John 18. 13) who was father-in-law to Caiphas (which Caiphas was High Prieſt, that is ſuffragan to Annas the High Prieſt. (See on John 18. 13. the ſame year.) this, the other three Evangeliſts omit: but relate the main actions, without this circumſtance. 3. They alſo relate Peters following of Chriſt into the High Prieſts hall: Mark and this Evangeliſt, ſpeak of warming himſelf; but omit the place, Annas hall, which John mentioneth: alſo John ſpeaketh of his ſtanding and warming himſelf; which circumſtance appertaineth to that part of the ſtory which was acted in Annas hall, except we ſhall ſay that Malcus charge was againſt him ſtanding by a ſecond mentioned fire in Caiphas hall alſo: there being the ſame reaſon for a fire in that place as well as the other. 4, That John ſaith Chriſt was ſtrucken in Annas houſe John 18. 22. but the reſt relate it as done in Caiphas hall: either thoſe Evangeliſts obſerve not the circumſtances and order of the ſtory (omitting, that he was firſt carried to Annas, vvhich John relateth (contented to hiſtorifie the things themſelves: or elſe, which is poſſible, they did twice ſtrike Jeſus: ſo John ſheweth the occaſion was, their ill taking the manner of his anſwering the High Prieſt Annas, John 18. 22. but the other Evangeliſts relate to the matter of his anſwer (Mat. 26. 64, &c. Mark 14. 62. &c.) as the end of their ſmiting him, and the occaſion ſubordinate thereto: that is, their blind-folding him, and bidding him propheſie who ſmote him? becauſe the people eſteemed him a Prophet. 5. That Matthew and Mark ſay two maides accuſed Peter, the firſt, and ſecond time, but Luke 22. 58. it is ſaid, that firſt a maid, and then a man charged him: both are true; and John 18. 25. it is clearly reconciled, where mentioning the ſecond charge he ſaith, εἶπον, they had; that is the maid, and a man at leaſt, it may be with ſome others alſo; ſo Matthew and Mark, mention the woman in the ſecond charge: and this Evangeliſt mentioneth the man; but John ſignifieth both, if not divers others. 6 That after John ſaid Annas ſent him bound to Gaiphas) he recordeth the ſecond denial, it maketh not that this ſecond denial was at Caiphas (the ſurrogates) houſe: for who knoweth not the many anticipations in ſacred hiſtories; wherein that is not firſt ſet down, which was firſt acted; as ſo, that is not alwayes to be underſtood, to be firſt in time, which is firſt ſet down in the ſeries of a ſtory: underſtand therefore the two firſt denialls to have been at Annas houſe, and the laſt at Caiphas houſe, whence he went out and wept bitterly; for between the two firſt; and the laſt deniall, verſe 59. it evidently appeareth, that there was about an hours ſpace: and this laſt deniall was occaſioned by Malchus (vvhoſe ear Peter had cut off) his charge: which the other Evangeliſts omit, as alſo their carrying him to Annas; and his ſending him bound to Caiaphas; which John recordeth. John 18. 13.

the Cock crew] Peter could not take warning by the word and premonition of Chriſt himſelf: but hearing the cock crow, he came to himſelf and remembred: that ſtayed him not from ſin; this occaſioned his repentance: in the firſt, Chriſt left him to himſelf; the ſenſe and ſad expetience of his own diſability to reſiſt a temptation: in the ſecond, he minded him of the ſignal whereof he foretold him. The moſt powerful means cannot awake the ſinner, untill Gods remembring ſpirit make them effectual; the leaſt ſhall, where he ſo doth.

V. 61. Then the Lord turned back and looked on Peter] He looked back as Theophylact ſaith, ἀγαθῷ βλέμματι with a benigne aſpect: then Peter remembred; forgetting Chriſts words he fell; but recalling them to mind, he repented.

before the cock crow] Mat. 26. 34. John 13. 38.

V. 62. went out and wept &c.] This was the effect of his ſight, deteſtation of his ſin, and grief that he had ſo offended a gracious God: we read that he wept, we read not that he ſatisfied: God accepteth the ſole merit of Chriſt for a full ſatisfaction for our ſins, but yet he juſtly requireth our repentance, that his mercy may have place: repentance is the key to the kingdom of grace. See Mat 3. 2. Mat 4 17. Such is Gods mercy and patience (as Proſper fore-cited ſaith) quia parcit contemptus, parcit etiam negatus; wherein being contemned, yea being denied, he ſpareth, and forgives.

V. 63. mocked him] Mat. 26. 67. Mark 14. 65 John 18 22. παίζειν, whereof the word here uſed is properly ſignifieth, to jeſt childiſhly; or fooliſhly; or that which the Hebrews expreſſe by קלס kalas which in its firſt ſignification importing, to praiſe, by an antiphraſin ſignifieth, in Hithpael, deriſit, ſubſannavit, he jeered, which is a ſcoffing by ſeeming to admire, praiſe or approve him whom he derideth: or by ſome diſgraceful term, as 2 Kings 2. 23. ſo עלל halal, among other ſignifications, importeth a doing or ſaying ſomething in ſcorn and contempt: ſo ſaith Theophylact; ὁ τῶν προφητῶν δεσπότης ὡς ψευδοπροφήτης χλευάζεται, the Lord of the Prophets, is mocked as a falſe Prophet; or an impoſtor.

V. 64. propheſie, who is it that ſmote thee] With theſe ſcoffing blaſphemies they inſult; becauſe the people honoured him as a Prophet.

V. 65. blaſphemouſly ſpake they, &c.] See on verſe 70. poſſibly ſome ſaying that he was a glutton, wine-drinker, and friend of publicans and ſinners, as chap. 7. 35. others that he had formerly caſt out devills by Beelzebub, (chap 11. 15.) who now failed him, ſo that he could non deliver himſelf from puniſhment, now they had apprehended him: another, that he was no Prophet who would not foreſee his own dangers, and deliver himſelf from them; that he had but deceived fooliſh people, &c. Satan was witty to invent blaſpemous ſuggeſtions, and they malicious to apprehend and utter them; all which Jeſus heard, and patiently endured in his ſufferings for our ſins.

V. 66. as ſoon as it was day] Mat. 27. 1. Mark 16. 1 John 18. 28. ſo induſtrious is malice, Satan will not let the wicked, his ſervants, ſleep vvhen any miſchief is to be done, but ſits heavy on their eyes at Church, or when they ſhould riſe to go to it, for fear they might be moved to faith and repentance, and ſo he ſhould looſe them, and their ſervice.

into their councell] Their conſiſtory, or Sanhedrim; which ſate about matters of religion. See Mat. 5. 22. Mat. 26. 3. thus would they colour their malice with ſhews of juſtice and legall proceeding.

V. 67 art thou the Chriſt?] The expected Meſſias, promiſed by the Prophets; the King of Iſrael, as thy diſciples believe? thus they hypocritically and captiouſly ask, not with any intent to believe the truth; but to find ſomething whereof to accuſe, and condemn him as an enemy of Caſar, or blaſphemer of God.

If I tell you, you will not believe] You, who would not believe for ſo many miracles as you have ſeen me do, will not believe my words; unbelievers are ſometimes importunate to hear the word, which ſhall ſerve onely to condemn their diſobedience and unbelief. See Jer. 42. 2, 3. Jer. 43. 2. and 44. 16.

V. 68. you will not anſwer me] See chap. 20. 3, 4. 7. 17. 44. you will not be inſtructed, being reſolved, not to put my cauſe on truth; and evincing reaſon, but violence.

nor let me go] You are already reſolved to deſtroy me.

V. 69. Hereafter ſhall the Son of man] Mat. 26. 64. Mark 14. 62 at his ſecond coming, he whom you now judge and condemn as a malefactour, ſhall judge you; though you deſtroy this life, he ſhall live again in heavenly Majeſty and glory.

at the right hand] In the power and glory of his heavenly kingdom. Hebr. 1. 3. and 8. 1.

V. 70. Art thou then the Son of God] As if in blaſphemous ſcorn they ſaid; thou Carpenters ſon; thou friend of Publicans and ſinners: thou prophaner of ſabbaths: thou the Son of God? See verſe 65.

ye ſay that I am] That is, I am. Mark 14 62. or, you ſay the truth, for I am ſo.

V. 71. What need we any further, &c.] The Syriack readeth, what need we (תיב) again; as the Hebr. עוד hod importeth, any addition, or a ſecond time; for they had in the night ſought for witneſſe againſt him, but found none: for many bare falſe witneſſe againſt him but their witneſſe agreed not together. Mark 14. 55, 56. as if they ſaid, we had before, and have enough againſt him now; for he profeſſeth himſelf the Son of God: The wicked think the very profeſſion of the truth of Chriſt evidence enough to condemn the profeſſours thereof.

CHAP, XXIII.

Verſe 1. AND the whole multitude] Mat. 27. 2. Mark 15. 1. John 18. 28. when they ſuppoſed they had enough now to perſwade Pilate to condemn him to death, which themſelves, had great will, but no power to do, in proſecution of their malicious deſire to deſtroy him; the multitude of thoſe that were in the councell, and the attendants thereon (the Prieſts, Elders, Scribes, &c.) none would be abſent.

unto Pilate] The Romans deputy, and chief governour of that province; who had power of judicature in matters capitall, which the Romans permitted not the Jews.

V. 2. perverting the nation] See Acts 17. 7. by new pernicious doctrines ſeducing the people, perſwading them againſt the divine law, and inſtitutions of God by Moſes.

forbidding to give tribute to Caſar] This was a falſe calumny, as appeareth, Mat. 17. 27. & 22. 21. (as was the former) and here chap. 20. 25. but this they ſaid, that they might ingage Pilate the Roman deputy, in their impious quarrell. See Iſaiah 53. 2. John 6. 15.

Chriſt a King] Gre. an annointed King; Syriack that he was the King Meſſias; they took that for granted (which was moſt untrue) that the Meſſias ſhould have an external and ſecular kingdom, glorious for wealth, armies and victories: and that under him they ſhould be delivered from all other powers, or juriſdictions; by this complaint to Pilate, they laboured to intimate, that the intereſt of Cæſar was highly concerned, by Ieſus preſſing himſelf to be a king, and the Meſſias, or by any of the Iews believing the ſame.

V. 3. Pilate asked him] Mat. 27. 11, Mark 15. 2. Iohn 18. 33.

art thou the King of the Jewes?] He asked him not whether he perverted the nation, or forbad men to pay tribute to Caſar: it is likely that he being a vigilant deputy, had his intelligence and information concerning Chriſt: the rather for that the Herodians went with the Phariſees to catch him in this point. See Mat. 22 16. &c. who, if he had denyed the right of Caſar, would quickly have informed againſt him: nor doth he mention the third cavil, as ſuſpecting him of competition for his deputy-ſhip; becauſe he knew him to be poor, unarmed, and a contemner of ſecular honour; but to ſatisfie the impious Iews, leſt by any malicious complaint to Caſar, they ſhould have begotten him trouble.

thou ſayeſt it] See on Iohn 18 37. I have no need to affirm it, ſeeing thou ſayeſt it; thou anſwereſt thy ſelf for me.

V. 4. Then ſaid Pilate] After he had examined him in the Pretory he giveth the Iews there attending, this anſwer at the door; I find no fault in him worthy of death, as you ſuggeſt.

V, 5. they were more fierce] They grew more violent: as the Syriack hath it, they cryed out upon him: thinking by violence to prevail, ſeeing by right and equity they could not.

beginning from Galilee) They mention Galilee, partly to minde him of the ſedition there formerly bred: and partly to intimate that Herod might finde ſome dangerous advantage againſt him, in caſe he ſhould not hearken to their informations concerning the maintenance of Caſars right.

V. 6. a Galilæan] That is, a native, or an inhabitant of Gallilee, and ſo of Herods juriſdiction.

V. 7. he ſent him to Herod] As to acquit himſelf of him; ſo to ingratiate with Herod: this was Herod Antipas; the murderer of John Baptiſt. Chap. 3. 19, 20. Herod the great his ſon. Mat. 2.

was at Jeruſalem at that time] In thoſe dayes of the Paſſeover, Herod was at Jeruſalem, at the feaſt. See Exod. 23. 17.

V. 8. he had heard many things of him] See on Mat. 14. 1.

hoped to have ſeen ſome miracle] He rejoyced that Pilate ſo much honoured him, as to ſend him one that had done ſo many admirable works: as alſo in hope to ſatisfie his own curioſity, in ſeeing ſome miracle done: ſo do impious men abuſe the holy power of God, as if it were ſome ſcenical ſpectacle, ordained for admiration, and paſtime.

V. 9. he anſwered him nothing] He knew Herod asked not with any intent to be converted; but for his curioſity, which Chriſt would not ſatisfie.

V. 10 accuſed him] Wickedneſſe is ever jealous: they fearing leſt Chriſt might ſatisfie and ingratiate with Herod, and ſo eſcape their fury who had reſolved to deſtroy him: they repeat to Herod thoſe things whereof they had accuſed him before Pilate: the more admirable was Jeſus preſent ſilence, verſe 9. who neither by the preſence of ſo great a Prince, nor the importunate malice of his enemies, was moved to anſwer any thing.

V. 11. a gorgeous robe] Rich and honourable clothes, which they put on him in ſcorn. Gr. λαμπρὰν glittering, ſhining, or coſtly, the Syriack giveth it זחוריתא zechuritho, skarlet χλαμύδα κοκκίνην. Mat. 27 28. a skarlet robe. So Hebr. 9. 19. skarlet wool; all this in deriſion, becauſe Jeſus would not ſatisfie Herods vain deſires, in ſhewing ſome ſigne; had he found him guilty, he would otherwayes have proceeded againſt him; this injury they did him, becauſe the Iews accuſed him of affecting a kingdome.

V. 12. Pilate and Herod were made friends] It ſeemeth their former conteſt was about juriſdiction. See chap. 13. 1. which Pilate in this inſtance ſalving, ambitious Herod was ſatisfied: curſed friendſhip and unhappy peace is that, which is made to the injury of Chriſt: nor was this blaſphemous ſcoffing of Herod long unrevenged; as Joſephus writeth Antiq. Jud. l. 18. c. 9. being accuſed to Caius Caſar, he was by him put out of his kingdom, or Tetrarchie, and his goods given to Agrippa; himſelf condemned to perpetual baniſhment into Lions in France (ſome ſay into Spain) he died with grief.

V. 13. called together the chief Prieſts] Their Sanhedrin or great councel.

V. 14. no fault in this man] This heathens juſtifying Chriſt, condemned the Iews malice againſt him.

V. 16. I will therefore chaſtiſe him, &c.] Mat. 27. 26. Mark 15. 15. Iohn 19. 1. Offences not capital, the Roman preſidents uſed ſo to puniſh with ſtripes, or ſcourging: this Pilate would have done to appeaſe the Iews rage: he had not learned, that we may not do evil, that good may come thereof. Rom. 3. 8. much leſſe may we do evil to avoyd evil: he ought to have defended the innocent, and to have delivered him: but once declining from juſtice, he fell to that impious complyance with the Iews malice, which was againſt juſtice, and the teſtimony of his own conſcience.

V. 17. for of neceſſity] Of cuſtom granted them by the Romans. See Mat. 27. 15. Mark 15. 6. Iohn 18. 39.

V. 18. they cryed out all] That is, the generality: Iſrael the now peculiar people of God, rageth and thirſteth for the holy blood of Chriſt; Pilate the heathen abhorreth ſuch cruel injuſtice. See 1. How eaſily an holy people may be miſled, or degenerate, 2. What truſt there is in fickle multitudes, who ſo quickly can change their Hoſanna's to crucifige's. 3. Whether enraged malice will carry men, making profeſſours of truth do that which ſober heathens loath and are aſhamed of?

V. 19. for a certain ſedition, &c.] See on Mat. 27. 16.

V. 20. willing to releaſe Jeſus] See on Mat. 27. 17.

V. 21. but they cryed ſaying crucifie him] The vehemency of their impious deſires, cauſeth them to double their cryes, to make the voyce ſeem the ſtronger: thus wicked men uſe to ſecond their ſins with greater and greater wickedneſſe.

V. 22. the third time] Peter, for fear denied Chriſt three times, and yet repented; Pilate three times juſtified Chriſt, and yet for popular favour condemned him: it may teach us, neither to deſpair if we repent, nor to preſume though we have begun well.

V. 23. chief Prieſts prevailed] Theſe voyces overſwayed Pilates conſcience. Some Greek copies have not ϗ τῶν ἀρχιερέων ---but the beſt generally have, the Syr. have it, & ingens erat vox eorum, & ſummorum ſacerdotum, noting a danger of, and propenſity to ſome uproare, if they were not ſatisfied with the blood of Ieſus.

V. 24. Pilate

V. 24. Pilate gave ſentence] Or conſented: neither according to law, conſcience, nor cuſtome, but to pleaſe the people: poſſibly he thought to avoyd an inſurrection hereby, but this injuſtice followed him: for about ſeven years after, being baniſhed to Lyons, and reduced to miſerable ſtraits, he ſlew himſelf.

V. 25. Jeſus to their will] That is, to crucifie and do what they would with him. See Mat. 27. 26.

V. 26. as they led him away] Mat. 27. 32. Mark 15. 21. out of the city to Calvary. See Hebr. 13. 12.

they laid hold upon Simon a Syrenian] That is, the ſouldiers took him to carry the croſſe of Chriſt: there are many Simons mentioned in the Goſpel; Simon Peter. Mat. 10. 2. Simon the Canaanite. Chriſt firſt bare his croſſe, but as they went between the Pretorie and Calvary, they met with this Simon coming out of the countrey. Mark 15. 21. and they compelled him to bear the croſſe of Jeſus. Hierom on Mat. 27. 32. Chriſt being wearied with watching, ſtripes, and ſo long attendance on the varieties of judges, was not able any further to bear ſuch a weight, as being man ſubject to all infirmities, without ſin, to ſuffer for mans redemption; therefore the next ſeeming-ſtrong man they meet, they command him to carry it for him: ſo he firſt ſet up the trophe of his croſſe, and then delivered it to the Martyrs to erect it, ſaid Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 10. this came to the lot of Simon father of Alexander and Rufus (which were either Chriſts diſciples, or men well known of them; for of ſuch he ſeemeth to ſpeak.) Such was the unbridled liberty of the Roman ſouldiers, under whoſe command the Jewes then there; which their inteſtine ſeditions brought upon them by the quarrels of ambitious Ariſtobulus and Hircanus, calling in forreign forces to aid them: So that they who would, according to Gods ordinance maintain the ſweet bond of mutual peace, nor obey their ſuperiours, now ſuffered the grievous inſolencies of ſtrangers, ruling over them, in an arbitrary way: the like diſſention in the republikes of Greece and Rome, have found the like event: wee have ſmarted for the ſame fault, God grant we do not againe.

V. 27. and of women which bewayled him] A great multitude followed him: ſome to inſult, ſome of thoſe of whom the Phariſees ſpake, John 7. 45. among them many women, ſome who believed in him: and becauſe they are uſually more compaſſionate, them Chriſt admoniſheth to weep for themſelves, for the imminent deſtruction which would be moſt grievous to them.

V. 28. daughters of Jeruſalem] Women of Jeruſalem; it is an Hebraiſme. Frequent in Scripture. See 2 Kings 19. 21. Iſa. 37. 22. Lam. 2. 13. 15. Mich. 4. 8. &c.

weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves] He relateth in this prohibition, as to the ſupream cauſe of his preſent paſſion (Gods counſell and his complyance thereto) ſo alſo to the end thereof, Gods glory; his exaltation to Gods right hand, and mans ſalvation hereby accompliſhed: in his admonition he pointeth at the ſad calamity in their ſiege by the ſword, peſtilence, and famine, ſo grievous, that mothers ſhould eat their own dear children.

V. 29. The dayes are coming] In the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Roman. You now inſulting over my afflictions, think your ſelves ſafe and well, becauſe your governors have their will to deſtroy me, but alas a terrible revenge followeth, and is now at hand.

Bleſſed are the barren] He further deſcribeth the bitter ſorrow of that tender ſex in publick calamities, more afflicted with their helpleſſe childrens ſufferings, than their own.

V. 30. then they ſhall begin, &c.] See Iſaiah 2. 19. Hoſ. 10. 8. Rev. 6. 16. that is, then they ſhall too late ſay; in their fear and inevitable calamity.

fall on us] He expreſſeth the paſſion of men in extream agonies, wiſhing rather to dye ſpeedily, than to live in the lingring miſery of famine: or deſiring rather any wayes to hide themſelves, than to be expoſed to publick ruine.

V. 31. For if they do theſe things, &c.] He compareth himſelf to a green tree, leſſe combuſtible and apt to take fire? and the Jews to a dry tree: as if he ſaid; if ſo ſevere be the fire of Gods judgement, and the rage of men permitted to execute the ſame on me, who have no ſinne, and matter of puniſhment in my ſelf, but onely as I ſtand in the place of ſinners: what ſhall become of thoſe veſſels of wrath, (Rom. 9. 22.) the Jews who have in them ſuch abundant matter of condemnation? in this the more, becauſe they now crucifie their Saviour and Lord of life. See Iſaiah 5. 24. and 33. 11. & 47. 14. Obad. 1. 18. Mal. 4. 1. the ſum of this proverbial manner of ſpeaking is, if judgment be ſo heavy on me, in whom they can find no fault, what ſhall they ſuffer who are the ſmell of Gods wrath? 1 Pet. 4. 17.

two other malefactours] Two other men which were malefactours; ſo that not only on the croſſe; which Mark noteth, chap. 15. 28. but alſo in his leading out, was fulfilled that which Jeſus foretold, chap. 22. 37. out of Iſaiah 53. 12. and he was reckoned among the tranſgreſſours.

V. 33. is called Calvarie] Or the place of a skull, Mat. 27. 33. Mark 15. 22. John 19. 17. See note there, and Druſ. ad voc. N. T.

there they crucified him] It was then in uſe the moſt ignominious death. See Hebr. 2.

V. 34. Father forgive them] Acts 7. 60. Acts 3. 17. Being now in ſuch intenſe torments, ſo purſued in death, with the implacable malice of his undeſerved enemies, before he provided for his weeping Mother (John 19. 26, 27.) he prayeth for his enemies: there is no temporal thing of ſo great importance as ſaving of ſouls: Chriſt taught us to love our enemies, not onely by precept, Mat. 5. 44. but here, by his moſt admirable example thus began he on the Croſſe, to ſhew himſelf not only a Redeemer by his bloodſhed, but alſo a Mediatour by his interceſſion, the effect of this prayer appeared, Acts 2. 36. in Peters Sermon (addreſſed to them who had crucified the Lord of life) and the converſion of his auditors added to the Church that day. See alſo Acts 4. 4. Acts 6. 7. So that by the mercy of God, they who in their ignorance impiouſly ſhed the blood of Jeſus, in the myſtery, through faith, drank the ſame to their ſalvation.

V. 35. derided him] See on ch. 16. 14. This was an addition of ſorrow to his paſſion, that all ſorts of Jews deſpiſed him, inſulting over him: all this was that our ſin (who fell by Adams ambition) might thus be expiated, by the bitter ignominy of Chriſts paſſion.

the choſen of God] This is an epithete and title of the Meſſias. See Iſaiah 42. 2.

V. 36. offering him vineger] Mixed with Myrrhe and Gall. See on John 19. 29. herein was fulfilled that which was ſpoken. Pſal. 69. 21.

V. 37. if thou be the king of the Jewes] That is, the Meſſias whom the Jewes expected to deliver them: this alſo they inſultingly ſpeak, implyedly charging him with vain ambition and uſurpation of regality, and name of a King; being (as they thought) not able to deliver himſelf from the power of the Romans,

V. 38. a ſuperſcription] See on Mat. 27. 37. a title, or cauſe of his death, Auguſtine epiſt. 8, So Mark 15. 26. and Mat. 27. 37. to make the ſpectatours believe that he was therefore condemned and crucified, becauſe he affected the kingdom of Iſrael. Pilate finding no fault in him, ſet down this in place of an accuſation, which yet the Jewes (ſuſpecting it, might reflect on their reputation) quarrelled at, John 19. 21.

Greek, and Latine, and Hebrew] That the thing which concerned all Nations, might thereby be divulged to all. To the Eaſt by the Hebrew, to the South by the Greek, to the Weſt by the Latine: This was neceſſary in regard of the preſent confluence of people to the feaſt at Jeruſalem, from all Nations, John 12. 20. There were Proſelytes of all Nations, and Jewes of the diſperſion among the Gentiles, who (though born of Jewiſh parents) yet ſpake the tongue of that people among whom they had been born and bred. See Acts 2. 8.

V. 39. were hanged] Being nailed to the Croſſe, as the Roman manner of execution then was.

V. 40. doeſt not thou fear God] Doth not the puniſhment thou ſuffereſt, cauſe thee to fear God, whoſe hand hath thus overtaken thee? It is a deſperate condition in the bitter effects of ſin, not to be ſenſible of the cauſe thereof. However the proſperous ſecurely and inconſiderately contemn the judgements of God, yet doeſt not thou now under the heavy burden thereof, fear an intolerable acceſſion thereto, whom neither preſent torments, nor bitter death, under whoſe areſts thou art, any thing amendeth? it was a great addition to Aſa's ſin, that in his diſeaſe he ſought not unto the Lord --- 2 Chron. 26. 12.

V. 41. but this man hath done nothing amiſſe] Greg. hom. 22. in Evang. he ſuffered without ſinne, that which we ſuffer for, and with ſin.

V. 42. Lord remember me] When thou comeſt into thy glory, receive me to mercy as one of thine. Remember not my ſin (ſo Pſal. 25. 7.) but accompliſh thy mercy which thou haſt now begun to ſhew me in my converſion. Remember me when thou comeſt into that ſtate of bleſſedneſſe which thou haſt purchaſed, unto which thou art going from the Croſſe, that I may follow thee into that bleſſedneſſe: here was a rare and excellent faith apprehending the merit of Chriſt for his ſalvation: he beleeveth him to be the Saviour, whom men condemned as a malefactour, whom the tormenters crucified, the impious Jewes derided, now dying, to mans ſenſe, forſaken of God; in this doleful ſtate and poſture he believed him to be the holy Son of God, able to ſave in death; the diſciples forſook him, Peter forſwear all acquaintance with him; but this poor convert acknowledged him dying to be the Lord of life: true faith hath peircing eyes, ſeeing the glory and kingdom of Chriſt through the dark ignominy of the Croſſe, V 43. To day thou ſhalt be with me, &c.] This day thou ſhalt be with me in Heaven. See 2 Cor.12. 2,4. Rev, 2. 7. By the Garden of Paradiſe where Adam was placed in his ſtate of innocency;is ſignified here (as elſewhere) the ſtate of eternal beleſſedneſſe.

V. 44. about the ſixth hour] See on Mat. 27. 45. Mark 15. 33, about noon. His paſſion began about nine of the clock in the morning, which was their hour of prayer, and the ordinary hour of the morning Sacrifice dayly offered;and ended at the ninth hour,that is about three of the clock in the afternoon : at the time of the evening Sacrifice, Mark 15. 25, 33. and this was the time for the Paſſeover. By this time of the day God foreſhewed the ſufferings of Chriſt in times evening (the laſt dayes. Hebr. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 19, 20.) about the ſame time of the day when the Paſchal Lamb uſually died. V. 12. then aroſe Peter] John 20. 6. Though Peter had, out of much infirmity denied Chriſt, yet he returned to his old love and zeal to him again : ſuch is their condition who ſin not of malice, but infirmity : John ran with Peter to the ſepulchre, John 20. 3, 4. where they diligently examine all circumſtances, they ran with fervent deſire of ſatisfying themſelves concerning the report, but with unequall ſtrength : John out-ran Peter, but Peter firſt entred the ſepulchre.

which had happened] Concerning Chriſt, his death and reſurrection reported by the women, and poſſibly many other things concerning the ſame, which had ſo filled their hearts with ſorrow, and poſſeſſed their minds with a fluctuant deſire of knowing what theſe things would at laſt come to, that they could hardly intend to think or ſpeak of any thing elſe: probably they lamented the Jews unworthy uſage of him whom they loved and honoured, as principally their loſſe of a Maſter ſo incomparably excellent.

V. 15. while they communed] Filled with grief they eaſe their mindes, by talking of their yet ſuppoſed dead Maſter: nor could the barbarous ingratitude of the Jews towards Chriſt, and his ſufferings; neither the admirable works which they had ſeen him do, eaſily fall out of their mindes: now therefore he evidently fulfilleth that promiſe, Mat. 18. 20. then in a bodily preſence, which he now doth by a ſpiritual; like a Traveller by the way he joyneth with them in company.

V. 16. but their eyes were holden] So hindred by the power and providence of God, that they could not know him. See John 20. 14. and 21. 4. in which ſenſe the Syriac ſaith, their eyes were ſhut: So Mary Magdalen ſaw him in the Garden but knew him not. So were theſe mens eyes held, not, that they ſaw no form, but that they miſtook the true. For though Chriſt had now a glorified body, freed from all human neceſſities; yet was and is it a true body; which he really ſhewed to the witneſſes thereto appointed: his ſtate of glory gave immortality, it took not away nature.

V. 17. and are ſo ſad] σκυθρωποὶ, ſower countenanced, as Mat. 6. 16. So men uſe to look in ſorrow.

V. 18. named Cleophas] See on verſe 13. This ſeemeth to be none of the Apoſtles: for verſe 33. theſe men came the ſame hour to Jeruſalem and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them: neither could the other here mentioned, be Luke, as may appear, if we conſider the preface of the Acts of the Apoſtles.

made us aſtoniſhed] This ſetteth out their ſlowneſſe to beleeve: ſo far were they from any compact in the matter of the Goſpel which they preached to the World; that after many inſtructions by Chriſt concerning his riſing again the third day, and the event it ſelf demonſtrating the truth thereof, their ſelves were very hardly brought to beleeve it.

V. 23. found not his body, &c.] See verſe 3, 4.

V. 24. certain of them which] Peter and John, this was ſufficient confirmation of the Womens teſtimony, ſo that their unbelief was ſtrange, conſidering that they had the Word of Chriſt to forewarn them, the Womens, the two Diſciples, and the Angels teſtimony to aſſure them of the ſame: no wonder that Chriſt reproved their incredulity and hardneſſe of heart, Mark 16. 14.

V. 25. O fools and ſlow of heart] ὦ ἀνόητοι: Syriac, O mindleſſe men: it is indeed the greateſt fooliſhneſſe, rather to beleeve our own reaſon than Gods Oracles. Chriſt hitherto ſpake to them in the perſon of a ſtranger; that ſeeming to ſpeak in another mans cauſe, he might the better perſwade them; and that they being not onely Iſraelites, but alſo Chriſts Diſciples, might be aſhamed of their unbelief; in that a ſeeming ſtranger not onely beleeved, but was able to convince their unbelief, by evident teſtimonies of the Prophets.

V. 26. ought not Chriſt] See 1 Pet. 1. 11. Chriſt, knowing their thoughts, cureth their unbelief, by that which they took for a ground thereof: they thought he could not riſe again, neither be the Meſſias promiſed by the Prophets, who ſuffered an ignominious death, by their hands whom (if he were the Meſſias) he came to ſave. Chriſt will therefore ſhew them out of the Prophets, that Chriſt the true Meſſias, promiſed by the Prophets, ought to ſuffer thoſe very things, which alſo were foretold by the Prophets: and that they ought not to look ſo much on the Jews malice and injuſtice, as on Gods decree, who had ſo appointed it for mans redemption, and foretold it for our confirmation. This (ought not) relateth to the predictions concerning it: as if he had ſaid; Did not the Prophets foretel it? muſt not their words be true? See on Matth. 26. 54.

and to enter into his glory] This he ſaith to comfort their drooping mindes, who ſaid, verſe 21. we truſted that it had been he.

V. 27. and beginning at Moſes] He began to interpret that which was written of Chriſt by Moſes; and that which the law prefigured concerning him: as alſo the writings of the ſucceeding Prophets. See verſe 44.

V. 28. nigh unto the village] That is, unto Emaus.

he made as though] He ſeemed to them prepared and reſolved to go: Gre. προσεποιεῖτο; præ ſe ferebat; either going on foreward, or by ſome geſture of taking leave of them: this did Jeſus, not to deceive, but to give them an occaſion of inviting him to ſtay with them, that he might opportunly manifeſt himſelf unto them.

V. 29. they conſtrained him] They over-intreated him by their importunity, they compelled him by entreaty, not by violence; for they urged that it was neer night: probably, as Jerom ſaith, Cleophas entertained him at his own houſe, whom he found ſo expert in the Prophets; his heart burning in him with muſing who this ſhould be, who ſo admirably diſcourſed of theſe things.

V. 30. and bleſſed it] According to the cuſtom of the Jewes, among whom the Maſter of the family, or chief man of the company, gave thanks, or prayed; and then diſtributed the bread, or carved to all the company. See Matth. 14. 19. It is probable that Chriſt uſed ſome accuſtomed form of thankfulneſſe, or elſe ſome other action or geſture, by which theſe men knew him again, verſe 35.

V. 31. vaniſhed out of their ſight] Or ceaſed to be ſeen of them; by a miraculous and unuſual manner they loſt ſight of him.

V. 32. did not our hearts burn] Were we not inwardly moved, as by a divine fervour of Gods Spirit? it intimateth a ſoveraign power and authority in the words of Chriſt. See Mat. 7. 29. John 7. 47. Pſal. 45. 2. Pſal 39 4. This ſheweth that they were terrified and thoughtful, as v. 37, 38. in which the ſudden recourſe of the vital ſpirits to their fountain the heart, uſe (as it were by thronging it) to make it hot and throbbing with extraordinary pulſes.

V. 33. and they roſe up the ſame hour] Conſidering the ſorrow into which the Diſciples were now plunged, they thought long to comfort them, by aſſuring them that Chriſt was riſen from the dead: therefore leaving their own preſent affairs and reſt, they intend that which was far more neceſſary: ſuch was their joy, and deſire to communicate the ſame to others: All private intereſt muſt give place to Gods honour, and the comfort and ſalvation of ſouls Nor may we therein defer that until to morrow which can be done to day.

V. 34. ſaying, the Lord is riſen indeed] It muſt needs be late at night, when theſe two came back after ſupper from Emaus to Jeruſalem to the diſciples; yet they found them together conferring about the paſſion and reſurrection of Chriſt: and they who came to bring comfort to them, found it of them: thus God rewarded their mutual care to confirm each other: they tel how Chriſt was riſen and appeared to Cephas: ſee 1 Cor. 15. 4 that which we read, Mark 16. 13. neither believed they then, is to be underſtood diſtributively; as if he ſaid, ſome (as Thomas, John 20. 25.) beleeved not yet: but ſome of them beleeved.

V. 35. what things were done in the way] Though yet they were not fully ſetled, yet they conferred teſtimonies; ſo confirming each other: faith hath its infancy and growth.

peace be unto you] It was an uſual manner of ſalutation with them: as we uſe to ſay, God ſave you as Chap. 10. 5.

V. 37. but they were terrified] Though they now confidently beleeved his reſurrection, yet the ſuddenneſſe of his appearing ſtartled them: poſſibly they might think it rather preſented unto them in a viſion; than that Jeſus himſelf, lately crucified, was now ſtanding alive by them: ſo hard is it to beleeve divine and certain truths; ſo timerous is unbelief (See Levit 26. 36) Faith giveth courage or confidence in greateſt dangers (Pſalm 23 4. Pſalm 46. 3.) but unbelief cauſeth fear, where no fear is. See Mat. 14. 25.

V. 38. why do thoughts ariſe?] That is, perplexities, and doubts concerning ſome deluſion.

V. 39. handle me, &c.] See John 20. 20 he admitteth the teſtimony of their own ſenſes to aſſure them it was no viſion, or ſpirit; but a true and real body riſen from the dead which they now ſaw: what ever is eſſential to a true body glorified, is yet in Chriſts body: Fulgentius de fide orthod ad Donat. ſaith well; If any ſhall ſo preach the truth of the Deity in Chriſt, ut ejus veram carnem negare contendat, non eſt Chriſtianus catholicus, ſed Hære- ticas, &c. as that he ſhould ſtrive to deny the truth of his fleſh, or that his fleſh is true fleſh, he is not a Catholick Chriſtian, but an Heretical Manichee: and Auguſtine ep. 146. Conſentio; ego proinde Domini corpus ita in cœlo eſſe credo, ut erat in terra quando aſcendit in cœlum, &c. I therefore beleeve, that the body of our Lord is in heaven, ſo as it was on earth, when he aſcended into heaven: for he ſaid to his diſciples, See my hands and my feet, handle me and ſee, &c. and again a little after he ſaith, therefore that fleſh was then a ſpiritual body, yet was it not a ſpirit, but a body: See 1 Cor. 15. 44. if a true body obvious to ſenſe, then circumſcribed (it could not elſe be ſeen and felt) and ſo not carnally in the Sacrament under the ſpecies of bread and wine.

V. 40. he ſhewed them his hands and his feet] With the prints of the nails wherewith he was faſtned to the croſſe. See John 20. 27. he that with a touch healed Malchus ear, could as eaſily have healed and taken away both wounds and skars; but he who roſe again for us, would for our ſakes yet bear theſe remainds of the croſſe for a time; that he might aſſure us, that it was he, who was indeed the firſt fruits of the dead: we may not think he retaineth theſe ſtill; if while yet he bare mortal fleſh and blood, his face ſhined like the ſun in his brightneſſe, and his clothes were white as the light; what is he now in his Divine glory? as he would eat before his diſciples (who had no need of meat) to teſtifie his reſurrection; ſo would he yet bear theſe skars: by all this, the Spirit working thereon, he fitted them with great power to teſtifie unto the world the reſurrection of the Lord Jeſus, Acts 4. 33.

V. 41. have ye any meat?] See John 21. 5. To which place of the Hiſtory, theſe words here recorded by St. Luke (who for brevity ſake omitted many things, which happened between this appearing of Chriſt, and that at the ſea of Tiberias, Joh. 21. 1. &c.) appertain.

V. 42. a piece of a broiled fiſh] John 21. 9, 13.

V. 43. and did eat before them] Not that he was now ſubject to human neceſſities, but onely for the greater confirmation of his diſciples faith.

V. 44. theſe are the words] As if he had ſaid, this is that which I told you concerning my death, burial, reſurrection, &c. and what ever elſe was foretold of me: therefore this ſhould not ſeem any ſtrange or new thing unto you.

V. 45. Then opened he their underſtanding] As Acts 16. 14. by his holy Spirit giving them underſtanding: the word of God ſhineth as a true light, yet as the cloudy pillar was darkneſſe to the Egyptians; ſo is this to carnal and corrupted mindes: It is ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2. until the Holy Ghoſt open the underſtanding, it cannot apprehend: ſo much need is there of the Apoſtles rule, Let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe, 1 Cor. 3. 18. there is no worſe cloud to obſcure the light of the Spirit, than confidence in our own wiſdom. See 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. Pſal. 119. 18. 1 Cor. 3. 7.

thus it behooved] That is, neceſſitate conſequentiæ, becauſe Gods counſel had ſo appointed to accompliſh mans redemption, by the death and reſurrection of Chriſt.

V. 47. ſhould be preached in his name] By his commiſſion and authority; as concerning preaching of the word: and by his grace and holy Spirit, as concerning the effect thereof in remiſſion of ſins. He began to preach repentance and remiſſion of ſins, Mat. 4. 17. and after his reſurrection commiſſionated his Apoſtles and ſucceſſours in the Miniſtery to do the ſame. See 2 Cor. 5. 20. Acts 2. 38. Acts 10. 42, 43. or his name, &c. that is, by his merit and mediation remiſſion of ſins is to all that beleeve in him.

among all nations] Pſalm 22. 27. Pſalm 2. 8 Iſaiah 49. 6. Michah. 4. 2. Iſaiah 60. 1. See Chap. 2. 32. So he gave them commiſſion to do, Mat. 28 19. Mark 16. 15.

V. 48. ye are witneſſes] Ye have been witneſſes of that which hitherto paſſed: and you ſhall be my witneſſes hereof unto all nations (Acts 1. 8.) concerning my doctrine, miracles, death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion into Heaven.

V. 49. the promiſe of my Father] He ſaith ἀποστέλλω, I do ſend, for, I will ſend, as the Syriac giveth it; becauſe he would ſhortly ſend: he calleth it the promiſe, of his Father, becauſe God promiſed it by him: the promiſe, that is, the gifts and graces of the holy Ghoſt promiſed them. See John 14. 6. and 15. 26. Iſa. 44. 3. Ezek. 36. 26. Joel 2. 28.

but tarry ye] You who are now fearful, ſtay at Jeruſalem expecting the fulfilling of this promiſe to confirm and aſſure you: thus will he have them ſtay, till they are compleatly armed.

endued with power] Until ye be furniſhed with the gifts of tongues and healing; as alſo with enlarged hearts, enabling you to perform the great work to which I have aſſigned you: and alſo the ſpirit of divine and undoubted fortitude.

V. 50. and he led them out as far as, &c.] Underſtand this leading out to be on the fortieth day after his reſurrection; for ſo long he was ſeen of them. Bethany was near Jeruſalem, on the Mount of Olives, Mark 11. 1. Acts 1. 12. Chriſt being to aſcend into heaven, leadeth his diſciples hither, out of Jeruſalem, leſt being ſeen, there might ariſe new troubles: and becauſe he reſerved the knowledge thereof to certain witneſſes thereto fore-ordained.

and bleſſed them] Like a father before his departure, praying for his children, and bleſſing them. See Gen. 27. 4. and 48 9. and 49. 1, 2. That he lift up his hands was a fit geſture for prayer. See Exodus 17. 11. and 19. 11. as it were expreſſing whence they expected the bleſſing, 1 Tim. 2. 8. which ſeemeth a very dictate of nature, teaching men that heaven is the Throne of God; καὶ ὑπέρτατα δώματα ναίειν, and that he dwelleth in the higheſt habitations; ſo alſo another, duplices tendens ad ſydera palmas.

V. 51. and it came to paſſe] Mark 16. 19. Acts 1. 9. We may not here with ſome, underſtand that this came to paſſe ſuddenly, before he had finiſhed the bleſſing: this ἐν τῷ εὐλογεῖν is uſed alſo for poſtquam, &c. after that; as Luke 14. 1. ἐν τῷ ἐλθεῖν is put for μετὰ τὸ ἐλθεῖν --- after he came; So Mark 16. 19. interpreteth this, ἐν, by μετὰ τὸ λαλῆσαι αὐτοῖς --- after the Lord had ſpoken unto them: the Syriac here giveth, ἐν τῷ εὐλογεῖν, by רכך cum benediceret, that is, poſtquam benedixerat; for ſuch is the value of that particle with an infinitive, importat ſignificationem temporis præteriti. Shindl. Pent.

V. 52. and they worſhipped him] They fixed their eyes upon him, as far as they could ſee him, until the cloud took him out of their ſight, and the Angels admoniſhed them to look no longer after him with bodily eyes, Acts 1. 9. &c. which when they underſtood, they adored him in ſpirit, and confeſſion of him their Lord and Saviour, to whom all power in heaven and earth is given.

V. 53. were continually] That is daily; for otherwiſe we cannot underſtand that, Acts 1. 13, 14. concerning their abode in an upper room, then, that they daily met there, and had conſtant and frequent aſſemblies there: So here we muſt underſtand this, διαπαντὸς, continually, that is frequently, or daily.

Amen] This word importeth the conſummation and certainty of all that which the Evangeliſt hath written. See on Mat. 28. 20. Mark 16. 20. and on John 3. 11.

ANNOTATIONS

On the Goſpel according to

S. JOHN.

The Argument.

T*He holy Penmen appointed by God to write the Goſpel of* Jeſus Chriſt,were ſome Apoſtles, as Matthew and John; and ſome Apoſtolical men their Diſciples, as Mark and Luke.

John was one of thoſe whom Chriſt named Boanerges,Sons of Thunder; James his brother, and ſon of Zebedeus (Mark 3. 17.) His calling is recorded, Matth. 4. 21. He was the beloved Diſciple, uſually preſent at Chriſts chief miracles; as, on Tabor (Matth. 17. 1.) in raſing Iairus daughter from the dead (Mark 5. 37.) and ſo in his Paſſion in the Garden, and under the Croſſe while he ſuffered, where Chriſt commended his mother to his care. He lived longeſt of the Apoſtles. In Domitians time, he was baniſhed into the Iſle Pathmos, where he wrote the Revelation: After which, under Nerva, he was recalled to Epheſus, (being aged about 97. years, which was the one hundreth year of our Lord) where he wrote this Goſpel, ſome ſay, at the entreaty of the Chriſtians of Aſia, for the Refutation of Ebion, Cerinthus, and others, who blaſphemouſly denied the Deity of Chriſt: Having therefore read the other three Evangeliſts, recording principally thoſe things which concerned the Humanity and Miracles of Chriſt; that which they omitted concerning his Deity and Doctrine, this high-flying Eagle diſcovereth; his main end being to ſhew, that Chriſt is indeed the very Son of God, God manifeſted in the Fleſh, coequal, coeternal, conſubſtantial with the Father; and that we believing in him may have eternal life, Iohn 20. 31. which he layeth down by three main Arguments: Firſt, from the effects; as before his Incarnation, in the Creation of the World; after his Incarnation by his Miracles. Secondly, from the teſtimony of men (Moſes, the Prophets; Iohn Baptiſt, and the Apoſtles) and of God the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, evidently declaring him ſuch. Thirdly, from his Doctrine peculiar to the Meſſias, ſpeaking with power, as he that had the word of eternal life; not as the Scribes and Phariſes, as Matthew noted, Matth. 7.

Firſt therefore, he ſheweth that Chriſt is very God, as very man: as alſo, how he was manifeſted, what Diſciples he firſt had, and what beginning of miracles, unto his firſt aſcenſion to Ieruſalem, Chap. 1. 2.

Secondly, how, about the firſt Paſſeover there mentioned, he, entred on his publick Miniſtery, caſting the buyers and ſellers out of the Temple; inſtructed Nicodemus concerning Regeneration; returned into Galilee; diſcourſed with the Samaritan at Iacobs Well, about true worſhip.

Thirdly, How at the Feaſt he went again to Ieruſalem, and healed the Lame man at Betheſda, Chap. 5.

Fourthly, How at another Paſſeover he fed 5000. Walked on the ſea, and taught concerning the Bread of Life, at which many were offended, Chap. 6.

Fifthly, How, he went up to the Feaſt of Tabernacles, and taught in the Temple, Chap. 7. He, diſmiſſed the Adultreſſe, by touching the Conſcience of her accuſers, Chap. 8. Healeth the blinde, Chap. 9. Diſcourſed of the good Shepherd, Chap. 10. Raiſed Lazarus, Chap. 11. Returned into the city with great Acclamations of the people, Chap. 12. Waſhes his Diſciples feet: Admoniſhed concerning Iudas treaſon, And Peters denyal, Chap. 13. Taught and comforted his Diſciples, Chap. 14. 15, 16. Prayed to his Father, Chap. 17. Suffered, Chap. 18. and 19.

Laſtly, How he roſe again from the dead, and appeared to many, Chap. 20, 21.

CHAP. I.

I*N the beginning*] 1 John 1. 1. ἐν ἀρχῇ, that is, ἀπ' ἀρχῆς from before the beginning of any creatures: quod in principio erat, nunquam non erat, Fulgentius ad Thraſimund. that which was in the beginning was ever. So Chryſoſtom hom. 2. ſaith in the beginning was, is nothing elſe, but εἶναι ἀεὶ, &c. ever to be, from eternity, in the beginning, not temporal, determinate, or to be meaſured by time; but indeterminate, eternal, and before all time, Coloſ. 1. 17. ἡ ἀρχὴ ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος, Greg. Nazianzen. orat. 35. the word was the beginning, in the beginning: the meaning is, the Word, that is the Son of God, had not beginning with the creatures, but was before their beginning from eternity was] Not made when the creatures were, but before any of them were, he was. This ἦν is, as much as ὑφίστατο. he was in being Being is moſt proper to God; who is יהוה; that name is of היה Haia fuit, extitit: it ſignifieth God, qui fuit, eſt, & erit. See Avenar. in היה. The Greeks expreſſe it by ὁ ὢν who is, or truly ſubſiſteth: by whom all things were made, in whom they have their being. See Revelations 1. 4. See V. Shindler. Pentaglot. in היה. See Exodus 3. 14. The 70 there have, ὁ ὢν, the being or exiſtence, as Suidas giveth it, ὑπάρχων, it is properly ſpoken ἐπὶ θεοῦ, of God, and is as much as ἀΐδιος --- eternal: for he is his own eternal being; ſo is none of the creatures, they have being of and in him, Acts 17. 28. and had beginning in time from him.

the word] The promiſed Meſſias of whom God ſpake before to all the Fathers (it is uſual with the Hebrews to put דבר dabar: for, a word, or work, and thing, as Gen. 24. 50 where the 70. have τὸ πρᾶγμα, ſee Deut. 19. 3. 1 Kings 6. 19. and 12 24. Pſal. 18. 2. &c.) and he is the ſame who is the onely Interpreter of the Father, verſe 18. by whom God revealed his will to the Prophets, Hebr. 1. 1. See Jer. Paulin. ep. 2. l. 2. this is, verbum ſubſtantiale, non prolativum. As Fulgent. ad Thraſymun. l. 1. expreſſeth a ſubſtantial or ſubſiſting word, &c.

was with God] Coeternal, conſubſtantial, coequal with the Father, Æqualis vera divinitate, equal in his true Divinity, leſſe in his true Humanity. Fulgent. de fide orth. ad Donat. See Prov. 8. 22. 1 Cor. 1. 24.

and the word was God] Chriſt is eternal God, Deus Patri, ὁμοούσιος, and συναΐδιος, conſubſtantial and coeternal with the Father. See the Nicen Creed. Athanaſ. Tom 1 ad Jovian. ep. de fide. Chriſt the Son of God did not then begin to be, when he was manifeſted in the fleſh; but was God from al eternity, made fleſh in the laſt times. Primam quippe nativitatem filii, nullatenus præceſſit æternitas patris: cujus tamen ſecundæ nativitati præceſſit temporalis nativitas matris: For the eternity of the Father did not at all precede the firſt nativity of the Son; whoſe ſecond nativity yet the temporal nativity of his Mother preceded. Fulgentius qu. ſ. de fi. orth. ad Donat.

V. 2. the ſame was, &c.] Geneſis 1. 1. God of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father, God of Gods; not by multiplication of the Eſſence, but by unity of the Deity: For as Greg. Nazianzen ſaith, Orat. 37 The Father was that true light, &c, and the Son was that true light, &c. and the Holy Ghoſt was that true light, ἦν, καὶ ἦν, καὶ ἦν, ἀλλ' ἓν ἦν. Φῶς, καὶ φῶς, καὶ φῶς; ἀλλ' ἓν φῶς, εἷς Θεός. Here is a was, and was, and was, and yet but one was, or being; light, and light, and light, yet but one light, one God. So that the Word was in the beginning with God, ὡς μὲν πρὸς τὴν πηγὴν ποταμός, as Athanaſ. Tom 1. ad Serap. expreſſeth it, as the ſtream to (or in reſpect of) the Fountain.

V. 3. all things were made by him] See Col. 1. 16. Hebr. 1. 2, 3. This declareth the Deity of Chriſt, for none can create, but God onely. So is he equal with the Father becauſe all things were made by him; and leſſe than the Father (in reſpect of his Humanity) in that he was made of a woman, &c. Gal 4. 4. all things ſubſiſting were made by him: yet no ſin was made by him, becauſe that is no ſubſtance or nature; but the corruption of nature, as Proſper ſheweth, Epigr. See Geneſis 1. and 2. He onely is the true God: falſe gods made not Heaven and Earth, Jer. 10. 11. The creatures can make ſomething of a preexiſtent matter; but to create, which is to make ſomething of nothing, οὐκ ἐξ ὄντ, 2 Macab. 7. 28. or rather as the 70. read it, ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, of that which had no being before, this is peculiar to God; this neither Men nor Angels can do: Hence there is proved the Deity of Chriſt.

V. 4. in him] In Chriſt the eternal Word; before he created the World: or ἐν is put for διὰ; ſo it ſhews the cauſe of the creatures life effectricem, and conſervatricem; effecting and preſerving, Hebr. 1. 2, 3. Acts 17. 25, 28.

was the light of men] The Fountain of reaſon and underſtanding to Men made to Gods own Image: he ſpeaks not here of Angels, but of Men; nor of the Jews onely, but of all ſorts of Men, as Chryſoſtom notes.

V. 5. and the light] Chriſt, who illuminateth by the Holy Ghoſt, ὁ Χριστός ἐστιν ὁ ἐν αὐτῷ φωτίζων, Athanaſ. ad Serap. it is Chriſt who enlighteneth in (or by) him. And as the Sun is not leſſened, or made more dim, by giving his light to multitudes; ſo neither is Chriſt after he created the World, and theſe numberleſſe creatures, ἀνελλιπής, μένει μηδὲν ἐλαττούμενος, οὐδὲ ἀπαναλῶν ἐκ τῆς δημιουργίας τῆς πολλῆς, Chryſoſt. hom. 4. in Job. 1. He remaineth indeficient, perfect, neither diminiſhed, nor languid by that great work.

ſhineth in darkneſſe] In mans mind (after the fall, full of darkneſſe, Rom 1. 21. Such is carnal wiſdom, Rom. 8. 7. and in the world, as that is a clear ſpeculum of Gods wiſdom, Rom 1. 20.

comprehended it not] Underſtood it not, 1 Cor. 2. 14. neither acknowledged Chriſt, as v. 10. to know things appertaining to the kingdom of Heaven, non dat natura, ſed gratia, nature giveth not, but grace, ſaith Fulgentius ad Theod. ep. 6. See 1 Cor. 2. 14.

V. 6. there was a man] Mat. 3. 1. Luke 1. 57, 80. and 3 2. One truly man, though ſo excellent as that Chriſt teſtified, Mat. 11 11. among them that are born of women, there hath not riſen a greater than John the Baptiſt. Chriſt ſo being man, that, lateret in eo Deus. Aug. there was ſent before him, a great man, by whoſe teſtimony he might be known to be more than man, concerning whom he teſtified.

ſent from God] Therefore (Mal. 3. 1) he is called מלאך malach, 70. ἄγγελόν μου, my Angel, which ſignifies, a Meſſenger or Ambaſſadour of Chriſt (Mark 1. 2, 3.) to prepare his way, by manifeſting him to Iſrael. See Luke 3. 2. God aſſigned him to his Office, and ſanctified him thereto from the womb, Luke 1. 15. and by his word which came to him in the Wilderneſſe, Luke 3. 2.

whoſe name was John] Luke 1. 13. 60. 63. Syriac יוחנן Juchanan; which name (ſaith Theophylact) is interpreted Θεοῦ χάρις, the grace of God; Hebr. יוחנן or יחנן Jochanan or Johhanan (See V. Shindl. pent. in חנן) Gr. Ἰωάννης, thence our name John.

V. 7. witneſſe of the light] Chriſt the light; witneſſing, and declaring preaching and teſtifying to Iſrael, that this Jeſus Son of the Patriarch Abraham, and King David, was their promiſed and expected Meſſias.

through him] That is, Johns teſtimony and miniſtery: not becauſe he wanted mans teſtimony, as Chryſoſt notes, hom. 5 but that men might beleeve: It was onely for our ſakes that he became man, and ſubjected himſelf to the teſtimony of man.

V. 8. he was not that light] John Baptiſt was not Chriſt, that increated light, which the Jews once ſuppoſed, Luke 3. 15, 16.

V. 9. that was] Chriſt was the eternal light, before John teſtified of him.

the true light] αὐτόφως, Light it ſelf, Original light; which properly deſerved the name of light, a light by nature; not onely by participation, as the creature hath light. The light promiſed to enlighten the Gentiles, which ſate in darkneſſe, Mat. 4. 15. Iſa. 42. 6. Iſa. 49. 6. Luke 2. 32. Act. 13. 47.

that cometh into the world] Which is born: he ſpeaketh of the common benefit of reaſon and underſtanding: no man is born without this light: though Infants have little or no uſe of reaſon, yet have they a reaſonable ſoul, apt to underſtand, though by reaſon of the infirmity of body, they little do.

V. 10. the world was made by him] As verſe 3. Hebr. 11. 3. who is the eternal word, and wiſdom of God. See Prov. 8. 22. &c.

knew him not] Gods wiſdom, power, and glory ſhined in all the creatures yet they knew him not, nor glorified him as God. See Pſalm 19. 1. Rom. 1. 23. of his manifeſtation in the fleſh he ſpeaketh, verſe 11. They of whom the World was not worthy (Hebr. 11. 38.) knew him, but they who love the world, know not the Maker thereof. The worldly man acknowledgeth him not; though he know as much, as ſhall ſerve to convince his conſcience: here he calleth the wicked multitude, ignorant and blind ſinners, the world, as Chryſoſtom noteth: the Saints before his Incarnation, knew him, and expected ſalvation by him.

V. 11. he came unto his own] To Iſrael his own peculiar people: though he were in the world before (for he made, and by the ſame power, ſtill ſuſtaineth and continueth all the courſes of nature in all the creatures, Heb. 1. 2, 3. John 5. 17.) yet he ſeemed not to be preſent τῷ μήπω γνωρίζεσθαι, for that he was not yet known, or manifeſted, Chryſoſt. hom. 7. He came to his own land, Pſal. 33 12. and 78. 71. and 79. 1. &c. which he choſe of all the world, for the people by whom, and the place in which he would be worſhipped: ſo as being of the ſeed of Abraham, the land of Canaan was his own countrey; and as the ſon of David, Jeruſalem was his: to theſe he came, not becauſe he had need of them; but becauſe they had need of him their promiſed Saviour and Redeemer, yet ſo fooliſh was this ingrateful people, that they would not receive him.

received him not] Acknowledged him not for their Meſſias.

V. 12. but as many as received him] By true faith and obedience: which (ſaith Fulgentius ad Monim. de præd. l. 1) becauſe the evil will of man could not deſerve, non eſt ejus cauſa, niſi ſola Dei voluntas bona; there is none other cauſe thereof than the good will of God (See Phil. 2. 13.) who, though he would have all men good, yet compelleth he no man: but perſwadeth and draweth as Chryſoſtom noteth: making men willing of unwilling, by his preventing grace.

power to, &c.] This dignity, right, or priviledge, 1 John 3. 1. adoption of ſons, Gal. 4. 5. to be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, 2 Theſ. 1. 5.

on his name] In Chriſt, our Mediatour and Saviour.

V. 13. the will of the fleſh] That corrupt nature of man which is contrary to the Spirit: not by any natural courſe. See Gal. 5. 17.

but of God] Of God, the Fountain of regeneration and free grace.

V. 14. the word was made fleſh] Mat. 1. 26. The word, the Son, not the Father, nor the holy Ghoſt, became Man, not by confuſion of natures, but by uniting the Divine and human natures in one perſon of Chriſt, God and Man. Thus would the eternal Word become fleſh, Quando, quod fecerat, factus, opus ſuum dignatus eſt reparare. Fulgentius de myſt. mediator. ad Thraſym. l. 1. When being made, ſuch as himſelf made, he vouchſafed to (become man for the) repair (of man) his own work. He became fleſh, that is, man of a reaſonable ſoul and human body; for ſo the Hebrews by בשר baſhar, fleſh (as the Greeks by σάρξ) underſtand the whole man, conſiſting of body and ſoul, Gen 6. 12. Job 12. 10. Iſa. 40. 5. Rom. 3. 20. &c. he became man, non mutando quod erat, ſed aſſumendo quod non erat. Auguſt. Paſcent. ep. 174. Not by changing the God-head, but by aſſuming the Man-hood. So he became man as ſtill remaining God: the God-head became not a Man-hood; nor the humanity, a Deity: he was made fleſh; that is, made himſelf, or aſſumed fleſh in which, manifeſtaretur ſenſibus hominum. Aug. de trin. l. 5. c. 11. he might be manifeſted to the ſenſes of men: the Nicene Synod excellently determined it, ὥσπερ ἡμεῖς τὸ πνεῦμα λαμβάνοντες οὐκ ἀπολλύομεν τὴν ἰδίαν ἑαυτῶν οὐσίαν· οὕτως ὁ Κύριος γενόμενος δι' ἡμᾶς ἄνθρωπος, καὶ σῶμα φορέσας, οὐδὲν ἧττον ἦν Θεός. (Athanſ. Tom. 1 Synod. Nicen. contr. Ar. decret.) the meaning is; as we receiving the Spirit of God, do not thereby loſe our own being: So the Lord Jeſus, becoming Man for our ſakes, and bearing an human body, doth notwithſtanding ſtill remain God unchangable. His taking on him the form of a ſervant, was not any leſning of his Deity; becauſe (ſaith Fulgentius de incarn. & gr. Dom. c. 2.) hoc habet, ſemper eſſe quod eſt: he hath ever the ſame being. Be comforted ye ſons of God in the ſorrows of tranſitory fleſh and blood: we now decay, and muſt ſee corruption; but who can fear the reſurrection of this now corruptible fleſh? who can but ſeriouſly conſider that Chriſt, God eternal, became fleſh, to redeem this body (as well as ſoul) of ours? Quid futurus eſt homo, propter quem Deus factus eſt homo? Proſper. ſent. ex Aug. 310. what ſhall Man once be, for whom God became Man? and again, the Deity of the eternal Word, coequal with God the Father, became partaker of our mortality, that we might be made partakers of his holy Spirit. And as Chryſoſtome ſaith, hom. 10. the beloved Son of God, became the Son of Man, that he might make the ſons of Men the ſons of God.

and dwelt among us] ἐσκήνωσεν, It ſignifieth a dwelling in Tents, or Tabernacles: a ſhort time he was bodily preſent with men, until his aſcenſion: quaſi habuit inter nos tabernaculum. Budæus as if he had a Tabernacle among us.

beheld his glory] The manifeſtation of his divine Majeſty, not only in his transfiguration, Mat. 17. 2. 2 Pet. 1. 19. but alſo in many works, which ſhewed his power and glory, John 2. 11. and 11. 4.

as the only begotten] As, ſignifieth not here ſimilitude, but identity, the very truth: ſuch glory as became the Son of God, and was a certain teſtimony of his Deity. Fulgentius object. Ar. diſcuſ. noteeth the difference between unigenitus, the onely begotten, and primogenitus, the firſt begotten: in that Divine and Incomprehenſible generation, in which before all times he is God of God, he is the onely begotten, the Son by Nature: but in this generation wherein he became fleſh he is the firſt-born of every creature, or the firſt-born among many brethren, Rom. 8. 29. that is, of thoſe whom he vouchſafed, through faith; to adopt his brethren.

full of grace] See Coloſ. 1. 19. and 29. As if he ſaid, he did indeed viſibly converſe, as man with man among us, but with that fulneſſe of grace and truth, which never before appeared in any of the ſons of men. By grace, underſtand all the eſſential properties of the Godhead, power; wiſdom, righteouſneſſe, goodneſſe, mercy, truth, &c. which were in the Son, by that eternal and incomprehenſible generation, wherein the Father communicated his eſſence unto him. And we ſaw his glory, in many effects of his Deity, miracles, transfiguration, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and miſſion of the holy Ghoſt, enabling us with gifts of tongues, and knowledge of the truth to preach the Goſpel, and to confirm the ſame with miracles.

V. 15. cried] Freely and publickly, as verſe 23. not in a corner, nor privately, or before few that heard, but freely, boldly, and publikely: he alludeth to Iſa. 43. Iſa 58. 1.

cometh after me] As one baptized of me: before whom I am ſent to prepare his way.

for he was before me] More excellent than I: before me, as the Lord is before his ſervant: incomparably better than I: for when John preached theſe things, Chriſt was not much known by great works done, as afterwards: and the people enclined to think that John was Chriſt, Luke 3. 15.

V. 16. of his fulneſſe] Coloſ. 1. 19. Chriſt is the Fountain of grace, then fully opened, and flowing out, when he came and ſhewed himſelf to the World, Zach. 13. 1. John 4. 14. and 7. 38, 39. Of whoſe fulneſſe all we who believe, have received the gifts of grace and ſanctification, every one according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. 7. Epheſ. 2. 8.

grace for grace] Or grace upon grace: abundance of grace, and encreaſes of graces one by another according to which Chriſt ſaith, to him that hath it ſhall be given, and he ſhall abound, Mat. 13. 13. A following grace, after a right uſe of the grace received: ſo the Goſpel is the power of God to ſalvation to every one that believeth; Rom. 1. 16. God giveth all, both the planting and increaſe; the talent and the right uſe thereof: and ſo in giving more and more grace, he doth but crown his own gifts: as when he giveth knowledge, and an heart to live thereafter; adding thereto, conſtancy, perſeverance, patience, more lively hope of ſalvation by Chriſt, &c. here is an accumulation and giving of grace upon grace, and one grace by meditation of another; yet all is but his own gift to us, and work in us, who worketh all according to the good pleaſure of his will, Epheſ. 1. 5, 9. Phil. 2. 13. On the contrary part alſo it is very conſiderable (which the learned Iſ. Caſaubon, Exercit. 15. 3 obſerveth) that God in his juſt judgement puniſheth wilful ignorance, with neceſſity of not knowing his will to ſalvation (ſee 2 Theſ. 2. 10, 11 Rom. 1. 21. &c.) to which he citeth the ſaying of a Rabbin, in Pirke Anoth c. 4 Merces precepti eſt præceptum, & merces transgreſſionis eſt transgreſſio; the meaning is, that God rewardeth the keepers of his laws, by giving them grace every day more and more carefully to keep them; and (juſtly puniſhing ſin by ſin) he giveth over the neglecters and tranſgreſſors of his law to more and more negligence and therein to final deſtruction. Fulgentius de præd. ad Monim l. 1. underſtands by grace for grace the grace of eternal glorification, for the grace of undue juſtification; ſo as the grace of juſtification, by an undeſerved benefit putteth away all evill merit, and confirmeth the good by a continnal aſſiſtance, &c. And it is therefore not unjuſtly called grace, becauſe God not onely rewardeth his own gifts with gifts, but alſo becauſe there the grace of divine retribution ſo much aboundeth, that it incomparably and unſpeakably exceedeth all merit of mans will and work, though good, and given of God. That all is of free-grace, the ſame expreſſeth, de incarn. & gra. &c. ſaying, a man willingly hath faith, Sed deus, qui fidem donat; ipſe hominis mutat & dirigit voluntatem: but God who giveth faith (Eph. 2. 8.) his ſelf changeth and directeth the will of man, ſo, that he may believe and obey the Goſpel.

V. 17. by Moſes] By the miniſtery of Moſes, Gal. 3. 19.

but grace and truth] That is, the exhibition of thoſe things which were promiſed and prefigured in the law: ſo he oppoſeth the law, to grace and truth; and becauſe the moral law did but ſhew the diſeaſe, Rom. 7. 7. which Chriſt onely healeth; and the ceremonial law onely ſhadowed out that which Chriſt performed for us: ſo as Proſper ſaith; the law was given, that grace might be ſought for: grace was given that the law might be fulfilled, &c. ſo grace and truth are by Chriſt; for as much as, by the ſacrifice of his death-prefigured in the legal ſacrifices, he ſatisfied the juſtice of God, for the ſins of the elect, obtained favour and peace with God for them, and regenerateth them with his Spirit. For grace is it, by which God rendreth, malis bona, good to evil, (who as Proſper ſaith, de vocat. Gent. l. 1. c. 8. Opus ſuum, opere ſuo reparat, repaireth his own work, with his own work) whereby he freely preventeth the evil to make him juſt, and followeth the juſt (with ſupplies of grace) that he may not (again) become wicked: he preventeth him that is fallen, that he may riſe again; and followeth him whom he hath raiſed, that he may not fall away: prevenit, donans homini bonam voluntatem: ſubſequitur bene volentem, operando in illo boni operis facultatem, Fulgentius de prædeſt. l. 1 he preventeth, by giving man a good wil: he followeth him willing well, by working in him ability to do the good work.

V. 18. No man hath ſeen God] 1 John 4. 12. 1 Tim. 6. 16. That is the eſſence of God: See hereof Auguſtine ep. 6. we do not (ſaid Minicus Felix octav. anſwering an Heathen Idolater) ſhew our God, whom we adore, neither do we ſee him: yea, hence we believe him to be God, becauſe cum ſentire poſſumus, videre non poſſumus: we perceive him preſent when he thundreth, raiſeth ſtorms, reſtoreth calms, in all his works, but ſee him with mortal eyes we cannot, who is more pure than any ſenſe can apprehend. The eyes ſay, if he be not coloured, per nos non intravit: he hath not paſſed in by us: the ears ſay, if he made no noiſe, he paſſed not in by us, &c. Auguſtine tom. 9. Soliloq. c. 31. Lo he goeth by me, and I ſee him not, Job 9. 11. Wouldeſt thou ſee God with carnal eyes when as yet thou canſt not ſee thine own ſoul, by which thou liveſt, ſpeakeſt, (and ſeeſt?) The Winde bloweth, thou heareſt the ſound, and feeleſt the violence thereof, yet canſt not ſee it; how much leſſe canſt thou in this dark houſe of clay, ſee the incomprehenſible being of God. When he appeared to Abraham, Moſes, or the Prophets, he did comply with their preſent infirmity, ſhewing them his preſence, by ſuch an appearance as they could apprehend. We ſee him now in his works, we know and believe in him through Chriſt: For as Fulgentius ſaith well, Object. Ar. diſcuſ. True faith is not ignorant, of that it believeth, though as yet it cannot ſee, that which it hopeth and believeth: we ſhall more clearly ſee him in the life to come, 1 John 3. 2.

the boſom] Moſt dear, united in nature, and acquainted with all his ſecrets, See chap, 13. 22. 23. he is one with the father, John 10. 30. therefore they have one omniſcience, one will, which no creature could have known, except he had revealed it by Chriſt his eternal word: this word, boſom, is accommodated to our capacity, and taken from our common uſe of ſpeaking, who ſay a boſom-friend, when we meane one who knoweth, and is acquainted with all our deſires, deſignes, and counſels.

declared him] Gave us the knowledge of God, otherwiſe unſearchable.

V. 19. who art thou] For they doubted whether he were not the Chriſt, Luke 3. 15 they not ſo much enquired of his name, or family, which probably was ſufficiently known; he being the ſon of Zacharie the Prieſt; as of his office, and authority, ſo (as he did) to preach, baptiſe and gather diſciples and followers? they were not ignorant that in the time of Meſſias, the people ſhould be baptized for remiſſion of ſin; according as it is written, Ezek. 36. 25. then will I ſprinckle clean water upon you, and you ſhall be clean, &c. now this, as the propheſies concerning John Baptiſt, Iſa. 40. 3. Mal. 3 1. Mal. 4. 5. the admirable things concerning Johns nativity; the enquiry of the wiſe men for Chriſt the late born king of the Jews, notoriouſly troubling Herod and Jeruſalem, about thirty years then laſt paſt; the immane and barbarous murder of ſo many infants by Herod, the extraordinary auſterity and courſe of Johns life, and common expectation of the people with all theſe forecited things, comparing the times for the coming of the Meſſias; concluded that either John was the Meſſias, or his forerunner, who would tell them ſome news of his approach, and manifeſting himſelf to Iſrael, therefore the governers of the Church ſent to him to enquire.

V. 20. he confeſſed] Plainly and openly as Acts 13 25.

V. 21. art thou Elias?] They underſtood that literally which is ſpoken, Mal. 4. 5 which Chriſt interpreteth of John Baptiſt, Mat. 17. 14. And the Angel plainly told his father Zachary, Luke 1. 17. that he ſhould go before the face of Chriſt in the ſpirit and power of Elias, Non in anima ejus, nec in carne, Tertul. de anim. c. 35. fine. Neither in his ſoul, nor fleſh, but in that excellency of Spirit which the Lord would give him, as he gave of the Spirit of Moſes to the ſeventy elders, Num. 11. 16. 17. 25, John here denyeth that he is Elias in their ſenſe.

art thou that Prophet] Or a Prophet; ſpoken of Deut. 18. 15. they expected ſome notable Prophet, verſe 25. John 7. 40. 41. & 6. 14. whereas Moſes ſpake of a ſucceſſion of Prophets, ſuch as God would raiſe them, until the coming of Chriſt, the head of all Prophets.

V. 22. That we may give an anſwer to them] To the Sanhedrin, or great Council; whoſe authority they tacitly alleage, that they might receive from him ſome ſatiſfactory anſwer, to carry back with them.

what ſayeſt thou of thy ſelf?] Seeing thou art not as we ſuppoſed thee; declare thy ſelf; whom profeſſeſt thou thy ſelf to be?

V. 23. I am the voice] Iſaiah 40. 3. Matth. 3. 3. Luke 3. 4. one whoſe office is to lift up his voice, and cry in the ears of deaf ſinners.

in the wilderneſſe] See Luke 3. 2.

make ſtrait] ἐυθύνατε make plain: Iſaiah, in the letter ſpake of their marvellous deliverance under Cyrus, which was a type of our ſpiritual deliverance by Chriſt, as if he had ſaid, though the obſtructions and difficulties hindring Iſraels returne from Babylon to Jeruſalem, be ſuch as may make it ſeem impoſſible for them ever to paſſe through them, yet the almighty power and providence of God ſhould ſo bring it to paſſe, as if ſo be the way of it ſelf, rough and impervious, ſhould have been evened by ſcavengers or harbengers of Princes, to go that way, ſo that they ſhould ſafely, quietly and eaſily overcome their voiage. See Iſai. 41. 18. 19 and 43. 19, 20. Ezra 1. 3, 4, 5, 6. and 7. 7. 28 and 8. 21. 23, 31 &c. and ſo ſhall it be in the return of Iſrael to God by Chriſt, and that was the thing which John was to proclaime. See on Iſaiah 40. 3, 4.

V. 24. The Phariſees] A moſt ſtrict ſect of the Jews, Acts 26. 5. See on Luke 14. 1. and men of chief authority among the Jews, by dignity, Prieſts and Levites, by ſect Phariſees; no wonder that they ſo peremptorily interrogated John concerning his baptizing, which, (out of their opinion of ſingular knowledge, and authority) ſeemed to them unlawful, becauſe they commanded it not, who for matters Eccleſiaſtical had the primacie and chief authority in Iſrael.

V. 25. why baptizeſt thou?] By what authority? or, who gave thee authority, to inſtitute a new Sacrament, that indeed belongeth to God alone, of whoſe covenants the ſacraments are ſeals.

V. 26. I baptize with water] Unto amendment of life, Matth. 3. 11. that you may repent, Acts 19. 4. but Chriſt giveth the inward effect, who is the authour of baptiſme, whereof John was but a Miniſter.

V. 27. He it is who coming after me] Mat. 3. 11. See Acts 19. 4. this ὀπίσω μου, after me, relateth to that which Zachary ſaid, Luke 1. 76 Thou ſhalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his way, the meaning is, he that followeth my outward baptiſm with the inward effect thereof: not baptizing with water onely, as I, who am but a ſervant; but with the holy Ghoſt, nor only exhorting men to repent, and leave their ſins; but giving repentance, forgiving and waſhing away all their ſins, See verſe 15.

V. 28. Bethabara] Judges 7. 24. it was a paſſage into Canaan, and as well a type, as place of baptiſme, the entrance into the Church of Chriſt, and the eternall reſt which remaineth for us, Heb. 4. 9.

V. 29. Behold] John ſheweth and pointeth out Chriſt preſent; herein he was more than a Prophet, the Prophets foretold of Chriſts coming after many yeers, but John had the honour to point him out then preſent, when he proclaimed him.

the Lamb of God] Alluding to the Paſcal Lamb: in Chriſt is the ſubſtance of all legall ſacrifices to take away ſins; which he did, ſuffering for them as man, and remitting them as God, he was the lamb metaphorically, in reſpect of his meekneſſe and patience, See Iſa. 53. 7. and alſo as he was a ſacrifice for our ſins, ὁ ἀμνὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ: ſent of God. and accepted of God: the article hath much emphaſis, to expreſſe his dignity and to diſtinguiſh him as from the typicall lamb, and other legal ſacrifices, ſo alſo to ſhew his relation to all that the law prefigured, or the Prophets foretold concerning him, as if he ſaid, this is he, to whom all theſe point.

which taketh away the ſin, &c.] ὁ αἴρων, who taketh away, as Luke 6. 29. 30. or who beareth: the Syriac interpreter giveth it, ille qui tollit, &c. it was not poſſible that the blood of bulls and goats ſhould take away ſinnes, Hebr. 10. 4. this onely is he who doth it, he taketh them away continually; for though he ſuffered but once, yet the vertue thereof floweth as a continuall fountain to cleanſe us from our ſinnes, though not altogether, ut non ſint, (for yet we are partly fleſh and partly Spirit) yet ut non imputentur, that they ſhall be no more imputed: be comforted you penitent ſinners who can at laſt repent; no length of time can prejudicate Gods mercy; no repentance (if true and ſerious) can be too late with God, in whoſe ſight, all things both paſt and future, are preſent: if the continuance of ſins could have overcome the mercy of God; Chriſt would not have come in the laſt age of the world to take away the ſins thereof. Fulgent. venant. ep. 7. he taketh them quite away, ita ut non ſint, quorum memor non erit. Ambroſ. l. 5. ep. 18. ſo that (in effect) they are not, which he will no more remember.

ſin of the wolrd] The root (original ſin) and the branch, the actual, which is mortified, in them by the ſpirit, who in baptiſme put on Chriſt, the new man, and put off the old man, crucified dead and buried: See hereof. Rom. 6. & 7. where he mentioneth σῶμα τῆς ἁμαρτίας, the body of ſin, τῆς ἁμαρτίας ſin; becauſe he treateth not there, of remiſſion of ſins, as it is one part of juſtification, but concerning ſanctification in us begun: which remiſſion and ſanctification, though they are never divided in the ſubject (for whoſoever God juſtifieth by faith in Chriſt, them he doth alſo certainly ſanctifie by his holy ſpirit living in them) yet may they in reaſon be diſtinguiſhed: here then underſtand, a taking away of all ſin, and all the works of the devil: he ſaith of the world; that we may know that the benefit of redemption appertaineth not unto the Jews onely; but to all believers, of any time, place, or age of the world, ſince the beginning to this preſent: therefore is he ſaid to be the lamb of God; ſlain from the foundation of the world, Rev. 13. 8. See 1 John 2. 2. Rom 3. 29. 30. John 17. 20.

V 30. this is he of whom, &c.] He whom ye now ſee preſent: though he appear in the form of a ſervant, is incomparably more excellent than I.

V. 31. I knew him not] He knew him not by ſight, but by revelation, till he came to be baptized, then he began to know him; firſt by an inward revelation; ſecondly by an external ſigne given him, verſe 33. it was Gods all-diſpoſing providence that John ſhould live in the deſert far from any commerce, or acquaintance with Chriſt, untill the time that he was to be manifeſted unto Iſrael, leſt his teſtimony concerning Chriſt ſhould fall under any ſuſpition of compact, by reaſon of kindred, or any former acquaintance.

V. 32. John bare record ſaying] Mat. 3. 16. Mark 1. 10. Chriſt was teſtified to be the Son of God, by the viſible deſcention of the ſpirit; the fathers voice from heaven; and Johns witneſſe on earth: ſee alſo 1 John 5. 7.

I ſaw the ſpirit deſcending] Mark ſaith he ſaw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove deſcending, which ſome think was by a ſpirituall viſion onely; as Ezek. 1. 1. the Prophet ſaw the heavens open: others take this to have been a viſible opening; ſo that John and the multitude preſent might perceive that it was no humane, but ſome divine buſineſſe in agitation; the holy Ghoſt is God inviſible, 1 Tim. 1. 17. Heb. 11. 27. and every where preſent, Pſalm 139. 4. &c. Therefore can never be ſeen with any mortal eye; nor aſcend or deſcend; he cannot change place, who filleth all places, and is comprehended of none: but the inviſible, and incomprehenſible God, for the comfort and confirmation of his elect manifeſted his preſence in a viſible ſhape: So, deſcended he in the form of a dove, not in the forme of an Eagle, vulture, or bird of prey: as, to intimate his goodneſſe; ſo, to teach us of what ſpirit we ought to be, in harmleſſe converſation. See Mat. 10. 16. Jam. 3. 17. See Tertul. de bapt. c. 8.

V. 33. Upon whom thou ſhalt ſee the Spirit, &c.] Upon what man thou ſhalt ſee the Spirit deſcending in a viſible from, &c. he is the Chriſt: by this ſigne God revealed him to John, for he was otherwiſe not diſtinguiſhable from other ordinary men, being as we in all things, ſin excepted, Hebr. 4. 15. having made himſelf of no reputation, and taken upon him the forme of a ſervant, and being found in faſhion as a man, &c. Phil. 2. 7, 8.

with the holy ghoſt] Who giveth the effect of baptiſme, ſanctification and cleanſing from our ſinnes, See Matthew 3. 11.

V. 34. That this is the ſon of God] ὁ υἱός, That Son of God: Chryſoſtom and Cyril note the emphaſis of this article, that Son of God: the onely Son by nature (not by adoption, as are the Saints, 1 John 3. 1, 2.) the very Meſſias promiſed by the Prophets, and expected by the faithful: this is he; look not for any other: there is not ſalvation in any other name, Acts 4. 12.

V. 35. John ſtood] In Bethabara where he uſed to baptize.

two of his diſciples] He had many hearers; but ſome more intimate; whom he alſo privately inſtructed and prepared for the ſchool of Chriſt, he nameth here onely two in whom the effect of Johns preſent teſtimony concerning Chriſt, more evidently appeared and wrought; poſſibly more might alſo hear the ſame.

V. 36. Looking on Jeſus] Intentively, and doubtleſſe with ſingular comfort, as knowing him to be the Lord and Saviour of his elect, concerning whom himſelf was appointed of God, to teſtify, and whoſe way he was to prepare, by his preaching and baptizing.

behold the Lamb of God] This is but a ſhort ſermon of John: but the ſum of all that he had to ſay, whoſe office was to declare Chriſt now exhibited: and this he repeates to awake the attention of his drowzie hearers, who before did not much heed what he ſaid; ſo uſe faithfull Miniſters to repeat fundamentals of Religion until their auditors mark and underſtand them, and make ſome good uſe thereof.

V. 37. Two diſciples heard him ſpeak] John gathered not diſciples for himſelf, but Chriſt: theſe two are mentioned, who heard and conſidered what John ſaid: they probably heard the ſame the day before; but we read of no effect then, now we find how they move towards Chriſt. God hath his times to call; and his word like ſeed, (though on good ground) doth not preſently ſpring up in all hearers; in due time it ſhall in all the faithfull.

V. 38. What ſeek ye] This he ſaith, not doubting, but affording them occaſion of conference; though indeed it much ſkilleth what they ſeek, who pretend to come to Chriſt. See 1 Cor. 10. 33. 2 Cor. 2. 17. 2 Pet. 2. 3. Phil. 2. 21. ſome ſeek honours, ſome riches, ſome other things of this life; Mat 8. 19. John 6. 26. Phil. 2. 21. few ſeek Chriſt for Chriſt's ſake.

ſaid unto him Rabbi] This was a title which they uſed to give great and eminent men; but now it was commonly given to all teachers: he was called רבי rabbi, who by impoſition of hands was declared a wiſeman. Syriac רבן rabban, and John 20. 16. רבולי in ſome editions for the Greek Ῥαββωνί, See Joh. Druſ. præter. lib. 4. in John. 20. 16. and ad v. N. T. Rabbi. Caninius. de locis N. T. Martin. Troſtius. Variæ lection. in John 20. 16. the Evangeliſt interpreteth there, as here by διδάσκαλε, maſter or teacher: it is of the Hebr. root רבב rabab, great, thence רב rab excellens, or peritus in aliquâ arte, Magiſter, Doctor: here we may conceive that though they yet underſtood not, that Chriſt was the only teacher of his Church, yet moved with Iohns teſtimony concerning him, they eſteemed him as a prophet and doctour, which was the firſt ſtep of their hearing him.

where dwelleſt thou] Or abideſt thou? where lodgeſt thou? dwelling at Nazareth, it ſeemeth he was a ſtranger there where John was baptizing, and where he now ſaw, and pointed at him, if any now enquire the like of him, let him come and ſee in his word and ordinance: every river, if thou follow it home, will bring thee to finde the ſea, whence it came: ſo every part of the Goſpel will lead thee (as the Star the wiſe men, Mat. 2.) to Chriſt.

V. 39. Come and ſee] Thus Chriſt readily entertaineth them who ſeek him in truth; he putteth none of them off (See chap. 6. 37.) yea, he intimateth all that labour under the heavy burden of their ſins, Mat. 11. 28.

about the tenth hour] That was two hours before night: the day they divided into 12. hours, which in the ſummer, they made proportionably the longer; in the winter, the ſhorter: but ſo little before night, they conſider not the importunity, but in deſire to hear Chriſt, they preſently follow him: formal Goſpellers (like Felix, Acts 24. 25.) uſe to diſmiſſe the word, and preachers thereof, unto their convenient ſeaſon; which they will ſeldom finde; but to thoſe who indeed hunger and thirſt for righteouſneſſe, no time is unſeaſonable to learn.

V. 40. Simon Peters brother] The Evangeliſt here nameth him Peter, by way of anticipation, for he was not yet ſo named. See verſe 42.

V. 41. The Meſſias, &c.] The anointed. So the Hebr. משיח Maſhiach, of משח Maſhach unxit oleo, now becauſe Kings, Prieſts, and Prophets, were anointed with ſacred oyl, the confection whereof might not be imitated to any other uſe, therefore Chriſt in whom all theſe offices met, was by an eminence called the משיח Meſſiah, Dan. 9. 26. ſo often in the New Teſtament Μεσσίας is put for, and interpreted Chriſt: χριστὸς: the anointed, or Chriſt, yet was he not anointed as they in the type with material oyl, but with the holy Ghoſt, Acts 10. 38. and that above his fellows, Pſalm 45. 7. See chap. 3. 34 Coloſ. 2. 9. thus the Chaldee often interprets propheſies concerning him. Geneſ. 49. 10. untill שילה Shilo come Targ. משיחא.

V. 42. And he brought him to Ieſus] You muſt underſtand this of Andrew and Peters firſt coming to Chriſt, after which they returned to their fiſhing again; their calling to the Apoſtleſhip, when they left their nets and followed Chriſt as Apoſtles, was afterwards, and is recorded, Mat. 4. 18. &c. Luke 5. 10, 11.

a ſtone] Or Peter, Simon of Jonah (Auguſtin. in Ioh. readeth, thou art Simon filius Iohannis: ſo Ierom. de ſcriptor. eccle. and Fulgent. l. 3. ad Traſimund, whence Iohn. Druſius l. 4 præterit. gathered, that the father of Simon Peter was called יוחנן or יוחנא and contractedly יונא and not יונה Ionah, a dove, thou ſhalt be called Κηφᾶς which is πέτρος, that is, Peter, a proper name; or πέτρας an appellative, which is a ſtone; the Syriac hath כאפא cipho, a ſtone from כיף Job 30. 6. Jer. 4. 29. See Io. Druſ. ad voc. N. T. com. prior. Thou art Peter (ſaid our Saviour, Mat. 16. 18.) and on this rock will I build my Church: not on the perſon, but on the confeſſion of Peter ſaying, thou art Chriſt, the Son of the living God: for (as Iſidor de etymol. l. 7. ſaith) Chriſt was the rock on which foundation, even Peter alſo was built. See Epheſ. 2. 20. to which ſenſe Gregor. l. 3. ep. 33. ſaith, vitam veſtram in Petram eccleſiæ, hoc eſt in confeſſione beati Petri- ſolidate, ground your lives on the rock of the Church, that is, on the confeſſion of bleſſed Peter: in Chriſt all the faithful are λίθοι ζῶντες, living rocks or ſtones. 1 Pet. 2. 5. this name Chriſt giveth Peter, intimating his firm conſtancy in the truth.

V. 43. Follow me] Be my diſciple: and he preſently followed him: ſo powerful is his word: he but ſaid at firſt let us make man, Gen. 1. 26. and he was made, and here, but follow me, and he (as others after) left his former calling, and followed Chriſt: prophane Porphyry and the apoſtata Iulian ſcoffed hereat, not knowing the power of Chriſts calling; nor believing that the dead ſhall once hear his voice, and come out of their graves, Iohn 5. 28, 29. nor do wicked hearers feel the power of his word calling them to repentance and newneſſe of life; becauſe they are deaf adders and belong not to Chriſt, chap. 8. 47. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4: here it comfort on two firm ground's, firſt (as Chryſoſtom ho. 17. noteth) God preventeth our wills with his grace: our ſanctification and ſalvation, beginneth not of, or from our ſelves, when, or how could we ever hope to be ſaved; if that work muſt not otherwiſe be accompliſhed than by our own ability and goodneſſe? Secondly, though this work, in relation to mans ſtrength, be as impoſſible, as for a mortal man to climbe up into heaven yet ſaith God our Saviour, how eaſie is it? why ſhould I deſpair of his ſaving me, who can as eaſily repaire me, as he made me? if he but ſay follow me, I ſhall follow him into eternal happineſſe: ſhall I doubt that he who hath ſuffered the moſt bitter death for me, will not ſo much as ſpeak the word to ſave me?

V. 44. Philip was of Bethſaida] A town neer unto the lake of Geneſareth, to which Philip the Tetrarch, Herods brother, Herodias husband, gave the honour of City, and called it by a new name, Julia. Joſeph. orig. Jud. l. 18. c. 3. to this very place our Saviour denounced ſo great woes. Mat. 11. 21. that from ſo impious a place he vouchſafeth to call out ſome to be chief Apoſtles, it declareth the admirable mercy of God taking ſome as brands out of the fire; as jewels out of the dirt.

V. 45. Jeſus findeth Nathaniel] He was of Cana in Galilee, John 21. 2. all good is diffuſive of it ſelf, ſpecially the truth of the Goſpel, which as a living water, or ſwift ſtream cannot be dammed up: if we are effectually called to Chriſt, we ſhall not reſt untill we have called others to the ſame communion.

Moſes in the law] Gen. 49. 10. Deut. 18. 18. See John 5. 46. Moſes in his five books; by whoſe miniſtery the ceremonial law was given, which by many repreſentations prefigured him. See Heb. 10. 1. Luke 24. 27.

prophets did write] Iſa. 4. 2. & 7. 14. Jerem. 23. 5. and 33. 14. Ezek. 34. 23. & 37. 24, 25.) Dan. 9. 24. Mic. 5. 2. Zach. 6. 12. & 13. 1. Mal. 3. 1. &c. hence appears the admirable conſent of the Old and New Teſtament, repreſented (as Gregor. hom. 25. in Evang. well noteth) by the two Cherubims, Exod. 25. 17, 18, 19, 20. covering the propitiatory with wings ſtretched out, touching each other, both looking towards Chriſt our propitiation, 1 John 2. 2. and with contiguous ſenſes reaching one another.

the Son of Joſeph] As men ſuppoſed. Luke 3. 23. but indeed he was, as God ἀμήτωρ without Mother; as man ἀπάτωρ without Father. Gr. Nazianzon. orat. 38. as Hebrews 7. 3.

V. 46. Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth] He had a prejudicate opinion of the place, either becauſe he conſidered the propheſie. Micha 5. 2. which ſaith that Chriſt ſhould be born at Bethlehem: ſo the Phariſees reaſoned, John 7. 41, 42. or as they ſaid (John 7. 52.) to Nicodemus, ſearch and look, for out of Galilee ariſeth no prophet: The place maketh neither good nor bad: the earth is the Lords; who is no accepter of perſons, Acts 10. 34, 35.

Come and ſee] Be not withheld from Chriſt by other mens prejudicate opinion; but try. Philip could not, or would not contend with him; but appealed to his own further experience, as if he had ſaid, doe but come to him and you will ſee, that ſome good may come from thence,

V. 47. No guile] A man of ſincere and ſimple integrity, which maketh the difference between the true and feigned Iſraelites.

V. 48. waſt under the fig-tree] Chriſt ſeeth us where ere we are, and when we think not of him: ipſe timendus eſt in publico, ipſe in ſecreto; Auguſtin. de verb Dom. in John. Ser. 46. he is to be feared in publick, he is to be feared in ſecret.

V. 49. Thou art the Son of God] Chriſts word begate this faith, which brake out into a confeſſion, of more than he heard of Philip: he called him the Son of Joſeph, but Nathaniel, acknowledged him the Son of God.

king of Iſrael] He knew not yet the extent of Chriſts kingdom, Pſalm 2. 8. Revel. 17. 14. therefore according to his meaſure he confeſſeth.

V. 50. Believeſt thou?] This queſtion is in effect a vehement aſſeveration, and as it were an admiration at his excellent faith.

thou ſhalt ſee greater things] Which ſhall more evidently manifeſt me to thee, and cauſe thee to believe and know that I am the Son of God, and Saviour of the world,

V. 51. Verily, verily] This repetition intimateth the certainty of his aſſertion; concerning the word ἀμὴν here uſed, ſee the marginall note of the learned Tremelius on this place.

Heb. 1. 14. and he ſignifieth his divine power, which ſhould be ſeen in the miniſtery of the angels to him the head of the Church, and the elect his body, the ſum is; they who were enemies, are reconciled to us in Chriſt, and we are made fellow Citizens with them Eph 2. 19. and they our guardians, Pſalm 34. 7. CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. CAna] Cana the leſſer, as Jerom ſaith: of which was Nathaniel, John 21. and Simon, Mat. 10. 4.

Galilee] The lower near the lake of Tiberias; called Galilee of the Gentiles. Iſa. 9. 1. Mat 4 13, 15.

the mother of Ieſus] It ſeemeth Ioſeph was dead before Chriſt began to preach: See Epiphan. hereſ. 78.

V. 2. both Ieſus was called] Invited as friends: Jeſus came not into the world to aboliſh humane ſocieties, and civil cuſtoms; but to ſanctifie them with his holy preſence: for as in him the right to the creatures (loſt in Adam) was reſtored; ſo would he ſhew, and by example teach men the right uſe of them: ſometimes in a more plentiful (but ſober) manner, as in feaſts and feſtivities. See Deut. 16. 14.

V. 3. when they wanted wine] Greek ὑστερήσαντος, although the word ὑστερέω, properly ſignify, ſum poſterior, ſum inferior, tardius venio, yet by a metonimie it is uſed for careo, deficio, deſum, Mark 10. 21. It ſeemeth theſe married couple were of a ſlender eſtate, and ſome of their gueſts unexpected: the main thing conſiderable is, Gods providence, diſpoſing this want (as often he doth with his) to his own glory; as it is of Lazarus death: chap. 11. 4. and the blinde mans want of ſight, chap. 9. 3.

his mother ſaid unto him, they have no wine] Why ſhe thus ſpake is uncertain; Chriſt having yet done no miracle, to give her confidence that he could ſupply the want: poſſibly ſome other things ſpoken, not here recorded, gave the occaſion: or that ſhe, who long before had laid up in her heart, thoſe things which were ſpoken of him (Luke 2. 51.) marked alſo what John Baptiſt teſtified of him; as alſo what the Angel Gabriel told her: and it is more than probable, that in theſe many years, wherein Chriſt lived with her, ſhe had often conferred with him, concerning the great work of redemption by him to be accompliſhed: and if there were here any place for conjecture; why may not we conceive it probable, that he might acquaint her with his gathering diſciples, preaching and manyfeſting himſelf to Iſrael, by ſignes and mighty works? and that this declaration had the force of a petition, as had that of Mary and Martha, John 11. 3. Lord, behold he whom thou loveſt is ſick: and his anſwer ſeemeth to make for this; for when he ſaith, mine hour is not yet come, he ſeemeth not ſo much to deny a ſupply, as to blame the unſeaſonableneſſe of the motion for it.

V. 4. woman what have I, &c.] Though he were incomparably greater, as being God, yet being the Son of Mary, as man, he ſpake not any otherwiſe, than became the reverence due to a parent: but becauſe he was not her Son in that nature, by which he would do the miracle he inhibiteth preſcribing God; and therein recalleth her from all reſpects of motherhood, ſo far as they hindred the conſideration of Gods power and glory, in the following miracle. See Luke 2. 49. Mat. 12. 48. Hebr. מה לי ולך ma li valach. 2 Kings 3. 13. what have I to do with thee?

mine hour is not yet come] The fit time appointed by God, which is, when it ſhall beſt ſerve for his honour, the time that I ſhould ſhew my ſelf by ſignes and miracles unto the world, certis momentis peraguntur res Dei, therefore he here intimateth, that it was neither impotency, nor incogitancy to ſupply, the preſent want which cauſed him to delay, but becauſe he would teach us to expect Gods appointed time, and to know that it is not for us to know the times and ſeaſons which the father hath put in his own power, Acts 1. 7. Chriſt knew it was not oppertune to ſupply them with wine, by a divine and extraordinary power manifeſted, until the want thereof was manifeſtly known to the whole company, that all might be witneſſes of the miracle, and thereby be moved to believe in him, that they might be ſaved.

V. 5, whatſoever he ſaith unto you] It is probable that ſhe had an expectation of ſome extraordinary ſupply, becauſe ſhe prepared the ſervants to obey him in order to the ſame.

V. 6. ſix waterpots of ſtone] Wherewith they uſed often to waſh and purifie themſelves. See Mark 7. 3. waters were very ſcarce in Paleſtine, fountains being there but rare, as Chryſoſt. noteth, hom. 21. therefore the Jews kept ſuch veſſels of water filled by them. The Heretick Hebion would have brought into the Chriſtian Church, this cuſtome of the Jews, before long to be antiquated.

containing two or three firkins a piece] Meaſures which the Syriac gives רבעין rebbin, of the Hebr. רבע rebah a quartal, continet quadrantal octavam partem cadi, ſive modii. Tremel. Gr. μετρητὰς δύο. Some conjecture that theſe ſix contained about half a tunne, each veſſel being about half a terſe: ſo that Chriſt gave a bountiful ſupply, which ſet off the excellency of the miracle.

V. 7. fill the water-pots with water] He ſaid not, fill the wine cask, but thoſe water-pots there ſtanding; into which they uſed not to put any wine: neither doth he bid them fill ſome other, the like pots (that might have admitted ſome jealouſie of a compact) but thoſe out of which they had now drawn water for their uſe; all this, for the clear evidence of the miracle. See 1 Kings 18. 44.

filled them up to the brim] Though theſe waiters knew not what Chriſt meant to do, yet thus the providence of God directed it, leſt any ſhould object, or conceive that ſome wine might happily be afterward ſecretly conveighed into the ſame veſſels, and ſo deceive the gueſts, with an appearance of a falſe miracle.

V. 8. governour of the feaſt] The ſteward, or ruler of the feaſt, as, Geneſ. 43. 16. among them it ſeems his office was onely to order the feaſt, not as a maſter of the family, but as a ſteward, for that time and occaſion, to diſpoſe of the meate, order the diſhes ſet on the tables, ſee they were ſupplied with wine and all neceſſaries which were gueſts; to appoint the waiters to take away again &c.

V. 9. water that was made wine] Water converted into wine; by which he ſhewed himſelf the God and Lord of nature; here doing that in an inſtant, which he doth every year in the vine, by turning water and the moiſture of the earth, by ſlow and inſenſible degrees, into the juice of the mature grape whence the wine is preſſed: he could here without their miniſtery, as eaſily have turned the air in the pots into water, as the water into wine; but he would ſo do this miracle, that all preſent might be certain witneſſes thereof.

V. 10. well drunk] That is, liberally, as Gen. 43. 34. for the word שכר ſhachar with the Hebrews anſwering to the Greek word μεθύειν, is not alwayes to expreſſe intemperance, as Gen 9. 21. 2 Sam. 11. 13, but ſometimes to ſignifie, onely a liberal uſe of wine without exceſſe, as here, and in the forecited place, Gen. 43. 34. See on Luke 1. 15.

V. 11. This beginning of miracles] Chriſt adorned this wedding with his preſence and firſt miracle, among thoſe innumerable miracles which Chriſt wrought in the dayes of his fleſh, whereof many are recorded by the Evangeliſts, this of his turning water into wine at the wedding in Cana of Galilee, was the firſt.

and manifeſted] He wrought this miracle ſo evidently, that his divine power appeared therein.

diſciples believed on him] For the end of miracles, is to bring us by faith to Chriſt: whereas lying miracles carrying men away from Chriſt into ſuperſtition, are Satans deluſions. 2 Theſ. 2. 9, 10, 11.

V. 12. Capernaum] A rich city on the ſea coaſt, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephtali, where Chriſt dwelt when he left Nazareth, Mat. 4. 13.

and his brethren] That is, his kinſmen, whom the Hebrews called brethren. Gen. 13. 8. & 14. 14. Mat. 13. 55.

V. 13 Jews Paſſeover was at hand] See Exod. 12. 2. & 13. 3. & 23. 14, 15. and the morall thereof.

V. 14. and found] Chriſt appointed to purge the temple; Mal 3. 1, 2, 3. preſently repaireth thereto: this was the firſt Paſſeover after Chriſts baptiſm; and therefore this is not the ſame hiſtory which is recorded, Mat. 21. 12. Mark 11. 15. Luke 19. 45. that was when his paſſion drew near.

in the temple] In the outward court of the temple.

ſold oxen] They that dwelt far from Jeruſalem, were by the law, to make their offerings into money, and to furniſh themſelves there, Deut. 14. 25. 26. but not in the temple, which was the houſe of God, or the houſe of prayer.

changers of money ſitting] To fit all ſtrangers with exchange of moneys there currant; to buy ſacrifices.

V. 15. of ſmal cords] Probably, thoſe which bound the oxen and ſheep, brought to the altar to be offered (as it is written, Pſalm 118, 27. binde the ſacrifice with cords, even unto the hornes of the altar) which done, probably they were caſt by; ſo Chriſt might take up ſome of theſe, of which he made a ſcourge to drive out the ſheep and oxen, that they might not buy and ſell in the temple.

V. 16, make not my fathers houſe an houſe of, &c.] He blameth not the ſale of ſheep and oxen and doves (the law allowed that) but that they ſold them within the court of the temple; and ſo made it an houſe of merchandize: that he condemneth: becauſe, that through it, it was not lawful ſo much as to bear a burden, Mark 11. 16. If Chriſt thus purged his temple from elſewhere lawfull merchandize and prophanation, when yet he well knew it ſhould ſhortly after be utterly demoliſhed; if he would not have them buy and ſell there, thoſe things without which they could not then ſerve him according to his own law; thoſe things vvhich doubtleſſe many bought vvith a ſincere purpoſe for the ſervice of God; vvith vvhat ſcorpions vvill he at laſt revenge the prophanations ons of thoſe houſes of prayer, which have been ſo ſhamefully abuſed among us?

V. 17. The zeal of thy houſe] Pſal. 69. 9. Zeal is here taken for the heat of indignation conceived at any thing unworthily done or attempted, againſt thoſe we love: as alſo 2 Cor. 7. 11. Sometimes it importeth fervent affection; as Col. 4. 13. Sometimes good intention, though without knowledge or right level. Rom. 10. 2. Phil. 3. 6. Sometimes envy, chap. 7. 9. & 13. 45. & 17. 5. Sometimes for emulation, Gal. 5. 20 So Clemens Romanus ep. ad. Cor. p. 6. 7. ſaith ζῆλος καὶ φθόνος zeal and envy (that is, anger and envy) were the cauſe of Cains killing his brother, no ſuch zeal had Chriſt, who had no ſin; but an holy zeal to the ſervice and honour of God his Father.

eaten me up] As it were a ſecret fire feeding on my thoughts, ſo that it will not ſuffer me to be mindful of my ſelf: as Pſal. 102. 4. & 119. 139.

V. 18. that thou doſt theſe things] Whereby it may appear, that thou haſt divine authority, to do and ſay ſuch extraordinary things.

V. 19. deſtroy this temple] See Mat. 26. 61. If you deſtroy, or when you deſtroy: thus he ſheweth his divine preſcience, foretelling of his paſſion: theſe things he ſpake, not plainly, becauſe he knew they would not have believed, the diſciples could not yet, how much leſſe the vulgar?

V. 20. Fourty and ſix years was this temple in building] This was not the temple built by Solomon. 1 King 6. 37. 2 Chron 3. 1. that was deſtroyed by the Caldeans. 2 Chron, 36. 19. but the ſecond temple built after their return from Babylon, Ezra 4. So much hindred, that it was fourty ſix years in hand. See hereof Iſ. Caſaubon exercit 13. N. 38.

V. 21 of the temple of his body] That is, his humane body, the temple of the Godhead, Coloſ. 2. 9.

V. 22. his diſciples remembred &c.] For then he opened their underſtanding, that they might know what he had ſaid and done, Luke 24. 45. Thus Gods word (which Chriſt compared to ſeed ſowed, Matth 13.) ſometimes lyeth long (as under frozen clods) not appearing, but as dead and loſt; yet in Gods good time it is quickned, and brought to memory again, and the uſe and fruits thereof ſhew an admirable life of the holy Ghoſt working thereon.

V. 23 many believed in his name] With a temporall faith, ſuch as uſually is theirs, who depend on miracles: it was no ſound or juſtifying faith; which Chriſt would not truſt.

V. 24. did not commit himſelf unto them] He truſted them not; neither with the ſecret myſteries of his doctrine, as Chryſoſtom, Auguſtine, and Theophylact conceive; nor with his own ſacred perſon: he did not ſecurely converſe with them, nor did he truſt himſelf with them, as he did with his diſciples, and well known friends, for he knew from the beginning, how they would at laſt betray him, and deliver him into the hands of ſinners to be crucified; which though he willingly permited in the appointed time, yet having many things, as to his manifeſtation to Iſrael, to perform and accompliſh, he declined and avoided as importune untill that time was come, and all things in their time and order, duely and really finiſhed.

he knew all men] What they had in the ſecret of their heart; what they had been, were and would be. chap. 13. 18. & 7. 71.

V. 25. needed not that any] Chriſt being the ſearcher of all hearts, hath no need that any ſhould enform him concerning man.

come from God] Divinely, and extraordinarily ſent to teach us.

V. 3. born again] Or, from above, regenerated by the holy Ghoſt, crucifying the old man; mortifying and aboliſhing the carnall affections, and renewing a man to holineſſe of life; that is to ſay, the whole man, body and ſoul: for as the whole man from his naturall birth is corrupted, ſo muſt the whole man in his regeneration be renewed, 1 Theſ. 5. 23. though that renovation, be not ſo compleated, in this mortal life, but that there are in the beſt men, ſome remains of the old Adam. See Gal. 5. 17. Rom. 7. 24. yet, ſuch is the mercy of God toward his, that whatſoever ſinners were before their regeneration, yet therein all is cleanſed, and ſo waſhed away, that, it ſhall not be imputed to them to condemnation See 1 Cor. 6. 11. this regeneration may be diſcerned by the fruits and effects thereof See Gal. 5. 19, 20.—22. 23. firſt then here note, that the moſt noble birth, or of the moſt holy parents, without new birth, availeth nothing toward ſalvation; no not for them, who could truely ſay, we be Abrahams ſeed, John 8 33. Mat. 3. 9. See 1 Cor. 1. 26. Secondly, ſeeing regeneration is of the whole man, content not thy ſelf when thou findeſt in thee a mortification of ſome evill affections, which poſſibly are but changed for others as bad, as luſt of youth for malice or avarice of Age, &c neither will Agrippa's—half perſwaded to be a Chriſtian, Acts 26. 28. do thee any good; God will not accept any parcell---ſanctity; every part and faculty of man needeth repaire. Thirdly, it muſt incite us to pray, and uſe Gods ordinance for the evidence of our new birth, without which we cannot ſee, nor enter into Gods kingdom: Gods word is the immortal ſeed, 1 Pet. 1. 23. 25. the ſincere milk, by which if we grow, (1 Pet. 2. 1.) our regeneration will appear; for which, we muſt lay aſide all malice, and all guile, hypocriſies, envies, and evill ſpeakings.

ſee the kingdom of God] That is, enter into it, as verſe 5. or underſtand the myſteries of eternall life, and Gods kingdom, of grace here, and glory in the world to come. See 1 Cor. 2. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 50.

V. 4. How can a man] To examine ſpiritual myſteries by carnal reaſon, is a main let to the underſtanding thereof.

V. 5. of water] Of baptiſm the ſacrament of regeneration, which is the ordinary way into the Church and kingdom of God, though his grace be not tied to external means: and it is the contempt, not the privation of the ſacrament which condemneth, See Tit. 3. 5.

ſpirit] Which giveth the inward effect of baptiſm.

kingdom of God] Of grace here, and glory in the life to come. See on verſe 6.

V. 6. borne of the fleſh] The corrupted nature of man, (oppoſite to regeneration) concerning which the Apoſtle ſaith, it cannot inherit the kingdom of God, 1 Cor. 15. 50. the whole ſenſe is; no man can know the myſteries of the kingdom of grace, without a regenerate minde; and therefore no man can be ſaved without regeneration and renovation of the whole man: we are born aliants to the kingdom of God, (Epheſ. 2. 1. &c. 12. 13.) and mere enemies; (Rom. 5. 10.) untill we are born again of water and the holy Ghoſt; hence is it, that the Apoſtle requireth, a new man, a new creature, 1 Cor. 5. 7. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Epheſ. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. the unregenerate man perceiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God, neither can he, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14. the carnal man ſaith Theophylact (in Luke 14) ὁ οὐδὲν ὑπὲρ φύσιν πιστεύων, he believeth nothing ſupernatural: now as the creature can be but once properly created; a man can be but once born; ſo neither can he be more than once regenerate: quomodo enim uterus non poteſt repeti, ſic nec baptiſmus iterari, ſaith Proſper.

is fleſh] Is carnal, ſubject to ſin and death: underſtand herewith, the wiſdom, will and affection of the natural man. See Rom. 7. 14. &c. & 8. 7. why of holy parents, carnal ſons are born. See Auguſt. To. 7. part. 2. de nuptiis & concup. c. 18. of the neceſſity of regeneration. See Proſ. contra. Collator. c. 18.

is ſpirit] Is ſpiritual: ſubject to the ſpirit, ſanctifying man, and ſtiling him ſpiritual; notwithſtanding the remainds of ſin ſtriving againſt the ſpirit, and thoſe works of the fleſh, like the wilde fruits growing on the ſuckers of the ſtock, on which the adopted branches are engrafted, bearing fruits of regeneration.

V. 7. born again] Or from above.

V. 8. wind bloweth where it liſteth] That which the Hebrews call רוח ruach (with them a πολύσημον) the Greeks expreſſe by the word πνεῦμα, ſignifying amongſt other things winde, or a blaſt of winde: ſo Ariſtot. de mundo. Thucid. l. 4. and other authors uſe it: in ſcripture it often ſignifieth the holy Ghoſt; the meaning here is; as the power of God is perceived in the winde moving the air, though we cannot ſee it; ſo is it in the changing and renewing of us, though the manner be hid from us: where it liſteth: ſignifieth, without any reſtraint by the power of man: this manner of ſpeaking is taken from creatures, voluntary moving themſelves, as they ſay, libero ac vago impetu.

V. 9. How can theſe things be?] Chriſt had preached this point unto him, that except a man be regenerate, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God; and Nicodemus is now an example of the ſame: being ſo great an example of the ſame: being ſo great and learned a Scholar, yet being not regenerate, he could not underſtand the very rudiments of that kingdom.

V. 10. and knoweſt not theſe things] Theſe words are quick and reprehenſory: as if he ſaid, it is a foul ſhame for a profeſſed teacher of Iſrael; to be ignorant in the very fundamentals of religion; the more, ſeeing this point is layed down in many places of Scripture, Jer. 31. 19. Ezek. 11. 12. & 36. 26. Pſal 51. 10. circumciſion ſignified it: it is the end of all the law, purity of heart, and ſanctimony of life; it is that which puts difference between ſinful worldlings, and the holy ſons of God. Now, the otherwiſe learned Nicodemus knew not theſe things, becauſe they are no otherwiſe than ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor 2. 14.

V. 11. Verily, verily] ἀμὴν, ἀμήν, the word is from the Hebrew אמן aman, verax, verus, fidelis: and אמן amen, as much as, ſo be it; they uſed it as a ratification of their prayers, Jer. 11 5. and deſiring the fulfilling thereof; ſo Deut. 27. 15. all the people ſhall ſay אמן amen. 70. γένοιτο, let it come to paſſe, or be ſo; ſometimes it was doubled to the more vehement confirmation or alleveration, as Numb. 5. 22. the woman ſhall ſay אמן אמן amen, amen; hence in the Primitive Church after prayers, and ſome other repetitions in their aſſemblies, the people anſwered, Amen, 1 Cor. 14. 16.

how ſhall he ſay, τὸ Ἀμὴν See Revel. 1. 7. ναὶ ἀμὴν, yea, ſo be it. And ſo our Saviour often uſed it doubled, for a vehement aſſeveration; as if he ſaid, faithfully, truely, or aſſuredly it is ſo.

we ſpeak that we do know] In that Chriſt ſaith οἴδαμεν, we know, &c. the cauſe and ſence is, I and all the Prophets (which ſpake by my ſpirit, and of me) well know what we ſpeak and teach; thus joyneth he with their miniſtery; whence appeareth their errour, who would have the authority of ſcriptures to depend on the Church: that were to ſubject the truth of Chriſt to the examination and approbation of men.

that we have ſeen] This is to expreſs the certainty of the Goſpel: becauſe, with us the ſenſe of ſeeing is moſt certain; we uſe to ſay we have ſeen a thing, when we will affirm a certainty of knowledge.

ye receive not our witneſſe] That is, few of you receive it. So chap. 1. 11. his own received him not; that is, few of them received: it hath been the miſery of all times: Lord, who received our report? Iſaiah 53. 1. let us not think the worſe of truth, becauſe it hath few ſincere followers; mans unbelief cannot make void the truth of God. Rom. 3. 3. let them take heed, who out of opinion of new light, contemn the old invariable truth of Chriſt; who will be teachers of the law, and yet underſtand not what they ſpeak, neither whereof they affirm, 1 Tim. 1. 7. It is but juſt with God to ſend them, to their damnation, ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhall believe lies, who receive not the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved. 2 Theſ. 2. 10, 11. read it in Ahabs example. 1 Kings 22. 29. &c.

V. 12. earthly things] Naturall things, as concerning the winde: or in a plain and common manner, as he delivered his heavenly doctrine: for it is moſt true which Chriſoſtom noteth, hom. 26. in regard of his hearers weakneſſe, he attemperateth to them.

V. 13. came down from heaven] By aſſumption of the humane nature, chap. 1. 14.

the Son of man] Chriſt, God and man: Son of man is often put for man. Pſal. 8. 4. Iſa. 51. 12.

which is in heaven] Not becauſe the humane ſubſtance of Chriſt was diffuſed to an ubiquity; but becauſe one and the ſame Son of God, and Son of man, very God of his father, and truely man by the aſſumption of our fleſh and blood, though according to his true humanity, lacaliter tunc eſſet in terrâ, he was then locally on earth, yet according to his deity, which cannot be contained in place, he filled heaven and earth; and was then in heaven, in reſpect thereof, whoſe properties are attributed to the perſon of Chriſt, conſiſting of thoſe two united natures; hereof, See Fulgent. de perſon. Chriſti ad Thraſimund. l. 2.

V. 14. as Moſes lifted up the ſerpent] Numb. 21. 6. As the brazen ſerpent lifted up, had the true form of a ſerpent, but not the venome; ſo had Chriſt the true form and nature, but not the ſin of man: that ſerpent was a ſigne of grace, and a remedy againſt evill, that all who were ſtung with fiery ſerpents, might ſee him, and be healed; ſo was Chriſt lifted upon the croſſe, chap. 12 32. and is now lifted up in the word and ſacraments (Iſa. 49. 22. Gal. 3. 1.) that the faithful may look into heaven after him, and be healed: this he did not openly ſpeak, but remitted his hearers to the old type, as Chryſoſtom noted. Hom. 26. to ſhew the admirable conſent between the Old and New Teſtament; and to intimate, that he went not unwillingly to his paſſion: alſo to help the faith of the weak: if any doubt, how can they who believe in Jeſus crucified, be ſaved? let him conſider how he that but looked on the ſimilitude of a Serpent, was healed; how much more ſhall they, who with true faith look upon Jeſus, the life, through the vaile of his crucified fleſh? there the Serpent ſtung, and the ſerpent healed; here death (whoſe ſting is ſinne, 1 Corinth. 15.) in the firſt Adam, deſtroyed: here the death of the ſecond Adam Chriſt ſaved and gave us life.

V. 15. whoſoever beliveth on him] Whoſoever; without reſpect of perſons (Acts 10. 34. 35.) believeth that Jeſus Chriſt, the true Meſſias, and Saviour of the elect, died for our ſinnes and roſe again for our juſtification Rom 4. 25.) and in aſſurance of the truth of Gods promiſes promiſed in the Goſpel, apprehendeth his particulur intereſt and propriety therein, as chap. 20. 28.

V. 16. For God ſo loved, &c,] In this verſe Chriſt ſheweth theſe four concurrent cauſes of our redemption and ſalvation. 1. The principal, firſt, impulſive; the love of God, which can have no cauſe but it it ſelf. 2. The material, or price of our redemption; his only begotten Son. 3. the inſtrumental faith in Chriſt; that whoſoever believeth in him. 4. the final; eternal life.

the world] That is, mankind, for Chriſt ſpeaketh not here of that common love of God, whereby he willeth the good of conſervation to the creature; ſo he loveth all the creatures; but of his ſpecial love, whereby he willeth man ſhould be ſaved by Chriſt, and he is truely ſaid to love the world, becauſe they whom he loveth to eternal life are in the world, a part of the world, and gathered by his word; and holy Spirit into the body of the Church, out of all ages and parts of the world, God loved all that he made: he loveth not ſinne, which is neither in him, nor of him; he loved a ſinning world (for when we were enemies, he reconciled us, Rom. 5. 10.) but not the ſins of the world: if we ſpeak of Gods peculiar love which is to eternal life; we muſt underſtand the elect onely, oppoſed to that part thereof, concerning which it is ſaid; the whole world lieth in wickedneſſe, 1 John 5. 19. and, I pray not for the world, chap. 17. 9. Chriſt prayed for thoſe whom he loved to ſalvation; that is, for the elect onely, I pray for them, I pray not for the world, for the elect are in the world, not of the world (c. 17. 16.) that is, of that party which lieth in ſin and unbelief; ſo two ſorts of men are intimated, ſub uno mundi nomine; under this one name world (ſaith Proſper) ſicut enim dicitur mundus in impiis, ita dicitur mundus in ſanctis--the wicked are called the world, and here the ſaints are called the world which God loveth, God loveth us, ſuch as we ſhall be by his gift, non quales ſumus noſtro merito. Auguſtin. de C. D. l. 17. c. 4. not ſuch as we are by our deſert; he loved, quod fecerat & elegarat in filio, ſaith the ſame. tr. 110. in John 17. that which he had made. and choſen in his Son, out of whom he loveth no man to eternal life: a Prince may be truely ſaid to love his ſubjects, ſpecially then, when he puniſheth the perverſe, rebellious, and ſeditious among them; and a Phyſitian his patient, ſpecially when he moſt endavoureth to correct the corrupt and malignant humours which diſaffect him: ſo neither can it prejudicate the love of God that he cutteth of and condemneth reprobates, when with ſevere corrections; he fetcheth in, amendeth, and ſaveth thoſe whom he loved and elected from eternity; thus then, the creatour, and Lord of lords, loved the world; that is wretched mankinde diſperſed, upon the face of the earth, without difference of nation, dignity, ſex, or age: all the world with his common love, (of which all have ſome taſt) the elect only, according to the effect thereof, his purpoſe of ſaving them in Chriſt. See more oonc erning the acceptation of the word (world) Auguſtin. To. 7. Contr. Jul. Pelag. l. 6. c. 1.

V. 17. For God ſent not] Ch. 12. 47. God gave, and ſent his Son by his incarnation: he confirmeth that which he ſaid, ſhould not periſh, verſe 16. by declaring the end of his preſent coming into the world.

to condemn the world] Chriſts coming condemneth not, but unbelief and contempt of Chriſt, chap. 9. 39. & 12. 47. he came not now to judge (that ſhal be at his ſecond coming) but to propoſe terms of peace, and mercy; that they might believe and be ſaved.

that all the world through him, &c.] Not only Jews, but Gentiles alſo, as many as ſhould believe in him.

V. 18. Is condemned already] By the ancient ſentence, Gen. 3. 19. & 2. 17. Gal. 3. 10. which muſt needs ſtand, except it be reverſed by Chriſt apprehended by faith; ſo is the believer abſolved and pardoned; but the unbeliever (by nature the child of wrath, dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, Epheſ. 2. 1.) ſtandeth already condemned, as Chryſoſtom ſaith, κἂν μὴ τῷ πράγματι τέως, ἀλλὰ τῇ ψήφῳ if not actually and declaratively, yet in the (univerſal) ſentence, on Adam; and in reſpect of his own actuall ſinnes; for whoſoever ſinneth, is guilty before God, and ſo under puniſhment.

in the name of, &c.] That is, in Chriſt. See chap. 1. 12. in the name of, &c. here importeth, in Chriſt, named and being ſo, preached and declared to be the Son of God; he that believeth not in ſacred Name, cannot but periſh, becauſe there is no other name given under heaven, whereby we muſt be ſaved, Acts 4. 12. and indeed he that believeth not in Chriſt, hath made him a lyar, becauſe he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son, 1 John. 5. 10. Mat. 3. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 17, 18. Mat. 17. 5.

the only begotten] All the Saints are Gods children by adoption in Chriſt; but he is the only begotten Son, by nature. See on chap 1. 14.

V. 19. The condemnation] The cauſe of condemnation.

their deeds were evil] Mans wickedneſſe is the cauſe of his rejecting the Goſpel of Chriſt, (which as a light diſcovereth it, and convinceth ſinners) and his neglecting and hating the ſame either in the word of truth, or miniſtery thereof: So Ahab, ſold unto ſinne, hated Michaiah, 1 Kings 22. and inceſtuous Herodias John Baptiſt.

V. 20. Hateth the light] This is a proverbiall ſpeech, which Chriſt accommodateth to his preſent purpoſe which was to ſhew the immediate cauſe of the Jews unbelief, rejection of the Goſpel, and their not coming to Chriſt, the light, which was their ſinne and incorrigible wickedneſſe, ſin would be concealed in darkneſſe; it abhorreth nothing more than the light which diſcovereth its deformity, which is ſuch as cannot hurt, except it be loved, nor poſſiblybe be loved, if clearly ſeen. Ahab took Eliah for his enemy. 1 Kings 21. 20. becauſe he diſcovered and reproved his ſinne: ſtill truth begets us enemies, the word of God to the wicked, is as a true glaſſe to the ugly; you offer an odious affront if you ſhew it them.

reproved] Or diſcovered, the ſinners own conſcience reproveth him, and therefore loveth the darkneſſe, that not only others might not ſee his ſins, (in which he is reſolved to live) but that his ſelf might not know them, that he might more ſecurely enjoy the pleaſures thereof for a ſeaſon.

V, 21. Doth the truth] That doth ſincerely and holily.

wrought in God] As they do, who ſet God only before their eyes, and follow the rule of his word: *hoc autem in Deo facimus, quod Deo in nobis faciente, datur nobis ut faciamus. Fulgent. de præd. ad Monim. l.*1. and we do this in God; which, God working in us, giveth us ability to do.

V. 22. The land of Judea] Into the territories of Judea: from Jeruſalem into the villages, and places neer.

and baptized] By his diſciples Miniſtry. See chap. 4. 2.

V. 23. baptizing in Enon] A town in the tribe of Manaſſe, neer Jordan (there was another of this name neer Damaſcus, Ezek. 47. 17.) and neer Scythopolis on the other ſide of Jordan (See Iſ. Caſaubon Exercit. 13. N. 42.) and Salim. See Jerom. de loc. Hebr. a fine.

V. 24. John was not yet caſt into priſon] See Mat. 14. 3. &c. Mark 6. 17. &c. Luke 3. 19.

V. 25. And the Jews] Chryſoſtom readeth μετὰ Ἰουδαίου---with a Jew: ſo the Syriac, with a certain Jew, very likely that the controverſie began with one, and after grew more generall? ſo are national quarrels ofttimes kindled, by one or ſome few, which afterward are, from ſmal ſparks, fomented and blown up into maſterleſs flames.

about purifying] How they might be purified before God, which the waſhings under the law did, and baptiſme now doth repreſent.

V. 26. was with thee beyond Jordan] They were affected with perverſe zeal and emulation, fearing that their maſters credit ſhould be impaired by Chriſt.

to whom thou beareſt witneſſe] Chap. 1. 7. 34. they come with this complaint, that all the people now ran after him whom their maſter baptized; as fearing an eclipſe of their maſters honour, by his interpoſition, to whom (it ſeemed to them) their maſter had lent his light.

V. 17. A man can receive nothing] Or, take unto himſelf; nothing, no gift: no man ought to uſurpe a miniſtry, which God hath not given him, Heb. 5. 4. as the Syriac interpreter hath it, ex voluntate ſui ipſius, of his own will; or at his own pleaſure, nor can be fit for it, except God give the ability, 2 Cor. 3. 6.

V. 28. I am not the Chriſt] Chap. 1. 20. See Luke 3. 15, 16. and John 1. 20. &c.

V. 29. is fulfilled] In that he heard the voice of Chriſt the bridegroom ſpeaking to his ſpouſe the Church: it is as if he ſaid, now my work is done; my office fulfilled; whereof I rejoyce. I have done my part and rejoyce in the deſired effect.

V. 30. He muſt encreaſe] I came to prepare his way, and to manifeſt himſelf to Iſrael: the confluence of people to hear and follow him is the end of my proclaiming him, and teſtifying concerning him, he muſt be exalted: and all the people ſhal follow him, I muſt be obſcured; as a ſtar at the riſing of the ſun.

V. 31. Is earthly] Nothing but man, meer dregges in compariſon with Chriſt.

and ſpeaketh of the earth] Savoureth not the things of God, but of men: as Mat. 16. 23. his doctrine is grounded on earthly or carnal principles: ſuch are we all by nature, and cannot receive, or apprehend the things of the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2. 14. untill we are illuminated by the ſpirit of adoption and regeneration.

V. 32. No man receiveth his teſtimony] That is, as Chryſoſtom, interpreteth ὀλίγοι, very few believe in Chriſt, concerning whom John bare witneſſe, that he is the Son of God, if he had ſimply meant, none; why ſhould he have added, he that receiveth his teſtimony hath ſealed, &c. verſe 33. and how ſhould we think that the Diſciples and others were not herein concerned? but this he ſaith, to ſhew his diſciples, why they, and the other Jews yet believed not, becauſe Chriſt was heavenly and they earthly.

V. 33. He that hath received his teſtimony] That is, διδασκαλίαν αὐτοῦ: Theophylact, the doctrine of the goſpel.

hath ſet to his ſeal] See Rom. 3. 4. Theophylact interpreteth it by ἔδειξεν, and ἐβεβαίωσεν he hath demonſtrated, and confirmed, that God is true; he hath ſo profeſſed it, as if he had ſet to his ſeal for a more certain confirmation of his writing, or that which is given under his hand.

V. 34. He whom God hath ſent] God herein ſent his Son, as the Sun ſendeth out his rayes to the earth; in that they are not in their emiſſion divided from their fountain; ita de ſpiritu ſpiritus, & de deo deus, ſaith Tertullian Apol. cap. 21. ſo is he Spirit of Spirit, and God of God, that there is but one truth, as one God, ſo that he who believeth him that is ſent of God believeth God; as on the contrary, he that believes not in him that is ſent, believeth not God who ſent him. See Luke 10. 16.

ſpeaketh the words of God] This ſheweth a reaſon why they ſhould believe him, becauſe he ſpeaketh onely the words of God; which is the onely ground of faith in which there can be no falſhhood; opinion may be on probabilities; but faith is on certainties, becauſe they are revealed by God, who cannot deceive. See Tit. 1. 2.

not the ſpirit by meaſure] But an unmeaſurable fulneſſe, Coloſ. 1. 19. & 2. 9. he meaneth by Spirit, the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghoſt: to every one of us is given grace according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt: Epheſ. 4. 7. but his powerful working is, as Chryſoſtom ſpeaks, ἀμέτρητος, unmeaſurable: for he hath τὸ πνεῦμα ὁλόκληρον, and οὐσιωδῶς, the whole ſpirit, ſubſtantially: the Prophets and Apoſtles had, and the faithful Miniſters have a meaſure; but Chriſt, the fulneſſe whence all receive grace and truth, hath it above all meaſure. See Rom. 12. 6. Epheſ. 4. 7. &c.

V. 35, The father loveth the ſon] Matth. 11. 27. 10. Matth. 3. 17. Mat. 15, 5. 2. Pet. 1. 17. the father loveth the ſon, with an incomprehenſible love, infinitely; his love not being an accident in him, but the eſſence of him, 1 John. 4. 8.

all things unto his hand] That is, hath given the rule and power over all things in heaven and earth, to him. See Mat. 28. 18.

V. 36. He that beleiveth, &c.] Hab. 2. 4. 1 John 5. 10.

hath everlaſting life] The Syriac interpreter hath it, eſt ei vita, quæ eſt in æternum, it ſeemeth indeed to expreſſe a preſent and indefeaſable intereſt and poſſeſſion; not onely apprehenſible by hope, but even now in being to preſent ſenſe, for as much as the elect regenerate do now feel the power of the life of Chriſt in them, and the dayly motions of his ſpirit working the decay and death of ſin, and enabling to ſome comfortable meaſure of ſanctification. See Gal. 2. 20. they by experience know, how Chriſt is made of God, their wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification and redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30 wherein his kingdom is eſtabliſhed in them; that is, the kingdom of grace and life eternal, the kingdom of life and glory begun here on earth to be perfected in heaven.

ſhall not ſee life] Shall not enjoy; no nor ſo much as lay an eye upon it. See verſe 3. & chap. 8. 24. he ſhall neither be ſenſible of the life of grace here, nor of the life of glory in the world to come; the Syriac interpreter giveth it, qui non acquieſcit filio: he that reſteth not, or dependeth not on the Son, in faith for his juſtification: but ſeeketh righteouſneſſe by the works of the law, &c. he ſhall not be ſaved.

but the wrath of God abideth on him] For none but thoſe only who are juſtified by faith in Chriſt have peace toward God, Rom. 5. 1. out of Chriſt there can be no reconciliation, by the wrath of God; he means the whole curſe of the law, and whatſoever it threatneth impenitent ſinners. Salvian expreſſeth it well, de Gub. Dei. l. 1. ira eſt autem divinitatis, pœna peccati: Gods anger is the puniſhment of ſin, and as Fulgentius. de incarn. & grat. ira igitur ejus, noſtræ iniquitatis eſt meritum, his anger is the deſert of our iniquity, he ſaith not Gods anger ſhall come, but it abideth: all are born children of wrath. Eph. 2. 1. becauſe in ſin: but this is done away in our regeneration, wherein we are reconciled to God in Chriſt only. See Acts 4. 12. Rom. 5. 1. but it abideth on the impenitent, and unbelievers, becauſe they are not reconciled to God by faith in Chriſt.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſe 1. WHen therefore the Lord knew] When Jeſus knew; that is, Jeſus knowing what the Phariſees heard, and conſulted, how they might deſtroy him, which was the uſual reſult of their conſultation concerning him, and his actions which they with an impious deligence obſerved, that they might have ſomthing whereby to calumniate and accuſe him.

V. 2. Ieſus himſelf baptized not] he baptized inwardly by the Holy Ghoſt giving the effect of the outward baptiſme here ſpoken of: and as Optatus l. 5. ſaith, he baptized indeed; but by the Apoſtles hands, quibus leges baptiſmatis dederat, to whom he gave the laws (or rites) of baptiſme; ſo Tertul. de bapt. c. 21. ſemper dicitur is facere cui præminiſtratur, he is ever ſaid to do a thing, for whoſe ſervice it is done.

V. 3. he left the Iews] to avoid their rage: that mean muſt be held in our miniſtery, neither to be diſcouraged by cauſeleſſe fear, nor raſhly to provoke, or expoſe our ſelves to enemies.

V. 4. He muſt needs go] It was his way from Judea to Galilee, and lay between them.

V. 5. A city of Samaria] See on Luke 17. 11. Herod, in honour of Auguſtus Cæſar, called it Sebaſte, according to the Greek. Iero. To. 1. Epitaph. Paul. Chriſt thus leaving the proud and malicious Phariſees, opened the treaſures of grace and mercy to the deſpiſed Samaritans.

Sychar] Sichem, or Shekem. Gen. 33. 18. שכם ſhechem 70. Σικίμων. See Gen. 48. 22. Joſh. 24. 32. ſome think it called ſince, Neapolis, Naples, or Naploza. See Iſ. Caſaubon exer. 13.

that Iacob gave] Gen. 33. 19. & 48, 22. See Gen. 50. 24. Joſh. 24 32.

V. 6. Sate thus on the well] Weary as he was; or, becauſe he was weary, for he travelled with his diſciples on foot; & in the form of a ſervant, which for our ſake he had aſſumed, would have experience of all our infirmities without ſin, therefore he hungred thirſted, was weary, &c.

the ſixth hour] About noon: in the heat of the day.

V. 7. give me to drink] Thus he that is rich and Lord of all, became poor for us, that he might make us rich, 2 Cor. 8. 9. we had loſt all right and intereſt in the creatures, ſo that we could not ſo much as (in our own right) take a cup of cold water, but as uſurpers: untill Chriſt reſtored us that intereſt and right in the creatures: which we forfeited by our attainder in Adam: and thus he asketh, who giveth to all creatures. Pſalm 104. 27. as to refreſh himſelf in his wearineſſe and thirſt;

ſo ſpecially to give occaſion of diſcourſe, for her ſalvation and many others.

V. 8. Into the city] Sychar, verſe 5. that they might there be accommodated with meat, or other neceſſaries which they wanted.

V. 9. For the Jews have no dealing, &c.] The Samaritans claimed kindred of the Jews in their proſperity, but in their publique aſſlictions, would never acknowledge them Joſeph. Antiq. Iud. l. 11. c. 8. See alſo l. 9. c. ult. the Jews eſteemed them wicked and prophane, likewiſe the Samaritans, thought themſelves polluted, if they touched a Jew. See 2 Kings 17. 26. &c. they mutually hated and deſpiſed each other; hence was that blaſphemous calumny againſt Chriſt, whom the Jews called Samaritan, &c. John 8. 48.

V. 10. gift of God] That excellent gift ſpecified. chap. 3. 16. or chap. 7. 38, 39. or himſelf ſent to convert her; or the opportunity of ſalvation hereby offered her.

living water] The graces of the holy Spirit, which ſhall never fail. See c. 7. 39. Jer. 2. 13. Joel 3 18. Zach. 13. 1. Cyril underſtandeth here, the love of God, and the quickning gift of the ſpirit, ſo Theophylact, τὴν χάριν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the grace of the holy ſpirit; which faileth not, but bringeth to eternal life,

V. 11. Nothing to draw with] And the Jews and Samaritans held it a pollution, to uſe the veſſels of each other: this it ſeemeth, ſhe ſpake, as deſpiſing and contradicting that which he ſaid.

V. 12. Art thou greater, &c.] As if ſhe had ſaid; whom makeſt thou thy ſelf? Jacob that great Patriarch was content with this water, for himſelf and his family; what better water ſpeak you of?

than our father Jacob?] Thus theſe mixed and degenerate people bragged. (See 2 Kings 17. 24) thus hypocrites ever boaſt of their fathers and anceſters. See c. 8.

V. 13. whoſoever drinketh of this, &c.] As if he ſaid, hence you may gather whether I am greater than Jacob or not, if you underſtand the difference between that myſtical and ſpiritual water which ſhall nouriſh to eternity (which Jacob could not give) and this which Jacob gave his ſons, which can onely quench a preſent thirſt, but not free you from a future.

V. 14. The water that I ſhall give him] The grace and ſpirit of regeneration, of which v. 10. & c. 7 38. 39.

ſhall never thirſt] It ſhal ſo refreſh the weary ſoul, that all deſire of good ſhall be ſatisfied, in the preſence of God: ſee Pſal. 39. 8, 9. Iſa. 49. 10.

V. 15. Give me this water] It is likely that ſhe perceived that he ſpake of ſpirituall water, but under the notion of a Jew, ſhe was diſpoſed to ſlight all that he ſpake: ſo hard it is to believe their word, of whoſe authority we are not well perſwaded; probably ſhe ſpake this ironically; this alſo is a an example of that which Chriſt ſaid. c. 3. 3, except a man be born again, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God.

V. 16. Go, call thy huſband] Chriſt having a while patiently born with her perverſe anſwers, will now ſmite her conſcience with the ſenſe of her ſin, and his Divine Majeſty before whom ſhe deported her ſelf ſo ſecurely and audaciouſly: ſo are over-confident ſinners to be wounded that they may be healed, ſhe knew that ſhe lived in ſinne, yet her conſcience could not awake, until a divine hand ſeemed to touch the wounds thereof: So 2 Sam. 12. 13. here alſo the tender mercy of Chriſt is to be obſerved: he ſaid not, go thou adultreſſe, and call thy partner in ſin, thy pretended husband, that you may hear your dooms, (as 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10.) but he mildely ſtileth him husband, whom he knew to be an adulterer, that ſhe might neither preſume any longer to conteſt with the ſearcher of hearts, nor deſpair of his mercy, whoſe lenity in reproving, ſpake him merciful to cure and amend; not buſie, or malicious to finde fault, or accuſe.

V. 17. I have no huſband] Thus ſecurely dallieth ſhe in ſo great an intereſt as her own ſalvation; it is hard for ſinners (not onely aſleep, but) dead in ſinnes and tranſgreſſions, to awake at the firſt call of God and to acknowledge his voice therein: ſhe ſuppoſing that ſhe talked with meer man, thought with her womaniſh artificies to elude him, denying her matrimony, and diſſembling her adultery; but no captions or fallacies can deceive God.

thou haſt ſaid well] Chriſt telleth her plainly of her faults (who could not before underſtand what he ſaid) in mentioning the fifth man, whom ſhe now had in place of an husband, but truely an adulterer.

V. 19. I perceive that thou art a Prophet] The mentioning of her ſin, ſmiteth her with a greater reverence of Chriſt, as of a Prophet, who could know thoſe errours of her former life.

V. 20. in this mountain] Mount Garizim, near Shekem. Jud. 9. 7. in which Sanaballah, by Alexander of Macedon his leave, built them a temple. Joſeph antiq. l. 11. c. 8. See Iſ. Caſaubon exer. 13.

Jeruſalem is the place, &c.] See Deut. 12. 5, 6. 1 Kings 8. 29. 2 Kings 21. 4. 1 Kings 14. 21. thus would ſhe divert the diſcourſe concerning her ſin and ſhame, by embarking in a national controverſie, which had long been handed between the Jews and Samaritans.

V. 21. nor at Jeruſalem] The publike worſhip of God ſhall be no more reſtrained to that place, which was appointed thereto for a time, to exerciſe their faith in expectation of Chriſt in whom alone we can appear acceptable to God. See Mal. 1. 11. 1 Tim. 2. 8. Epheſ. 2. 14, 15.

V. 22. Ye worſhip ye know not what] See 2 Kings 17. 29 &c. this Chriſt ſeemeth to ſpeak that he might check her inſolency: as if he had ſaid; you make compariſons with the Iſrael of God, who worſhip you know not what: what ſkilleth it, where they worſhip, who are ignorant both of the object and manner of the true worſhip? devotion born of ignorance, and blinde obedience, are ſtrangers in the kingdom of God, the father of lights, James 1. 17. our Saviour ſaith, John 17. 3. this is life eternall, that they might know thee, the onely true God, and Ieſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent; it is true concerning the heavenly Jeruſalem, which was ſaid of the fort of Sion, 2 Sam. 5. 8. the blinde and the lame ſhall not come into the houſe; the ignorant, who know not Chriſt, the true light, John 1. 9. and ſuch as halt between God and Baal, 1 Kings 18. 21. therefore as God began his work of creation Gen. 1. 3. with a, let there be light, ſo beginneth he the admirable work of our regeneration, by his ſpirit of illumination, calling us out of darkneſſe, into his marvelous light, 1 Pet. 2. 9. See Rom. 10. 14. 15. 17.

for ſalvation is of the Iews] He ſeemeth to allude to Iſa. 2. 3. the meaning is, that the doctrine of ſaving health, is that which the Prophets have taught.

V. 23. in ſpirit and in truth] Spirit is here ſet in oppoſition to ceremonies, which are called carnal, Hebr. 7 16 which prefigured that which Chriſt performed: he requireth now (ſaith Euthymius) non corporaliter, ſed ſpiritualiter immolantes, thoſe that ſacrifice not bodily, but ſpiritually; remiſſion of ſinnes being accompliſhed in Chriſts one oblation of himſelf once offered, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for the ſins of the living or the dead. See Hebr. 10. 18. there ramaineth ſtill ſpirituall ſacrifice of prayer and praiſes by us to be offered, 1 Pet. 2. 5. Revel. 8. 4. but no more bodily, proper or externall ſacrifice: he will be worſhipped now, not in the figure (as under the lavv) but in the truth prefigured: and herein he ſecretly taxeth the Samaritans blinde errour, for that they held no certainty from Gods word, neither was their pretended zeal and devotion according to truth and knowledge, both which are fundamentall to the acts of religion. See Iſa. 8. 20. and in this compariſon, Chriſt ſheweth the preeminence of the Jewiſh religion, grounded then on Gods infallible word, and the vanity of the Samaritan ſuperſtition and will-worſhip, built on traditions, and opinions of men, which are ever uncertain: for ignorance of the truth, as Lactantius well noteth, maketh incertam, labentemque ſententiam, an uncertain, and ſlippery aſſertion: will-worſhip is no religious act; neither are good intentions enough; we muſt be certain of Gods revealed will, to direct us in his worſhip, otherwiſe we cannot do it in faith.

V. 24. God is a ſpirit] 2 Cor. 3. 17 theſe words ſhew the reaſon of that he laſt ſpake concerning ſpiritual adoration: God requireth adoration in ſpirit and truth, becauſe his ſelf is a ſpirit, and truth: God is an incorporeal ſubſtance, inviſible, incomprehenſible, and he is the veritas prima, the light, in whom is no darkneſſe. 1 John 1. 5. therefore he requireth ſuch adoration as agreeth with his own nature: he commanded bodily worſhip to Iſrael in the ceremonial law, which was to be as a ſchoolmaſter, to bring them to Chriſt, whom the ceremonies thereof prefigured, Gal. 3. 24.—— untill the time appointed of the father, Gal. 4. 2. and he confined them to Jeruſalem, and the temple there; but now in the fulneſſe of time, Chriſt ſheweth that his worſhip ſhould no longer be confined to Jeruſalem, then all things therein prefigured Chriſt, and the work of mans redemption by him to be wrought, ſhould be accompliſhed, the Jews therefore, though the peculiar people of God, and in their ſacrifices, doing thoſe bodily things, which God for a time commanded them to do, except they, by the ſpiritual eye of faith, looked to Chriſt the end of the law, neither worſhipped God aright, neither were by thoſe legal rights cleanſed from their ſinnes, for it is not poſſible that the blood of buls and goats, ſhould take away ſinnes, Hebrews 10. 4. they therefore who to this day adhere to the antiquated ceremonines of the law, not believing in Chriſt, who did indeed come in the fulneſſe of time, and fulfil all things concerning mans redemption therein prefigured, cleave to a killing letter and miniſtration of condemnation.

muſt worſhip him in ſpirit] This ſheweth wherein Gods ſervice principally conſiſteth; excluding the Jewiſh antiquated ceremonies, but not that bodily worſhip which is requiſite, either for our acknowledgement of God before men, order in his publick worſhip, or the ſtirring up our own affections in private.

V. 25. which is called Chriſt] Theſe words (omitted by the Syriac) ſeem to be the Evangeliſts interpretation of the name Meſſias: though the Samaritan religion was very impure, confuſed, and mingled with ſundry errours, yet held they this principle concerning the coming of the Meſſias: ſo manifeſt was this light, that it ſhined to them that ſate in darkneſſe, the very heathens, the Samaritans out of Moſes writings. Deu. 18 18 the impious Balaam. Num. 24. 17. and the devil his ſelf acknowledged ſome ſenſe thereof: it is probable that this woman underſtanding by the ſpeech of Chriſt, that ſome extraordinary change of the Church, and Eccleſiaſtical ſtate was nigh, preſently thought of the Meſſias; the rather, becauſe the marks of his coming, ſpecially the departure of the Scepter from Judah appeared to the world: in her referring the certainty of all things in religious worſhip to the Magiſtery of Chriſt, preferring him before Moſes and all the Prophets, ſhe is a good preſident, where we may learn in him to look for all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, Coloſ. 2. 3. and to hear him Mat. 17. 5.

V. 26. I am he] When the Jews preſſed him, ſaying, how long doeſt thou make us doubt (or hold us in ſuſpenſe?) if thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly, chap. 10. 24. He anſwered not ſo poſitively; but here he manifeſteth himſelf: he that ſaw all hearts, knew that the Jews asked not to beleeve and be ſaved, but captiouſly, and to find ſome calumny againſt him; and that this preſent hearer ſhould convert, and be a means of the converſion of many others, when ſhe ſhould know who it was that talked with her. Chriſt is never wanting, where he knoweth the revelation of himſelf will profit to ſalvation, chap. 6. 64. where his Goſpel is hid, it is hid to them that periſh, 2 Cor. 4. 4.

V. 27. Upon this] Even as he ſpake theſe words:

came his diſciples] From Sychar, verſe 5, 8. into which they went to buy meat: thus long by Gods providence they were abſent, but ſo ſoon as he had declared himſelf to be Chriſt, they came; leſt out of zeal, not yet well informed, they might (as ſometimes they endeavoured, Mat. 19 13, 14. Mark 10. 13. &c.) hinder a work of mercy.

V. 28. left her water pot] Having a taſte of thoſe waters of life of which Chriſt ſpake, ſhe quickly forgat her thirſt and ſecular neceſſity, which brought her out to Jacobs Wel; and haſted into the city, to draw others to Chriſt: when our affections are indeed taken up to things above (Col. 3 1. &c.) our worldly cares in a great meaſure, fall off like Eliiahs mantle when he was taken up to heaven, 2 Kings 2. 13. See Pſal. 69. 9 and 102. 4. Mat. 17. 4. Mat. 4. 20, 22. Mat. 16. 27. Job 23. 12. Pſalm 19. 10. and 119. 127.

V. 29. Come ſee a man] Such is the excellency of heavenly treaſures (ever moſt diffuſive of themſelves) if one find them, there is no reſt until he communicate the ſame to others: if one find any ſecular treaſure, he will carefully conceal it; becauſe the more communicate therein, the leſſe muſt every ſharer have: but the more by thee are brought to Chriſt, the more thou haſt of that divine riches. She ſaith not, go out and ſee a man, &c. but come and ſee: the ſeed of this knowledge cannot lie dead in our hearts. See Pſalm 11*6*. 10 2 Cor. 4. 13. It is like the widows oyl, 2 Kings 4. 5, 6. encreaſed by pouring out: they have but a doubtful ſhare in Chriſt, who pretending to ſend others to him, will not go themſelves: nor doth ſhe take upon her to define, or teach; ſhe onely leadeth them to hear Chriſt, contented to perſwade them to ſee what ſhe had found.

all things that ever I did] My great and many ſins: that is, multa quæ erant occulta, Euthymius: many things which were ſo reſerved, that I am confident, he could have told me all; thus ſhe ſeemeth, not to ſpare her own reputation, that ſhe might thereby bring others to Chriſt. See 1 Tim. 1. 15. Acts 22. 3. 1 Cor. 15 9. Gal. 1. 13.

V. 30. went out of the city] Out of Sychar, verſe 5. It was by the inſtinct of Gods Spirit, that they came, therefore the vility of the reporter hindred them not: we ought not to have the Goſpel in reſpect of perſons, nor ſo much to regard, who ſpeaketh, as what is ſpoken: they have little affection to beleeve in Chirſt, who are ſo intent to the meſſengers perſonal failings, that they thereby chiefly value their meſſage: theſe do not object her former ſins, or infamy, becauſe they were willing by any means to be led to Chriſt: a contrary mind was in thoſe who ſaid to the man that had been blind, John 9. 34. thou art altogether born in ſin, and doſt thou teach us?

V. 31. Maſter eat] Of theſe things which we have bought. This they ſaid becauſe Chriſt (ſubject to human infirmities and neceſsities for the time aſſumed) was weary with his journey ver. 6. and it was now about noone: therefore they out of their care for their Maſter, pray him to refreſh himſelf with ſuch viands as they had bought for him and themſelves.

V. 32. I have meat to eat that ye know not of] That which I moſt deſire; or more hunger for than meat; to wit, that I may do the will of God, in ſaving ſinners. See Job 23. 12. becauſe he would make his diſciples teachers of the word; he thus teacheth them by his own example, to have a greater care of others ſalvation, than of their own bodily neceſsities; and of the kingdom of God, than of all worldly emoluments: he ſaith not, I do not hunger; but I have meat, &c. thus would he erect their thoughts, and make them attentive to that great work, which they were preſently to ſee in the converſion of the Samaritans: thus would he teach all, rightly to order their deſires: firſt for Gods Kingdom, and then for things neceſſary to this preſent life: this one thing duely obſerved; would both open the windows of heaven to pour us out bleſsings, and ſupplies of all neceſſaries, and make our ſtore a bleſſing, which without this one method ſo often proveth a meer curſe and occaſion of damnation to many.

V. 33. hath any man brought him ought, &c.] They could underſtand nothing but concerning bodily food: ſo hard is it to raiſe the thoughts above carnal reaſon. See alſo Mat. 16. 7. John 11. 11.

V. 34. to do the will of him] That is, to proſecute the calling of the Samaritans to the knowledge of the Goſpel, and to ſalvation. See c. 6 40. which he deſired more than bodily food: a document is here to the Miniſters, of diligence, and fervency, in the execution of their charge; and alſo of conſolation to us all; Chriſt who then ſo much zealed the ſalvation of Samaritans then to be called, hath not leſſe care for us whom he hath called.

V. 35. Yet four moneths] ἔτι τετράμηνόν ἐστι, The Syriac interpreteth, poſt quatuor menſes; after four moneths: it is an Hebrew manner of expreſsion; as Jonah 3. 4 עוד ארבעים יום hod arbahim jom; yet fourty dayes, Aquila, Symmachus, &c. τεσσαράκοντα, fourty dayes. See Auguſtin. de C. D. l 18. c. 44.

white already to harveſt] Mat. 9. 37. The ſpiritual harveſt is now ripe, as Luke 10. 2. therefore as the ripe corn cannot bear delay (without the owners great loſſe) but muſt be gathered in, ſo muſt the Jews and Gentiles now ready for Gods kingdom: by regions white to the harveſt, he meaneth, (as Chryſoſtom, Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. interpret) τὸ πλῆθος τῶν προσερχομένων Σαμαρειτῶν, the multitude of the Samaritans coming to him; and their chearful minds, ready to beleeve: Cyril more generally and better underſtandeth, thoſe who being prepared by the voice of the Prophets, were to be inſtructed in the faith of Chriſt: we may not unaptly ſay of them as Ambroſ. l. 10. ep. 8... ſaith of Eliah; Prophetam Domini agnoſcebant corvi, quem non agnoſcebant Judæi, paſcebant corvi, quem genus illud perſequebatur: the ravens acknowledged the Prophet of the Lord, whom the Iews acknowledged not: the ravens fed him whom this generation perſecuted.

V. 36. that reapeth, receiveth wages] The doctrine of the Prophets, is compared to ſowing, and the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, to gathering of ripe fruits; in either, the faithful ſervant ſhall have his reward.

V. 38. other men laboured] Meaning the Prophets, and John Baptiſt. See on verſe 36. Moſes, the Fathers, Prophets, and Teachers, have laboured very much in teaching and inſtructing this ſtiff-necked and obſtinate people, drawing them from Idolatry unto the true ſervice of the Lord, expounding the law declaring the promiſes of God, concerning their expected Meſſias and Saviour, &c. now the Iews being hereby prepared toward ſalvation, the Apoſtles were ſent to perfect the work, by gathering beleevers to Chriſt, which by the power of the Holy Spirit, they admirably performed after Chriſts aſcenſion, as Acts 2. 41. when there were added to the Church of Chriſt in one day, about 3000. ſouls. Here Chriſt ſeemeth to propoſe two arguments, or motives to their miniſtration. Firſt, the examples of the foregoing Prophets who ſowed the ſeed of the Goſpel. Secondly, the utility and greater facility of the work: all know that it is more eaſie to reape, than to prepare the earth and ſow, and that the profit accrewing to the husbandman is in the harveſt.

V. 39. many of the Samaritans, &c.] This was a præludium to the calling of the Gentiles; as were, the coming of the Wiſe men to ſeek Chriſt, and the Centurion, &c. Mat. 8. 5. howbeit the fulneſſe of the time for their general calling, being not yet come, he gave in charge to his diſciples, not to go into the cities of the Samaritans, &c. Mat. 10. 5 for he was a Miniſter of the circumciſion, Rom. 15. 8. ſent ſpecially to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael. Mat. 15. 24. therefore he would not yet give the Jews matter of offence.

V. 40. beſought him that he would tarry] They who have any true and reall ſenſe of their intereſt in that which the Goſpel propoſeth to them cannot but love and deſire their company and preſence who preach the ſame: therefore the Samaritans, hearing the gracious words of Chriſt himſelf, deſired to entertain him: Paul deſired to die, that he might be with him, Phil. 1. 23.

V. 41. more believed] For faith is by hearing Rom 10. 17. which, whoever planteth and watereth, God giveth, 1 Cor. 3. 7. For Chriſt ſpent thoſe two dayes, (verſe 40.) teaching them the myſteries of ſalvation by Chriſt to be now ſhortly after to be divulged not to the Jews onely, but alſo to the Samaritans and all other nations of the world for the remiſſion of their ſins, comfort, and ſalvation: and it is very probable, which ſome conjecture, that in that time he reſolved them concerning their national queſtion, about the place of true worſhip; and on that occaſion he might teach them many things concerning the Law, Temple, Worſhip of God, and the Meſſias; opening the Ceremonies of the Law typifying him, and the Oracles of the Prophets, foretelling thoſe things which were to be accompliſhed by him: and no wonder if many beleeved on him who preached with that divine evidence and fulneſſe of the Holy Spirit, which not onely ſounded in their eares; but converted their hearts, and begat faith and obedience in them.

V. 42 not becauſe of thy ſaying] λαλιὰν; Commonly importing talkativeneſſe: Suidas interpreteth it by δημηγορία; which Budæus expreſſeth by the oratorical fluentneſſe of tongue in thoſe who are more ſtudious to pleaſe, than to profit: as Suidas inſtanceth in Arceſilaus, ſatis in loquendo liber; as the Hebrews aptly expreſſed it by איש דברים iſh debarim, a man of words; that is, eloquent, as Exod. 4 10. So Cant. 4. 3. מדברך midbarech thy ſpeech is pleaſant: where the 70. give it by the word here uſed, ἡ λαλία σȣ thy ſpeech, &c. God, complying with our infirmities, hath many wayes and means to bring us to beleeve: he will provoke the Jews by emulation of the Gentiles, Rom. 11. 11. others, by the honeſt and harmleſſe converſation of profeſſours, 1 Pet. 3. 1. Some by the ordinary means, preaching of the word and adminiſtration of the Sacraments: ſome by the authority and credit of the Church; whereas, who, or whatſoever the occaſion be, the word of God is the ground on whoſe certain authority we reſt, and for which we beleeve: as here, at the womans report, they beleeved, and came forth: but all that ſerved onely to bring them to Chriſt: ſo ſaith Auguſtin. Tract. 15. in Joh. Chriſt is preached to thoſe who are without, and yet not Chriſtians; by Chriſtian friends, tanquam illa muliere, hoc eſt, Eccleſiâ, nunciante, as it were that woman, that is, the Church, declaring, one might well ſay of himſelf, I had not believed the Goſpel, except I had believed the Church: becauſe the voice of the Church (as this woman the Samaritans) firſt moved him to come to Chriſt: not that he finally built his faith on the authority of men, much leſſe preferred it before the authority of Gods Word; but becauſe he acknowledgeth the means (the Miniſtry of man) by which God brought him to beleeve his divine Word, which onely is infallible; as a man ſhut up in ſome dark Labyrinth; being thence led out by ſome obſcure lamp carried before him, to the clear and open ſun, might truly ſay, I had not come to the light of the ſun, except I had followed this lamp; yet could it not be thence concluded, that now in the ſun-ſhine, he muſt ſtill truſt to the light of the lamp, or that the ſuns light ſhould depend on the dimme light thereof; human reaſon looketh on immediate means and occaſions as a cauſe ſine quâ non; between which, and the ſuprem cauſe, in a clear view, it diſcerneth a vaſt diſtance; we honour the authority of the Church, and the Miniſtry of men, but put much difference between the authority of theſe, and God, on whoſe infallible truth our faith is grounded.

Saviour of the world] Chriſt having preached to them, that the ſalvation which he brought, was Univerſal without reſpect of perſons; they apprehended their right and intereſt therein, and ſo conclude, that he brought conditions of peace to them, who were indeed far off from the covenants of grace, Epheſ. 2. 17. their admirable improvement of two dayes hearing; to the apprehenſion of this ſum of the Goſpel, muſt needs riſe in judgement and condemn, not onely the Jews two years fruitleſſe hearing Chriſt, but alſo our many years hearing the ſame word without fruits of faith and repentance.

V. 43. departed thence] From Sychar in Samaria; he would not now ſtay long there, for the infirm Jews ſakes, his courſe being not finiſhed in Judea.

V. 44. Jeſus himſelf teſtified] The Evangeliſt rendreth the reaſon why Jeſus went not into his own countrey Nazareth; they honoured him not as they ought. See Luke 4. 24. Mark 6. 4.

V. 45. the Galileans received him] The proud Jews deſpiſed this people, chap. 7. 52. ſo did they the Samaritans, yet both Samaritans and Galileans received Chriſt, when the Jews rejected him and his doctrine; many times they, whom arrogant hypocrites deſpiſe, as impious and unconſiderable, more happily receive Chriſt, and the Goſpel than proud boaſters.

V. 46. made the water wine] Chap. 2. 1. &c.

a certain noble man] A courtier, or ruler of Herods houſe, or ſome principal officer, counſellour or chieftain; the Syriac ſtileth him עבד מלכא habed malco, a ſervant of the king, a Preſident or Viceroy; ſo the Interpreter of the Syriac hath it, gerens vices regis. (See Iſ. Caſaubon. Exer. c. 13. N. 55.) for though Herod Antipas was but a Tetrarch and no King, yet doubtleſſe he was by his friends and followers vulgarly ſtiled King, and ſo the Evangeliſts themſelves accordingly call him, Mark 6. 14. &c.

V. 47. when he heard] Having heard of the fame of Jeſus healing all diſeaſes; and hearing alſo where he now was; he addreſſeth himſelf to him for help for his ſon.

V. 48. ye will not believe] Yet he beleeved, otherwiſe he would not have come to him for help; but he beleeved not aright in him, who thought he could not help, except he were bodily preſent; had he been well informed, he would have beleeved him to be God every where preſent. Greg. hom 28, in Evang.

V. 49. come down ere my child die] This ſheweth the weakneſſe of his faith relying ſo much on the bodily preſence of Chriſt, as if his ſon could no otherwiſe be cured: here were two infirmities of his faith diſcovered. Firſt, in that he thought that Jeſus could not heal his ſon except he were bodily preſent: He came not to the excellency of the Centurions faith, Mat. 8. 8. --- ſpeak the word onely, and my ſervant ſhall be healed. --- The ſecond infirmity appeared in that he thought Jeſus would come too late, if he came not before the child died; he believed not ſo much as Martha profeſſed --- I know that even now, whatſoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee, Joh 11. 22. yet Chriſt ſhewed mercy to the weak.

V. 50. the man believed] The man ſpecified, verſe 46. ſo that here Chriſt at once cured two; the child of the fever, and the father of unbelief; the man departed, relying on Chriſts power and mercy.

V. 51. as he was now going down] In the way between Cana and Capernaum: which ſtood upon the lake or ſea of Galilee, on the banck of the river Jordan, in the borders of Zabulon and Neptalim.

his ſervants met him] Being ambitious to comfort their Maſter with ſpeed, by bringing him the welcome news of his ſons recovery, it is probable, that contending among themſelves who ſhould be the meſſenger, more came to meet him, where one could as eaſily have brought the tidings.

V. 52. Then enquired he of them the hour] Deſiring further confirmation of that which he ſo much wiſhed; and comparing the time and hour in which Chriſt ſaid, thy ſon liveth, verſe 50. with the ſervants report of the childes recovery, he found that Jeſus not onely declared that which was then done in his bodily abſence, (which a Prophet might poſſibly have done) but that Jeſus had cured his ſon.

ſeventh hour the fever left him] At one of the clock in the afternoon; for their day was divided into twelve hours, John 11. 9. and began at ſun-riſing; whence they computed their firſt hour of the artificial day, ſo that their ſeventh hour muſt fall with our one of the after-noon.

V. 53. and his whole houſe] The Maſter finding his ſonne recovered, by the word of Chriſt, bodily abſent, beleeved the divine power of Chriſt; and relating the whole paſſage of the buſineſſe to all that were in his family, they alſo beleeved with him.

V. 54. This is again the ſecond miracle] The ſecond which he did in Galilee, in Judea he had done many. Thus will Chriſt confirm that which he hath begun; and ſo precious are the ſouls of a few beleevers in his ſight; we read here but of one houſe gained to the faith; yet he (who foreſaw all events to come) for that ones ſake, came again to viſit what he had planted; he hath regard and care to ſave one Noah in a periſhing world, one Lot in five cities, Gen. 18. 32. he expreſſeth it in two parables, Luke 15.

CHAP. V.

Verſe 1. A*Fter this*] Levit. 23. 2. Deut. 16. After that he had cured the noble mans ſon, chap 4. 50. But it ſeemeth that this was not immediately after that, there having been other intervenient things which the other Evangeliſts relate, and this omitteth.

See Levit. 22. Numb. 29. Deut. 16.

V. 2. by the ſheep market] Or gate, ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ, the firſt tranſlation underſtandeth ἐν ἀγορᾷ, in the market, becauſe there was near, a ſheep-marked, or beaſt-market, as Mat. 20. 3. to accommodate ſacrifices, who might there buy; the ſecond tranſlation underſtand πύλη, gate: for, ſaith an Author, by it the beaſts to be offered in ſacrifice, were brought in, Nehem. 3. 1. and 12. 39. we read שער הצאן ſhahar hatzon. 70. τὴν πύλην τὴν προβατικήν: the ſheep-gate. So Junius and Tremelius give it, portam gregis: this gate was to the ſouthward of the city, in that part of the valley which looketh toward the front of the Temple, and city of David. Adricomius Jeruſalem. n. 70. calleth it, forum pecuarium.

having five porches] The word στοὰ here uſed, hath divers ſignifications; Suidas expreſſeth it by ταμιεῖον (a barn or granary where corn or fruits were laid up) διὰ τὸ περιμήκης εἶναι --- becauſe it was a long room (So Clem. Alexandr. Pæd. l. 2. ſaith ὅτι ȣ̓κ ἔςι ταμιεῖον ϗ ἀποθήκη) the Latines commonly give it, porticas, which we call porches, gallaries, or walkes, to ſhelter from violent heat or rain: it ſeemed they had made ſuch about this pool, to ſhelter ſick and lame men, repairing to that place, and watching for the moving of the water, which being ſudden, and at no fixed time, they could not have been able to attend, had they had no cover to defend them from the weather, and place to reſt in.

V. 3. blind, halt, withered] The Evangeliſt mentioneth ſome, to declare that they were no eaſie or common cures there wrought, but even of the greateſt and moſt deſperate maladies.

V. 4. an Angel went down at a certain ſeaſon] Not in any viſible ſhape, but by the ſudden moving of the water, and the admirable effect following in the preſent cure of him that firſt went into the water after that motion, it appeared to be the extraordinary work of God, who as he hath made his Angels miniſtring ſpirits for the good of his, ſo doth he powerfully work by them, in extraordinary diſpenſations.

at a certain ſeaſon] There are divers conjectures concerning this ſeaſon; but when, and how often he deſcended, we have no certainty.

whoſoever then firſt, &c.] God could have cured all at once in a moment, but in his wiſdom he inſtanceth his preſence, power, and mercy, in a few, and at certain times, that all may depend on his providence, and patiently expect him, in reſpect both of the time and manner of their relief, here are ſundry things conſiderable in theſe cures. 1. That all diſeaſes, how old, great, or deſperate ſoever, were here cured. 2. That, in a moment, or very quickly. 3. That but one at once was healed, of ſo many who expected Gods mercy therein, one onely attained health, and all the reſt, to their no ſmall grief were unhelped. 4. That he onely was helped who firſt ſtepped in, or was put in; after the moving of the water, as if that one took up all the healing vertue. 5. That the ſame water could not alwayes heal, but at certain times, when it had been troubled, as a wrought ſea, or from the bottom to the top: for ſo the word, ἐτάραξε, importeth, as ἐτάραξε δὲ πόντον. Hom. ὀδ. ε 6. that no other moving, but that of an Angel deſcending from heaven, made thoſe waters healing: all was to teach us to caſt our cares on the Lord, to depend on his providence, who can help with ordinary means, without them, and contrary to them. See 2 Kings 5. 10 and 2. 20. Exodus 14. 22. and 16. 15, 35. Judg. 3. 11. and 15. 15, 19. 2 Kings 4. Mark 8. 23. John 9. 6.

V. 5. had an infirmity thirty and eight years] Chriſt choſe out this man, whoſe condition and diſeaſe might ſeem moſt incurable, by reaſon of the long continuance thereof, and he moſt unlikely to have benefit of the water, who neither was able to move himſelf, neither had any man to carry him into the pool in due ſeaſon, this was, as to ſet off Gods goodneſſe in the eminency of the miracle; ſo in this pattern of patience, to teach us the Prophets rule, though it tarry, wait for it, becauſe it will ſurely come, &c. Hab. 2. 3. (God often delayeth that which he will certainly give at laſt) alſo to make the afflicted ſeriouſly conſider their faults for which God puniſheth them; ſee Lam. 3. 39, 40, 41. by a divine diſpoſal it cometh ſo to paſſe, that, prolixiora vitia ægritudo prolixior exurat. Greg. hom. 19. in Evang. long ſickneſſe burneth out long vices. God delayeth to help, to exerciſe the faith and patience of the afflicted, to kindle their zeal to prayer, to render his mercies more dear and remarkable; ſee John 9. 1, 21. John 11. 39. Mat. 9. 20. Luke 13. 11.

V. 6. wilt thou be healed?] There ſeemeth no doubt but that he (who had with thirty eight years patience endured) would gladly be healed: but this Chriſt ſaid, to make both him and the ſpectators the more attentive to that which he was now about to do: thus he preventeth us with his mercy, ſee Iſa. 65. 24. this indeed is proper to the Almighty and true God, inexorata beneficia præbere feſſis, &c. Arnob. adv. Gent. l 3. to give unbegged benefits, to the weary and infirm: which when he doth in matters ſpiritual, he maketh us willing to receive who freely giveth of his own good will, ſo that there, as Syneſius de inſomn. ſaith καθαρμῶν τὸ μέγιστον μέρος ἡ βούλησις, the greateſt part of the cleanſing is the will, to be clean which God worketh in us: of his good pleaſure (Phil. 2. 13.) by his preventing grace.

V. 7. I have no man, &c.] So uncharitable was that Jewiſh Nation become; they thought all Religion conſiſted in ſacrificing, but held not charity, the ground and ſum of the Law: in ſo great a city, ſo much pretending to Religion, no man, in ſo long time, ſhewed ſo much mercy to this poor man, as to help him into the water: no wonder that Chriſt ſent the learned Doctors to learn that neceſſary leſſon, I will have mercy, not ſacrifice (Mat. 9. 13. 1 Sam. 15. 22.) that is, mercy rather than ſacrifice.

V. 8. take up thy bed] For the evidence and manifeſtation of the cure: So Mark 2. 11. Mat. 9. 6. This he ſaith, that paſſing through the multitude with his bed on his back, whom many of them probably might know ſo many years to have there lien helpleſſe, lame, and not able to move himſelf for help, the evidence of the miracle might appear.

V. 9. immediately the man was made whole] Though he had been ſo many years lame, Chriſt preſently healed him, in the ſame hour, as the interpreter of the Syriac giveth it: and this alſo cleareth the miracle from all ground of calumny, and ſuſpition of compact, that this man now cured was lame ſome years before Chriſt was born: compare verſe 5. with Luke 3. 23.

was the ſabbath] This alſo made the miracle more notorious; becauſe all that ſaw him carrying his bed on the Sabbath, on which none among the Jewes, uſed to bear any burden, would take ſpecial notice of the perſon and fact; had it been on any other day, few would have noted it, or ſaid any thing to it: but now every one that ſaw him carrying, blaming him for doing that which they judged unlawful, and he excuſing it by the command of him that cured him, the fame of the cure grew more publick.

V. 10. the Jewes therefore ſaid] They pretend religion, to overthrow the ground and fundamentals thereof, faith in Chriſt, and charity to men. (See 1 Tim. 1 5. 1 Cor. 13. 2, 3.) becauſe Chriſt healed on the Sabbath, whereas indeed that ſhewes, that works of mercy are works of the Sabbath made for man. The Jewes of whom he ſpeaketh here, it ſeemeth were thoſe by whom he paſſed carrying his bed to his houſe.

it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed] Jer. 17. 22. it was not lawful to carry, except that carrying had been within the compaſs of ſanctifying the Sabbath, as was the advancement of Gods glory, a work of mercy and neceſſity, in which Chriſt ſhewed it lawful.

V. 11. He that made me whole] He replyeth not concerning works of the Sabbath, but citeth the authority of him, who had divine power to cure him: take heed of raſh cenſure; and conſider not onely the letter, but alſo the intent of the law; which is faith and charity. See on verſe 10. 1 Tim. 1. 5.

V. 12. What man is that] They would not acknowledge Gods hand in this work, but enquire after a man by them pretended to oppoſe the expreſs commandment of God concerning the Sabbath; as if they ſaid, do but name that man and what ever he be, he ſhall not go unpuniſhed, thus were they prepoſterouſly zealous, and ſuperſtitiouſly religious, not conſidering the ſenſe, but the letter of the Law.

V. 13. Conveyed himſelf away] This ſheweth the reaſon why the man that was healed was ignorant who had healed him and had not enquired concerning the Author of ſo admirable a bleſſing on him beſtowed: the unexpected ſenſe of perfect health, and ſtrength ſuddenly recovered, might poſſibly take up all his thoughs in admiration; and while he was riſing and taking up his bed as he was commanded, Jeſus went away through the preſent multitude.

a multitude being] Or from the multitude that was] The Syriac giveth it, had hid himſelf in the multitude: Which might eaſily be, ſeeing there were many of ſundry ſtatures there; and in multitudes it is not eaſiy to diſcern one from another: the word here uſed is ἐξένευσεν which properly ſignifieth, to ſwim out; the multitude is often compared to fluctuant waters Revelations 17. 2. 15.

V. 14. Sin no more] He thus warneth to ſhew him the cauſe of his infirmity, and the right uſe of health, which is, admendment of the former ſinful life: thus good Phyſitians not onely cure, but preſcribe for the avoidance of a more dangerous relapſe: God delighteth not in our ſorrows but therefore ſmiteth us with infirmity, that he might not condemn us with the periſhing world; and certainly worſe muſt needs befal them, who will not be warned by lighter corrections, either in this life, or that to come. That which Chriſt ſaith here, Sin no more leſt a worſe thing come unto thee, muſt not be underſtood of a ſimple and abſolute intermination of a more greivous affliction to come upon him if he ſinned any more at all; for there is no man that ſinneth not, 1 Kings 8. 46. but in the Apoſtles ſenſe, Rom. 6. 12. Let not ſin reign therefore in your mortal bodies, that you ſhould obey it in the luſt thereof. See alſo c. 8. 11. 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21.

V. 15. told the Jewes, that it was Jeſus] They asked him, who it was, verſe 12. now being enformed (probably by enquiring of his Diſciples) he telleth them: ſhewing them that divine and admirable Phyſitian, if poſſibly they alſo might want him for themſelves or friends.

V. 16. Therefore did the Jewes perſecute Jeſus] For it is the property of hypocrites, under pretence of zeal for Religion, to execute their private malice, which was the true cauſe why they perſecuted Chriſt; truth ever ſtimulates it to envy and revenge, but their pretence was zeal to the Law of God, which they would have the people believe that he violated, who healed on the Sabbath day: they perſecuted him in calumnies, blaſphemous ſpeeches, deſtractions, and alſo deſigning his death; as appeareth verſe 18. See Gal. 4. 29. Gen. 21. 9.

V. 17. my Father worketh hitherto] My Father is beneficent in preſerving you all on this very Sabbath: and my works are his, and ſo, no violation of the Sabbath: I work by the ſame power, which not onely at the beginning created, and ſtill preſerveth all the creatures (Heb. 1. 2, 3.) but alſo healed this man, and ſo, as Hil. de trin. l. 7. ſaith well, in eo ergo quod operatur filius, opus patris eſt: therefore the work of the Father is in that which the Son worketh; they have one power and work. God in the beginning reſted the ſeventh day, which he ſanctified: he ceaſed then (ſaith Aug. Conſent. ep. 146. 9. 2. ab ipſis naturis condendis --- non ab earum adminiſtratione) from creating natures or new ſpecies but not from his adminiſtration, and preſervation of thoſe kindes which he then created, for as the ſame ſaith, l. 12 de C. D. c. 17. novit quieſcens agere, & agens quieſcere, he knoweth how to work reſting, and to reſt working; who doth all things without labour, and laſſitude, onely by his word.

V. 18. Becauſe he had broken the Sabbath] This relateth to the Jewes ſenſe: he had not broken the Sabbath, for he came not to deſtroy, but to fulfil the Law, Mat. 5. 17. but they thought he had broken it.

that God was his Father] This was proper and peculiar to him, as a father by nature, not adoption.

making himſelf equal with God] They underſtood not that he was God of God, coequal, conſubſtantial and coeternal with the Father.

V. 19. Nothing of himſelf] Or, as diſtinct from the Fathers work: ſeeing, as they are one God, ſo have they one will and one working: for, ſaith Fulgentius de fide orthod, in that nature of the Trinity ſic totum unum eſt, ut nihil ibi poſſit ſeparari vel dividi - - ſo is all one, that there nothing can be ſeparated or divided: ſo is all equall, that nothing greater or leſſe can there be found.

what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the ſon likewiſe] Whatſoever the Father doth, the Son doth; becauſe they are on God, have one will,power,and working. So Nazianzen. orat. 36 well interpreteth, this υἱὸς ὁμοίως ποιεῖ doth the Son likewiſe; οὐ κατὰ τὴν τῶν γινομένων ὁμοίωσιν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὴν τῆς ἐξουσίας ὁμοτιμίαν --- not for the ſimilitude of thoſe things they do but in reſpect of the ſame power and authority of both,the ſon doth not imitate, but co-operate; he worketh not the like, but the ſame work which the Father doth.

V. 20. Sheweth him all things] By a divine and unſpeakable communication. The Father worketh ſo, as that the Son who is one with him, c. 10. 30. 1 John 5. 7. not onely ſeeth or knoweth what the Father doth; but alſo co-operateth in all that he doth: and the Father worketh by him.

greater works than theſe] That is, he will yet do more admirable works than theſe which ye have already ſeen; works which ſhall more evidently ſet forth his glory,and declare his divine power working by me.

V. 21. Quickneth whom he will] Ζωοποιεῖ, maketh alive, or giveth life; underſtand here by life, righteouſneſſe, all the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and all things belonging to our ſalvation, with all the parts and degrees thereof; he findeth us all dead in ſins, Epheſ 2. 1. therefore in the work of our Salvation he muſt needs begin from our firſt reſurrection to the life of grace: and theſe words, raiſeth up, and quickneth; ſhew that he both raiſed up, and delivereth from ſin and alſo ſanctifieth us by the ſame ſpirit (See Rom. 8. 10, 11.) which he doth, (as all other acts of mercy, or, ad extra) with the Father: therefore alſo when he would raiſe Lazarus he prayed, and gave thanks to his Father c. 11. 41. that we might know, that they joyntly wrought in the ſame work.

V. 22. The Father judgeth no man] Chap. 8. 15. He ſaith, I judge no man: that is, in point of civel judicature: or, I alone judge no man: and indeed he came not then into the World to judge, but to preach the gladſome tidings of ſalvation: ſo the Father judgeth not alone, becauſe he judgeth by the Son, Acts 17. 31. Rom. 2. 16. the word (judgeth) here, as verſe 27, 30. ſignifying full power to rule in Heaven and Earth: as Mat. 11. 27. and 28.18. He ſaith the Father judgeth no man,as they imagined, who ſeparated him from the Son; by whom as he created all, ſo ruleth he, and judgeth he all: ſo he ſaith he came not to do his own will, but the will of his Father. See verſe 30. and c. 6. 38. c 7. 16. not ſimply, but in their ſenſe who would divide the Father and the Son, ſo he often times ſpeaketh. See chap. 9. 3.

V. 23. Honour the Son] In the unity of the Godhead; neither of them can be truly worſhipped without the other,as the following words expreſſely ſhew.

V. 24. but is paſſed from death unto life] That is, ſhall as certainly, as if it were already done.

V. 25. the dead ſhall bear the voice] In the firſt, or ſpiritual reſurrection. See Rev. 20. 6. and compare therewith, Epheſ. 2. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 6.

and they that hear ſhall live] They that believe, and obey the voice of Chriſt, ſhall live eternally.

V. 26. ſo hath he given to the Son] He rendreth a reaſon of that he ſaid the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God, and live: becauſe God the Father, who is the eternal Fountain of Life, communicateth his whole Eſſence to the Son: ſo that, as he is the eternal Word and Wiſdom of God, He hath all things of himſelf: but as he is the Son of man, He hath received all things of the Father, as, authority and power to execute judgement; which underſtand principally of the laſt general Judgement, as that. c. 3. 17. God ſent not his Son into the World, to condemn the World, &c. that is, not now in his ſtate of humility.

V. 27. To execute judgement] Supream power, to govern and adminiſter all things becauſe he is the Son of man] Not onely as he is God, but alſo as he is man; that all men may ſee their Judge, Rev. 1. 7.

V. 28. All that are in the graves] That is, all the dead, in Sea and Land: This he ſaith to ſhew that he will not onely raiſe the believers to the life of grace here, but alſo to the life of glory in the world to come: and though the obſtinate ſinners would not hear his voice, preaching conditions of mercy and ſalvation to them now; yet ſhall they againſt their wills, hear his voice and feel his power raiſing them from the dead, and ſummoning them to judgement.

V. 29. They that have done good] See Mat. 25. 46. wherein they ſhall be rewarded according to, not for their works; life eternal is Gods free gift, not mans merit. See Rom. 6. 23.

V. 30. as I bear, I judge] As I know my Fathers judgement; as before verſe 19. he uſeth the word, Seeing. ſo now he uſeth this of hearing; which ſignifieth his receiving wiſdom, ability to judge, and his whole nature (as God) of the Father; as man he receiveth it of the Deity, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.

becauſe I ſeek not mine own will] Either in judging, or doing: I do my Fathers will in all, and therefore is my judgement juſt, becauſe according to the will of my Father: men in judging too often do their own wills, not Gods; and therefore erre: but he that judgeth according to the moſt holy and juſt will of God, is juſt.

V. 31. if I bear witneſſe of my ſelf] Chap. 8. 14. If I onely teſtified, ye might diſtruſt; but now, God, the onely ſufficient witneſſe of himſelf, teſtifieth of me.

V. 32. There is another] That is, God the Father, as c. 7. 18. he acknowledgeth me his onely Son in whom he is well pleaſed, Mat. 3. 17. & 17. ſo that I arrogate nothing to my ſelf, which God my Father doth not avow.

V. 33. ye ſent unto John] He preſſeth them with Johns teſtimony, which they durſt not deny: and with their own judgement, who ſent unto him to be reſolved concerning Chriſt; why ſhould you ſend to him except you would ſtand to his teſtimony? he gave witneſſe to the truth, which ye condemn as falſhood.

V. 34. receive not teſtimony from man] I ground not on mans witneſſe: man can no more prove Gods truth, than a lamp can ſhew us the ſun.

V. 35. he was a burning and a ſhining lamp] He was not that light of lights mentioned, c. 1.8. but one bearing witneſſe of him: he was an eminent light, ardent in the zeal of faith and piety: ſo that the unbelieving Jews were wilfully darkened and voluntarily erred in their inconſtancy, wherein they never liked any long, were they never ſo admirable lights, in ſincerity of zeal, and truth of doctrine.

for a ſeaſon to rejoyce] Until you diſtaſted his teſtimony concerning me.

V. 36. I have greater witneſſe] See Mat. 3. 17. Mat. 17. 5. 1 John 5 7. He ſaith, greater, not truer, both were true; but the works which Chriſt did, more evidently concluded that he was the Son of God, and are ſo ſaid to teſtifie of him, as the Heavens are ſaid to declare the glory of God, Pſalm 19. 1. See John 10. 25.

V. 37. Hath born witneſſe of me] Mat. 3. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 17.

nor ſeen his ſhape] See on c. 1. 18. Deut. 4 12.

V. 38. ye have not his word abiding in you] They had the true word of God (as many now have) in their Cloſets, but not in their hearts: they neither underſtood the meaning thereof, nor did they ſet their hearts to obey it, ſee c. 8 19, 37. they who receive not Chriſt, are no true diſciples of Moſes and the Prophets.

V. 39. ſearch the Scriptures] Or, ye do ſearch, as Acts 17. 11. he proveth himſelf to be the Meſſias. 1. By the Fathers teſtimony. 2. By John Baptiſts witneſſe. 3. By his works 4. Now by the Scriptures, the word ἐρευνᾶτε, may be either the indicative, and ſo tranſlated, ye do ſearch, or the imparative, and ſo it is to be given, ſearch ye, the firſt ſenſe implyeth a juſt reproof of their prepoſterous diligence; as if he ſaid, you do indeed read and ſearch the Scriptures, rightly thinking that the doctrine of Salvation is thence to be drawn: yet you obſtinately dis-believe him of whom the Scripture witneſſeth, that there is ſalvation in none other: and here, that which Hil. l. 7. de trin. ſaith is very conſiderable: it cannot (ſaith he) be denied, that from miſunderſtanding, the controverſie concerning faith aroſe, dum quod legitur ſenſui potius coaptatur, quàm lectioni ſenſus obtemperat: while that which is read is rather fitted to the ſenſe (of the reader) than (his) ſenſe ſubjected to that he readeth: and again (contr. Conſtant.) he ſaith there is none of the Hereticks which doth not feigne, or falſly pretend that he preacheth according to Scriptures; even thoſe things in which he blaſphemeth: they all ſpeak Scriptures, without their ſenſe, and pretend faith, without faith; Scripturæ enim non in legendo ſunt, ſed in intelligendo: for the Scriptures are not in reading (or the letter) but in underſtanding (that is, inward ſenſe and true meaning) and again; optimus enim lector eſt, qui dictorum intelligentiam expectet ex dictis potius quàm imponat, & retulerit magis quem attulerit; neque cogat id videri dictis contineri, quod ante lectionem præſumpſerit intelligendum, &c. for he is the beſt reader, who rather expecteth the meaning of the ſayings from the words, than impoſeth it (on them) and rather carrieth away from, than bringeth ſenſe (to that he readeth) and who forceth not the words to ſeem to carry that ſenſe, which before his reading, he preſumed muſt be underſtood; therefore when the ſpeech ſhall be concerning God, let us yeild God the knowledge of himſelf, and attend his words with holy reverence: for he is a competent witneſſe of himſelf, who is not (cannot be) known, except he reveal himſelf. The ſecond ſenſe importeth an exhortation to ſearch the Scripture, not ſuperficially, but as Euthymius after Chryſoſt. ſaith, he commandeth them to dig deep that they may find: ἐν τῷ βάθει κείμενα, thoſe things which are in the depth; for it is not in the ſuperficies, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ τις θησαυρὸς ἐν πολλῷ τῷ βάθει κατέκειτο: but as a treaſure hid in great depth ye think ye have eternal life] He ſaith not, ye have, but ye think ye have: teaching that they (as now too many) deceived themſelves, in opinion that hearing, or reading the word was ſufficient without faith and obedience thereto: See Rom. 2. 13. Hebr. 4. 2.

V. 40. he will not come to me] The meaning is, that they labour in vain in reading the Scriptures, who make it not their principal aym, to finde Chriſt therein: and that it was their malice which hindred them from receiving the benefit of eternal life offered them in the Goſpel; in ſaying ye will not come, he taxeth their contumacy as the chief cauſe of their ignorance and [illegible]ndneſſe; opinion of having in themſelves ſufficient ſanctity t[illegible]ave them, is a dangerous obſtruction; they who think themſelves healthy, ſeek not to the Phyſician.

V. 41. I receive not honour from men] That is, not humane applauſe, (had I been ambitious thereof, I would never have taken on me the form of a ſervant) Chriſt is greater, than that opinion or judgement of men can either take from, or adde to his glory: to an infinite, nothing can be added, nothing can be taken from it.

V. 42. ye have not the love of God in you] As if he ſaid, I well know why ye come not to me, becauſe ye have no true love of God in you: you may blaſphemouſly pretend other cauſes of your not believing in me, you may impoſe upon an ignorant vulgar; but I know you: he taketh the love of God here, for the ground of all true religion and ſanctity, the ſumme of the law. Deut. 6. 5. God ſeeth the hypocriſie of thoſe, who have God, truth, and godlineſſe in their tongues, but devliliſh malice, pride and vain glory in their hearts.

V. 43. If another ſhall come] If a falſe Prophet ſhould come, you would be too apt to receive him: ſo did they in Trajans time follow their Barcocheba, whom almoſt all the Jewes took for their Meſſias: this impoſtor cauſed great effuſion of blood between the Jewes and Romans: but when they perceived the miſchief he had led them into, the Jewes called their Barchocheba (which ſignifieth, the ſon of a ſtar) Barchoziba, that is, the ſon of a lie. See Pet. Galatin. de arcan. Cathol. verit. Jo. Druſ, præterit. l. 4. in Joh. 5. 43. and ib. ad. v. N. T. par. ult. Joh. 5. 43.

V, 44. how can ye beleeve] That is, ye cannot beleeve, becauſe of your ambition, which is contrary to the love and honour of God. It is impoſſible that you ſhould beleeve in me the ſon of God and only Saviour of the elect now under the form of a ſervant, ſo long as the height of your ambition is only to externall pomp, ſecular glory, and applauſe of men, which ye mutually give each other, whereof you find nothing in me, nor deſired of me.

which receive honour one of another] Which love the praiſe of men more than the praiſe of God. c. 12. 43. one flattering another with the characters of juſt, wiſe, aod godly: deſirous onely to pleaſe men, and to ſeem holy to them, that they may ſpeak well of them, not valuing the judgment or praiſe of God. See Rom. 2. 29. 1 Cor. 4. 5.

V. 45 there is one that accuſeth you] Moſes, or the law (in the works whereof ye truſt to be juſtified) ſhall condemn you, who continue not in every thing written therein, neither beleeve in Chriſt of whom he teſtified.

Moſes in whom ye truſt] They boaſted that they were Moſes diſciples, and oppoſed him to Chriſt (chap. 9. 28. 29.) he telleth them that the law given them by the Miniſtery of Moſes, will accuſe and condemn them.

V. 46. If ye had believed Moſes] He ſheweth why Moſes ſhould accuſe and condemn them; becauſe they beleeved him not; ſo dangerous is it to pretend to that vvhich vve vvill not obey, nor believe.

he wrote of me] Gen. 3. 15. Deut. 18. 15. Gen. 49. 10. Num. 24. 17 &c. indeed the whole ſcope of the ceremoniall law was to prefigure Chriſt to come, ſuffer for our redemption, and cleanſe us from all our ſins: for he is the end of the law to every beleever: ſee the whole ayme of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, and Acts 7. 2. &c. Luke 24. 27.

V. 47. how ſhall ye beleeve in me?] That is, ſeeing you pretend highly to reverence Moſes, and yet beleeve him not any further than you finde in his writings compliance with your own opinions; how ſhould you beleeve in my words of which you have no ſuch eſteem? This veil yet laid over their heart; in reading the ſcriptures, ſhall be taken away, when the fulneſſe of the Gentiles is come in. See 2 Cor. 3. 16. Rom. 11. 25.

CHAP. VI.

Verſe 1. T*He ſea of Tiberas*] The lake of Genezareth: Tiberias, Bethſaida and Capernaum, were on this ſide the lake, in reſpect of Galilee: but it is here ſaid, that he paſſe over, becauſe he croſſed ſome creeks running up into the the land, or ſome bayes, that he might go the nearer way: See on Luke 5. 1. ond on John 21. 1.

V. 2. becauſe they ſaw his miracles] This was the cauſe why they followed him into the deſarts: ſeeing his admirable power; healing all diſeaſes, they conceived that he was ſome great Prophet ſent of God: hence was that zeal to attend him ſo, as that they neither minded their want of meat, or lodging in the deſart: which muſt riſe in judgement and condemn our careleſſeneſſe towards Gods word, from which the leaſt let uſeth to detain or diſtract us, though we are not to follow Chriſt now into the deſart mountains; his word is near us. Rom. 10. 8.

V. 3. went up into a mountain] Probably for the ſame reaſon which is expreſſed, Mark 6 31. that they might reſt a while. A mountain in the deſart of Bethſaida. Luke 9. 10.

V. 4. and the Paſſeover] Levit. 23. 5. Deut. 16. 1. See chap. 2. 13. this muſt be the third Paſſeover after Chriſts baptiſm, if that feaſt mentioned, chap. 5. 1. was the Paſſeover.

V. 5 lift up his eyes and ſaw a great multitude] Thus he undertaketh the care for them, who for his ſake neglect themſelves. See Mat. 14 15, 16, 18, 19, &c.

ſaith unto Philip] He ſpake to Philip, becauſe it ſeemeth he ſpake the ſence of his fellow diſciples: we may not conceive that Chriſt thus ſpake, as ſoon as he ſaw this multitude: for the other Evangeliſts ſhew that he firſt taught them many things concerning the kingdom of God, and healed thoſe who were infirm, by which time it was almoſt night; then took he care to feed and diſmiſſe them. See Mark 6. 37. Luke 9. 13.

V. 6. This he ſaid to prove him] Not that Jeſus knew not before hand, what Philip would anſwer, but, as Gen. 22. 1. God tempted; or tryed Abraham, to make Abraham know his own faith and obedience; ſo here to make Philip know his faith, whether (ſeeing in the ordinary way of nature there were no means) he would have recourſe to Chriſts omnipotency; of which he had ſeen ſo much experience? and to ſhew him the defects thereof in the following miracle.

V. 7. two hundred peny worth] As if he ſaid, neither know we where timely to buy ſo much for them before night, neither is that a little money in our caſh.

V. 9. there is a lad here which, &c.] He had ſaid firſt unto them, how many loaves have ye? go and ſee, Mark 6. 38. which when Andrew had enformed himſelf of, in the name of the reſt, he ſaith, there is a lad, &c. five loaves, that is, to ſell: for it is probable that their own ſtore, after their repaſt in the mountain, was very ſlender: this ſetteth off the truth of the miracle of feeding ſo many, ſo fully, when there was neither in the diſciples keeping, nor among the multitude, any more, than ſo incompetent a ſtore for them all.

what are they among ſo many] Neither did he yet think of any more than humane and ordinary ſupplyes. He knew not that Chriſt would by his divine power encreaſe this ſmall ſtore to a ſufficiency to feed this great multitude, and therefore anſwereth; as relating to ſecond cauſes, by whoſe proportions, it was no competent food for 5000. men. We here very much live and are guided by ſenſe, and therefore uſually determine and judge, according to the principles thereof, and ſo, not ſo conſtantly rely on the omnipotent providence of God, as indeed we ought; when Elijah, 1 King. 17. 10, &c. ſaid to the widow at Zarephath, Bring me I pray thee a morſell of bread in thy hand; ſhe had ready to ſay, as the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handfull of meal in a barrell, and a little oyle in a cruce: and behold I am gathering two ſticks, that ——— we may eat it and dye. ——— Experience made her better underſtand the power of Gods providence.

V. 10. make the men ſit down] When theſe loaves and fiſhes were brought him; he doth not here reprove their unbelief, but confirm their faith by the miracle done. He would have them thus ſit down on rowes, as Mark 6. 39. 40, that the diſciples might the more readily diſtribute to every one a portion; and that the number appearing, the miracle might be more evident unto them all then preſent; See Luke 9. 14.

So the men ſate down] ἀνέπεσον, they fell or lay down; as their manner was to eat: they were uncertain of the event; but yet readily obeyed his word: ſuch readineſſe was alſo in the waiters at the Canaa wedding, to fill the water-pots with water when they vvanted wine. Chap. 2. 7. this is a triall of faith, when God commandeth men to do that, whereof for preſent they apprehend neither event, nor reaſon: mans reaſon vvould have ſaid to this multitude, high you away leſt you be famiſhed here, by a little more delay; but ſitting dovvn here as he commanded, vvhere there appeared no probability of ſupply, they found abundance to ſuffice them all: thus vvill he teach us not to rely on our ovvn vviſdomes, but to depend on his providence and vvord, vvho never fruſtrateth the hopes of his. See Mat. 14, 21.

V. 11. when Jeſus had given thanks] That is, as the Syriack hath it, וברך ubarec, and bleſſed it: So alſo Mat. 26. 26. Luke 9. 16.

he diſtributed] By the Miniſtery of the diſciples, to every one as much as fully ſatisfied them to a perfect refection: vvhich is added to ſet out the truth and excellence of the miracle, thoſe victualls being not ſparingly, but fully and freely given to every one preſent.

V. 12. gather up the fragments] This he commanded, as for the evidence of the miracle; ſo alſo that none of Gods bleſſings might be loſt vvherein vvould have appeared a contempt or undervaluing of them: to teach us an holy frugality in the uſe of Gods creatures: of vvhich vve are but ſtevvards, and muſt once give account; and that vve muſt rely on Gods providence, vvho can make the leaſt meaſure ſufficient.

V. 13. filled twelve baskets] So vvonderfully had he encreaſed the ſmall ſtore. See alſo 1 King. 17. 15, 16. and 2 King. 4. Mat. 14. 20.

V. 14. this is of a truth that Prophet] ὁ ἐρχόμενος, the Prophet which was to come; that is, whoſe coming we have hitherto expected: or as the Syriack interpreter hath it, qui venit in mundum, who is now come into the world: this is the Meſſias promiſed by God, Deut. 18. 15. ſuch is the vulgar, more ſenſible of bodily and temporal benefits (which they expected in Chriſt) than ſpiritual and eternal: we read not that they thus acknowledge him in his moſt divine and unparaleld preaching to them the myſtery of eternal life: but when he feeds their bellies, then they cry, this is that Prophet.

V. 15. to make him a king] This alſo ſhewes how much they regarded their bellies, more than their ſoules: when he gave them the beſt ſpiritual food they offered him no ſuch honour, but becauſe he thus fed them, they would proclaim him the king Meſſias; under whom they dreamed of health, wealth, fullneſſe, victory, protection and all ſecular bleſſings. So much lived they to carnal ſenſe; ſo few underſtood the true end of Chriſts coming into the world, which was that he might ſuffer for us, and redeem us from the power of Satan, death and hell.

into a mountain himſelf alone] Where he uſed to pray: his kingdom is ſpiritual, not of this world; therefore offended at their perverſe ſervice, who would thus honour him, he withdrew himſelfe from them.

V. 16. when even was now come] Mat. 14. 23. and that now having ſent his diſciples aboard before him, he might the more conveniently diſmiſſe the multitude, and vvithdravv himſelf into the mountain.

V. 17. went over the ſea] That is, ſome creek or arm thereof, as verſe 1. Mark 6. 45. he bade them go before to Bethſaida, while he ſent the people away (becauſe Bethſaida was in their way as they went toward Capernaum) while he was diſmiſſing them, it ſeemeth they were conſpiring to make him king, and therefore he went from them into the mountain alone.

V. 18. and the ſea aroſe] Swelled, as the Syriack hath it; was rough and high running.

V. 19. about five and twenty or thirty furlongs] Above three miles from ſhore; ſo little way had they made from the evening to the fourth watch of the night. See Mat. 14. 25.

V. 20. It is I, be not afraid] They were troubled for his abſence, and terrified with his preſence, when they thought they had ſeen ſome ghoſt walking on the water; therefore he diſcovereth himſelf to them: thus are the faithful ſecure and full of comfort in the preſence and protection of Chriſt; at whoſe voyce the wicked tremble, and are caſt down: Chap. 18. 6.

V. 21. they willingly received him] Though they were afraid of him at firſt, when they knew him not, yet hearing his voyce, they were glad of his ſaving preſence, and received him into the ſhip, Mat. 14. 32. Mark 6. 51. John ſheweth another part of the miracle by them omitted, that is, the ſudden arrival of the ſhip, which before Chriſt came aboard, with all their art and labour, rowing, and what ever they could do made ſo little way. See verſe 19. So Chriſt not only comforteth in word, but alſo in reall deliverance of his.

V. 22. which ſtood on the other ſide] Which lodged thereabouts, and ſuppoſed that Jeſus had been there ſtill, where the miracle was done.

but that his diſciples were gone away alone] That is, by themſelves without Jeſus with them: it is doubtful with which of the two, the diſciples (as in this our tranſlation) or with the noun collective, the multitude, this verb ἀπῆλθον, went away, is to be conſtrued: the latter ſeemeth probable, and the ſence may be, when the multitude ſaw that the diſciples onely took ſhipping, and that Jeſus went not with them, they, that is, the multitude, went away or departed,

V. 23. they alſo took ſhipping] That is, in ſome of thoſe which came from Tiberias, ſo the Syriack hath it, they went into theſe ſhips: we read of no ſtorm in their paſſage, but onely upon the diſciples ſhip: God exerciſeth the greateſt gifts with the greateſt tryals. It bare a type of the world ſailing before the winde with a fair gale, while they that are Chriſts feel the ſtorms and wreſtling winds of afflictions, the more to confirm them in their deliverance.

V. 25. when cameſt thou hither?] Seeing we have waited on thee, and marked that there was none other ſhip here, ſave that in which thy diſciples went over before thee; when, and how couldſt thou come over ſea? Theophylacts conjecture is probable; they might poſſibly ſuſpect, that he went on foot to the other ſide miraculouſly.

V. 26. but becauſe ye did eat] He anſwereth not to their queſtion, but knowing their thoughts, reproveth them, for that they valued not his doctrine, or confirmation thereof by miracles, ſo that they might beleeve and be ſaved, but cared principally for their bellies; the fault that our carnal goſpellers are commonly guilty of: they think they do excellently ſeek Chriſt, when yet their chief aym and care is to finde eaſe, peace, vvealth, credit, or ſome temporal bleſſings in their practiſe, or profeſſion of the goſpel: thus would the covetous Jewes have impropriated Chriſt himſelf unto ſecular uſes; ſo unworthy a value ſet they upon that ineſtimable mercy of God in giving them his onely begotten Son, as if he had onely given them ſome ſecular, and ſoon-periſhing bleſſing in him, and not eternal life and ſalvation: ſo hard a matter is it to caſt off the importunate cares and deſires of fleſh and blood, that vve may affect, and receive the unvaluable mercy of God for our ſalvation in Chriſt, Vix quæritur Jeſus propter Jeſum, ſaid Auguſtine on this place; rarely is Jeſus ſought for his own ſake: but indeed, then the heart is right to God, quando propter Deum quæritur Deus, Proſper ſent. vvhen God is ſought for his ovvn ſake: and hovv great ſhould our happineſſe be in heaven, if vve did not vvith profane Eſau, undervalue it for temporal ſupplies? See on Mat. 6. 2. and Mat. 5. 12. Seek in Chriſt firſt the kingdom of God and his righteouſneſſe, and be confident, he that for thy ſalvation aſſumed a reaſonable ſoul and humane body, that he might ſuffer ſuch things therein for thy redemption, will not loſe thee again by leaving thee deſtitute of temporal neceſſaries. See Rom. 8. 32. by this examine whether thou ſeek God for love of God, or out of ſelf-love: doeſt thou patiently bear afflictions, in regard that God thereby trieth thee? doeſt thou love and depend on God as well ſmiting thee, as giving temporal bleſſings unto thee? but if thou be impatient, or deſperate in thy ſufferings, as 2 Kings 6. 33. Job 2. 9. thy ſeeking God hath been for thine own ſake.

V. 27. Labour not for the meat which periſheth] Or work not, and not forbidding labour for things neceſſary to this life. See Gen 2. 15. Gen. 3. 19. Gen. 9. 20. 2 Theſ. 3. 10. Epheſ. 4. 28. but preferring the care for things eternal, as Mat. 6. 33. So Mat. 9. 13. he excludeth not ſacrifice, but preferreth mercy.

that meat which endureth unto life everlaſting] That is, thoſe things which are appointed by God to refreſh and ſuſtain their ſouls to eternity.

for him hath] Mat. 3. 17. He ſheweth why we muſt ſeek that food which periſheth not but endureth to everlaſting life, in Chriſt only, there's no other name given under heaven, the Father hath aſſigned him only unto this office, him only hath he commiſſionated hereto, by many ſignes and wonders, as it were under his own ſignet deputing him to that great office.

God the Father ſealed] Or allowed and confirmed to the office of our redemption: a ſimile derived from them who give commiſſions under hand and ſeal.

V. 28. the works of God] pleaſing to God, or which he requireth, that we may thereby find that meat thou ſpeakeſt of, remaining to eternity. Some new works they dreamed of, that they might find that Lord of eternal life: Chriſt ſpoke not of any works more than in the general; but they thought of ſomething which they had not yet learned in the law, which muſt be done by them, that they might gain it, therefore they ſpeak to this ſenſe; we are ready and moſt willing to learn, if thou pleaſeſt to teach us herein.

V. 29. This is the work of God] 1 John 3. 23. his commandment and will: as alſo his work and gift, Epheſ. 2. 8. that which God requireth of you, that ye ſhould beleeve in me: having ſpoken of works and life eternal; leſt they ſhould imagine it could be merited or gained by the works of the Law without Chriſt (for if ſo, Chriſt had died without cauſe or in vain, Galat. 2. 21.) he recalleth them to faith in him, wherein only is eternal life.

V. 30. What ſigne ſheweſt thou] This one thing manifeſted how little they profited by the miracles they ſaw: admiring his works, and thence being perſwaded that he was the Meſſias, inſomuch as they would have made him their King, yet now they require a ſigne, as if he had done nothing among them: Chryſoſtome here noteth their ſtupidity, who having preſent ſignes, yet aske a ſigne: ſo inconſiſtent are the deſires and votes of the giddy vulgar: becauſe Chriſt would not comply with their fancies, and become ſuch as they dreamed their Meſsias ſhould be (but on the contrary reproved their ſenſuality and ſpiritual blindneſſe) they conteſt as with one no further to be heard or followed: as if they had ſaid, What ſheweſt thou, that we ſhould thereby be perſwaded to forſake Moſes Law, in vvhich vve and our fathers have been brought up; to follovv thee, and caſt our ſelves and the hope of our ſalvation on thee? if Chriſt vvill not anſvver their deſires, he ſhall no longer be a Maſter for them.

V. 31. Our fathers did eat Manna] Exodus 16. 15. Numbers 11. 7. As if they ſaid, under Moſes conduct vvhom vve yet follovv, our fathers vvere fed fourty yeares in the vvilderneſſe: what greater work doeſt thou, that vve may cleave to thee?

he gave them bread from heaven] Wiſdome 16. 20. So is the Manna called, Pſalm. 78. 24. דגן שמים dagan ſhamaiim, the corne of heaven. So Jerome after the Hebrew, triticum cœli: the 70. give it ἄρτον οὐρανοῦ, the bread of heaven; ſo it is called לחם אבירים lechem abbirim, 70. ἄρτον ἀγγέλων, the bread of Angels. Hebr. the bread of the mighty or the ſtrong, So Jerom after the Hebrew, panem fortium, not that the Angels do eat, but becauſe (ſay ſome) God by their miniſtery fed Iſrael therewith. Some underſtand אלהים, elohim, as if it were the bread of the mighty God; or as others, the bread of Princes and Potentates, the moſt excellent bread. See V. Shindler, in אסר Jerom underſtandeth Chriſt (of whom the Manna was a type) ex hoc enim pane cæli (ſaith he) ſancti reficiuntur & angeli; with this bread of heaven ſaints and angels are refreſhed and fed; this ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, underſtand as fera è ſylvis (i.e.) ſylveſtris. So *Joh. Druſ. præter. lib.*4. becauſe it diſtilled from the clouds, not that it was heavenly bread nouriſhing to eternal life; that Chriſt denieth, affirming himſelf onely to be that bread. So 1 Cor. 10.

V. 32. Moſes gave you not that bread] Moſes gave not your fathers, ſo much as that periſhing bread the Manna, which was for a temporal uſe, but God gave it; and he now giveth you in me the bread of life.

the true bread from heaven] That which being apprehended by faith ſhall nouriſh you to eternal life; here this ἀληθινὸν, is put in oppoſition to the type which their fathers did eat in the wilderneſſe, in the tipe true; to typifie, as the thing figured, ſo the figure; for that Manna was a figure of Chriſt, that ſame ἄρτος ζωτικὸς, life-giving bread (Nazianzen orat. 35.) truely but ſpiritually and myſtically to feed our ſoules to eternal life,

V. 33. He which cometh down from Heaven] That is Chriſt v. 35.

V. 34. evermore give us this bread] Either they ſpake ironically, and ſcoffingly, as the Samaritan. chap. 4. 15. So Mat. 27. 42. or they herein diſcover, that their minds were all on their bellies.

V. 35. cometh unto me] By true faith. See verſe 36. this ſame ὁ ἐρχόμενος πρός με, cometh unto me, importeth an acceſſion to (as of them that give their names to Chriſt by Baptiſme) and a communion with, and participation of Chriſt, as they have who truly believe in him, ſhall never hunger] See chap. 4. 24. in theſe termes, ſhall never hunger ----ſhall never thirſt, he ſheweth them the vaſt difference between the manna and Chriſt: that ſatisfied the eaters for a little time, but this, for ever; that nouriſhed, and ſuſtained the mortall body for a ſhort ſeaſon, as verſe 49. but this, ſhall ſuſtein to all eternity.

V. 36. ye alſo have ſeen me and beleeve not] He noteth their voluntary blindneſſe (as Mat. 13. 13, 14, 15.) who ſufficiently ſeeing the admirable effects of his divine power, yet would not beleeve in him: the curſe was upon them which was threatned. Iſaiah 6. 9. So, auribus apertis, ſurdi erant, Auguſtin. they were deaf with open ears.

V. 37. all that the Father giveth me] All whom he elected, ſhall believe in Chriſt, and obey the Goſpel, and ſo not periſh. He prepoſſeſſeth an objection which ſome might have made: behold we here preſent have heard and followed thee; why appeareth not this effect, of beleeving in thee in all of us? he firſt intimated that ſome of the multitude already did, and others afterward ſhould beleeve, and therein have a bleſſed refreſhing reſt, and peace of conſcience in Chriſt (Rom 5. 1, &c.) Secondly, he derived the matter unto the fountain, Gods free election to faith in, and ſalvation by Chriſt. See Rom. 8. 29, 30

V. 38. I came down from heaven] The deity could not deſcend by changing place, becauſe he comprehendeth all, and can be comprehended of none; neither came his humane body from heaven, but was truly of the ſeed of Abraham, (See Hebr 2. 16.) but he is ſaid to come down from heaven, in reſppect of his incarnation, wherein the deity united to the humanity, makes one perſon of Chriſt, God and man.

V. 39. This is the Fathers will, &c.] Becauſe they underſtood not, what he meant by that will of God, for which he came from heaven, he expreſſeth it here, to be, that he ſhould ſave all the Elect.

V. 40. and beleeveth on him] He here ſheweth the meanes of ſalvation, faith; as Eph. 2 8. and who are they to whom the Father hath given him; thoſe only that beleeve in him: here look for thy calling and election. See Rom. 8. 30. 2 Pet. 1. 10. 2 Cor. 1. 22. Epheſ. 1. 13.

V. 41. murmured at him] Becauſe they underſtood the words of Chriſt carnally; when he filled their bellies, they had him in the opinion of their long expected Meſſias, they would have then made him their king: but when he telleth them the truth, and teacheth them divine and heavenly things, they murmur and ſtart back: obſerve here the ſeed and beginning of their fearful apoſtacie and falling from Chriſt; it was murmuring at the truth through unbelief: it is commonly ſo ſtill.

V. 42. Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph?] See Mat. 13. 55. Luke 4. 22. becauſe they expected a magnificent and externally glorious Meſſias: they were offended at Chriſt in the forme of a ſervant, and man of ſorrows, though ſo coming to ſave them: and probably they underſtood him, as if he had ſaid, that he was not born in this world among men, but came down as an Angel from heaven; they knew not that he was truly God, as truly man: ſo perverſe is carnal reaſon; that which ſhould have been an argument of gratitude, (that he vouchſafed to make himſelf of no reputation, to honour them with the the title of the ſons of God) they make the ground of their impious contempt of him.

V. 43. murmur not among your ſelves] As if he had ſaid, my words contain no matter of ſcandall; the fault is in your ſelves, who can neither beleeve nor underſtand them; hecauſe God hath juſtly given you up to ſpiritual blindneſſe and undbeleef, for your pride and obſtinacie.

V. 44. No man can come to me] No man can underſtand and beleeve theſe things, except God teach, enlighten, and give him faith; no man can know God, niſi Deo docente; that is, ſine Deo, non cognoſci Deum. Iraneus l. 4. c. 14.

except the Father, &c] As if he ſaid, no marvell that ye beleeve not; your bellies, not my Father, drew you hither; to come to Chriſt, is here, to believe on him, and to depend on him; as verſe 35. by drawing, he meaneth illuminating; and framing mens hearts to faith and obedience; which God doth by the holy ſpirit inwardly, working in his word and ordinance, as verſe 45. ſo true is that of Proſper, quod duce Deo, veniatur ad Deum, de vocat. Gent. l. 1. c. 24. God leading us, we come to God: here then is left no place for pride or contempt of others; for as the ſame well ſaith *q. ſ. c.*25. tales fuerunt, qui ſunt attracti, quales hi, qui in ſuâ duritie ſunt relicti; they who are drawn (to Chriſt by the Father;) were ſuch as theſe who are left in their hardneſſe of heart.

V. 45. it is written] Iſaiah 54, 13. Jer. 31. 34. leſt they ſhould think (as perverſe men are ever apt to do) that all muſt needs be new doctrine which they underſtood not, he ſheweth what he had affirmed out of the Prophets; and withall, the reaſon why the perverſe hearers came not to him; becauſe the ſpirit of God taught them not, neither moved their hearts to faith and obedieuce.

V. 46. not that any man hath ſeen the Father] Meaning, you may not look for a call from heaven, or viſion of God, by whom you ſhould be admoniſhed to beleeve in me; he calleth by me, & by his ſpirit: thus ſpeaketh he to a carnal people, leſt they ſhould miſtake him, as in the reſt they did. See 1 Cor. 2. 10 Mat. 11. 27. John 1. 18.

V. 47. hath everlaſting life] He thus ſpeaketh in reſpect of the certainty of Gods election, and the ſeals thereof in our regeneration: they have eternal life here begun, to be accompliſhed in the world to come.

V. 48. I am the bread of life] In the participation whereof onely, is eternal life, and ſalvation.

V. 49. and are dead] Becauſe it is the ſhadow, or figure, but Chriſt the ſubſtance, which can nouriſh to eternal life.

V. 50 this is the bread] Meaning himſelf; of whom he ſpeaketh here in the third perſon comparing himſelf with the Manna; the Manna could not ſave any of the eaters thereof from death: but Chriſt only ſaveth us from death eternal, the ſecond death damnation.

V. 51. the living bread] Which lives and gives life to the world. That is, all the elect; ſee for the better underſtanding hereof, and of that which followeth Auguſtin. To. 3 de doctr Chriſtian. l. 3. c. 5, 10, 16 —-where he ſaith, Si----flagitium aut facinus videtur jubere, if (the Scripture) ſeemeth to command ſome impious or wicked act,---it is there a figurative ſpeech, Except, ſaith he, ye eat the fleſh of the ſon of man, and drink his blood ye have no life in you: it ſeemeth to command an impious and wicked act, therefore it is a figure, cammanding, or teaching us to communicate of the paſſion of the Lord, and ſweetly and profitably to lay up in memory, that his fleſh was crucified and wounded for us.

If any man eat of this bread] If any man beleeve in Chriſt: for as Auguſtin ſaith tract. 26 in Joh. credere enim in eum, eſt manducare panem vivum: for to beleeve, is to eat the living bread; and again ſaith the ſame qui manducat intus, non foris, qui manducat in corde, non qui premit dente: he that eateth within, not without, he that eateth with (or in) his heart, not he that cruſheth it with his teeth.

V. 52. how can this man give us, &c.] They underſtood that carnally, which he ſpake in a ſpiritual ſenſe.

V. 53, except ye eat the fleſh] Except ye ſpiritually apprehend Chriſt by faith. See on verſe 51.

V. 54. whoſo eateth my fleſh] By faith: for properly, and carnally, we cannot eat living bread, and ſuch is Chriſt, verſe 51. nor could that bread which came down from heaven, be that fleſh of Chriſt carnally to be eaten; but whole Chriſt, God and man (See on verſe 38.) the bread of life ſpiritually to be received.

V. 55. is meat indeed] Or truly, but ſpiritually: for that which is ſpiritually ſo, is truly ſo.

V. 56, dwelleth in me] This ſheweth it to be meant of a myſtical and ſpiritual eating; becauſe to eat his fleſh, is to dwell in him; and that as bodies are ſuſtained with meat and drink, ſo are our ſouls nouriſhed with the body and blood of Chriſt.

V. 57. he that eateth me] That beleeveth in me. See on verſe 51. and 56 and on verſe 54.

even he ſhall live by me] For though faith (by which the juſt ſhall live) looketh ſtrait on the fleſh of Chriſt crucified, yet it well knoweth that the power of the merit ſaving us, dependeth on the dignity of the perſon crucified, who is truly God and man; therefore Acts 20. 28 the Apoſtle ſaith concerning the Church, that God had purchaſed it with his own blood: ſo 1 John 1. 7. the blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all ſin. So 1 Cor. 2. 8. they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

V. 58. which came down from heaven] As verſe 50. See on verſe 38.

not as your Fathers did eat Manna] It ſhall not be with him that feedeth on me by faith, as with your fathers in the wilderneſſe, when they had eaten Manna, they yet died; but he that beleeveth in me ſhall be ſaved, to eternal life,

V. 59. in the ſynagogue] Openly in the Church or place where the Jewes weekly aſſembled for the publick worſhip of God.

V. 60. This is a hard ſaying] σκληρὸς, troubleſome, or irkſome to be heard; becauſe they took Chriſts words in a literal ſenſe, hard to be underſtood, ſaith Chryſoſtom. hom. 46.

who can bear it] Who can endure to hear it? who would not be offended at it? to eat the fleſh and drink the blood of man, is unnaturall and therefore the more ſtupid they to take thoſe words litterally; mark here the wretched effects of careleſſe hearing and miſunderſtanding the word of God.

V. 61. doth this offend you] Probably he ſpake this to them after he came out of the Synagogue, and heard their murmurings, and cenſuring his Sermon.

V. 62. What and if] Chap. 3. 13.

aſcend up where he was before] Are you troubled that I attribute ſuch vertue to the eating my fleſh? that I affirm it to be the bread of life which came from heaven? you ſhall ſee me ſhortly put off this aſſumed ſtate of humiliation, and be exalted above the heavens. See Rom. 1. 4. chap. 3. 13. Epheſ. 4. 9. they thought he would give them his body, carnally to eat, but he affirmed (ſaith Auguſtin) ſe aſcenſurum in cœlum, utique integrum: that he would aſcend into heaven, and that entire: then ſhould they know how he giveth his body, quia gratia ejus non conſumitur morſibus: and that his grace is not eaten by bits: that they ſhould ſee the Son of man aſcend: underſtand it of the witneſſes thereto appointed: poſſibly ſome of them who now murmured might be ſome of them: theſe words, where he was before: underſtand according to his deity: that the Son of man ſhould be ſeen aſcending where he was before: underſtand by conſidering the uſuall communication of properties, whereby that which is proper to either nature, is attributed to the whole perſon of Chriſt: ſo it is true: Chriſt ſuffered, his humanity did, his deity could not: So the Son of man aſcended where he was before: his deity was in heaven before, but his humanity then firſt arrived in heaven, when after his reſurrection he aſcended up into glory.

V. 63. it is the ſpirit that quickneth] You muſt underſtand theſe things ſpiritually, not carnally, for they are ſpirituall, (as Chryſoſtom interpreteth) and the ſpirit united to the humane nature, giveth life.

the fleſh profiteth nothing] That is (ſaith Auguſtine) ſola caro: the fleſh only, as the Apoſtle ſaith, knowledge puffeth up, that is, ſola, ſine charitate, if it be alone without charity.

V. 64. ſome of you that believe not] he ſaith not, who underſtand not theſe things; but he telleth them the cauſe of their miſunderſtanding, which was unbelief: he taxeth not all; leſt if any preſent were curable; they might otherwiſe have been caſt down to deſpair.

for Jeſus knew] This the Evangeliſt inſerteth, leſt any ſhould think that Chriſt raſhly cenſured them of unbelief: many hypocritically followed him, which though men knew not, Chriſt well knew.

and who ſhould betray him] Who would betray him, as if he ſaid, he did not only know all things paſt and preſent, but alſo all things to come.

V. 65. therefore I ſaid unto you] He repeateth what he ſaid, (verſe 44.) with application to the unbeleevers: as if he ſaid: therefore are you offended through unbelief, becauſe my Father hath not given you faith to believe in me to your ſalvation: you are joyned in bodily preſence, but not in ſpirit, not in faith.

V. 66. from that time] ἐκ τούτου, the Syriack hath it; from that word; for thoſe things which they could not underſtand concerning eating his fleſh, and drinking his blood; many who had given their names to him deſerted him: thus was the Prophecie fulfilled, which foretold that he ſhould be a rock of offence, Iſaiah 8. 14. See 2 Tim. 2. 15. 1 John 2. 19. 1 Cor 11. 19. no wonder if many are ſcandaled at our doctrine, and ſeparate from our miniſtery; they that were not elected, were offended and ſeparated from Chriſt.

V. 67. Will ye alſo go away] Which he ſaid not that he was ignorant of the future (for he knew all from the beginning, ver. 64.) but to occaſion a clearer confeſſion of Peter in the name of the reſt, and to propoſe his, as an example of conſtancy: alſo to admoniſh them not to joyn themſelves with Apoſtates and Separatiſts, which none ſhall do that are grounded in Chriſt: and not to follow multitudes to evill and forſaking of Chriſt. It may teach us not to be offended, when many fall away, who ſeemed heretofore very zealous followers of Chriſt, and profeſſours of truth: for as multitudes can give no patronage to ſinners; ſo neither ſhall the paucity of believers hurt the faithful: they only who continue to the end ſhall be ſaved; that is, they only to whom God giveth perſeverance; for (as Auguſtine ſaith, Tom. 7. reſponſ. ad art. fal. 8.) It is the will of God, that one ſhould continue in a good will, who alſo before he be forſaken, forſaketh no man, and converteth many to him, who had forſaken him: he ſaith, will ye alſo? it is in our power to fall, but not to riſe again: that we do not fall away, it is only Gods mercy preſerving us; and Proſper ſaith well, de vocat. Gent. lib 2. cap. 12. Ideo liberum eſſe diſcedere, ut non diſceſſiſſe ſit præmium, therefore it is free to depart, that it may be a reward not to have departed.

V. 68. the words of eternall life] The Goſpel teaching us all the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation, which if we believe and obey, we ſhall have eternal life through the merits of Jeſus Chriſt, whom the goſpel declareth unto us. See c. 3. 16. Rom. 1. 16. &c.

V. 69. and believe] See Mat. 16. 16. See c. 1. 14. 1 John 1. 1.

V. 70. Have not I choſen you, &c.] We muſt underſtand the one party to be choſen per miſericordiam, and the other per judicium, as Auguſtine ſaith, de cor. & gra. cap. 7. To, 7. thoſe he choſe to preach, and obtain his kingdome; but this to ſhed his blood.

is a devill] A malicious wicked man, an informer, a traitour, poſſeſſed and put on by the evill ſpirit: this he foretelleth, that they might not be ſcandaled, when they ſhould ſee his end.

V. 71. Judas Iſcariot] Ἰσκαριώτης. Hebr. איש קריות iſh Kirioth; Jeroms firſt conjecture is probable, Iſcariotes, vel à vico, aut urbe in quâ ortus eſt, &c. (wherein Chryſoſtome hom. 33. in Mat. agreeth with him) Cairioth is a town in the tribe of Judah, Joſh. 15. 25. ſome therefore will have him ſo called, as if it were ſaid, Judas a man of Cairioth. Some derive the name from that which ſignifieth defection, for a reward.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1. W*Alked in Galilee*] Went about from place to place, to preach the goſpel, and to heal the ſick for confirmation thereof.

V. 2. feaſt of tabernacles] Levit. 23. 34, 42, 43. in this feaſt, they were to dwell ſeven dayes in Booths and tents, in remembrance of their dwelling in tents in the wilderneſſe, Exod. 23. 16. it is called חג האסף chag haaſiph, the feaſt of gathering fruits, and חג הסכות chag haſſucoth, the feaſt of coverings or tabernacles, 70. ἑορτὴ σκηνῶν; σκηνοπηγία: Chryſoſtome reckoneth it five moneths after the Paſſover; but Levit. 23. 34. ib. verſe 5. it appeareth ſix.

V. 3. that thy diſciples] That is, thoſe whom thou wouldeſt have to follow thee: for his diſciples who novv did follow him, had ſeen his miracles: this they ſayed probably in deriſion: for in the fifth verſe it appeareth that they believed not in him: faith is not by any carnall prerogative, but a ſpecial gift of God, chapter 1. 13

V. 4. ſhew thy ſelf to the world] Go up to the feaſt, and do thy miracles in ſuch great confluences of people, that thereby thy fame may be ſpread abroad to all other nations alſo.

V. 5. Neither did his brethren believe] His kindred. See on verſe 3.

V. 6. My time is not yet come] My opportunity is not yet. So verſe 8. for the word here uſed is, καιρὸς, that is, opportunitas temporis, or tempus conſtitutum (as Luke 20 10. Rom. 5. 6.) that is, as Theophylact interpreteth, ὁ τοῦ καιροῦ ϗ θανάτου, of my death and paſſion, before which he carefully avoyded the malicious violence of the Jewes, that he might perform all thoſe things which concerned our redemption, confirmation of our faith, and ſalvation; but when the appointed time was come, he went before his diſciples toward Jeruſalem, where he well ſaw, and foretold that he muſt ſuffer, as willingly offering himſelf to death, in order to his fathers will, and our ſalvation.

V. 7. The world cannot hate you] That is, the unregenerate do not hate you, becauſe you are of them; the world loveth her own: the Prieſts and Phariſees do not perſecute you, becauſe you communicate with them in their unblief, they embrace you as their obedient children: me they hate, becauſe I reprove their ſins. So dangerous a vice is pride, it can abide no reproof: ſo impoſſible is it to have peace with the world, except we will ſhare with them in their wickedneſſe; and impoſſible it is to preach the truth ſincerely, without the malice of impious men, whoſe ſins we muſt reprove. The Jewes pretended that they were angry with Chriſt, only becauſe he profaned the Sabbath, &c. but the truth was, it was becauſe he diſcovered, and ſpake againſt their ſin and hypocriſie; for he profaned not the Sabbath.

V. 8. Go ye up unto this feaſt] This ſaith he, juſtly leaving them to themſelves, vvho would not believe in him. See Pſalm 81. 12.

I go not up yet] Ἐγὼ οὔπω ἀναβαίνω, I do not yet go up: See the reaſon verſe 6. my opportunity is not yet come. I do not go up with you, who believe not in me.

for my time, &c.] Chap. 8, 20. and verſe 6.

V. 9. He abode ſtill in Galilee] He ſtayed awhile after they were gone up to the feaſt, untill he knevv it fit time.

V. 10. but when his brethren were gone up] The Galileans vvere vvont to go up to thoſe ſolemnities, by kindreds, and companies of neighbours, Luke 2. 44. Chriſt vvould not novv go up ſo publickly; but when he knew that the malice of the Jews was ſomething more allayed, then he went up privately with his Diſciples, and ſome few followers.

V. 11. the Iews ſought him] That is, the people who had formerly heard him, ſeen his miracles, or heard of him: and poſſibly the high Prieſts and Rulers of the Iewes, who were the main ſticklers againſt Chriſt, theſe ſtudying by all means to deſtroy him, layed out, and enquired for him, being confident they ſhould have him at the feaſt: God appointed theſe ſolemn feſtivities, as for thankfull remembrance of his mercies ſhewed them; ſo alſo for occaſions of their publick rejoycing therein, and the maintenance of love,charity and unity among them; but they herein took occaſion to lay wait for blood and to perſecute their Saviour: ſuch is the impious perverſeneſſe of men; the devil is never more conſtantly ſerved, than on the Lords day.

V. 12. much murmuring]γογγυσμὸς, whiſpering,or ſecret talking concerning him, muttering, ſome maliciouſly blaſpheming him; ſome prayſing and defending his parts, but ſecretly, for fear of their malicious Rulers and high Prieſts.

V. 13. for fear of the Iews] No man ſpake well openly,for fear of the Rulers and Prieſt. See Chap. 9.22. nor poſſibly durſt they ſpeak evil freely and publickly, for fear of the people.

V. 14. about the midſt of the feaſt] About the fourth day of this feaſt, verſe 2. now was his time to preach the Goſpel: what he now preached the Evangeliſt recordeth not: it was ſome divine learning, and to the admiration of the Auditours, as appeareth, verſe 15.

V. 15. How knoweth this man letters] That is,τὰ ἱερὰ γράμματα, the Holy Scriptures, as 2 Tim. 3. 15. they would not in their unbelief acknowledge him to be the Meſſias of whom the Prophet Iſaiah 11.2,3. ſaid,the ſpirit of the Lord ſhall reſt upon him, the ſpirit of wiſedome and underſtanding, the ſpirit of knowledge, &c. and ſhall make him of quick underſtanding in the fear of the Lord. Which the Apoſtle alſo teacheth, Coloſ.2. 3. They admiring the Doctrine, and knowing that he had it not by ordinary and uſual means, ſhould have concluded that it was divine, and immediately from God, and ſo have acknowledged the evidence of the Spirit therein: but ſo miſerable a blindneſſe doth unbelief bring with it, that all (the moſt indiſputable) Arguments, are there retorted and perverted, to the deſtruction of the wicked. See Acts 2. 17. Mark 6. 3. Mat.13.55 neither is here any patronage for thoſe who neglect or deſpiſe learning.See 1 Tim.4.13.15,16.Titus 1. 5.9.

V. 16. My doctrine is not mine] He ſpeaketh, as he is man: I learned it not of man, but of God: and here accommodateth his anſwer to the Iewes opinion of him, who thought him to be mere man; but it was the truth and doctrine of of God; for there is but one truth of God the Father, Son,and Holy Ghoſt, which Chriſt God and man preached: this οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὴ is not in me, is thus to be underſtood: I invent no new thing, I ſpeak the eternall truth of God whoſe meſſenger I am, the onely mediatour between God and man, (1 Tim. 2. 5.) I ſpeak the Doctrine and word of him, who ſent me ſo to ſpeak.

V. 17. If any man will do his Will] He ſecretly toucheth the cauſe of their miſunderſtanding his doctrine, that is their want of the true fear of God,and obedience to him.(See c.14.15,16, 17,21. 23.) take away your doubting anger,envy and vain hatred towards me, καὶ οὐδὲν τὸ κωλῦον ὑμᾶς nothing ſhall let you to know this, that my words are the words of God. Chryſoſtom.

whether I ſpeak of my ſelf] See Chap. 14. 24. the meaning is, if any man truely fear God, and will indeed ſet his heart to believe and obey him, he ſhall be ſatisfied; and clearly reſolved, of the Divine truth of the Goſpel: it muſt be a ſound and well affected palate which muſt judge of taſts, the ſick and diſaffected cannot: the precepts of righteouſneſſe are bitter to evil livers. *Lactantius, l.*1. So alſo *Ierome l.*1.*ep.*16. ita ſe natura habet ut amara ſit veritas; it cometh naturally to paſſe that truth is bitter;that is, to the wicked. See 1 Cor.2. here Chriſt intimateth that the Iews were incompetent Iudges of his Doctrine, becauſe their malice and wickedneſſe had blinded them

V. 18. he ſpeaketh of himſelf] He who teacheth his own inventions, affecteth praiſe of men.

V. 19. did not Moſes] Exod.24.3 he anſwereth their objection concerning healing on the Sabbath, by their own practice in that they circumciſed on the Sabbath,v.22.23.

why go ye about to kill me ?] c.5. 18. this ſpeech he addreſſed to the Prieſts and governours,watching their opportunity, and taking counſel how to deſtroy him, as a profaner of the ſabbath; this interrogation is very emphatical; as if he had ſaid, how unjuſt are you who would kill me as a violater of Gods Law; profaner of the Sabbath ? Suppoſe that were ſo, that all work on the Sabbath, were profanation of the Sabbath: how unjuſtly do you condemne that in me which your ſelves both doe, and allow for good ? you circumciſe on the Sabbath,when the eighth day, on which circumciſion was to be adminiſtred, fell on the Sabbath day: is not circumciſion more near to the nature of a ſervile work, than without any more labour to cure by ſpeaking the word ? muſt (in your ſenſe) a precept of the moral law give place to a ceremoniall ? muſt Gods Law give place that Moſes law may be fulfilled by your circumciſing an infant, and may not the ground and ſumme of the law, charity and ſhewing mercy, be practiſed on the Sabbath ?

V. 20. thou haſt a Devil] This ſeemeth a common manner of ſpeaking among the Jewes, when they would expreſſe a man furiouſly diſtracted,or dangerouſly erring, which they blaſphemouſly apply to Chriſt.

V. 21. and ye all marvel] Becauſe I did it on the Sabbath day, θορυβεῖσθε, ταράττεσθε, Chryſoſtome, ye clamour and are troubled.

22. Moſes therefore, &c.] Levit.12 3. but indeed Moſes did not firſt preſcribe the Law of circumciſion, he received and preſcribed therein onely that which God commanded Abraham and his poſterity to do in their generations, untill Chriſt the end of the law to every believer, ſhould come. See Gal.5. 2,&c.

but of the fathers]Gen.17 10. Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob,and the fathers before Moſes.

V. 23. that the law of Moſes ſhould not be broken] or without breaking the Law of Moſes. The Law given by the Miniſtery of Moſes.

V. 24. judge not,&c.] Deut.1. 16. Judge me not according to any outward appearance to be meer man; but conſider the Divine Power in my works, which ye calumniate: he calleth that righteous judgement which is without reſpect of perſons, according to truth and equity,in which the Iews in theſe their raſh and baſphemous cenſures, vehemently erred; ſuppoſing that all was right which they did, however erroneous; and all evil and cenſurable, which Chriſt did, who neither did nor could erre any thing: their ground beeing, becauſe they,the high Prieſts,Scribes and Phariſees were in prime authority and honour among men, and Chriſt in his ſtate of humiliation and form of a ſervant, ſeemed to them but a mere, deſpicable, poor man: ſo they valued not the truth, and equity of things,and how agreeable they were to Gods law, but of what authority and dignity the ſpeakers or acters were, with men.

V. 25. then ſaid ſome] They wondered that the authority of the Rulers could not yet prevail againſt him, but yet acknowledged the power of God therein, that they could not with all their power ſilence him.

V. 26. do the Rulers know indeed,&c.] Doe our High Prieſts and Elders certainly know that he is the promiſed Meſſias, and therefore ſuffer him thus publickly and freely to control and reprove them ? if not how eaſily might they take him; ſo might it ſeem to men,who conſidered not herewith the coercive power of God limiting their fury, untill the appointed time, that Ieſus was to ſuffer for our redemption.

V. 27. no man knoweth] This tradition ſeemed to have begining from ſome miſ-underſtood Propheſies, as Iſaiah 53.8.

V. 28. whom ye know not] He upbraideth their confidenoe of knowing him, ſeeing they know not his father, nor his unſpeakable generation: you know of what humane Parents,of what family as man,I am. but you know not him that ſent me to be a Miniſter of the Circumciſion for the truth of God, to confirm the promiſes made unto the fathers. Rom. 15.8.

V. 29 but I know him]As if he ſaid,you think you know me and my Father, but you are deceived, not knowing that I am coequal and coeternal with God the Father;and that I took not this honor of being a Mediator and Saviour; but that in the fulneſſe of time, by my incarnation, came I into this world, appointed thereto by God. See Heb.5.4.5.and c.1.18.Mat. 11. 27.

V. 30. but no man laid hand on him] Becauſe the iſſues of life and death, with the time and manner, are onely in Gods hand: ſee how their malicious fury is bridled,as Chryſoſtome ſaid,ἀοράτως invisibly, by a ſecret and unſeen hand of Divine providence: ſo God ſtill protecteth his, reſtraining the precipitate malice of the enemy.

V. 31. many of the people believed] Though many were hardned in their obſtinate unbelief, yet the Word of God was not without good effect with others, whoſe hearts he had opened. It is one and the ſame Sunne, which giveth light to ſound eyes, but blindeth the infirme; one and the ſame truth preached, hardneth and more blindeth ſome hearers,and cauſeth others to believe and obey to ſalvation, Nazianzen, Orat. 17. It ſeemeth by their ſpeech, that Chriſt wrought many miracles among the people, which the Evangeliſt mentioneth not.

more miracles] This Evangeliſt ſpeaketh not of many beſides; (the turning of Water into Wine, chap. 2. the diſcovery of the Samaritans ſins, chap.4. and the healing the Rulers Son: curing the paralytical, chap. 5. feeding 5000. with five loaves; &c. John 6. his walking on the Sea) therefore probably many more are omitted. See chap. 20

V, 32. Phariſees and chief prieſts ſent officers] Theſe deſiring to appear the chief zelots, moſt oppoſed Chriſt, envying the peoples good opinion of him, and conceiving their own honour eclipſed thereby; this vexing them, they break out into open violence, the uſual armour of Hypocrites, where they cannot prevail with arguments: thus is authority (appointed to defend truth) abuſed to impious tyranny. See Acts 22. 24.

V. 33 yet a little while] Till the appointed time, I ſhall preach and do my fathers will, whether ye will or no.

V. 34. ye ſhall ſeek me] chap 13 33. In your extream calamities ſhortly to come upon you, ye ſhall wiſh me with you again; but I ſhall return to him that ſent me, and be ſecure from your malicious inquiſition.

V. 35. among the Gentiles] Or Greeks. Will he go teach the Jewes who are ſcattered here and there, among the Getiles ? or poſſibly they might here mean the Gentiles in general; for ſo they ſometimes called all nations, which were not of the race of the Jewes. See Rom. 1. 16. Rom. 2. 9, 10 & 3. 9 & 10. 12. &c,

V. 36. what manner of ſaying is this] What meaneth he hereby ? ſuch a quære was among the Diſciples, c. 16, 17,18. only that there was a deſire to be enformed of the truth, wherein Chriſt ſatisfied them : but here is a captious agitation of Chriſts words, without any ſerious care to underſtand their ſcope and meaning, therefore Chriſt here leaveth them in ſuſpence.

V. 37. In the laſt day, that great day, &c.] Wherein they were to have a ſolemn aſſembly, and to abſtain from all ſervile works, Se Levit. 23. 36. the choice of this time imported, the end of thoſe Ceremonies was to bring men to Chriſt ; and now being to depart home, he thus gave them to carry with them ἐφόδια πρὸς σωτηρίαν viands to ſalvation, as Chryſoſtome noteth.

Jeſus ſtood and cried ἔκραξε : He ſpake with a loud voice, that the multitude might hear him, and to ſhew his authority and liberty of ſpeaking to the people. The occaſion of this ſpeech concerning water, might poſſibly be that which ſome write ; that the Jews went on this day with great ſolemnity, to draw water out of the Fountain of Siloam, at the foot of Mount Sion, and to bring it to the Altar, ſinging out that of Iſaiah, 12. 3. With joy ſhall ye draw water out of the Wells of ſalvation, &c. By this and many other traditions, they having perverted the Law (which commanded a ſpiritual rejoycing) into ſuperſtitious clamours, Chriſt cried out, to recal them from earthly to Heavenly waters.

V. 38. he that believeth] He citeth not here any particular place of Scripture ; but this may be gathered out of Scriptures, where mention is made of the effuſion of the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, as Joel 2. 28 Iſaiah 44. 3. and 55. 1. 11. So acts 2. 18. is interpreted : therefore the Syriac Interpreter giveth it, as the Scriptures have ſaid.

V. 39. this ſpake he of the Spirit] The Evangeliſt interpreteth the words of Jeſus, taken out of —— Joel 2. 28. Iſaiah 44. 3.

the holy Ghoſt] The viſible graces of Gods Spirit, ſpoken of by the fore-cited Prophets, which did accordingly flouriſh in the Church after the aſcenſion of Chriſt. Theſe ſeveral gifts were all the effects of one and the ſame ſpirit (Eph. 4. 4, 7. &c.) and therefore were uſually called the holy Ghoſt, Acts 2. 4 and 4. 8. 31. and 6. 5. and 7. 55. and 8 15. 18 and 10. 44, 47 and 11. 15. and 19. 2, &c. as there is but one kind of water diſtilling on the herbs in rain, which in the effects thereof admirably varieth in the production of fruits, plants and flowers, it ſhewing it ſelf (as Cyril. cat. 16. expreſſeth it) λευκὸς μὲν ἐν κρίνῳ, ἐρυθρὸς δὲ ἐν ῥόδῳ, white in Lily, but red in the Roſe : ſo is there but one Holy Ghoſt working varieties of gifts in men, for the edification of the Church.

V. 40. This is the Prophet, Deuteronomie, 18. 15. &c. See Cap 1. 21.

V. 41. but ſome ſaid, ſhall Chriſt come out of Galilee] Such is the condition of truth, it ever meeteth with ſome oppoſers : had not their envy blinded them, they might have found that Chriſt was born at Bethlehem, and of the linage of David : the wicked are quick-ſighted to finde out Arguments from perverted and miſunderſtood Scriptures to ſtrengthen their unbelief ; but ſlow and dull to learn the truth, this is Satans malice, and mens unhappy weakneſs to turn that to deſtruction which God in mercy gave for comfort and ſalvation.

V. 42 hath not the Scripture ſaid] Mat. 2. 5. Mic. 5. 2. See alſo Pſalm 132. 11. had not malice and envy blinded them, they might eaſily have been ſatisfied in this ſcruple : had they but enquired with a minde to believe ; doubtleſs Jeſus would not have concealed it from them : had they but called to mind, the wiſe men from the Eaſt, their enquiry, Herods rage againſt the poore infants ; John Baptiſts teſtimony, &c. theſe or any of theſe might have ſatisfied them ; but how little a thing will make them ſtumble, who are ready and willing to fall ?

V. 43 ſo there was a diviſion] Σχίσμα, a ſchiſm, or diviſion, or rent, Auguſtine tom. 7. contr. Creſcon. Gram. l. 2. c. 6 intimateth that a Schiſm is, Recens congregationis, ex aliqua ſententiarum diverſitate diſſentio, a new or late ſprung-up diſſention of the Congregation or Church, out of ſome diverſity of opinions. An Hereſie he ſaith is, Schiſma inveteratum, an old Schiſm becauſe of him] No wonder if there be Schiſms now among us, ſeeing, in the ſacred preſence of Chriſt, and when his ſelfe preached the moſt infallible Truth of the Goſpel, there were Schiſmes, and Diviſions. See Matthew, 10. 5. the Cauſe is in the ſecret corruption of mens Hearts, not in the Goſpell of Peace.

V. 44. but no man laid hands on him] See v 30. Superſtition is ever cruel, but Gods providence over-ruleth all.

V. 45. why have ye not brought him] Theſe greedy Wolves were ſo impatient, that they are angry with their Meſſengers, returning without him, not hearing or regarding why they tooke him not.

V. 46. never man ſpake, &c.] They admired the grace in his lips, Pſal 45. 2. So Matt. 7. 28, 29. but malice makes men ſo blinde and ſtupid, that they cannot be ſenſible of any the moſt excellent graces in thoſe they hate. See 1 Kings 22. 8. 1 John 3. 12. It is natural to judge them evil whom we hate : but ſuch is the power of God, they who went with purpoſe to take him, were taken with his excellency, their malice being turned to love and admiration, and they made proclaymers of his Divine Excellency. See 1. Sam. 19. 20.

V. 47. are ye alſo deceived] Blinded with envy, they would not admit that Jeſus could preach any thing worthy of admiration, therefore they conclude that they were beguild by his fair ſpeeches: pride ever thinks it cannot erre, and that rather all the world is dark, than it ſelf blind.

V: 48. have any of, &c.] Thus they alledge mans authority againſt Gods: ſuppoſing that the chair of Rulers and Phariſees had infallibility entailed on it.

V. 49. are curſed] It was their high ambition which made them conceive all men bound to follow them, though to deſtruction, and a proud opinion of themſelves and their authority, cauſed them to deſpiſe and curſe all others diſſenting from their impiety and unbelief. It is a dangerous Paradox which Card. Bellarmine holdeth de Roman. pontif. lib. 4. cap. 5. Si autem Papa erraret præcipiendo vitia, vel prohibendo virtutes, teneretur Eccleſia credere vitia eſſe bona, & virtutes malas —— but if the Pope ſhould erre by commanding vices, or forbidding vertues, the Church were bound to believe that vices were good, and vertues evil : and an —— uncharitable preſumption of the Council of Trent, to ſeal up their many Canons with ſo many Anathemas to them who diſſent from their errours. See Concil. Tridentin. concil. tom. 9. Severin. Bin. See more on v. 51.

V. 50. he that came to Jeſus by night] c. 3. 2.

one of them] A Phariſee, and probably one of their Sanhedrin, or great Council.

V. 51. doth our Law judge any man before. &c.] Doth our Law condemn ? See Deut. 17. 8, 10. and 19. 15. their part it was to have inſtructed the people, not to upbraid their ignorance ; and to pray for them and bleſſe them, not to judge, damn and curſe them: Quid temerarius Dei tribunal aſcendis ? ſaith Optatus, l. 2. Who art thou that judgeſt another mans ſervant ? to his own maſter he ſtandeth or falleth, Rom. 14. 4. It was Conſtantines anſwer to the Donatiſts ; Petitis à me in ſeculo judicium, cum ego ipſe Chriſti judicium expectem; you deſire judgement of me in this world, whereas I my ſelf expect the judgement of Chriſt. So Rom. 14. 10. We ſhall all ſtand before the judgement ſeat of Chriſt. Thoſe whom God hath ſet in authority, may and ought to judge of ſecular buſineſſes ; but of mans final eſtate, Chriſt onely is to judge. That Judge which pronounceth before he hath heard both parties, is unjuſt, even where he giveth a juſt ſentence ; but to condemne any man unheard, is an injuſtice againſt which, the Lawes of God and Nature caution ; as alſo to execute any man uncondemned. See Salvian. de gub. D. lib. 8 fine. Tertul. Apol cap. 1. Lactant. divin. Inſtit. l. 5. cap. 1. See alſo Acts 25. 16. Poſſibly Nicodemus ſaid this, not onely to diſſwade them from ſuch injuſtice, but alſo in hope, that if they would but hear Jeſus, they ſhould either be converted or convicted. Indeed, as even Julian could ſay in the cauſe of Numerius, who can be innocent if it be enough to accuſe. Ammnian. Marcellin. lib. 18.

V. 52. art thou alſo of Galilee] By way of reproach and contempt they named Galilee, though poſſibly they knew him to be no Galilean.

ſearch and looke] They bid Nicodemus go learn, as intimating his ignorance, or reproving his incogitancy.

ariſeth no Prophet] They would have no man think Jeſus ſo much as a Prophet ; therefore would they preſcribe Gods Power by cuſtome. So ſlender a ground had they, as commonly all Schiſmaticks and Hereticks have, which is, at leaſt to beg one principle, and to take ſome falſehood for granted, on which they would build the reſt. As here : Firſt, they make no queſtion but that Ieſus is a Galilean. Secondly, they conclude, that becauſe God never had raiſed any Prophet thence, therefore, he never would. The firſt was falſe, for Jeſus was of Bethlehem, and the ſecond in their ſence not true : for God called thence divers eminent Apoſtles ; and ſo their ſuperſtructions were all falſe and impious ; as that they ought not to follow Chriſt : that they who did, were ignorant of the Law, and curſed : that they who were in authority, ought to reſtrain them by Excommunication, or other puniſhments due to Hereticks, and to perſecute Chriſt, and thoſe that beleeved in him. Thus one abſurdity or falſehood granted, many more will follow.

V. 53. every man went, &c.] Divided in opinion, and confounded in Counſel, they could effect nothing untill the time by God appointed. See Acts, 28. 29. being at preſent fruſtrate of their Hope to apprehend and deſtroy Chriſt ; in great indignation they diſſolved their malignant councell, laying aſide, not leaving their blaſphemous malice.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 1. THe mount of Olives] An hill near Jeruſalem, on the Eaſt ; ſo called, for the abundance of Olives there growing : It was there Chriſt uſed to be in the night, Luke 21. 37.

V. 2. early in the morning] Here is deſcribed the peoples diligence to hear the Word, as Luke 21. 38. as alſo Chriſts zeale to preach the ſame, that he might inſtruct and ſave them, and herein appearath how little he was diſcouraged in his preaching the truth, by the blaſphemous cavils of Scribes and Phariſees : leaving his faithful Miniſters an example of diligence and conſtancy in their charge and Miniſtration: if thou wilt indeed be a ſervant of Chriſt, and preach the truth, look for contradiction; but let it not move thee, be thou conſtant, who knoweſt the reward.

all the people] πᾶς, All, that is, many who had formerly heard him teaching in the feaſt of Tabernacles, c. 7.14.37. Some of theſe came to be edified, and ſome to cavil.

V. 3. and the Scribes, &c.] See on Luke 20.1. they had power to have cenſured her in their conſiſtory, unto ſtripes, though the Romans permitted them not power of judicature in matters capitall, but they brought her to Jeſus that they might have whereof to accuſe him: See v. 6.

brought unto him a woman taken, &c.] Poſſibly the man (equally faulty, and lyable to the ſame puniſhment, Levit. 20.10. Deut. 22.22.) had eſcaped from them.

V. 4. this woman. &c.] They call him Maſter; now they meant to entangle him, as Matt. 22. 16. whom they uſed to ſtile a Seducer of the people; and they who were Judges, here act the part of accuſers, which is againſt the courſe of equity.

V. 5. now Moſes in the Law] Levit. 20.10, &c. They could remember and urge the Law againſt others ſin, but could not apply that to themſelves which it ſaith againſt injuſtice; to wit, condemning without cauſe, lawful witneſs, or hearing the parties accuſed. Concerning the Law by them here mentioned; we muſt know, that it was ſo ſevere, that evil might be taken away from the Land. and to terrifie the ſinners, by making offenders exemplary: See Numbers 25. 11. Sin is not known in impunity: that which they here did, was with purpoſe to enſnare Chriſt; they thinking, if he abſolved her, he ſhould appear to the people as an adverſary to the Law of God, and ſo not the Meſſias, but an impoſtor liable to a ſevere cenſure: but if he condemned her, he ſhould ſeem to annul the very purpoſe of his coming, who profeſſed to ſave them, and to propoſe grace and mercy, Ambroſ. ep. 76.

V. 6. that they might have to accuſe him] As a breaker of Moſes's Law. if he acquitted her, as they conceived he would, becauſe he ſhewed mercy to ſinners; and, as they pretended, taught concerning the Sabbath, contrary to Moſes, they preſumed by their conceived Dilemma to have taken him; but how vain is the wiſedome of man, againſt the truth and wiſedome of God, may appear in this example, See 1 Cor. 1.19. 20.

wrote on the ground] Some think he wrote that which he anſwered, or ſome more ſecret thing concerning the conſciences of the Informers: but ſeeing the Scripture ſpeaketh not what he wrote, we muſt not curiouſly enquire. Saint Ambroſe lib 9. epiſt. 76. ſaith, he wrote on the ground with his finger, who wrote the Law on the Tables of ſtone. For the reſt we may ſay with Auguſtine, epiſt. 121. cap. 15. Init. Eſt ergo in nobis, quædam, ut ita dicam, docta ignorantia: There is therefore in us, that I may ſo ſpeak, a kinde of learned ignorance: and as Jerome, Melius eſt aliquid neſcire ſecurè, quam cum periculo diſcere: tis better to be ſecurely ignorant of ſome thing, than to learn it with danger.

V. 7. he that is without ſin] See Deut. 17. 7. As if he had ſaid, ſhe is juſtly to be condemned; but you that accuſe others looke home, examine your own conſciences whether you are not guilty of the like, or as great ſins. Quomodo enim feras alieni ultorem, & proprii criminis defenſorem? —— Nonne ſe magis ipſe condemnat, qui in alio damnat, quod ipſe committit? Ambroſe qu. ſ. How could you endure a revenger of anothers faults, and a defender of his own? ——Doth not he more condemn himſelf, who condemneth that in another, which he committeth himſelf? The Jewes urged him again and again (while he ſeemed to ſlight their information) confident in his forbearance to anſwer, that they had now caught him in an unavoydable difficulty what ever he anſwered: Chriſt therefore replyed with due reſpect to the Law, maintaining the equity thereof: ſo anſwering, that they could not calumniate him for abſolving the ſinner, nor object againſt his Doctrine of Grace and Mercy, freely juſtifying ſinners; thus retorting the calumny, and ſtriking the ſleepy conſciences of the malepert accuſers, who vainly inſulted, as if others vices were their vertues: teaching all who will be accuſers of their brethren to begin at home; for a Gregory Nazianzen. ſaid, epiſt. 16. Cæſario fratri: how ſhall they reprove others ſin, who have not ἀφ' ἑςίας τὴν παῤῥησίαν, that is, confidence in their own innocency: but as the moſt ravenous and hurtfull birds, are commonly moſt quick-ſighted; ſo are the moſt wicked moſt ready and skilfull to finde out others faults: the eye ſeeth not it ſelfe, nor any thing which is too near it; ſo neither ſee we our own faults, except ſet at ſome diſtance and in another perſon: ſo David ſaw his fault in the perſon of the rich oppreſſour; till then he could not in himſelf. 2 Sam. 12. See on Matt. 7. 5.

V. 8. again he ſtooped down] Thereby giving them with their convicted conſciences, opportunity to bethink themſelves, and to ſteal away, that they might not at preſent be further detected and ſhamed: poſſibly, they might, in that he wrote in the duſt, reade ſome diſcovery of their ſinne and ſhame, which they would not for the World ſhould come to light, and knowledge of the people, of whoſe applauſe and good opinion they were extreamly ambitious: ſure it is, Chriſt knew all that they had done, could in a few Characters write enough to ſhame them, and that they were ſo fowly guilty that they were glad to be gone, for fear of further diſcovery as may be gathered, from v. 9.

V. 9. being convicted by their own conſcience] Hearing ſuch an unexpected anſwer, and out of Hope to accompliſh their deſigne upon him, their conſciences accuſing them, and fearing to confeſs themſelves ſinners (leſt their reputation with the people ſhould thereby be impaired) or to bring their pretended innocency to the teſt before him, who as they might well ſuſpect, might know and detect their ſecret failings: they choſe rather to take the opportunity of his ſtooping down, to go away; though in that receſſe, indeed confeſſing his impregnable wiſedome, and their owne guiltineſſe.

beginning at the eldeſt] Either (ſaith Ambroſe lib 7. ep. 58.) becauſe they who had lived longeſt, had more ſins; or becauſe they being more prudent, firſt apprehended the force of the ſentence. That which Theodoret. ſaith (in Jer. 17.1.) is true: there is nothing more powerfull than the conſcience.

Jeſus was left alone] That is, in reſpect of all thoſe accuſers; not ſimply alone; for theſe things were acted before his Diſciples, and a great multitude of People: Therefore, it is ſaid, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt, ἐν μέσῳ, muſt relate to a company.

V. 10. and ſaw none but the woman] None belonging to that cauſe: no accuſer, nor officer attending her.

where are thoſe thine accuſers] Not being ignorant of their departure, but making manifeſt to all preſent, that he abſolved her not contrary to the law, ſeeing the informers and witneſſes deſerted the cauſe.

V. 11. She ſaid, no man, Lord] She anſwereth to the ſecond quære, not weighing the firſt, ſeeing her accuſers were gone: ſhe knew, that condemnation ought not to goe before conviction.

neither do I condemne thee] Neither will I condemne thee, Ambroſe readeth, lib. 7. ep. 58. others read with us; κατακρίνω, neither doe I condemne. I will not uſe leſſe clemency than they: See Chapter, 3. 17. this he ſaid, not to diſſolve the Law, but to ſhew mercy, and to call to repentance: and for that he would not take upon him to be a Temporall Iudge, as Luke 12. 14. as if he ſaid, I leave the Magiſtrate his right of judicature? and ſeeing they condemne thee not, neither do I, who came to pardon ſinnes, and ſave ſinners: he ſaith not, no man ought to condemne thee (that had been to pervert Juſtice, to condemne the Law, and to juſtifie the wicked, for certainly there are many ſins in adultery,) but he ſaith. hath no man condemned thee? He ſo ſheweth mercy, as not thereby to aboliſh political order: and here is a ſweet motive to repentance, that we may fly to his Mercy, from whoſe Juſtice we cannot fly. Fulgent. ad Venan. ep. 7.

go and ſinne no more] This ſaid he, that he might ſhew them, ſe homini peperciſſe, &c. (Auguſtin. Macedon. ep. 54.) that he ſpared man, but was not pleaſed with mans ſinne: this is true repentance, not onely to lament, but to forſake our ſinne: the end why God ſheweth Mercy, is that we may ſerve him more Holily. See Rom. 6. 4. Luke 1. 75. and this was here the greateſt and moſt abſolute condemnation of this womans ſin: For where the guilty is put to death, rather the perſon is executed than the ſinne: but where the ſinner leaveth his ſin, there is a diſcharge of the perſon whom Chriſt came to ſave, and a killing of ſins which he came to condemn in the fleſh. Rom. 8.3.

V. 12. I am the light of the world] Chapter, 1. 4, 5. and 9. 5.

V. 13, thy record is not true] ἀληθὴς is here taken for authentick or worthy to be credited; that which the Hebrewes call נאמן neeman, the Syriack שרירא ſhariro, (that is, firmum, validum) of שרר ſharar.

V. 14 though I bear record] Chap. 5. 31. he admitteth the antecedent, but rejecteth the conſequent: the ſenſe being: I do indeed for their ſakes who ſhall believe in me and be ſaved, declare and manifeſt my ſelf unto them, which is to teſtifie of my ſelf; but it thence followes not that my teſtimony is not true, or ought not, (as in caſes betwixt man and man, and humane intereſts) be taken for ſuch. Gods word which ye hear of me is infallibly true, and ſo to be taken, if all men in the world ſhould depoſe to the contrary, yet my record is true] Becauſe God is the only ſufficient witneſſe concerning himſelf. See 1 Iohn 5.6, 7, 9.

V. 15. ye judge after the fleſh] According to outward appearance, Chap. 7. 24.

I judge no man] That is, I do not now judge; I now am come to teach and propoſe conditions of mercy and ſalvation to penitent ſinners: or I judge not raſhly, as you do.

V. 16. for I am not alone] He doth not plainly and expreſly affirm his Godhead (that was yet vayled under the infirmity of the fleſh) but mentioneth his Father, whoſe Deity they acknowledged, to intimate the power he had to judge, who yet ſpared them, and inſtructed them how to avoid the judgement to come: he was not alone, the Father and the Holy Ghoſt were with him, nunquam enim poteſt à ſe Trinitas ſeparari. Ambroſ. in Luc. lib. 2. cap. 3. for the Holy Trinity can never be divided from it ſelf. See Fulgent. de fide orth. d. ad Donat. See 1 Iohn 5. 7.

V. 17. it

V. 17. it is alſo written in your Law] Deut. 17. 6. See Matt 18. 16. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ τῷ ὑμετέρῳ, in your Law; underſtand, as if he ſaid, that very Law which God gave your fathers, and which you have received from their hands, in which you glory.

the teſtimony of two men is true] That is, ſo taken in Law, not that it is alwayes ſo. See 1 Kings 21. 13. Matt. 26. 60. Act. 6. 11. but this he ſaith by way of conceſſion: and by this ſecret antitheſis he ſheweth, how unjuſt they were who profeſſed the Law, according to which they took that for granted, which two men witneſſed, but would not believe vvhat God the Father and himſelf teſtified.

V. 18. I am one that bear witneſs, &c.]He declareth that vvhich he before ſaid, I am not alone, verſe 16. as God he teſtifieth of himſelf, (the Meſſias, God and Man) and in the ſame act, the Father teſtifieth with him, for they are one God, and their works are undivided. See on verſe 16. Chriſt argueth (as Lyranus noteth) from the leſſer to the greater: the witneſſe of two men, according to Moſes Law, is ſufficient to confirm a truth, therefore much more ſufficient is the witneſs of two perſons of the Holy Trinity; men may deceive and ly, but God cannot: he might here alſo have cited the ſame teſtimony of the Holy Ghoſt; but that doctrine was not yet opportune, and ſeaſonable for them.

V. 19. ye ſhould have known my Father alſo] For they are one God. See cap. 10. 30.

V. 20. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus] See on Luke 21. 4. in their treaſury their offerings were kept, Mark 12. 41. this ſhews his undaunted conſtancy in the preſence of his enemies, and heat of their malice: no man yet medled with him, becauſe the providence of God limited all things to the appointed times, therefore they were yet reſtrained to teach us conſtancy and confidence in the truth. The Devil himſelf cannot reach beyond the length of his chain, (Rev. 20. 1, &c.) nor hurt the leaſt of Gods children, more than, or before he permitteth) who will make all things work for good to them that love him. Rom. 8. 28.

V. 21. Ye ſhall ſeek me] See Chap. 7. 34.

V. 22. Whither I go] See Chap. 7. 35.

V. 23. ye are from beneath] He ſheweth here the cauſe of their blindneſſe and unbelief: ye are earthly and carnall, therefore apprehend you not the Heavenly things which I teach you, no man is an apt Diſciple of Chriſt, whom Gods Spirit doth not make ſo: hence is the rarity of faith in the world.

I am not of this world] He denieth not his humane nativity, of the ſeed of Abraham; but he denieth that he hath any communion with ſin, and the corruptions of fleſh and blood: in which ſence he ſaith, the Apoſtles were not of this world, Chap. 15. 9. and 17. 16. though not free from ſin by nature (Epheſ. 2. 3.) but by grace and regeneration; not abſolutely (as Chriſt) but comparatively, and in reſpect of their juſtification by the merit of Chriſt. See Galat. 1. 4 Phil. 3. 20.

V. 24 I ſaid therefore unto you, &c.] Theſe words relate to the precedent declaration; the meaning is, the world periſheth in ſin and unbelief (1 Cor. 11. 32.) if you are of this world, and come not to me by faith for your juſtification, you muſt needs periſh in your ſins.

that I am he, &c.] That I am the Meſſias and ſole Saviour of the World: this ſheweth that there is ſalvation to none, but thoſe who conſtantly hope for, and expect in Chriſt, whatſoever the Prophets have foretold concerning the Meſſias.

ye ſhall die in your ſins] For there is ſalvation in none other, Acts 4 12. He onely taketh away the ſins of the World, Chap. 1. 29. He onely juſtifieth ſinners by ſuffering for them, paying the full price of their redemption, and making their peace with God. (See Romanes 3. 24. and 5. 24. and 5. 3. and 8. 1, 2.) therefore, if your ſinnes be not done away in Chriſt, you ſhall in them dy eternally.

V. 25. even the ſame that I ſaid] The Sonne of God, and Saviour of the World, as I taught you from the beginning.

V. 26. I have many things to to ſay, and to judge of you]As if he had ſaid, I could detect, and object againſt you many things, but becauſe I ſee my word is to you, but as the Sun-beams to the clay, more hardning you, I forbear now; yet my Father, who ſent me to teſtifie the truth to you, will once appear true in all that he hath threatned unbelievers, and will vindicate his Word againſt all impious deſpiſers of the ſame. See 2 Tim. 2. 13. It may be a comfort to all that conſtantly adhere to the truth of Gods Word; though the world and generality of men oppoſe or contemn it, God will be true: as the aſcending fumes and vapours may for a time obſcure the light of the Sun toward us, they cannot extinguiſh it, ſo may emergent Hereſies, and oppoſitions of men veil the truth a while, they ſhall never finally prevail againſt it.

V. 27 they underſtood not] He noteth the ſtupidity of ſome of the hearers, who could neither underſtand promiſes, nor threatnings.

V. 28. When ye have lift up] That is, when you have crucified me, your own conſciences ſhall be convicted, that I am the Sonne of God See Matt. 27. 54. Acts 2. 37. Luke 23. 47, 48. which he ſpeaketh concerning thoſe who ſhould afterward repent and believe, for the reſt did not, nor to this day doe acknowledge him ſuch, and therefore periſh in their ſinnes.

V. 29. The Father hath not left me alone] That is, the power of the Spirit of God ever aſſiſteth me in my miniſtery; it is your own fault, if you feel it not in your hearts, active to faith and obedience. 2 Cor. 4 3, 4.

V. 30. many believed] The Bee ſucketh Honey where the Spider gathereth venome: the Word of Chriſt falleth like the ſnow and rain, (Deut. 32. 1, &c. Iſaiah 55. 10. Hebrewes, 4. 12. and 6, 7.) which maketh the venemous weeds grow up more ranck to the fire, and the wholſom herbs more fruitfull for the owners bleſſing.

V. 31. If ye continue in my Word] It is the end which crowneth all good actions, See Matt. 24. 13. Revel. 2. 10. Coloſ. 1. 23. it is not enough to begin well, Non quæruntur in Chriſtianis initia, ſed finis: Paulus male cæpit, ſed bene finivit: Judæ laudantur exordia, ſed finis proditione damnatur. Jerom. Furiæ ep. 21. in Chriſtians, not ſo much the beginning, as the end is conſiderable: Paul began ill, but ended well: Judas beginnings are commended, but his end was damnable for his treaſon.

V. 32. the truth ſhall make you free] For otherwiſe, they were ſlaves to ſin and errour: the good man even in ſervitude is free, but the wicked, etſi regnet, ſervus eſt, though he reigne is but a ſlave, and that not unto one man, but that which is more grievous to ſo many maſters, as he hath ſins. Proſper. out of Auguſtine de C. lib. 1. cap. 18. and then is the will free, when it ſerveth not vice and ſinne: that is the gift of God, which being loſt, niſi à quo potuit dari, non poteſt reddi, can be reſtored by none, but him, who could firſt give it. Proſper. ex Aug. de C. D. lib. 14. cap. 11.

V. 33. they anſwered him] They who were heard to calumniate, who believed not, though they had often been made vaſſals, and now were by the Romanes, yet they conceived that by right they ought to have been free; and that (however degenerate they were) yet that they had the priviledge of Abrahams ſonnes: not underſtanding, that onely regeneration by the Spirit of God could make them free, and the true children of Abraham, Romans 2. 29. Luke 19. 9. Matt 3. 9. Romans 9. 7, 8. Gal. 3 9. 29.

ye ſhall be made free] That is, as if we were not ſo already? thus are we generally ſecure under the Title of Chriſtians, whereas that ſacred Name ſhall more grievouſly condemne the wicked: and we may too truly ſay with Salvian de gub. D. lib. 6. O deplorable miſery, quam diſſimilis eſt nunc à ſeipſo populus Chriſtianus, id eſt, ab eo qui fuit quondam, How unlike is the Chriſtian people to it ſelf, that is, to ſuch as it was wont to be.

V. 34. whoſoever committeth ſinne] You boaſt of your freedome: but ſin is the greateſt ſervitude (Rom. 6. 16. 20. 2 Pet. 2. 19.) and the cuſtome thereof, the moſt unhappy tyranny, and the bonds thereof moſt hard to ſhake off. Sin reigning, a man hath a freewill (ſaith Fulgent. de incarn. & gra. cap. 19.) but free without God, not free under God, and therefore peſſimè atque ſerviliter liberum, wickedly and ſervilely free, becauſe not freed by the free gift of God ſhevving mercy.

V. 35. the ſervant abideth not in the houſe, &c.] This is the puniſhment and miſery of the ſervants of ſin: though they ſeem for a time to enjoy the priviledge of Gods Houſe, and to inſult over, and perſecute His children, yet are they not Heirs, but muſt at laſt be caſt out, as Iſmael vvas from Abrahams family, Gen. 21. 9. Gal. 4. 30.

V. 36. if the Son therefore ſhall make you free] This he ſaith, to ſhevv that vvhereas all men are born ſervants of ſinne, they are freed by grace onely, and the ſpirit of Adoption, by faith in Chriſt: and that all other prerogatives are vain: what could the Empire of the world advantage a ſervant to ſin? The moſt happy freedome, is to be a ſervant of God, that ſinne may not reign in thee. But from this ſervitude of ſin, no man is freed but by the Son of God, Fulgent. de incarn. &c. cap. 19. for by him ſpiritualiter renaſcimur. See Auguſtine ep. 157. See alſo the Epiſtle of the Council of Carthage, Innocent. ib. ep. 90.

V. 37. ye are Abrahams ſeed] That is, according to the fleſh.

V. 38. ſeen with your father] What your father the Devil teacheth you. See verſe 44.

V. 39. works of Abraham] You would be Heir to him in faith, and obedience, the works of Abraham were Faith and Obedience, and the fruit of the Spirit deſcribed, Gal. 5. 22. 23. See Rom. 4. 9. &c. Gal. 3. 6. you that glory of your being ſons of Abraham, believe as he did, for the carnal priviledge will nothing advantage you. See Rom 2. 28. 29.

V. 40. this did not Abraham] Your workes are contrary to Abrahams; He loved and believed God, you through unbelief perſecute the Sonne of God: He obeyed God, you ſerve the ſpirit of malice.

V. 4. the deeds of your Father] Your works ſpeak you the ſons of anoher father, whom you imitate.

we have one Father, even God] We worſhip one God, who choſe us to be his people, who often acknowledged us for his children, Exodus, 4. 22.

V. 42. if

V. 42. if God were your Father] If ye were indeed the ſons of God by adoption, you would imitate him in love.

V. 43. cannot hear my word] That is, you will not hear and obey, being filled with malice and prejudicate opinion, See Mat. 13. 14. 15.

V. 44. ye are of your father the devil] Not by nature, but by imitation of his malice. See 1 John 3. 8. So Cyril. Catech. 7. Satan is the lyars father, ὀ κτ̀ φύσιν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ ἀπάτην, not by nature, but by fraud and deceit.

from the beginning] From the beginning of the world he led men into ſin and death, by his lying, Gen. 3. 4, 5.

abode not in the truth] He kept not his firſt eſtate, Jude verſe 6.

he ſpeaketh of his own] According to his cuſtom and diſpoſition; if ever he ſpeak truth, he borroweth that, to the end that he may deceive the more.

he is a lyar, and the father of it] Lyars are the devils children by imitation: herein they meerly reſemble him: none would beleeve him whom they knew to be the devil; neither will they believe a notorious known lyar: it is madneſſe not to know, quod mendacia non diu fallunt, Cyprian lib. 1. ep. 3. that lies cannot long deceive; becauſe ere long, none will beleeve him, no not when he telleth the truth.

V. 45. becauſe I tell you the truth] Thus he proveth them Satans ſons, not Gods, becauſe they hated the truth, nor is there any more evident mark of a reprobate mind, than hatred of truth, and love of lies. See 2 Theſſ. 2. 10, 11.

V. 46. Which of you convinceth me of ſin?] This is a ſecret prepoſſeſſion of an objection: if they ſhould ſay, we dis-beleeve not becauſe thou ſpeakeſt truth, but becauſe thou violateſt the Law; He challengeth the accuſers to ſhew wherein: they could accuſe, and did malitiouſly, but who can convince, or prove him to be a tranſgreſſour of the Law? This word could fit the mouth of holy Jeſus onely, it is too high a challenge for any of the meer ſons of men: In Chriſt onely there was no ſin. See Hebr. 7. 26. Such the law of Sacrifices prefigured him. See 1 Pet. 1. 19.

V. 47. He that is of God] This is a peculiar of thoſe who are of God; who are led by the Spirit of God, and ſincerely endeavour to do his will, they will hearken to his word; they will love to hear. See 1 John 4. 6. you beleeve not, becauſe you are not Gods ſons, but Satans, who hates and reſiſts the truth. See Act. 13. 48.

V. 48. Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, &c.] Thus groweth unbelief and contempt of Gods word into open blaſphemy: thus convicted impiety breaks out into railing: they accounted the Samaritanes Apoſtates, and impious; therefore when they would deſcribe a wicked man, they called him Samaritan.

V. 50. and judgeth] And will avenge this blaſphemy, wherewith ye diſhonour me.

V. 51. He ſhall never ſee death] Shall not die eternally: It is an Hebrew manner of expreſſion, as alſo, to taſte of death, verſe 52. Hebr. 11. 5. See Mat. 16. 28. Mark 9. 1. Luke 9. 27.

V. 52. we know thou haſt a devil] Thus obſtinate were they in their malitious blaſphemy; and ſo high an opinion had they of themſelves, that they concluded all muſt be true which they thought, who thought themſelves infallible.

V. 53. Art thou greater than our father Abraham?] So injurious are they to God and to the Saints, who uſe their name and memory to Chriſts diſhonour: we can never make more honourable mention of them, than when we ſtile them the ſervants of Chriſt.

V. 54. if I honour my ſelf] If I onely ſpeak glorious and great things of my ſelf, as you ſuppoſe; but my Father teſtifieth of me, and honoureth me, by the Prophets, by his voice from Heaven, by many miracles by me done.

Ye ſay that he is your God] They profeſſed ſo, (as alſo many now) but they denied God in their actions; as the Apoſtle ſaith, Tit. 1. 16. they profeſſe that they know God, but in works they deny him, &c. No complements can take the omniſcient God, no diſguiſes deceive him. See Jer. 7. 4, 5. Mat. 7. 21. &c.

V. 55. ye have not known him] Therefore is he not your God: ye know him not, who dare ſo wilfully diſobey him: he that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a lyar, and the truth is not in him, 1 John 2. 4.

V. 56. Abraham rejoyced to ſee my day] That is, my coming in the fleſh, which he ſaw far off by faith, Heb. 11. 13. (Proſper referreth it to the day of his paſſion, figured in his ſon. de promiſ. & prædict, part 1. cap. 17.)

V. 57. Thou art not yet fifty years old] He was about thirty and three years old. See Luke 3. 23.

V. 58. Before Abraham was, I am] I who according to my humanity am not fifty years old; according to my divine nature am eternal, and ſo before Abraham, and all the creatures: the Deity hath neither paſt, nor future, ſed ſemper eſſe habet, Greg. hom. 18. in Evang. He ſaith not to Moſes, I was, but I am hath ſent thee, Exod. 3. 14.

V. 59. Then took they up ſtones, &c.] Such is the fury of blind zeal, and impatient errour, they have no ſober ears for truth, but hands quickly armed for ſlaughter. See Acts 7. 57.

but Jeſus hid himſelf] How, we read not, but certainly Gods power ſo protected him; becauſe the time of his paſſion was not yet come. See Luke 4. 30. he could eaſily have deſtroyed all his enemies, but qui pati venerat, exercere judicium nolebat. Greg. in Evang. hom. 18. He that came to ſuffer would not now exerciſe judgement: It may teach us, to decline the fury of our enemies by withdrawing our ſelves from their preſence, if it may be, to reſerve our ſelves to better times and auditors. Certainly Chriſt ſtayeth not with the bloody and cruel; though in his abſence they have the poſſeſſion of the external; material Churches.

CHAP. IX.

Verſe 1. BLind from his birth*] Born blind: this ſetteth out the greatneſſe of the miracle: they who are blind by ſome diſeaſe growing in the eye, (any part of that curious fabrick being hurt or diſaffected) may poſſibly find ſome help by the art and induſtry of the Phyſician: but thoſe who are born blind, without eyes, or without the natural frame and diſpoſition thereof, can be cured by none but the Lord of nature: therefore the Evangeliſt mentioneth this, that we may know that this cure was non artis, ſed poteſtatis, Ambroſ. ad Bellic. ep. 75. l. 9. not of art but power.

V. 2. or his parents] This they asked, being confident of his omniſcience, otherwiſe they had in vain moved this queſtion; and alſo knowing that all miſery is the effect of ſin, (c. 5. 14.) and that God often viſiteth the Parents ſin upon their dear children, ſee 2 Sam. 12. 14. &c.

V. 3. Neither hath this man ſinned, nor, &c.] Which he ſaith not ἁπλῶς, ſimply, for ſo, both he and his parents had ſinned (as Chryſoſtom noteth) but neither this mans ſins, nor his parents were a cauſe why he, rather than all other ſinners, was born blind, but that Gods glory might appear in his cure.

V. 4. While it is day] While I live here, or while I have opportunity. This is a ſimilitude taken from the common cuſtom and condition of men unto whom God hath appointed the day-time for labour and doing כל־מלאכתך Exod. 20. 9. omne opus tuum. 70. πάντα τὰ ἔργα σου, all thy works. See Pſal. 104. 23. the preſent ſenſe is, which Theophylact giveth, ἕως ὁ παρὼν βίος ἀνέϛηκεν, while my preſent life laſteth; which the Apoſtle, Hebr. 5. 7. calleth ἡμέραις τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ, the dayes of his fleſh; that is, while yet he was in this world bearing the aſſumed frailties of human fleſh and blood (for we may not think that being glorified, he hath put off our fleſh, and human nature) while he here lived to preach, do miracles to call men to, and confirm them in the faith, and perform all thoſe things, which according to the determinate counſel and will of God, were to be done for the accompliſhment of mans ſalvation; all which becauſe it was limited to certain times and moments thereof; he compareth the ſeaſon and opportunity of working and doing the ſame, to a day conſiſting of certain definite hours.

when no man can work] He calleth the hour of the wicked, and power of darkneſſe (to which he was in his paſſion ſhortly to be ſubjected) the night, wherein he ſhould not have opportunity of healing, and doing miracles for the confirmation of the Goſpel, by his own viſible and bodily preſence: he did that after his death and reſurrection by his diſciples and their ſucceſſours in the Primitive Church for a time: the words therefore expreſſe not an impoſſibility, but an importunity: when no man can work; that is, when it is unſeaſonable to work: it muſt teach us, while we have time, to improve it to Gods ſervice; the time is coming on, wherein there ſhall be no faith, labour, propheſying, nor place for repentance. See Iſa. 55. 6. John 12. 35, 36. 1 Cor. 13. 8.

V. 5. I am the light] Chap. 1. 9. He is alwayes in the world, and ſtill illuminateth every one that comes into the world: but not now by a viſible preſence, and external operation, but by his divine and ſecret power. See c. 8. 12.

V. 6. Spat on the ground] Chriſt uſeth means, to mans reaſon improbable, that his power might be the better ſeen in the cure.

anointed the eyes of the blind] Or ſpread the clay upon the eyes, &c. That is, the place where the eyes ſhould naturally have been, or upon thoſe his lightleſſe, and diſaffected organs of ſight: So God according to his omipotent will worketh either by, without, or contrary, to ordinary meanes, and ſecond cauſes; plaiſtering whole and ſound eyes with clay, might, to mans reaſon, have ſeemed a meanes rather to blinde, than to give a better ſight.

V. 7. go waſh in the pool of Siloam] Siloam was a fountain at the foot of mount Sion. See on Luke 13. 4.

Alexand. Pæd. l.* 1. Nazianz. orat. 40. Cyril. Cat. 1. 2 Chryſoſt. on Heb 6. 4. where the Apoſtle calleth the baptized φωτισθέντας, enlightened, as Ambroſ. ſaith, refuſo lumine, as if Chriſt the light touching the blind, infuſed illumination.

V. 8. he that ſate and begged] Their law concerning beggars, and proviſion for the poor, Deuteronomy 15 4. (as in other diſordered governments) it ſeemeth was now not carefully executed. See Act. 3. 2.

V. 9. I am he] As impiety is ingenious to conceal and obſcure the works of God, ſo is faith and holy gratitude ingenuous and free to confeſſe the ſame to Gods glory: their doubting occaſioned this recovered man to proclaim, the work of Chriſt on him; wherein as Chryſoſtom noteth. οὐκ ᾐσχύνθη τὴν προτέραν πήρωσιν --- he was not aſhamed of his former blindneſſe (no nor of his beggery) nor feared he the peoples fury, neither diſſembled he the benefit received.

V. 10. thine eyes opened] ἀνεῴχθησαν, after the Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, the eyes of the blind are ſaid to be ſhut: and ſo their eyes are ſaid to be opened, who of blind, are reſtored to ſight: ſometimes we read of eyes, held, or opened in another ſenſe, as Gen. 21. 19. Luke 24. 16. ſo Hagars were opened, that ſhe might ſee that, which before, though preſent, and ſeeing, ſhe could not ſee: and the Diſciples eyes were held; not that they might not ſee, but that they might not at preſent know Chriſt.

V. 11. I went and waſhed] He relateth the truth ſimply and as it was acted; ſhewing the effect of his faith and obedience, the receiving his ſight.

V. 12. I know not] Whether they asked, as admiring the cure, or to accuſe him who had wrought it on the Sabbath, it is not evident though this ſeemeth moſt probable: it appeareth that though the cured man had learned his name who cured him, of others (as Mark 10. 47. Matth. 20. 30.) poſſibly of thoſe who led him away to Siloam, yet had he not yet ſeen Jeſus, who likely went away from the place where he cured him, ſo that he found him not after he returned from the water, ſeeing.

V. 13. they brought him to the Phariſees] Whether to ingratiate with them, or to enform them what admirable things Jeſus (whom they perſecuted) did, it is not manifeſt.

V. 14. It was the Sabbath day] See on Mat. 12. 2, 5, 8. See chap. 5. 9. &c.

V. 15. again the Phariſees] Theſe buſie enemies of Chriſt, intended by this re-examination of the man, to have found ſome advantage againſt Chriſt; but, they did but condemn themſelves the more, by how much more apparent their malice made this admirable work of Chriſt.

V. 16. becauſe he keepeth not the Sabbath] See on chap. 5. 9, 10.

V. 17. A Prophet] A man of God, of whom he muſt have ſuch power. Surely he muſt needs be acknowledged an holy Prophet ſent of God which he hath abundantly proved by this his power ſhewed on me, in doing this divine miracle of reſtoring ſight to me who was born blind; this none but God ever did, or could do.

V. 18. Until they called his parents] Hoping that they being over-awed with fear of their power and authority, would rather deny that their ſon was born blind, than by confeſſing a known truth, incur their diſpleaſure: but the more they ſtrive to obſcure the truth, the more evident they made it: ſo God turneth the counſels of the wicked againſt themſelves, and taketh the wiſe in their own craft. See 1 Cor. 1. 19.

V. 19. who ye ſay was, &c.] They will not acknowledge that he was ſo born, but interrogate the parents in a threatning manner, which in effect was to bid them deny it, as they tendred their favour.

V. 20. we know this is our ſon] We cannot but know and confeſſe this; they would not for fear deny their ſon: how wretched is it for fear or favour to to deny our Saviour.

V. 21. he is of age ask him] Of age to be a competent witneſſe; and he can beſt enform you hereof, who hath many years endured the miſery of blindneſſe, and now enjoyeth his ſight: it may be the cure was not wrought in their ſight, and therefore they more willingly put off the fuller anſwer to their ſon.

V. 22. becauſe they feared the Jews] That is, the Phariſees and theſe who were of their conſiſtory, or Sanhedrin, becauſe they had already determined to excommunicate or put any man out of the Synagogue that confeſſed him to be Chriſt; and it appeareth that this was publiſhed among the common people with ſevere threatnings, therefore theſe parents were afraid.

put out of the Synagogue] That is, caſt out of the Church as a notorious and contumatious malefactour, profane, and wicked Heretick; which caſting out, we call excommunication. See Matth. 18. 17. 1 Cor. 5. 2, 5. 1 Tim. 1. 20. this ſheweth, as the abuſe of excommunication among them, ſo the uſe thereof in all ages.

V. 24. give God praiſe] Tell truth, that God may be glorified. See Joſh. 7. 19. as if they had ſaid, remember, that thou ſpeakeſt in Gods preſence: thus (as hypocrites uſe) they pretended the honour of God, to colour their own implacable malice againſt Chriſt.

we know] They would have them in blind obedience to their authority, reſt on their judgement (though it were againſt Chriſt himſelf) and beleeve that they could not erre.

this man is a ſinner] By this they blaſphemouſly meant, a notoriouſly impious man.

V. 25. I know that whereas I was blind, I now ſee] He ſaid before he is a Prophet, but perceiving the Phariſees ſo eager againſt Chriſt, refuſing to ſpeak of the perſon, he affirmeth the admirable work done.

V. 26. They ſaid to him again] In theſe many re-examinations, they would have found him forgetful of what he had ſaid, that by croſſing his own teſtimony, he might have made it void: ſo extream diligent is Satan, to overthrow, or obſcure the truth.

V. 27. ye did not hear] Ye believed it not. Gre, οὐκ ἠκούσατε, ye heard not, ye regarded not, you gave no credit to my teſtimony; why do you deſire often to hear that which ye will not beleeve, be it never ſo evident.

will ye alſo be his diſciples ?] As if he had ſaid; do you by theſe re-examinations deſire to know more of him that you may beleeve in him and follow him as his diſciples, as I, and all that are enlightened by God, find juſt cauſe to do? if ſo, I ſhall willingly anſwer again and again; if not, let it ſuffice that I have already clearly related the whole truth of this matter unto you.

V. 28. we are Moſes Diſciples] Thus they boaſted, but were indeed wicked hypocrites: on falſe principles they ſet their falſe ſuperſtructions: they took it for granted, that he could not be a diſciple of Moſes; that is, obey the Law of God given by the miniſtry of Moſes, who beleeved in, or was a diſciple of Chriſt: whereas the truth is, that they which were the true diſciples of Moſes, did come to, and beleeve in Chriſt, the end of the Law, which was a Schoolmaſter to bring them to him, Gal. 3. 24. therefore he told them, c. 5. 46. had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me.

V. 29. whence he is] They knew his parents, but doubted of his authority, whether God ſent him to us or not: we know not what commiſſion, power, or authority he hath to preach and do theſe things We are certain that God ſpake to, and wrought by Moſes, whom we follow, this man we know not whence he is: much differently ſaid Nicodemus, c. 3. 2. Rabbi we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do theſe miracles that thou doſt, except God be with him.

V. 30. herein is a marvellous thing] He might well admire their ignorance, ſeeing opening the eyes of the blind, was a foretold ſign and mark of the Meſſias, Iſa. 35. 4, 5. ſo Mat. 11. 5. Luke 7. 20. &c. which they knowing that he now had done, and never man before had or could do, yet they could not (by reaſon of their malice which blinded them) underſtand and beleeve that he was the promiſed Meſſias, ſo many ages before deſcribed and marked out by God, by his opening the eyes of the blind, &c. See Mat. 11. 5.

V. 31. God heareth not ſinners] Pſal. 66. 18 Which may not be underſtood ſimply and univerſally: for God ſometimes heareth in judgement, as he ſometimes denyeth in mercy, by this argument he would overthrow their blaſphemous cenſures of Chriſt: God will not hear the prayers of ſuch wicked men as you mentioned, ſee Iſa. 1. 11. Rom 8. 15. Pſal. 50. 16. Jam. 5. 16. therefore he cannot be wicked who obtaineth power of God to do ſuch things. See c. 3. 2.

but if any man, &c.] 1 John 3. 22.

V. 32. ſince the world began] As if he ſaid, that which cometh to paſſe by nature, is commonly, or uſually ſo, that which by art, often; but that which is done againſt the courſe of nature, above the power of art, and ſo rarely, muſt needs be by the immediate hand of God: and ſo conſequently Chriſt is of God.

V. 33. he could do nothing] None of theſe extraordinary good things.

V. 34. altogether born in ſins] They meant, a wicked rude idiot, as if he had by his affliction been marked for a notorious ſinner; or a curſed man, as c. 7. 39.

Caſt him out] Or excommunicated him. See v. 22.

V. 35. when he had found him] They that are excommunicate for confeſſing Chriſt aright, are thereby brought nearer to Chriſt: but they who are juſtly excommunicate, are thereby delivered to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 20. which is a terrible puniſhment.

doſt thou believe ?] This he ſaith, οὐκ ἀγνοῶν, ſaith Chryſoſtom hom. 58. not being ignorant, but being willing to manifeſt himſelf unto him, that he might beleeve and be ſaved.

V. 36. who is he Lord, &c.] Not yet knowing Jeſus by ſight, yet affectionately deſiring to know him who had done him ſo great a favour: not aſhamed of his ignorance, he prayeth to be enformed that he might beleeve.

V. 37. It is he that talketh with thee] He ſaith not, I am he; but it is he, as in a third perſon, intimating that the Deity of the Son of God was vailed in that form of infirm man which he ſaw: happy man who had his bodily eyes opened to ſee the Son of God in the fleſh, but incomparably more happy in that his ſouls eyes were enlightened to apprehend and know him by faith to ſalvation; Chriſt who gave the firſt, now followeth him with this new and greater beneficence. So do Gods mercies increaſe upon the elect.

V. 38. worſhipped him] Fell down and worſhipped him: ſo the Syriac Interpreter hath it.

V. 39 for judgement I am come] Meaning, the Phariſees arrogate all juriſdiction to themſelves, as if they onely ſaw all things; but I ſhall judge, or execute authority far otherwiſe: for I will enlighten thoſe whom they account blind, and deliver them to darkneſſe of mind, who think themſelves the onely knowing men.

they which ſee not] That is, wretched ſinners, who acknowledge and bewail their innate ignorance, ſhall be enligened by the Goſpel.

and that they which ſee] They who think they are wiſe (See Iſa. 5. 21.) as did the Phariſees, who arrogated to themſelves the name of wiſe; anciently the Prophets were called ראים roim ſeers. 1 Sam. 9. 9. let us go הראה. 70. πρὸς τὸν βλέποντα: to the ſeer. So was a Prophet called, ὁ βλέπων: ſo here οἱ βλέποντες; ſo Syr. חזוין which ſee of the Hebr. חזה vidit, whence alſo חוזה a ſeer, or a Prophet, Iſa. 30. 10. the Scribes and Phariſees vainly affecting ſuch high titles (as Mat. 23. 7, 24.) are threatned, as Iſa. 6. 9. See Mat 13. 15.

V. 40. are we blind alſo?] What? will you ſay that we alſo are ignorant?

V. 41. ye ſhould have no ſin] That is, you ſhould not be ſo much in fault, as now you are, if you erred ignorantly, but it is a greater ſin to condemn the known Law of God, than to be ignorant thereof (See chap. 15 22. Mat. 15. 14.) or, you were nearer the cure but for your opinion of knowledge and ſanctity; many had long ſince been wiſe, and good, but that they too ſoon thought themſelves ſo. See Revel. 3. 17. 1 John 1. 8. 1 Cor. 3. 18. Jam. 4. 17.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 1. E*Ntreth not by the door*] Chriſt compareth the Church to a ſheep-fold, (as Mich. 2. 12.) into which God gathers his ſheep; that is, the Elect: and himſelf to the door: becauſe there may be no entrance into the Church, but through him: they who lead not this way, are no true paſtours.

V. 2. he that entreth by the door] That is, by Chriſt: the Prieſts, Scribes, and Phariſees, as falſe Prophets, came in ſheeps clothing, who within were ravening wolves, Mat. 7. 15.

V. 3. to him the porter openeth] The meaning is; God alloweth none for paſtours, but thoſe who lead their hearers to him through Chriſt.

the ſheep hear his voice] The Elect know and follow the voice of Chriſt in his word.

he calleth his own ſheep by name] He knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. and their names are written in the Book of Life, Phil. 4. 3.

V. 4. when he putteth forth his own ſheep] See Pſal. 23. 1. &c. Jer. 17. 16. 2 Sam. 7. 8. He leadeth them out to green paſtures, that is to refection and comfort; he goeth before them in doctrine and example: his ſheep know his voice, by that diſcerning ſpirit, by which we are commanded to try the ſpirits, 1 John 4. 1. So did the Bareans, Act. 17.

V. 5. know not the voice of ſtrangers] They approve not, or hearken not to the voice of thoſe who bring any other doctrine, Gal. 1. 8. 2 John v. 10.

V. 6. This parable] See Mat. 13. 3. Gre. ταύτην τὴν παροιμίαν, this proverb, or adagie, 2 Pet. 2. 22. a ſhort, and common ſentence, or ſaying: that which the other Evangeliſts call a parable, Mat. 13. 3. &c.

V. 7. Then ſaid Jeſus again] Or therefore, becauſe they underſtood not what he ſaid, he repeateth it again, further expreſſing it to them.

I am the door of the ſheep] The meaning is, that in Chriſt is the ſum of all doctrine wherewith the ſouls of the Elect are nouriſhed: therefore the Apoſtle cared for nothing elſe, Phil. 3. 1 Cor. 2. 2. and that no man can come into the kingdom of God, but through him: ſo as Gr. Nazianzen ſaid orat. 36. ὁδὸς δὲ ὡς δι' ἑαυτοῦ φέρων ἡμᾶς: He is the way leading us (to eternal life) through himſelf: his Saints and Elect per eum, intrant ad eum, through his truth and merit to life eternal in him.

V. 8. All that ever came before me] Meaning the falſe prophets, who came not in by him, but Satan and their own ambition: whoſoever called himſelf the door or way to life; or all that went into the miniſtry and he ſent them not; for he ſaith not, all that were ſent: for as Auguſtin ſaith, To 6. contr. adv. leg. &c. l. 2. c. 4. He meaneth here, all thoſe qui miſſi non fuiſſent: who were not ſent; whom the Prophet Jeremy reproveth, chap. 14. 14. ſo Beda ſaith, Cum illo venerunt, qui cum verbo dei venerunt, qui non per ſe venerunt; they came with him who came with the word of God, who came not by themſelves. So Clem. Alexandrinus l. 1. ſtrom. ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν προφῆται ἅτε, &c. The Prophets truly, for as much as they were ſent and inſpired of God -- οὐ κλέπται εἰσὶ καὶ λῃσταὶ ἀλλὰ διάκονοι -- were not theeves and robbers, but Miniſters: by theeves and robbers are here meant, thoſe who ſeek their own eaſe and profit, not caring for the flock of God.

V. 9. I am the door] As men come by the door into the houſe, ſo come we to heaven through Chriſt onely: and therefore he ſaith I am the door; that is, as a door by which onely you may enter into life eternal. So c. 15. 1, 5. I am the true vine: in figurative enunciations it is neceſſary to know that the analogical and repreſenting ſign, is put for the thing repreſented, and contrariwiſe ſometimes: I am the door, I am the true vine; that is, theſe things have a kind of proportion or reſemblance of me the onely Mediatour, and Saviour: this is my body, this is my blood; that is, ſignes, and reſemblances appointed of God to ſhew the Lords death till he come, 1 Cor. 11. 26.

and ſhall go in and out] Not meaning going out of the Church, by ſeparation from the body of Chriſt; (for as Lactantius ſaith well, l. 4. c. ult.) if any go out of Chriſts Church, à ſpe vitæ ac ſalutis æternæ alienus eſt; He is an aliant from hope of eternal life and ſalvation but alluding to the uſe of a door: it is an Hebraiſme importing ſecurity of life and converſation, and actions: as Pſalm 121. 8.

V. 10. have it more abundantly] Which is in reſpect of the encreaſes of Gods grace through Chriſt here, and the fulneſſe of happineſſe in the life to come.

V. 11. I am the good ſhepherd] Iſa. 40. 11. Ezek. 34. 23 Thus ſaith, Cyril. Hieroſo. cat. 10. He is ſometimes called a Sheep or Lambe; διὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα: in reſpect of his incarnation; and alſo a ſhepherd: διὰ τὴν φιλανθρωπίαν τῆς θεότητος; for the benignity of his Deity.

V. 12. Seeth the wolf coming] By wolf he meaneth falſe prophets and ſeducers, as Mat. 7. 15. ſo Act. 20. 29. or perſecutors: ſome adde hereto, Satan; qui caulas fidelium, inſidians circuit. Gregor. hom. 14. in Evang. who laying wait, goeth round about the folds of the faithful.

V. 13. the hireling fleeth] That is, he that adminiſtreth for his own profits ſake, leaveth the people to ſeducers, and deſtruction. See Rom. 16. 18. Phil. 3. 19 Ezek. 13, 4 5. & 34. 2. here are deſcribed three properties of falſe prophets, or hirelings. 1. They have no proper charge; they are but intruders and uſurpers, whatever right they pretend to, or ſeem to have. 2. When the wolf any danger or trouble cometh; they fly and deſert the cauſe; if not leaving the place, yet in connivance and ſilence; as Auguſtin ſaith hereon, fugiſti, quia tacuiſti: thou fledſt for as much as thou heldſt thy peace: they betray ſouls for fear of men; non mutando locum ſed ſubtrahendo ſolacium, fugit: quia injuſtitiam vidit, &c. tacuit: fugit, quod ſe ſub ſilentio abſcondit, Gregor. hom. 14. he flyeth, not by changing place, but by withdrawing (or withholding) comfort; becauſe he ſaw wickedneſſe and held his peace: he flyeth, in that he hideth himſelf in ſilence. 3. They leave their people to the ſeducements of falſe prophets and impoſtors.

V. 14. The good ſhepherd] As verſe 11. He knoweth his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. John 13. 18. but here is an Hebraiſme, γινώσκει he knoweth, that is, he loveth, approveth, or holdeth dear, ſo Gregor. q. ſ. interpreteth cognoſco, hoc eſt, diligo, I know, that is, I love. So the Hebr. ידע jadah, is uſed, Pſal. 1. 6. and 37. 18 See alſo Mat. 7 23.

V. 15 I lay down my life for the ſheep] Hirelings betray the ſheep to the wolf, but Chriſt εἰς λύτρον for a ranſome and ſo the faithful Paſtours, εἰς μαρτύριον, for a witneſſe to the truth, lay down their lives for the ſheep. See 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Iſa. 53. 6, 8, 12. Acts 20. 28. John 6. 51. 1 John 3. 16.

V. 16. other ſheep have I] He meaneth among the Gentiles, which then were ſtrangers to the Church of God. See Exek. 37. 22. So Hoſ. 2. 23. I will call them my people which were not my people, and her beloved, which was not beloved, Rom. 9. 25, 26. Sic autem Moſes Ethiopiſſam accipiebat uxorem, Irene. l. 4. c. 37. So Moſes took the Ethiopian to wife, Numb. 12. 1. in a repreſentation of that which was to come, making her an Iſraelite, who was an aliant: So was the wild Olive implanted, Rom. 11. 17 &c.

and there ſhall be one fold] One Church of Jews and Gentiles; the partition-wall being broken down, Epheſ. 2. 14. & 3. 6. & 4 4. If but one Church, quomodo poteſt gregi annumerari, qui in numero gregis non eſt? How can he be reckoned to the flock, which is not in the number of the flock? Cyprian. l. 1 ep. 5. See more there concerning the unity of the Church.

V. 17. becauſe I lay down my life] Iſa. 53. 12. Becauſe I willingly perform his will, for mans redemption becoming obedient unto the death, even the death of the croſſe. Phil. 2. 8.

V. 18. power to take it up again] To raiſe my human nature from the dead, as being very God, the reſurrection and the life, chap 11. 25.

V. 19. there was a diviſion] As chap. 9. 16. the Goſpel reproveth ſin, and detecteth hypocriſie, therefore the impious world is troubled at the preaching thereof; and ſo men are divided into ſeveral factions, according to their different opinions.

V. 20. he hath a devil, &c.] So ſaid they, chap. 7. 20. and 8. 48. μαίνεται: Syr. inſaniendo inſanit, or omnino inſanit, an uſual Hebraical auxeſis: that which we ſay, he is ſtark mad; and lunatick: thus impudently blaſpheme they the wiſdom and mercy of God. See 1 Kings 9. 11 Acts 2. 13, 17. & 26. 24.

V. 21. not the words of him that hath a devil] They that had received ſome taſtes of Gods Spirit, reliſhed a divine grace in his lips, in the words of ſobriety and truth, and therefore loved and admired him, as chap. 7. 46. Mat. 7. 28, 29. affirming ſecretly that which they were ſenſible of, by denying an improbable collection of the malicious adverſaries: as if they ſaid, wicked, poſſeſſed, or mad men, do not uſe to ſpeak thus.

can a devil open the eyes, &c.] Δαιμόνιον, a devil, or δαιμόνιον ἔχων, he that hath a devil: by this reaſon they refell the others blaſphemous aſſertion, they intimate that the devil hath no ſuch power, as to be able to create eyes to him that was born blind; they might alſo ſay, neither any ſuch goodneſſe, as to be willing to do any good for man, except in order to ſome greater miſchief: if then this work done exceeded all power of the creature, it remaineth that it was poſſible onely to God the Creatour: and then if God wrought in him, without controverſie the ſame ſpake in him; if his work could not be aſcribed to the devil, neither ought his words: if the work was of a good God, how blaſphemouſly do any ſay that the words proceeded from a malitious devil, who would gladly deſtroy and afflict all mankind?

V. 22. the feaſt of the dedication] Or inſtauration; which feaſt was not that we read of, 2 Chron. 7. &c. this was inſtitnted by Judas Maccabeus, to be held eight dayes, in remembrance of their deliverance, and reſtitution of their Temple and Religion, which Antiochus had corrupted, 1 Maccab. 4. 59. See Beza not. major. ad loc. and Tremelius on the ſame.

V. 23. in Solomons porch] That is, that part of the Temple which was built again after the pattern of that porch which Solomon builded.

V. 24. make us in doubt] Or hold us in ſuſpence: indeed their malice and unbelief made them fluctuant and doubtful, his words and works evidently enough declared him to be the Meſſias, to beleevers; unto the malitious unbeleevers, it no more appeared, than light to the blind: the fault was in themſelves, who neither did, could or would ſee: for their eyes have they cloſed, leſt at any time they ſhould ſee with their eyes -- and ſhould be converted, &c. Mat. 13. 15.

tell us plainly] Not that they were willing to know and beleeve, but that they might have occaſion to calumniate and deſtroy him, by accuſing him of conſpiracy againſt Cæſar; foraſmuch as they held this principle, that their expected Meſſias, Chriſt, muſt be an abſolute Monarch and glorious King. See c. 19. 12. therefore did he prohibit his diſciples from divulging that which he had declared to them in private concerning this (ſee Mat. 16. 20.) and forbad others to ſpeak of thoſe great things which he had done for them, which otherwiſe would have teſtified as much; for his hour was not yet come. Note here how hypocrites ſhut their eyes, and require more light: they ſeem to caſt an aſperſion on Chriſt, as if he were in fault, as the cauſe of their unbelief becauſe he had not dealt ſincerely enough with them, in a clear revelation of himſelf to them, who deſired nothing more than to know and acknowledge the Meſſias; whereas his works which they often ſaw, ſo evidently ſpeaking him the Chriſt, they had yet decreed to excommunicate any that ſhould confeſſe him to be ſo, chap. 9. 22. thus ſome Hypocrites accuſe the Goſpel of obſcurity; and others the Miniſters teaching of ambiguity, or ſome other defect; when, God knows, the fault is apparently in themſelves.

V. 25. the works, &c,] As if he had ſaid, what need more words, where works evidently teſtifying, are dis-beleeved? As ſuppoſe there had been, as you calumniate me, any obſcurity in my words; yet the miracles which you have ſeen with your eyes, done by divine power, and exceeding all ability of men or Angels, evidently convince your contumacy againſt God, who will not beleeve his meſſengers whom he hath furniſhed with ſuch divine vertue: theſe ſufficiently witneſſe that I am the Chriſt, and expected Meſſias, theſe things which I have done in your ſight.

V. 26. becauſe ye are not of my ſheep] For faith is the gift of God, which he gives onely to his. See Epheſ 2. 8. ſpiritual deafneſſe toward the word of God, is a certain effect of unbelief. See chap. 8 47. and 1 John 4. 6.

V. 27. my ſheep hear my voice] Thoſe that are ordained to life eternal, hear, beleeve, and obey the Goſpel which is the voice of Chriſt their ſhepherd.

I know them] I own and acknowledge them for mine. See 2 Tim. 2. 19. Pſal. 31 7. and 1. 6. &c. As they acknowledge, own, and follow, the voice of their Paſtour, loving, reverencing, beleeving, and obeying him: ſo I acknowledge them for mine, loving, preſerving, and giving them the grace of perſeverance in the faith, that I may ſave them.

they follow me] They obey my precepts, and imitate my example.

V 28. neither ſhall any] Neither men, nor devils, nor any creature (See Mat 16. 18 Rom. 8. 38, 39) neither by fraud nor violence, οὐχ ἁρπάσει τις, none ſhall be able to pluck them out of my hand: for as Auguſtin. ſaith, To. 7. de corrup. & gra. c. 7. horum ſi quiſquam perit, vitio humano vincitur Deus: ſed nemo eorum perit, quia nulla re vincitur Deus: If any one of theſe periſh, then God is overcome by mans ſin; but God is not overcome by any thing. See alſo the Author of that book, de fide ad Petrum Diac, cap. 35.

V. 29. greater than all] More powerful than all the creatures; for in his Almighty power they move, and have their being, Act. 17. 28.

V. 30. I and my Father are one] Two perſons, but one God. He ſpeaketh this as he is God; one in ſubſtance, being, and deity, nature, glory, and power, &c. as God he ſaith, I and my Father are one; but ſecundum formam ſervi, in reſpect of the form of a ſervant (his aſſumed humanity) he ſaith, chap. 14. my Father is greater than I, Auguſtin. ep. Paſcent. ep. 174. ib. ep. 177. See alſo Fulgent. de fide orthod. ad. Donat. poſt med. Cyril. cat. 11. Hilar. de Trin. lib. 7. Etſi perſonis duo, poteſtate unum ſunt, Ambroſ. in Luc. lib. 2. cap. 2. though they are two perſons, they are one in power.

V. 31. took up ſtones again] As chap. 8 59. this ſhews with what mind they ſpake verſe 24. they would have him tell them plainly whether he were Chriſt, with purpoſe to ſtone him as a falſe prophet, Deut. 13. 5. Levit. 20. 16. unbelief is the mother of fury: the ſpirit of Satan never diſcovers it ſelf more evidently in men, than by ſtirring them up to perſecute Chriſt, and the Preachers of the Goſpel.

V. 32. for which of them, &c.] Seeing you can object no evil by me done, and yet ſtone me, it appears that you perſecute me for the good I have done you: the implacable enemy hath in all ages ſtirred up perſecution againſt the Prophets for the good they did: no wonder that Chriſt bids us rejoyce herein. See Luke 6. 23. James 1. 2. nothing more evidently marketh them for dear to God, than the devils malice to them: as (Tertullian adv. Gent. cap. 5.) ſaid of their perſecution under Nero, We may, we alſo glory in ſuch an avoucher of our condemnation; Qui enim ſcit illum intelligere poteſt, non niſi grande aliquod bonum a Nerone damnatum; for he that knoweth him may underſtand, that nothing but ſome great good is condemned by Nero.

V. 33. for a good work we ſtone thee not] The wicked would fain ſeem, but not be juſt: they will never acknowledge any perſecution of Chriſt or his, by themſelves acted; their practice is to load them with pretended crimes, ſuppoſing thereby to juſtifie themſelves in their outrages; whereas they do by ſo much more make themſelves guilty, by how much greater injury they do the juſt, by ſlandering them, and by hurting not onely their perſons, but alſo their good names: it was more injurious cruelty to put the skins of beaſts on perſecuted Chriſtians; that they might thereby make their dogs worry them to death, than if they had ſlain them in their own habits: it is an undeniable curteſie in cruelty, to have ones throat cut with a clean knife; to be condemned without foul and defamatory language, or under pretended and falſe crimes.

V. 34. is it not written] Pſal. 82. 6. That is, in the holy Scriptures (So chap. 15. 25.) which your ſelves hold and profeſſe, Hebr. בתורתכם in your law תורה torah, ſometimes imports onely the five Books of Moſes; ſometimes, the whole Scriptures, and the doctrine thereof, as here: ſometimes, Moſes, the Prophets, and the Pſalms are diſtinguiſhed.

ye are gods] אלהים elohim in Scripture ſignifieth either the true God, or ſomething excellent; as Angels, great and honourable men, princes, &c. Exod. 21. 6. 1 Sam. 2. 25. Exod. 4. 16. 1 Sam. 28. 13. becauſe in government and judging the people (as Jehoſaphat told his Judges, 2 Chron. 19. 6.) they judge not for man, but God

V. 35. unto whom the word of God came] To whom God ſpake in that Scripture; that is, to Kings, his Vice-gerents, whom he calleth gods, becauſe they rule on earth for him.

cannot be broken] λυθῆναι, violated, or made void, as Mat. 5. 17. or deſtroyed, as chap. 7. 23. or denyed, as falſe and erroneous.

V. 36. ſay ye of him] Who is indeed, King of kings, and Lord of lords, Rev. 17. 14. How injuriouſly, and blaſphemouſly, do you ſay that I blaſpheme, becauſe I ſpeak the truth in affirming that I am the Son of God? You allow mortal men, Kings, Princes, and Judges, to be called gods; becauſe the Scripture ſtileth them ſo, though they are in their own perſons, wicked men; and why will ye not acknowledge me to be the Son of God, concerning whom the ſame God of truth who endited the holy Scripture (2 Pet. 1. 26.) teſtified from heaven, that I am his beloved Son in whom he is well pleaſed, Mat. 17. 5. & 3. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 17.

whom the Father hath ſanctified] If ye grant this title (according to Scriptures) to Princes who are but men, and too often the worſt of men (the corruption of the beſt being in the effects thereof, ever worſt and moſt dangerous) will ye not permit it me, who am by nature divinâ origine, by an incomprehenſible generation, the holy one of God; God of God, very God, as alſo very man?

V. 37. if I do not the works of my Father] That is, ſuch works as none but God onely can do; which indeed Chriſt did with the Father, by the ſame power and Deity: thus proveth he himſelf the Son of God by nature; the ſubſtance, and eſſence of the Deity none can apprehend, the works and effects thereof, all ought to conſider and underſtand; therefore Chriſt here, as it were, appealeth to his own works done among them, that they might teſtifie of him.

V. 38. and I in him] See chap. 14. 10. See Hilar. de trin. l. 7. he proveth by his divine works done, that the father is in him, and he in the father; becauſe they have one will, work and nature; though they are diſtinct perſons, yet are they but one and the ſame God.

V. 39. ſought again to take him] See chap. 7. 32. Malice is reſtleſſe and deaf; the voice of the moſt prudent cannot charm it: the more Chriſt laboureth to enform and convert them that they might be ſaved; the higher riſeth their ambition to deſtroy him ſuch is the invincible perverſneſſe of unbelieving hearers, never ſatisfied with any teaching: when they hear high myſteries, they cry, durus eſt hic ſermo, chap. 6. 60. when myſterious things, they ſay, as verſe 24. tell us plainly. and when he doth tell them plainly, I and my father are one, then they took up ſtones to ſtone him.

but he eſcaped] By the ſecret power of his deity; his hour being not yet come.

V. 40. where John at firſt baptized] John 1. 28. Bethabara: there John firſt baptized, but afterward changed the place, chap. 3. 23. this place Chriſt now choſe, as remote, and ſafe from the Jews, ſo alſo to minde the people of thoſe things which John teſtified of him, as verſe 41.

V. 41. John did no miracle] He neither caſt out devils, reſtored ſight to the blinde, raiſed the dead, &c. yet the people believed him ſent of God, and in doubt were they whether he were not the Chriſt, though he did no ſuch works, Luke 3. 15. why then (might they ſay) ſhould we not rather believe this to be the Chriſt, who hath done ſo many and ſo admirable works; the rather for that John teſtifyed of this man, (Matth. 3. 11. John 1. 26. and 3. 27. &c.) and all that ever he ſaid of him, the event ſheweth to be true.

V. 42. many believed] For Johns teſtimony, and their own experience of Chriſts words and works, to which he remitted the unbelieving Jews, chap. 5. 33. 36. Though the ſeed of Gods word ſeem ſometimes to be beſtowed in vain, yet in its ſeaſon by God appointed, it ſhal appear in the elect and believers: where ever Jeſus went he ſaw the fruits of his gracious labours; except onely in the obſtinate hearers, whom their own malice marked out to deſtruction. See 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

CHAP. XI.

Verſe 1. OUt of Bethany] A village about two miles from Jeruſalem, beyond the mount of Olives, mentioned, Luke 10. 38.

town of Mary] Where they dwelt. The Evangliſt deſcribeth Lazarus by his two ſiſters, Mary and Martha, of whom the former Evangeliſts had ſpoken, as zealous and excellent followers of Chriſt, and this hiſtory is exactly written, as being a great demonſtration of the divine power of Chriſt, opportunely fitted to prevent the dangerous ſcandal of the croſſe, Chriſts's death and paſſion, then inſtant.

3. 2. it was that Mary] Matth. 26. 7. This is here ſpoken by way of anticipation; as if he ſaid, the ſame of whom ye ſhall read, chap. 12. 3. (Matth. 26. 6. Mark 14. 4.) there were divers of that name, therefore he here ſetteth down this note of difference.

V. 3. Behold, he whom thou loveſt, is ſick] He of our family whom thou loveſt, is ſick: he loved others alſo, as this Evangeliſt, chap. 13. 23. &c. they ſay not, our brother, as pretending to any merit of their own; nor do they ſay Lazarus, as relating to any thing in him, for which Chriſt honoured him with the name of friend, they ſeem onely to remember him of his own love, which indeed being infinite and eternall, could have no cauſe but it ſelf: a ſhort; but an effectual meſſage: a longer form of prayer is not prohibited, where need requireth, but the main is, to unload our wants and deſires into the boſome of Chriſt, and to deſire his help; which they ſufficiently did in this modeſt and implyed ſupplication: they preſcribe him not, but believe it to be enough to enform, ſo divine a lover, of their danger and want: their confidence was not in any length, or compaſſe of their meſſage, but in the ſureſt ground of confidence, the love of Chriſt, who never deſerteth thoſe he loveth, and beſt knoweth how and when to relieve and deliver them.

V. 4. not unto death] Becauſe he purpoſed to reſtore and raiſe him again preſently.

V. 5. Now Jeſus loved, &c.] This the Evangeliſt inſerteth, the better to expound the meſſage, verſe 3. this family was religious, therefore Chriſt loved that therein, which himſelf had given; as God, the fountain of all good; as man, he had not onely a reaſonable ſoul, but alſo humane affections, as ſorrow, love, joy, anger, being in all like us, ſinne onely excepted: thus loving, he juſtified the degrees of love, and honoured that ſacred life of this life, holy friendſhip, which can be onely between the good and wiſe.

V. 6. he abode two dayes ſtill] That Lazarus might die, and be buried, leſt they ſhould have ſaid, ὅτι οὔπω τελευτήσαντα αὐτὸν ἀνέστησεν. Chryſoſt. hom. 61. that he had raiſed him up, who was not yet dead: by this delay we may learn that he doth not forget: or neglect us in our diſtreſſes, but onely ſtay for that time, which ſhal beſt ſerve to advance his glory and our ſalvation.

V. 7. after that, he ſaid to his diſciples] After two dayes, verſe 6. leſt his diſpiciples might have thought that he neglected Lazarus, for fear of danger to himſelf.

into Judea again] Into the region of the tribes of Juda and Benjamin, (for, Judea is here ſtrictly taken, See Matth. 2. 1. Luke 6. 4.) whereof Pilate was Governour. Luke 3. 1. for they were at this time beyond Jordan, chap. 10. 40. under the juriſdiction of Herod the Tetrarch. See Luke 13. 31. he had a little before left Judea, chap. 10. 39, 40 to avoid the perſecution of the enraged Jews; and now leſt his diſciples ſhould fear to return with him (who were to be principall witneſſes of the enſuing miracle) he acquainteth them with his purpoſe, and armeth them againſt their fear.

V. 8. lately ſought to ſtone thee] Chap. 8. 59. and 10. 31. 'Tis but about too moneths paſt that they would have murdered thee; and wilt thou now caſt thy ſelf into the ſame danger again? here were too great imperfections in their love to the perſon of Chriſt their Maſter, and zeal for his ſafty: firſt in that they conſidered not that Chriſt muſt once dye for the elect to give them eternal life; ſecondly in that they feared that he might either be ſurprized at unawares; or ſuffer death againſt his wil as being over powred by men, though he had taught them the contrary, as before, ſo lately, chap. 10. 17, 18. Chryſoſtome's conjecture here, is probable, that they much feared their Maſters life and ſafety, but moſt their own.

V. 9. are there not twelve hours in the day?] The Jews, both ſummer and winter, divided the day into twelve hours: for they made them long or ſhort, according to the length of the day, between ſun and ſun.

if any man walk in the day] Meaning, that he that walketh in his calling, and hath the light of God for his guide, needs not fear: he that hath but day-light, walketh ſecure; how much more ſhould you be confident, who have me with you: or he meaneth, the appointed hour of my ſuffering is not yet come; no man can precipitate the day, nor any worldly power out off the hours thereof, which God hath appointed: we need not fear night before the appointed hour (See Job 14. 5. Matth. 10. 30.) neither our ends before the determined time: Chriſt often eſcaped and fled from his perſecuters; his miniſtery being not yet accompliſhed, (who came to teach, as well as to ſuffer for us) that we might learn not to tempt God by any wilful and needleſſe expoſing our ſelves to our enemies malice.

V. 10. he ſtumbleth, &c.] He continueth in his allegory, to ſhew them that they had yet no cauſe of fear while they went with him, who was the light of the world, chap. 9. 5. for, as Euthymus ſaith, the power of Chriſt leadeth or protecteth them; perpetuall fear of falling into deſtruction have they, who are not with Chriſt.

V. 11. Lazarus our friend ſleepeth] The Hebrews were wont to call death a ſleep, to intimate their aſſurance of the reſurrection. See 1 Kings 2. 10. 1 Kings 11. 43. & 15. 8, 24.

that I may awake him] Herein he comforteth them by declaring his power, who had the iſſues of life and death in his hands: it was as eaſie to him to raiſe the dead, as to awake one from ſleep.

V. 12. if he ſleep he ſhall do well] Or ſhall amend or recover: that is a good ſigne of health; why wilt thou go into hazard, to awake him?

V. 13. Jeſus ſpake of his death] Their fear of going again to Judea, made them not to underſtand (which they eaſily might) for who would go a dayes journey or more, to awake a ſleeping friend? that Jeſus ſpake of Lazarus death, and his raiſing him up again.

V. 14. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them plainly] Without any allegory, or metaphor. Lazarus is dead: nor doth he yet ſay, what he meant to do, will raiſe him again, by that divine power which in the appointed time ſhall raiſe the dead; but as ſpeaking of ſome eaſiy matter but I go, that I may awake him, verſe 11. other circumſtances he would not foretell them, but concealed them until the miracle done might ſpeak its own excellency.

V. 15. that I was not there] That I was not bodily preſent at Bethany with Lazarus: in his deity he was.

ye may believe] That your faith may be ſtrengthened, when you ſhall ſee me raiſe one that had been four dayes dead.

V. 16. called Didymus] A twinne Δίδυμος, Swidas interpreteth δίδυμοι by συμφυεῖς ſimul nati, ſo the interpreter of the Syriac Thauma, qui dicitur, Gemellus תאמא it is of the Hebrew תאם taam, geminus fuit: prophane Hiſtories mention many of this name.

let us alſo go, &c.] Which he ſpeaketh, either encouraging his fellow diſciples to follow Chriſt: or intimating the danger they ſhould run into, if they went into Judea with him.

V. 17. Then when Jeſus came he found, &c.] ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, them, or therefore comming found, &c. not that he found that by coming thither which he knew not before: but that ſo it was indeed as he had ſpoken concerning Lazarus death: which ſerved to confirm the diſciples in the aſſurance of his divine omniſcience, when they reckoned the dayes: and of his omnipotence, when they ſaw him raiſe one to life, who had been ſo long dead.

V. 18. about fifteen furlongs off] That is almoſt two miles, See ch. 6. 19.

V. 19. to comfort them concerning their brother] Syriac interpreteth, ut loquerentur cum corde earum, an Hebrew manner of expreſſion, for, to ſpeak comfortably: as Iſa, 40. 1. 2 Sam. 19. 7. 2 Chron. 30. 22. & 32. 6. Hoſ. 2. 14 it appeareth that Lazarus death was divulged in Jeruſalem, not without Gods divine providence, that the malicious Jews might not give out that Lazarus was not dead: and the Evangeliſt mentioneth this company, to ſhew the certainty of the miracle, whereof there were ſo many witneſſes, and thoſe not onely of the neighbours and family, but alſo of Jeruſalem.

V. 20. Mary ſate ſtill in the houſe] Martha being firſt enformed of the approach of Chriſt, goeth out to meet him in hope of ſome better comfort than any of her former viſiters could ſpeak, but Mary not yet hearing of his coming, ſate ſtill in the houſe, as a mourner with her comforters.

V. 21. Lord if thou hadſt been here] This was an effect of her infirmity, wherein ſhe came ſhort of the Centurions faith. See Luke 7. 7.

V. 22. but now I know] Now, though my brother be dead, yet do I believe that which thou ſaid'ſt to our meſſenger, verſe 4. this ſickneſſe is not unto death, but for the glory of God, &c.

V. 23. thy brother ſhall riſe again] Be of good cheer, thy brother ſhall live again: he anſwereth nothing to her complaint for his abſence, he would give account thereof in his act of raiſing the dead, rather than in words; but to comfort her, ſpeaketh of his preſent raiſing him; ſo explaining that which he had ſaid to his diſciples, verſe 11. neither doth he ſay, I will ask of my Father that he may riſe; but, thy brother ſhall riſe, that ſhe might not think that he ſhould obtain as a meer man, but that he alſo is the reſurrection and the life. See verſe 25.

V. 24. I know that he ſhall riſe again, &c.] In the general reſurrection, this it ſeems ſhe ſaid, becauſe Jeſus ſaid indefinitely, thy brother ſhall riſe again, not adding, now preſently; taking it, as we all do, for a generall comfort, that we ſhall be raiſed again, and not periſh in death.

V. 25. I am the reſurrection] That is, the author thereof; theſe words contain a ſecret, or implied promiſe, (of which, verſe 40,) as if he ſaid, I can and will now raiſe thy brother again.

and the life] Chap. 6. 35. giving life to all that live, the author of eternal life to the elect, which deſervedly may be ſtiled life; by my humane ſufferings, I ſhall purchaſe and merit it for them; by the power of my deity, I both give it them, and preſerve it to them.

he that believeth in me] Faith is a ſpiritual reſurrection of the ſoul; wherein believers begin to lead a new life. See chap. 5. 2, 24. &c. Ephel, 2. 5. Rom. 5. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 21.

though he were dead] In Body, yet ſhall he live Body and ſoul to eternity, ſo incorruptible a ſeed is the word of God, by which we are born again, that it liveth and abideth for ever, 1 Peter 1. 23.

V. 26. ſhall never die] ὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τ̃ αἰῶνα, he ſhall not die eternally: he ſhall not die the ſecond death (Rev. 20. 6.) which is a ſeparation of body and ſoul from God eternally, Revel 2. 11.

V. 27. I believe] πεπίστευκα, I have believed, and now do believe: meaing, that it was with her, no new, or light opinion, but that in which ſhe was, and had been conſtant: and ſo chap. 6. 69. 1 John 4. 16.

which ſhould come] As Matth. 11. 3. meaning the Meſſias whom God promiſed by the prophets, Greek εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος, which was to come into the world: this relateth to Gods decree, and promiſes made to the fathers, and believers of all ages before Chriſt's incarnation, that he that ſhould come, becauſe God, (all whoſe words are yea and amen) had ſo determined and promiſed by all the Prophets.

V. 28. ſhe went her way, and called, &c.] Very likely Chriſt bid her ſo do though the Evangeliſt for brevity ſake, doth not mention it.

ſecretly] Whiſpering to her, that the Jews might not hear, as Euthymius thinketh; Jeſus would not go into the houſe before he had done that admirable work for which he came; that the Jews accompanying Mary and following her out of the houſe (verſe 31.) to the grave of Lazarus, might (though againſt their wils) be made witneſſes of the miracles.

and called for thee] Commanded me to call thee.

V. 29. ſhe aroſe quickly] Not acquainting the Jews with the occaſion of her ſudden leaving them, who came to comfort her; probably ſhe knew the diſaffection of ſome of the Jews then preſent, toward Chriſt (See verſe 46.) and therefore would ſay nothing to them concerning his coming; neither did ſhe yet know what Chriſt would command or do for them.

V. 30. was not yet come into the town] Into Bethany: See on verſe 28. therefore went Mary (having knowledge of his arrival) out to meet him.

V. 31. ſhe goeth unto the grave] εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, to the tomb or monument of her brother Lazarus, which was according to the manner, out of the town; and their cuſtome was to build them ſo, as that there was paſſage into them, when the covers were taken off. See chap. 20. 5, 6. 8. 11. and here verſe 38.

to weep there] To ſit by the grave, and eaſe her grief with weeping.

V. 32. Lord if thou hadſt been here, &c.] Theſe ſiſters grief was one, and their infirmity of faith a like, verſe 21. poſſibly the ſiſters, in Chriſts long delay, had ſpoken theſe things one to another: her words were brief, the reſt ſhe ſupplied with tears.

V. 33. he groaned in his ſpirit] Such ſympathy and compaſſion had he, to weep with thoſe that wept (See Rom. 12. 15.) that he inwardly groaned, or from the heart.

was troubled] ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτόν, he troubled himſelf, conſidering the miſery of man ſubject to death by reaſon of ſin. Chriſt had humane affections, and perturbations of minde, without any ſin: much like the agitation of ſome clear and pure water in a glaſſe, ſo did they move his humane ſoul, but ſtirred up no pollution of ſin in exceſſe or defect.

V. 34. where have ye laid him] He asketh not becauſe he was ignorant (for he that knew of his death being abſent, knew alſo where they had buried the dead) but for their ſakes who were preſent, attending to ſhew him the place, expecting what he would do, he asketh (ſaith Nazianzen orat. 35.) for he was man; but he raiſed him from the dead, Θεὸς γὰρ ἦν, for he was alſo God.

V. 35. Jeſus wept] As man, he wept, as God he raiſed the dead; there was humane affection (as verſe 33.) here divine power: there he wept as man, but far above man was he, when he commanded the dead to come out of the grave bound hand and foot. Ambroſ. ep. l. 7. 47. See Hilar. de trin. lib. 10. near the end. ille flevit, ne tu homo diu fleres, ſaith Ambroſ. de fide. l. 2. he wept (and ſuffered all things as man for thee) that thou, O man, mighteſt not weep long, or to eternity.

V. 36. Behold how he loved him] They judge of his love by his tears, as of the cauſe by its effect; we moſt bewail that loſt, which we loved moſt.

V. 37. Which opened the eyes of the blinde] Chap. 9. 6 ſome think that they here queſtion his doing that miracle, as if they intimated, either that the man was not indeed born blinde; or that there was ſome colluſion, or they dreamed of ſome defect of his power. See Pſal. 78. 19.

V. 38. again groaning] As verſe 33. Chriſt anſwereth not their words, with words, but groans, who meant preſently to anſwer to the ſatisfaction of the well-meaning, and to the cavillers conviction by a wonderfull work in raiſing Lazarus from the dead, in himſelf] In his Spirit, verſe 33.

a ſtone lay upon it] To defend the dead from injury; as the manner among them was, See Matth. 27. 60. this made the miracle more evident, and freed it from ſuſpition of any compact or impoſture.

V. 39. take away the ſtone] He could have commanded that away, by the unſeen miniſtery of Angels; but he would have them eye-witneſſes of that which he did, leſt they ſhould have ſaid here, as of the blinde man cured, chap. 9. 9. he is like him, but not the ſame.

V. 40. See the glory of God] That is, a miracle which I ſhall do by the ſoveraign power of God, whereby he ſhall be glorified.

then they took away the ſtone] As Jeſus had commanded; moſt probably the whole company then preſent, muſt in the opening of the vault, wherein was the body ſo many dayes dead, finde ſufficient aſſurance that he vvas indeed dead, by the loathſome ſmell of that, vvhich Gods providence ſo diſpoſed to the greater evidence of the miracle; and to the confirmation of the faith of the reſurrection from the dead.

V. 41. father I thank thee] Jeſus being in one perſon both God and man, calleth him father, as God, and giveth thanks as man.

V. 42. I knew that thou] It is not nevv or unexpected, I knevv thou alvvayes heareſt me. So it is ſaid, Hebrevvs 5. 7. that he was heard in that he feared; yet he taſted of that cup vvhich he deprecated, Matth. 26. 39. note here that God even then heareth us, vvhen he giveth not to our vvill and deſire, but to his ovvn ever bleſſed vvill, vvhich vve ſhould ever ſubmit to, and moſt deſire.

that they may believe] This expreſſeth that which he ſaid, becauſe of the people, they might poſſibly think that I do theſe things by magicall povver, as the blaſphemous Phariſees ſaid, but I thus ſaid, that they may believe that thou ſenteſt me, and vvorkeſt by me.

V. 43. with a loud voice] That all might hear: he vvhiſpered not as inchanters uſe; but cryed aloud, that this voice might be a ſymbolum of that trumpet vvhich ſhall once avvake and call the dead out of their graves, 1 Cor. 15. 52. 1 Theſ. 4. 16. John 5. 28, 29.

Lazarus come forth] It vvas novv only the carcaſe of Lazarus, a liveleſſe body, until the Lord of the ſpirits of the juſt, cauſed the ſoul to return unto it again, thus quickneth he the dead, aud calleth thoſe things which be not, as though they were, Rom. 4. 17. come forth, of the ſepulchre; thus calleth he the dead, as if they lived; (ſo do they to God, who are dead to men) this ſheweth what he meant by waking Lazarus, verſe 11. ariſe from the dead, and come out, that all theſe preſent may ſee thee truely and really raiſed from the dead.

V. 44. came forth] The bands giving ſo much way that he might come forth; which, it ſeemeth, Chriſt would not ſo much looſe, but that his preſent friends might ſee that they were, as they had tyed them when they buried him.

V. 45. Believed on him] That he was the very Meſſias and Saviour of the world, ſent of God: thus were they ſtrengthened in Lazarus infirmity, and God glorified in his death and raiſing again, as verſe 4.

V. 46. but ſome of them went, &c.] Euthymius conjectureth that they were ſome of them who ſaid, could not this man, &c. v. 37. ſo invincible is malice, if we could and ſhould evidently reſtore ſight to the blind, and raiſe the dead; neither would they ſo believe: theſe not only belived not, but went to the Phariſees, as it were to admoniſh them, to take ſome courſe with Jeſus, that others might not believe in him, yet did they herein but caſt on oyl to quench the fire; they ſerved as witneſſes to condemn their own and the Phariſees unbelif and obſtinacy; but they more confirmed the truth of the miracle which believers teſtified, and unbelievers confeſſed. So their ſealing and guarding Chriſts ſepulchre rendred the truth of his death and reſurrection more evident, and undoubted, it is a dangerous thing to erre from the truth: there is in man a miſchievous ſelf-love, putting him on to defend his errours, by erring more. Arnobius. adv. Gent. l. 6. noted it welll: quod ſemel ſine ratione feciſtis, &c. that which ye have once done without reaſon, ye defend, leſt ye ſhould ſeem to have once been ignorant: ye think its better, non vinci, not to be overcome, than to yeild to a confeſſed truth.

V. 47. Then gathered he the chief priests] See Mat. 26. 3. when they heard that Jeſus was come again, and contrary to their wil and authority, ſtill wrought ſuch evident miracles, ſo near them; they were cut to the heart; their envy made them mad againſt him. Some of the ſpectators of that which Chriſt did at Lazarus grave, had related the whole matter and manner of his raiſing the dead Lazarus, therefore they call the Synedrion or great counſel to adviſe what they ſhould do to Jeſus.

V. 48. If we let him thus alone] Thus endeavour they to reſiſt Gods will by their counſels: too common a practice among men of this world; here they bewray a marvellous blindneſſe, and deſperate rage againſt Chriſt; why conſider you fighters againſt God, how eaſily that power which raiſed the dead, can overthrow all your deſignes, and counſels againſt him: how eaſily can he ſmite you all dead, that but commanded, and the dead came forth of the grave? men can by their power (God ſo permitting) kill the living, but God only can raiſe the dead: what ſhall your ſuceeſſe at laſt be, who ſtrive with your maker?

take away both our place and nation] That is, they will diſpoſſeſſe us of our countrey as the Chaldees have formerly done, thus they pretended a neceſſity of ſtate againſt Chriſt; whereas Tertullian ſaith well, certè nulla neceſſitas prætendi poteſt deliquendi ab iis, quibus una incumbit neceſſitas non delinquendi, certainly no neceſſity to ſinne can be pretended by thoſe, on whom lyeth one neceſſity not to ſinne.

V. 49. that ſame year] For that preſent time he was ſuffragan. See c. 18. 13. and on Luke 3. 2.

V. 50. nor conſider] See c. 18. 14. he pretendeth to ſome inſight into ſtate intereſts, and yet knew not what he ſaid himſelf: he thought he had now engroſſed the ſpirit of counſel and policy; and therefore moveth by an argument from the ſafety of the ſtate; but it ſeemeth grounded on that former reſult of the Sanhedrin which was —— if we let him alone----the Romans ſhall come, &c. verſe 48. Caiphas preſently anſwereth, as it were reſolved upon the queſtion, rather let one man dye, than the whole nation of the Jews periſh, if you know not that, you know nothing, neither conſider things expedient.

and that the whole nation periſh not] That is, rather than the whole nation ſhould periſh: Caiphas took it for concluded, that either Chriſt, or their nation muſt periſh, and as he fooliſhly thought, that of two evils he deſigned the leaſt to be choſen; that is, that Chriſt ſhould rather periſh, than their nation.

V. 51. But being High Prieſt that year] He ſpake not this by his own Spirit or inſtinct, but God would have this propheſie come from the High Prieſts mouth, to leave the Jews more inexcuſable in their unbelief, he being ſo publique a a perſon.

V. 52. gathered together in one, &c.] That he might gather the Church, the elect of the Jews and Gentiles, diſperſed by the providence of God, diſtributed, and dwelling in every nation of the world. See chap. 10. 16. & 12. 32. Epheſ. 2. 13.

V. 53. from that day forth they took counſel] They all unanimouſly conſented to Caiphas advice, as if that had been an oracle, ſufficient to take away all ſcruple of conſcience, and to aſſure them, that they might juſtly deſtroy Jeſus; ſo wretchedly can Satan blind the malicious, that they ſhall be confident they do wondrous well to perſecute Gods elect to death. See chap. 16. 2. they took counſel: συνεβουλεύσαντο, by a common conſent of the whole Sanhedrim.

N. 54. Walked no more] Converſed no more publickly, becauſe his hour to ſuffer, was not yet come. See chap. 7. 30. and 8. 20.

near to the wilderneſſe] Far from the malicious Phariſees at Ieruſalem.

a city called Ephraim] Some read Ephrem, Εφρὴμ: Jerom de loc. Hebr. readeth as we, Ephraim juxta deſertum---See Joh. Druſ. ad voc. N.T. com. 1. and præterit. lib. 4. in loc.

V. 55. To purifie themſelves] To prepare themſelves by prayer, ſacrifices; and paying of vows, or other legall ceremonies; which though (as being carnall rights) they could not ſanctifie (Hebrevvs. 9. 9, 10.) yet the faithfull both acknowledged their ſinnes, and (under theſe ſhadows) that purification which was to be accompliſhed in them by the ſacred blood of Chriſt.

V. 56. then ſought they for Jeſus] For he uſed to come up before the feaſt day, to teach the people.

V. 57. knew where he were] They thought becauſe they ſaw him not yet at the feaſt, that he had hidden himſelf for fear, but he came in now more publickly, and with greater ſolemnity than at any time before, and five dayes in the temple and city, freely ſpake and converſed before their faces; neither could they hurt, or apprehend him untill the time appointed, wherein he was to be offered up a living and conſummatory ſacrifice for our redemption and ſalvation.

he ſhould ſhew it] To the high prieſts and elders, that they might according to the decree of their counſell apprehend him, yet we read of none that did, or could obey this mandate of theirs, but that ſon of perdition, Judas that betrayed Chriſt.

CHAP. XII.

Verſe 1. Six dayes before the Paſſeover] πρὸ ἓξ ἡμερῶν, &c. before ſix day of, &c. here is a tradiction of the word πρὸ, before, as if it were written, ἓξ ἡμέρας πρὸ τοῦ πάσχα, as we give it, ſix dayes before the Paſſeover, Tremelius ſaith it is a Syriac manner of ſpeaking.

V. 2. There they made him a ſupper] In the houſe of Simon the Leper, for there Mary anointed him with precious oyl: Lazarus is here mentioned as a Trophe of Chriſts victories over death; and therefore is reckoned among the gueſts, to expreſſe the certainty and reality of his raiſing from the dead; that we may know that it was no viſion, or appearance of things which were not: and that he did not preſently die again, but lived to eat, drink, and converſe with men as formerly; that believers might have certain teſtimony of the divine power of Chriſt in his reſurrection, and that the enemies might alſo thereby be convicted.

V. 3. of ſpickenerd] It was a cuſtome in thoſe parts, to uſe pretious odours and oyntments at ſolemn feaſts, See Mark 14. 3. and Auguſtin de doctr. Chriſtian. lib. 3. cap. 12. Plin. l. 13. c. 3.

anointed the feet] The other Evangeliſts ſay ſhe powred it on his head, Mat. 26. 7. Mark 14. 3. whereas this Evangeliſt ſaith, ſhe anointed his feet, we muſt know that both are true: for ſhe anointed as Auguſtin ſaith, de conſenſ. Evang. l. 2. c. 79. non ſolum caput, ſed & pedes Domini: this ſeemeth to have been beyond the uſuall cuſtom, to anoint the feet, Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 13. c. 3. noteth it among the Romans, for a kinde of forraign luxury: vidimus (ſaith he) etiam viſtigia pedum tingi, and further, that P. Licinius Craſſus, and L. Julius Cæſar, being Cenſors, made a decree, that none ſhould ſel unguenta exotica, forraign ointments: but theſe things were much uſed among the Eaſtern people; and here, as Mary did it in thankfull acknowledgment of the mercy of Chriſt ſhewed them, as alſo of her love to him; ſo alſo he juſtifying her fact, declareth uſe of Gods creatures, good and reſpectively lawful, where the abuſe is condemnable.

and wiped his feet with her hair] This was a ſigne of her officious humility; but it is probable which ſome conjecture, from Luke 7. 38. that the order of things here done is inverted: for either ſhe firſt wiped his feet: and afterward anointed them, as Luke 7. 38. or elſe ſhe ſhould have more anointed her own hair, than Jeſus feet.

V. 4 One of his diſciples] The other evangeliſts ſpeak of more; this nameth only Judas, poſſibly becauſe he was the author and beginner of the murmuring; and it may be (which Auguſtin conjectureth) the reſt were ſimply led thereto, propter pauperum curam: for, and becauſe of the true care they indeed had of the poor, which Judas onely pretended to, for a vail of his covetouſneſſe: ſo eaſily are good intentions abuſed to ſchiſme and faction: and ſo commonly do hypocrites diſguiſe and cloke their moſt impious deſignes with fair ſhews of religious charity. Judas is here called Ἰούδας Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης, Judas ſon of Simon (ἀπὸ τοῦ Καριώτου, as ſome ſome read) or Cariot, or Iſcariot.

V. 5. ſold for three hundred pence] See on Mat. 18. 28. and on Mark 14. 5.

V. 6 he was a thief] That is, as Nonnus interpreteth φύλαξ κακὸς, a bad keeper of the ſtock, from whence he impropriated, to lay up for himſelf, that he might make himſelf an eſtate, and ſtore for his ſubſiſtance, when he had forſaken Chriſt, as it is likely he had already deſigned; becauſe he had often heard Jeſus mention his ſuffering and the diſperſion and perſecution of his diſciples at hand.

had the bag] Chap. 13 29. he had charge of the purſe and ſtock of money wherewith they that adminiſtred to Chriſt furniſhed him to buy neceſſaries: ſee Luke 8 3. Gr. γλωσσόκομον, a purſe or bag, linguæ ſpeciem habens, ſaith Æmilius Portus. interpreteth Suidas, hereof Iudas was treaſurer or ſteward: Ieſus knew his minde, yet committed that office to none other of the twelve: Iudas was fitteſt for the bag, it is ſin and pity to impropriate the faithful miniſters of Chriſt, or with any ſecular imployments to diſtract them from the miniſtery of the word and ſacraments. Iudas was diſcontented, for that this precious oyntment had not rather been brought in ready money and put into his bag, that he might have ſhared therein. The hypocrites own private intereſt croſſed is that which troubleth him, when he pretendeth the cauſe of piety and religion, for which he taketh as much care, as Iudas did for the poor.

V. 7. hath ſhe kept this] Thus the providence of God had diſpoſed her pious intention, which was to honour Chriſt with the beſt of her ſubſtance, who eſteemed nothing too good or coſtly to beſtow on him; though poſſibly ſhe might not at preſent think of his death and burial near, which he knew, therefore ſaid he, let her alone; ſhe hath not beſtowed this coſt in vain, it is in ſtead of enbalming and preparation of me to my grave, who muſt very ſhortly dye; ſhe ſhall not then perform this office, permit her now: See Mat. 26 12, Mark 14. 8.

V. 8. the poor alwayes] See Matth. 26. 11. Thus he anſwereth Judas objection; and this verb plurall ἔχετε ſheweth, that he had led ſome of his fellow Diſciples into this murmuring.

V. 9. not for Jeſus ſake only] They would fain ſatisfie their own curioſity, by ſeeing whether that were true which they had heard reported of Lazarus raiſing from the dead: they would either congratulate, hear, ſee, and ask him ſome queſtions concerning the truth of his death, and poſſibly of the ſtate and condition of ſeparated ſouls in the other world. It may well be, that many before this time had come from Jeruſalem to ſee and enquire of Lazarus; but now they came to ſee Jeſus and Lazarus together, both the dead man raiſed, and the author of the miracle, the reſtorer of his life

V. 10. that they might put Lazarus alſo to death] Such is the miſchievous reach of malice: now they had nothing to calumniate, neither the violation of the Sabbath, aſſiſtance of Beelzebub, &c. this ſtingeth them ſo, that they conſult how to ſuppreſſe the very memory thereof, by deſtroying him whom Chriſt had delivered from death.

V. 11. becauſe that by reaſon of him many, &c.] Becauſe many ſaw, heard, and conferred with Lazarus, whom many knew dead four dayes, and ſaw raiſed from the dead again by the voice of Jeſus calling him out of his grave: therefore, convicted by ſo evident a miracle, they withdrew themſelves from them who conſpired to deſtroy Jeſus, and belived on him as the Meſſias.

V. 12. on the next day] Mat. 21. 8. the next day after that ſupper at Bethany, mentioned veeſe 2. it ſeemeth to have been the fift day before the paſſeover. See verſe 1.

V. 13. took branches of palm trees] They took, τὰ βαΐα, boughs or branches of palm trees: this they were wont to do in token of rejoycing and victory. See 1 Mac 13. 51. They entred with praiſe, καὶ βαΐων. &c. So 2 Mac. 10. 7. They bare branches and fair boughs, ἔτι δὲ φοίνικας and palms alſo, and ſang pſalms unto him who had given them good ſucceſſe. So Revel. 7. 9. καὶ φοίνικες, and palmes in their hands. The Jews were commanded to take ſuch branches at the feaſt of tabernacles, Levit. 23. 40. כפת תמרים cappoth temarim, boughs of palm trees which the Greek, in ſome Copies give by the word βαΐα here uſed, in others κάλλυνθρα φοινίκων: the Chaldee by לולבין lulabin, as growing out of the heart of the tree: It was in uſe alſo among other nations to carry the branches of this tree in their hands, in ſigne of victory. See Pauſan in Arcadic. and Cal. Rhodigin. lect. antiq. lib. 5. c. 6. the palm tree is green and flouriſhing, Pſal. 92. 13 the leaves thereof fall not (Plin, Nat. Hiſt. l. 16 c. 20. and ſo like the Saints, Pſal. 1. 3.) of tall and upright ſtature: hereto the Church is likened, Cant. 7. 7, 8 With theſe branches in their hands the Iſraelites went about the altar, and ſaid הושיעה נא Hoſanna, Save now I beſeech thee Lord, Pſal. 118. 25. This now the people (though at another time of the year) by Gods providence did, to ſhew that all the legal feaſts were to have their accompliſhment in Chriſt who was ſhortly to triumph over all ſpirituall enemies and that the honour of thoſe ſolemnities did of right appertain to him.

V. 14. when he had found] Greek εὑρὼν; The ſenſe is, having gotten, or obtained. So Luke 1. 30. εὗρες χάριν, he ſent his Diſciples to fetch it for him, Mat. 21. 2. &c. Luk. 19. 30.

V. 15. fear not] Zech. 9. 9 Mat. 21. 5. the Evangeliſt here citeth not the very words of the Prophet, Zech. 9. 9. where we read הריעי jubila filia Jeruſalem (the verb רוע is either a ſhouting for joy, as conquerers uſed, or ſorrow, as the conquered) which the 70. give, χαῖρε σφόδρα θύγατερ Σιὼν, &c. vehemently rejoyce, &c. John here following the maine drift of the propheſie in its application to the preſent occaſion; giveth it, μὴ φοβοῦ θύγατερ Σιών ---fear not, &c. for beſides that rejoycing and fear are incompatible, and mutually excluſive of each other, the Princes and people of the Jews, could not but be troubled at theſe extraordinary voices, and acclamations of the multitude, verſe 13. ſounding out in the open ſtreets of the imperial city, that name of king, ſuſpected and hated of the Romans, under whoſe power & government the Jews now were; probably therefore they feared the Romans ſword, if they rebel'ed againſt them, or the heavy exactions of a new king; therefore God warned them by the holy Prophet, long before; that they ſhould not need to fear any of theſe things by their ſpiritual King Meſſias, who ſhould not at all be ambitious of ſecular honour nor covetous of worldly riches and therefore he ſhould be no tyrant, cruel, rapacious, hard or terrible Prince, but a meek, humble, juſt, holy, and beneficent man, who ſhould not come to pillage, or judge and revenge, but to ſave them; they ought therefore rather to rejoyce and ſhout for joy, than to fear and be troubled at his approach.

daughter of Sion] That is, Church of Iſrael, uſed to aſſemble for Gods publick worſhip in their ſolemnities, in the Temple built on Mount Sion in Jeruſalem.

behold thy king] Chriſt thy ſpiritual and eternall King: this his humility ſheweth that his kingdom was not of this world, and conſiſting in externall and ſecular pomp, magnificence, or outward things.

V. 16 theſe things underſtood not his diſciples] Being commanded in that manner to fetch the Aſſe, they were ſo far from doing it to the end that the Scripture might be fulfilled, that they underſtood not theſe things.

they remembred that theſe things were written] Some refer this to the Diſciples (and that moſt probably) that they acted, but for preſent, underſtood not that it was to fulfill any Scripture, but after that Chriſt was aſcended, and the holy Ghoſt given, to lead them into all truth, and to bring all things neceſſary to their remembrance: others refer it to the multitude in entertaining him ſo as was propheſied: in either we may obſerve the truth of God fulfilled; and the ſincerity of the Goſpel, free from all compact and fraud in ſo much that the very acters, and witneſſes of others actions therein hiſtorified, for preſent knew not what theſe things meant.

V. 20 certain Greeks among them] Either Proſelytes or Heathens converted to the true religion profeſſed in Iſrael; as 1 Kings 8. 41 or Jews of Greece; that is, whoſe anceſtors were Jews, though their ſelves were bred and born in Greece; for theſe alſo came up to the Feaſt. See Acts 6. 1.

V. 21. Sir we would ſee Jeſus] That is, ſpeak to him, or hear him in private: no doubt but they had heard much of his admirable works; and probably they might ſometimes ſee and hear him in the multitude; but they deſired favour to be admitted to his preſence.

V. 22. Andrew and Philip told Jeſus] As not preſuming to bring any to him without his leave.

V. 23. that the ſon of man ſhould be glorified] He anſwereth not to the information of his diſciples, or the deſire of the Greeks, but that which was of importance to his hearers; that the time of his death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and manifeſtation to the world by the Goſpel preached, was now at hand, and ſo might poſſibly intimate that the Grecians ſhould more happily be ſatisfied very ſhortly in hearing and believing the Goſpel declaring him their Saviour and Redeemer than in ſeeing him now in the form of a ſervant and man of ſorrows.

V. 24 except a corn of wheat] He taketh up this allegory to prepoſſeſſe an objection which ſome might have made when they ſhould have ſeen his death and paſſion: how ſaid Chriſt, the Son of Man ſhould be glorified, when now we ſee him dead and buried? why, conſider that which is neer, and familiar unto thee: Frumentum ſi ſervas perdis, ſi ſeminas renovas, Greg. hom 32. in Evang. If you keep the grains unſowed, you loſe your crop; but by caſting them into the ground you renew them. The death of Chriſt was as ſowing of corn, which ſeeming loſt, proveth our greater advantage.

V. 25. he that loveth his life] ὁ χαριζόμενος αὐτῇ παρὰ τὸ δέον, he that indulgeth thereto more than he ought, Chryſoſt. hom. 66. or if the love of this life, eaſe, or pleaſures, let him from coming to Chriſt (ſee Mat. 10. 39. & 16. 25. Mark 8. 35. Luke 9. 24. & 17. 33) or, ſhall, to ſave it, deny me.

he that hateth his life] That ſetteth not dear by his life for Chriſts ſake, as Acts 21. 13. He that is ready to loſe his life, Qui retinendæ vitæ non nimis cupidus eſt, Euthymius. So that he may ſeem to hate, or not value it when the truth and honour of Chriſt requireth his expoſing it. See Matthew, 10.39. Luke 14. 26.

V. 26. let him follow me] That is, imitate me, in my ready obedience of God, to the death.

and where I am, there alſo, &c.] For there ſhall neither be errour in the way, nor end in death, where any man followeth me; He cannot but be happy that is with Chriſt.

him will my Father honour] making him a Co-heir with Chriſt, Rom. 8. 17.

V. 27. now is my ſoul troubled] Out of a deep ſenſe of Gods wrath againſt ſins, for which he was to ſuffer, he flieth to Prayer, yet preferreth his Fathers will and glory, and our ſalvation, before his own life.

ſave me from this houre] Of death now inſtant. See Luke 22. 42. Matt. 26. 39. Mark 14. 35. ταῦτα τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης φύσεως τὰ ἀσθενήματα, Chryſoſt. hom, 66. Theſe are the infirmities of humane nature; but without ſin, becauſe in ſubjection to Gods Will.

came I unto this houre] That I might in the appointed time ſuffer for the redemption of thine elect.

V. glorifie thy Name] Let thy Holy Name be prayſed and magnified through the World for mans redemption wrought in my paſſion.

then came there a voice from Heaven] A voyce was heard from Heaven. See Matt. 3.17. or therefore came there a voice, becauſe Jeſus thus prayed, according as the Apoſtle ſaid, Hebr. 5. 7. who in the dayes of his fleſh, when he had offered up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears unto him that was able to ſave him from death, and was heard, in that he feared. God therefore anſwered from Heaven, I have both glorified it, and I, &c. as to comfort him againſt the ſorrowes of inſtant death, ſo to remove the ſcandal of the Croſs.

I have both glorified, &c.] I have hitherto glorified my Name by thee in the many Divine workes done by thee, and I will in thy death, reſurrection and aſcenſion glorifie the ſame, as alſo by the miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, preaching of the Goſpell, converſion and ſalvation of the Elect, both of the Jewes and Gentiles, to the uttermoſt part of the Earth, the end of time, and all Eternity.

V. 29. ſaid it thundred] Many of them ſo ſaid. This ſheweth that it was no obſcure whiſpering, but loud as thunder, though the unbelievers underſtood it not.

others ſaid, an Angel ſpake to him] They who heard the words, ſaid an Angel ſpake to him, ſo conjectured they, though they heard them delivered in the perſon of the Father, to whom he prayed.

V. 30. came not becauſe of me] Not onely for me to comfort me, but alſo to inſtruct you.

V. 31. now is the judgement of this world] The reformation and reſtoring of thoſe things which were out of order.

the prince of this world] Satan (So c. 14.30.) ſhall be overcome by my death, Hebr. 2. 14.

v. 32. if I be lifted up] That is, crucified and taken away (c. 3. 14.) from the earth; as the Syriac giveth [illegible] by אתרימת etherimeth, which is from the Hebrew word רום rom, which ſignifieth both lifted up, as Gen. 7. 17. Gen. 31. 45. and taken away, Dan. 8. 11.

draw all men unto me] All the Elect of all ſorts, not onely Jewes, but alſo Gentiles: Ex omni gente & conditione, —— ſome of every Nation and condition: —— He ſaith all, Quia nemo ſalvus fit, niſi quem ipſe traxerit, No man is ſaved, but he whom Chriſt draweth. Fulgen. de incarn. & gra. D. Jeſu c. 31. I will draw all the Elect, as captives, ὑπὸ τυράννου κατεχομένους Chryſoſt. hom. 66. held by ſome Tyrant.

v. 33. What death] What manner of death; to wit, the death of the Croſſe. This had he in expreſs terms often ſpoken unto you his Diſciples, Matt. 20. 19. therefore ſome thinke that he now thus ſpake to a multitude preſent, not plainly ſaying that they ſhould crucifie him, but yet ſo intimating it that when they that believed or were to believe ſhould ſee it, they might know that he who foreknew it, and revealed it to others, offered up himſelfe a voluntary ſacrifice.

V. 34. We have heard] Pſalm 110. 4. ſome of them that were preſent, ſaid, We have heard out of the Law, that is, our Scribes and Doctors taught us out of the Scriptures, for ſo Chriſt calleth the Law. c. 10. 34.

out of the Law] The Scriptures, Pſalm 89. 36, 37. Ezek. 37. 25. See on c. 10. 34.

that Chriſt abideth for ever] That he ſhall continue amongſt the living: this they collected out of miſunderſtood Scriptures. See Pſalm 72. 17. Pſalm 89. 30 they marked not thoſe places which concerned the ſtate of his humiliation and death, as Dan. 9. 26. Iſa. 53. Pſalm 22. 17. 18. had they well compared the one with the other, it would have better appeared to them, that Chriſt was by death to enter into his glory.

V. 35. yet a little while the light] He confirmeth that which he ſaid concerning his death; and ſecretly taxeth their wilfull blindneſs, who neither in his doctrine nor miracles underſtand him to be Chriſt, therefore reſolveth them not concerning that they asked; but imitateth that both Chriſt and the Goſpel, which now, as a clear light ſhined among them, ſhould ſhortly be taken from them and they delivered up to their own obſtinacy and ignorance of the means of ſalvation. See Matt. 21. 43. Acts 13. 46. Rom. 11.

V. 36. departed and hid, &c.] After his teaching in the day, now when it grew toward night (Mark 11. 11.) He went out of Jeruſalem to lodge at Bethany, Matt. 21. 17. Secretly with his diſciples, that his enemies who laid wait for his life, might not know where to finde him: for though we read not here that they took up ſtones, yet he that knew their hearts, ſaw them now growing hot, and ready to kill, therefore would he not ſtay there untill it brake out into action. Chryſoſt.

v. 37. yet they believed not] That is, many of them believed not, ſome did.

V. 38. Lord who hath believed, &c.] Iſai 53. 1. Rom. 10. 16. This interrogation importeth as often in Holy Scripture, ſuch a vehemency of ſpeaking, as is with admiration, as if he ſaid, Lord, how few will believe! It is ſtrange that ſo few believe the evidence of the truth conſtantly affirmed by us all; certainly coming to paſs, which according to thy Word, we preach unto them.

the arm of the Lord been revealed] That is, the Goſpel, which is the power of God to ſalvation to every one that believeth, Rom. 1. 16. by זרע zeroah, an arm, the Hebrews uſually expreſſed power, vertue, aid, relief, &c. See Luke 1. 51.

V. 39. therefore they could not believe] This is ſpoken to ſhew us, that contempt of Gods Word, and wilful ſhutting the eyes againſt the light of the Goſpel, taketh away all ability of believing to ſalvation. See Matt. 13. 14, 15. they could not; that is ſay Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, they would not. They will, not indeed believe, nor is it in a wicked mans power vellere credere, to be willing to be belive: for as Faith is the gift of God (Epheſ. 2. 8.) So is a true and hearty deſire thereof which God beſtoweth on them onely whom he will therein ſatisfie and make bleſſed, Matt. 5. 6. and juſtly giveth not unto thoſe who under-value his mercies, and deſpiſe his Ordinance.

V. 40. he hath blinded their eyes] See on Matt. 13. 14, 15. Rom. 1. 21. 28. 2 Theſ. 2. 10, 11 12.

V. 31 when he ſaw his Glory] Iſa. 6. 1, 2.

and ſpake of him] Of Chriſt. The Evangeliſt collecteth that the Propheſie and Doctrine of Iſaias concerned ages then to come: for He ſaw the glory of Chriſt under the Goſpel, and accommodateth it to thoſe times of which he ſpake: the Viſion indeed was in the year wherein king Uzziah died. Iſai. 6. 1. yet was it of things appertaining to the time and Kingdome of Chriſt under the Goſpel: See on Matt. 15. 7.

V. 42. put out of the Synagogue] That is, excommunicated, ſo c. 9. 22. The vanity of Phariſees argument to diſſwade men from believing in Chriſt, c. 7. 48. (have any of the Rulers, or of the Phariſees believed on him?) ſeemeth here anſwered: yes, among the chief Rulers alſo, many believed on him: as alſo a further objection which might be made, why do they not profeſs that their Faith openly? why, for fear of the active malice of the Phariſees, leſt they ſhould excommunicate them, and ſo they ſhould looſe their credit and reputation with the people.

V. 43. they loved the praiſe of men] c. 5. 44. To be honoured of men, and to juſtifie themſelves before them. See Luke 16. 15. the Evangeliſt here noteth the cauſe why few of the great men ſincerely profeſſed the Goſpel, not becauſe their conſciences were not ſufficiently convicted; but becauſe they loved their own eaſe, honour, and riches, more than Gods Honour, or their own ſalvation. So dangerous a thing it is for fear of men to diſſemble Faith. See Heb. 11. 27. Matt. 10. 33.

V. 44. he that believeth on me, &c.] This is not ſimply to be underſtood, but with reference to the Jewes ſence, who took him to be meer Man: to them he ſaith, the way to Faith in God, is to believe in me; and that he ſpake not of himſelf, as verſe 49. 50. but that which God the Father gave him Commiſſion and Command to ſpeak. See Luke 10. 16. And that it is the greateſt injury to God, to disbelieve the Goſpel, as if his Truth were not ſufficient for us: And, laſtly, that they who hear the Goſpel, muſt be confident, that therein they heare not men, but God, whoſe Word and Truth it is.

V. 45. he that ſeeth me] For he is the lively Image and Pattern of his Perſon, Heb. 1. 3. and one God with the Father, c. 14. 9.

V. 46. I come a light] c. 3. 19.

V. 47. if any man] c. 3. 17.

Judge him not] I condemne him not now, but he ſhall be judged at the laſt day: I came now to call ſinners to repentance, to preach the Goſpel of Peace.

V. 48. the word that I have ſpoken] The Doctrine of Chriſt, the Goſpel, which the wicked now ſo ſecurely contemn, ſhall once riſe in judgement againſt them, and condemn them, (See Mark 16. 16. John 3. 18) by ſo much more heavily, by how much greater means of ſalvation they have neglected.

V. 49 what I ſhould ſay] God therefore anointed him, Iſai. 61. 1. So that what ever he taught concerning Faith, juſtification by it, rewards, puniſhments, the reſurrection, Baptiſm, &c. was the eternal Counſel of God revealed by Chriſt, of all which he changed nothing in the delivery thereof.

V. 50. I know that his Commandement is life] That is, that the Doctrine of the Goſpel which I have, at the command of my Father, preached unto you, is the Word of life (as Peter confeſſed, chap. 6.68.) that which truely ſheweth you the onely way and means to Eternal Life, if you believe and obey it. And ſo he aggravateth their unbelief, who were ſo blinde and malicious in their own wrong.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſe 1. NOw before the feaſt of Paſſeover] See Matt. 26. 1. Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 1. See Iſ. Caſaubon, Execcit. ad Annal. 16. N. 28.

he loved them unto the end] Not onely his Diſciples, but all his Elect, which are here called his own; thoſe which his Father gave him. See John 17. 20. He loved them even to the death, which he ſuffered for them; and ſo, inceſſantly; and when he ſaw the danger coming towards him, he tooke the more care for them.

V. 2. ſupper being ended] Or when they were at ſupper; a little before the inſtitution of the Lords Supper, Matt. 26. 26. that is, after the ſupper (wherein according to the ceremonial Law, they eat the Paſchal Lambe) was ended, before they had taken away the remainder of bread and wine, see Luke 22.19.20.

V. 3. given all things into his hand] See c.3. 35. This is ſaid, to ſet off his admirable humility, to which for our ſakes he deſcended, who knew and remembred the power which God had given him: the meaning is, as if it were ſaid, although he well knew that the Father had given all things into his hands (as Matt. 28. 18.) and that he was now ſhortly to aſcend into that incomprehenſible Glory, which as God, he had eternally with the Father, yet as man, He would thus perform the part of a ſervant, in waſhing his Diſciples feet.

V. 4 riſeth from ſupper, &c.] Leaving his Diſciples ſitting; layeth aſide his garments (which they uſed to wear, long, and looſe) τὰ ἱμάτια, Hebr, שמלה ſhimlah, Gen. 9 23. which the 70 give thereby τὸ ἱμάτιον.

V. 5. began to waſh his Diſciples feet] Partly to ſhew his admirable love to them, to give them an example of humility, and love one to another; and partly to intimate, that he onely cleanſeth us from our ſins, as 1 John 1.7.

V. 6. Lord doſt thou waſh my feet?] This he ſeemeth to ſay as fearing it had been too much diſhonour for Chriſt the Son of the immortal God, to waſh a ſinners feet (See Luke 5. 8.) not then fully underſtanding (as after he did, 1 Peter 1. 19.) that he came to redeem us, with his own precious blood: in effect he ſaith; O my Lord, ſhouldſt thou waſh my feet with thoſe ſacred hands, with which thou openedſt the eyes of the blinde, with which thou didſt exerciſe Divine Power in healing the ſicke, raiſing the dead, &c. I am unworthy to perform this office to thee, and wouldeſt thou doe it for me?

V. 7. what I doe thou knoweſt not now] hereby Chriſt ſignified, that he now did ſomething more than ſimply waſh their feet: there was in his action, a teaching Myſtery, vvhich at preſent they knew not, untill they were further inſtructed, they yet perceived not, that it was not ſo much material for them to have clean feet, as to be clanſed by the blood of Chriſt, and to have true humility and love to one another.

V. 8. I waſh thee not] And make thee clean from thy ſins, freely pardoning them, and ſanctifying thee.

thou haſt no part with me] So the Hebrews expreſs an alienation, or diſclaim of that which we call right, title or intereſt. So Deut. 14. 27. it is ſaid of the Levite אין לו חלק נו חלה עמך en lo chelek vena chala himmach —— 70. οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ μερὶς οὐδὲ κλῆρος μετὰ σοῦ. he hath no part nor inheritance with thee. So Deuteronomie 18. 1. See 1 Kings 12. 16. 2 Samuel 20. 1. Optatus. l. 5. ſaith hereon, negat illi Chriſtus regnum, niſi accepiſſet obſequium. Chriſt denieth him the kingdome except he had accepted the obſequie.

V. 9 Lord, not onely my feet] Either terrified with the threats or now better underſtanding the myſtery, he wholly ſubjecteth to Chriſts will: as if he ſaid, if it be of that conſequence; if thou didſt mean, waſhing from my ſins, waſh me throughly: as Pſalm 51. 2. See alſo 1 John 1. 7. 1 Corinthians, 6. 11. Titus, 3. 5. 6.

V. 10 needeth not] That is, to be purged, ſave only to the ſenſe of the ſinners own conſcience, by dayly renewing of Repentance for the remainder of thoſe corruptions which defile him. Optatus forecited, lib. 5. underſtandeth this waſhing, of Baptiſm, which may not be iterated: Abſit (ſaith he) ut jam lotum revocemus ad fontem ——— abſit ut iteremus quod ſemel eſt; aut duplicemus quod unum eſt. God forbid that we ſhould recall him who is already waſhed to the Font —— that we ſhould iterate that which is (but) once, or ſhould make double that which is but one; the Apoſtle ſaying, there is one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſme, Epheſ. 4. 5. if (ſaith he) ye give another Baptiſme, date alteram fidem, give another Faith: If you give another Faith, give alſo another Chriſt, another God ye are clean] Your ſins are remitted and done away; not that there ſhall no ſinne remain in you henceforth; but becauſe none ſhall be imputed (ſo Chap. 15. 3.) ye are regenerate, and in part ſanctified.

but not all] Not all of you, not abſolutely any of you; Judas muſt be accepted in their company; and the remainder of the old Adam in the beſt of their perſons: a Canaanite left to exerciſe, not to overcome, nor condemne them that are in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1.

V. 11. who ſhould betray him] τὸν παραδιδόντα, who it was that now agitated that treaſon: therefore he ſaid to him verſe 27. that which thou doeſt, do quickly.

V. 12. after he had waſhed their feet] The Evangeliſt leaveth it to be vnderſtood, that after the conteſt with Peter, He waſhed both Peters feet, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, without further contradiction.

taken his garments] After he had put on his garment, which he had laid by, verſe 4.

ſat down again] ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν, falling, or lying down again according to their manner of eating; to invite his Diſciples to a new ſupper, Spiritual, and Myſtical, the Truth, which the former Supper repreſented, as a fore-running ſhaddow of that which more nearely repreſenteth his Church with his body and blood; not onely as the Fathers (who fed on him to come, 1 Corinthians, 10. 3. 4.) but as his body the Church, unto the Worlds end, which in the Sacrament of the Supper here inſtituted, feed on his body and blood (by Faith in the repreſenting Myſtery) once offered on the altar of the Croſſe, and therein fully ſatisfying the juſtice of God, and accompliſhing the redemption of all the Elect.

Know ye what] That is, as he ſaid to Peter, verſe 7. ye doe not yet know, but now will I teach you; this he ſpeaketh unto them, yet ignorant what he meant by this his Act of Humility, that they might be more attentive to, and retentive of that he would hereby teach them: as if he had ſaid, now mark well and remember what I have done in waſhing your feet, that you may know how ye ought to imitate my love and humility.

V. 13. Maſter and Lord] διδάσκαλος καὶ ὁ κύριος, Maſter, or Teacher and Lord: the Syriack words here uſed, רבן rabban, and מרן maran, (as in Maranatha, the Lord cometh, 1 Corinthians, 16. 22) ſoundeth ſomething more Sacred and Divine, than ordinarily διδάσκαλος and κύριος. So that he now taketh up an Argument from their own mouths, to ſhew what they ought to do in imitation of him, except they will contradict themſelves, and in actions diſſent from their own words of common uſe.

V. 14. Ye alſo ought to waſh] That is, If there be need, and mutual edification require it (as 1 Cor. 6. 19.) you ought to be ready, and willing to ſerve one another in love, Gal. 5. 13. and to this he urgeth his own example; as alſo Matt. 11. 29. ſo that here, καὶ ὑμεῖς, and you. is put for πολλῷ μᾶλλον καὶ ὑμεῖς much more ought ye, ſeeing you are not (as you confeſſe me) lords over one another, but fellow-ſervants, equally bound in mutual duty: for as Optatus ſaith, lib. 5. eſt univerſis ſervientibus non dominium, ſed miniſterium: all ſervants have belonging to them, miniſtration not dominion.

V. 15. given you example] See on verſe 13. example is the powerful Rhetorick: prius diſce qui doces, Lactant. lib. 4. cap. 23. firſt learn thou who teacheſt: men had rather have examples, than words: it is eaſie to ſpeake, but hard to perform: would we had as many good doers, as ſpeakers: the perfect teacher ought both dicere præcipiendo, and confirmare faciendo, ib. c. 24. ſpeake in giving precepts, and confirm the ſame in his own practiſe.

V. 16. ſervant is not greater, &c.] Chap. 15. 20, Matt. 10. 24. Luk 6. 40. much leſſe is he that ſerveth then his Maſter, much leſſe the Ambaſſadour, than his Prince that ſendeth him, though he repreſent his perſon for a time in that Commiſſion, as you ſhall doe mine in your preaching, See 2 Corinthians, 5. 20. and compare therewith Luke 10. 16. by this Argument from the greater to the leſſer, He exciteth them to doe as he had done: Doe not you ſcorne, or thinke your ſelves too good to doe any Office of Holy Love one for another, ſeeing I, whom you profeſſe your Maſter, and the Sonne of the living God, have vouchſafed therein, not onely by Precept, but alſo by my owne Example, to teach you.

V. 17. if ye do them] If ye be indeed ready to ſerve one another in love (which is the ſumme of the Law, Romans 13. 9.) and humility, which is the ground of Religion, Not the hearers, of the Law are juſt before God, but the doers of the Law ſhall be juſtified, Romans 2. 13. Romans, 10. 5, &c. the Cherubims, Ezekiel, 1. 8. had hands under their wings: the one might ſignifie knowledge of God and his Will, (the other action) which we alſo muſt know that we may obey him, and in obedience doe, that we may be happy: otherwiſe to him that knoweth to doe good, and doth it not, to him it is ſin.

V. 18. I know whom I have choſen] 2 Timothy, 2. 19. I know whom I have choſen to Eternal Life, and alſo whom I have choſen to be my Apoſtles, Luke 6. 13. I knew what they had beene, were, and would be: I did not ignorantly chooſe the traytor and ſon of perdition, to the charge of the bag, that he alſo might for a time, be one of my Domeſticks and Apoſtles, it was that the Scripture might be fulfilled, that is, the Will of God declared in the Scripture, it was the determinate Councell of God, that one of his owne ſhould betray him; Acts 4. 28.

he that eateth bread with me] Pſalm 41.9, 10.

lift up his heel againſt me] Hath endeavoured to tread me underfoot. See Pſalm 41. 10. ſo that by lifting up the heel, is meant to hurt by treacherie: it is a metaphor derived from beaſts, which ſuddenly turn heels againſt their maſters when they have full fed them, See Deut. 32. 15.

V. 19. now] ἀπ' ἄρτι, from henceforth.

I tell you before] How one of you ſhall betray me, leſt when you ſee it come to paſſe, you ſhould ſtartle, and your faith in me ſhould be too much ſhaken: as if ſo beſt I had been miſtaken and deceived in my choyce, and ſo not God omniſcient: no, no, God cannot be deceived: on which ground Auguſtine proveth, that none of the Elect can finally fall away.

that I am he] That is, the Chriſt whom the Scriptures forepromiſed, and the ceremonies of the Law prefigured.

V. 20. Verily, verily, I ſay, &c.] Matt. 10. 40. Luke 10. 16. becauſe he had before taught his Diſciples humility by precept and example, and that he ſhould be betrayed by one of his own, leſt they ſhould be too much troubled to think that when Chriſt ſhould thus be taken from them, they ſhould be hated of all men as traytors, or contemptible as ſubmitting themſelves, as Chriſt commanded them to the meaneſt Offices of mutual love, here he propoſeth a great reward to thoſe that ſhould receive them, and ſhew any kindneſs, mercy and goodneſs to them, and that he would take it on his owne accompt, and as done to himſelfe.

V. 21. When Jeſus had thus ſaid] Matt 26. 21. John 11 33. and 12. 27. He was troubled by the concourſe of ſeveral paſsions, fear, ſorrow and indignation at Judas odious treaſon

V. 22. looked one on another] Being troubled and very anxious, becauſe of Jeſus ſpeech. See Matt. 26. 21, 22. Mark 14. 19. they not yet knowing which of them he meant.

V. 23. leaning on Jeſus boſome] which by reaſon of their poſture at meales, he had convenience to doe. See Luke, 7. 38.

whom Jeſus loved] That is more tenderly than the reſt, though he loved all his verſe 1.

V. 24. beckned to him] Νεύει, nodded the head; giving thereby a ſilent ſign, that he would deſire him to aske Jeſus whom he meant, he having convenience by reaſon of his nearneſſe to aske privately.

V. 25. then lying on Jeſus breaſt] That is, leaning nearer to Jeſus breaſt, that he might tell him in his ear, which of them was the traytor; ſo probably he whiſpered unto Jeſus, and Jeſus anſwered him that the others might not hear.

V. 26. I ſhall give a ſop] Or morſel of bread. Cyril notes that he gave no other ſigne whereby to deſcribe the traytor, than that which the Prophet gave, Pſalm 41. 9, 10 and Chryſoſtoms conjecture was not improbable, (that Chriſt gave this ſign to remember him of the table and bread, whereof he did partake, that he might not betray him, and rage againſt his feeder) if Chriſt had ſpoken openly, that all might hear: the Diſciples could not have ſo doubted as we ſee, verſe 28.

V. 27. Satan entred into him] And took poſſeſſion of him: not that the morſel hurt him; but becauſe that ſignal, conſcious Judas perceived, or feared that his treaſon was diſcovered; therefore being embittered and vexed, he reſolved to proſecute it with ſpeed and effect.

doe quickly] He permitteth onely, he encourageth not the traytour; he knew his houre was come, and deſired to accompliſh the work of mans redemption, for which he ſhewed himſelf ready: and hereby he caſt him out of his Family, whom Satan poſſeſſed.

V. 28. no man at the table] Except John, into whoſe ear Chriſt had revealed it, verſe 26.

V. 29. Judas had the bag] See on Chap. 12. 6.

give ſomething to the poore] Thus they conjectured; becauſe though his ſtocke was but ſlender, yet they knew he uſed to ſpare ſomething to the poore, that he might therein leave us an example.

V. 30. and it was night] It might have ſeemed unſeaſonable for the traitor then to repair to the High Prieſts, not to diſcover, but to deſigne a treaſon: but no importunity hindreth ardent malice: And thus alſo we ſee that word is true; evil doers, ſhun the Light, Chapter, 3. 20. ſo when they had taken Chriſt, He told them, This is your houre, and the power of darkneſſe. Luke 22. 53. night beſt ſuits with ſhamefull acts, which the Prince of darkneſs loves.

V. 31. Now is the Sonne of Man glorified] That is, He ſhall ſhortly be glorified in the admirable work of Mans redemption: for in death to overcome death is, as Chryſoſtome ſaith well, Hom. 71. δόξα μεγάλη, great Glory: this Chriſt onely could doe.

V. 32. if God be glorified in him] That is, in his Obedience to the death, and mans redemption in his death, then however ſcandalous and ignominious his ſufferings may ſeem to the World; yet ſo ſhall he enter into his true and unſpeakable Glory. See Chap. 21. 19. Phil. 2. 8, 9. Luke 24. 26. teaching us that it is glorious to ſuffer for the Honour of God.

V. 33. little children] Becauſe his departing from them by the Croſſe muſt needs afflict their hearts, therefore he prepareth them to patience, by the intimation of his Fatherly love and care of them, as of tender children.

as I ſaid unto the Jewes] Chap. 7. 34.

ye cannot come] Ye cannot now preſently come after me to Heaven, as you were wont on Earth to follow me, when ye miſſed me.

V. 34. A new Commandment I give you, &c.] Levit. 19. 18 it appeareth it was an old precept, and the ſumme of the Law, Matt. 22. 39, 40. 1 John 3. 11. but continually to be renewed, Ch. 15. 17. 1 John 4. 21 Epheſ. 5. 2. He made the Pattern new, whereof he ſaith (as I have loved you) I did not pay any debt of your merit (ſaith Chryſoſtom) I began to love you freely, ſo love you thoſe who have not deſerved your love: love is the moſt certain and undobted mark of Chriſts ſervant (verſe 35.) for it is πάσης ἀρετῆς ὑπόθεσις: the foundation of all Vertue. See 1 Corinthians, 13. 1, &c.

V. 35. By this ſhall all men know] By this, or in this, ἐν τούτῳ, it is an Hebrew manner of expreſſion, Gen. 42. 15 בזאת bez th. in this 70. ἐν τούτῳ φανεῖσθε. Moſes Diſciples are known by their circumciſion &c. others have their marks and habits: but this is the mark by which I will own you, and by which alſo you ſhall know your ſelves, and the world alſo may know you to be mine. It is a vain brag of Chriſtianity without Love and Charity: Satan will permit men any diſguiſes, ſemblances, or external works of Religion, upon condition that he may but ſet his own Image (that is, malice) on them: becauſe he well knowes, that all ſeeming excellencies in the World, without true Charity, are nothing. See 1 Cor. 13. 1, &c. Charity is the life of Religion, by which Faith it ſelf worketh, Gal. 5. 6.

V. 36. Thou canſt not follow me now] Yet thou art not ripe for thy diſſolution: thou ſhalt follow me into Glory; but yet thy courſe is not yet finiſhed: the Saints may deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, Phil. 1. 23. but their dayes are numbred, which they muſt firſt accompliſh.

V. 37 I will lay down my life for thy ſake] Matt 26. 33. Luke 22. 33. He meant it now, and at laſt did it: but this example teacheth us, not to preſume on our own ſtrength: ſeeing that God onely giveth conſtancy in good, and many times permitteth us to ſtrong tentations to ſhew us our own weakneſs, and to correct our overdaring confidence in our ſelves.

V. 38. The Cocke ſhall not crow, &c.] See Matt. 26. 34. and Luke 22. 34.

CHAP. XIIII.

Verſe 1. BE troubled] So verſe 27. Chap. 16. 1. which he ſpeaketh, not commanding or approving any ſtoical apathy, as if he would have men put off natural affections, and to be troubled at nothing; but forbidding dejection of mind, and diffidence in afflictions proceeding of unbelief.

believe in me alſo] In me whom God hath appointed to be your peace and reconciliation: they were now to encounter ſtrong tentations, therefore he armeth them with conſolations, leſt the novelty and ſuddenneſs of unexpected trials ſhould overcome them.

V. 2. many manſions] This whole ſpeech being Metaphorical, the meaning is, there is place in the kingdom of Heaven for all the Elect; (which are many) according to their ſeveral degrees of glory aſſigned them. See on Luke 16. 9. Dan. 12. 3. 1 Corinthians, 15. 41. 42.

V. 3. I will come again] At the latter day, Acts 1 11. Acts 3. 21. Acts 17. 31. Gr. πάλιν ἔρχομαι, I come again: it is a preſent for the future; as certain, as if it already were: this may either import the death of every particular, or the univerſal judgement of all; either of them being inſtant and moſt certain; the ſence is, though I goe from you for a little time: I will neither deſert you nor be unmindful of you in theſe things which ſhall concern Gods glory, and your ſalvation, I will ever hear you, and timely relieve you.

V. 4. Whither I goe ye know] By theſe often repetitions of his going hence, he intimateth, that his death ſhould be onely a receſs and with-drawing out of this world for a time, into the preſence of God in Heaven, that we may reſolve how we muſt follow him our Head, and whither: this way he ſaith, they knovv, becauſe he had declared to them, that by death, he muſt enter into his glory.

V. 5. We know not whither thou goeſt] That is, but imperfectly knovv; for they did not yet vvell underſtand, nor remember vvhat he had taught them.

V. 6. I am the way] ἡ ὁδὸς, that vvay, by vvhich only man can enter into eternal bleſſedneſs, Acts 4. 12. Cyril. cat. 10. readeth ἡ θύρα, the door, as John 10. 7. to the ſame ſence : as Cyril. Alexandr. here ſaith, ἅπαντα τοίνυν ἡμῖν ἐν αὐτῷ, we have all in him, He only is that way which leadeth to Heaven ; the truth prefigured by all the legal Ceremonies, as chap. 1.17. the life ; the Authour and giver of Eternal life, as chap. 11. 25.

V. 7. from henceforth] See c. 13. 19. Gr. ἀπ' ἄρτι, hereafter, after the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter ſhall come and teach you all things, —— v. 26.

have ſeen him] By ſeeing the Father, He here meaneth, knowing him in Chriſt : no man hath ſeen, or can ſee his Eſſence : but he that believeth hath ſeen his mercy.

V. 8. Shew us the Father] Shew us him, as he was revealed to the Prophets, τοῖς σωματικοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς (as Theophylact. expreſſeth it) to our bodily eyes.

V. 9. Have I been ſo long with you, &c.] He taxeth their ignorance, who conceived that the knowledge of God was, or could be by ſence : knovv you not me ? vvho I am by nature ? and vvhence I am ? that I am One in Eſſence, and Eternall ſubſtance vvith the Father. See Chapter 10. 38. See alſo Chapter 12.45.

V. 10. I am in the Father, and the Father in me] For the fulneſſe of the Deity remaineth in Chriſt, Coloſ. 1. 19. and 2.9. See Fulgent. ad Monim. lib. 3. (paulo ante finem) and Auguſtin. Paulinæ ep. 112. cap. 4. fine. The Son is in the Father (ſaith Athanaſius To. 1. *Contr. not of my ſelf] Not of my ſelf as man, not ſo of my ſelf, as if the ſame were not of my Father ; whatſoever I ſpeak to you, as man to man, God ſpeaketh to you by me, Hebr. 1. 2.

he doth the workes] The miracles which ye have ſeen me do, are all wrought by divine power, not humane.

V. 11. for the workes ſake] If the infallibility of my words prevail not with you, let the excellency of my works and miracles which you have ſeen me do (workes exceeding all power of the creature) perſwade you to believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me ; in him dwelleth all the fulneſs of the God-head, ——— Col. 2. 9.

V. 12. ſhall he do alſo] He exhorteth them not to be offended at his paſſion, for as much as this power of doing miracles ſhall be derived to themſelves alſo, whereby it ſhall appear that he which ſuffered in the infirmity of his aſſumed humanity, is alſo truly God, who alone could give ſuch power to men.

and greater workes than theſe] He ſeemeth to mean hereby the converſion of men to the Faith by their preaching the Goſpel, as Acts 2. 41, &c.

becauſe I go unto my Father] Becauſe going up unto the right hand of my Father, I will ſend the Holy Ghoſt upon you, by whoſe power you ſhall preach, and do miracles to the converſion of men to God, and their ſalvation : Se Epheſ, 4.8. Pſalm 68. 18.

V. 13. whatſoever ye ſhall aske in my Name] See Matth. 7. 7. 1 John 5.14. and Chap. 16. 23. if it be according to the Will of God, I will do it for you ; for the Father hath committed all Power unto me, Matt. 28. 18.

V. 14. in my Name] Through my Mediation ; for my merit ſake.

I will doe it] I will heare and grant your requeſts, which are to Gods Glory : I who am coequal with the Father will doe it for you.

V. 15. If ye love me, keep my Commandments] As if he ſaid, ſorrow, and ſad dejected countenances at the knowledge of my departure hence, are not the Arguments of love which I require of you, but Faith and Obedience : love indeed cannot be fruitleſs; but probatio dilectionis exhibitio eſt operis, Greg. hom. 30. the proof of love is in the exhibition of the worke : obedience to Chriſt ſheweth how men love him. See verſe 21.

V. 16. another Comforter] Becauſe they could not be without much trouble in an impious world ; he promiſeth to ſend the Holy Ghoſt to comfort them, and remain with them to ſupply his bodily abſence, wherein He comforted them during his abode with them in the world.

V. 17. Spirit of Truth] Who is truth, becauſe very God, inſpiring his with knowledge of the Truth, and giving them ſweet and comfortable taſts of the graces of Sanctification ; thus dwelleth he in them ; concerning this it is written, 1 John 2. 27. the anointing which ye have received of him, abideth in you, &c. See Galat. 2. 20.

V. 18. I will not leave you comfortleſs] Or Orphans, as forſaken Orphans, who have none to take care of them; but will come again to you after my reſurrection, ſhewing my ſelf to confirm your faith ; but ſpecially by inſpiring you with the admirable gifts of the Holy Spirit.

V. yet a little while &c.] A few houres ; for his death drew near : and after that, he would not be ſeen of any, but his elect witneſſes, to whom he ſhewed himſelf alive from the dead according to the Scriptures, and whereas they might poſſibly feare, that they muſt now die with him, He ſaith, ye ſhall live alſo, to be my witneſſes ; and ye ſhall believe, and live in me Eternally.

V. 20. and you in me] As ye are lively members of my Church, my Body of which I am the Head, Colloſſ. 1. 18.24. Romans 12. 5. to whom I communicate Grace and Life, Epheſians 1. 22. Epheſ. 4.16.

V. 21. is he that loveth me] See on verſe 15.

I will love him] Not that he did not firſt love that man, to whom he gives an heart to love him and keep his Commandements ; but ad hoc diligam, ut manifeſtem ; I will ſo love, as that I will manifeſt the ſame in happy effects, Proſper. now He loveth us, to give us Faith and Obedience : but in the life to come he will love us in rewarding us : prorſus donum eſt Dei, diligere Deum : ipſe ut diligeretur dedit, qui non dilectus, dilexit ; it is altogether the gift of God, that we love God ; He gave us hearts to love him, who when we loved him not, loved us : See Romanes, 5. 5, 7, 8, 10.

and will manifeſt my ſelfe unto him] Chapter, 1. 17. underſtand this of a Spiritual Exhibition of himſelf, not to a bodily preſence, ad hoc diligam, ut manifeſtem, Auguſtine tract. 75. I will ſo love him as to manifeſt my ſelf to him. He now loveth us to give us faith to believe, then he will love us ſo as that we may ſee him, and in ſeeing receive the reward of Faith : now we love in believing that which we ſee not, but then we ſhall love in ſeeing that which we now believe.

V. 22. not Iſcariot] Not the Traytour Judas, but the ſame who was called Lebbeus or Thaddeus : Matthew, 10. 3. See hereof, Jo. Druſius ad Voc. N. T. Com. 1. Thaddæus & ibid. Lebbæus.

V. 23. He will keep my words] He will obey me : to him will we come, as to our ſanctified Temple : and bring with us the ineſtimable treaſures of godlyneſſe, and true and laſting conſolation ; we loved him from Eternity, and in due time inſpired him with the Spirit of Regeneration, Faith, Hope, Charity, Obedience, and we will come unto him in whom we have begun this worke of Grace and Mercy, by a multiplication of all Spiritual gifts, giving him a comfortable perſeverance therein ; unto Eternitie.

V. 24. is not mine] Not mine as man : it is his that ſent me, that is, Gods Word. See Chapter, 6. 38. and Chap. 7. 16. and verſe 10.

V. 25. being yet preſent with you] I have ſpoken theſe things to your outward ears, and though you perceive not the fruit thereof as yet, you muſt expect a better increaſe, when the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter ſhall ſpeak to your hearts and underſtandings, after my aſcenſion into Heaven.

V. 26. the Comforter] c. 15. 26. παράκλητος, or the Advocate. So Chriſt is called παράκλητος, 1 John 2. 1. See Rom. 8. 26. they were called Advocates, παράκλητοι, who were called or retained to ſpeak or plead for them who had enditements againſt them, or otherwiſe, were impleaded in any Court of Judicature. he ſhall teach you all things,] He is that good Sanctifier of his Church, καὶ βοηθὸς, καὶ διδάσκαλος —— the Helper and Teacher of his, Cyril. c. 16. if he teach not within, Doctoris lingua exterius in vacuum laborat, the Teachers tongue laboureth externally in vain. We all hear one voice of a Preacher, but what different apprehenſions, affections, and reſolutions of and concerning the ſame we have : the Word is one and the ſame, but in ſome it proveth a ſavour of death, in others a ſavour of life unto life : the difference is, as this, Magiſter interior, inward Maſter teacheth ſome, and leaveth others to their own obſtinacy, and blindeneſſe, to pervert all they hear to their own deſtruction, 2 Peter 3. 16.

whatſoever I have ſaid unto you] For there is but one Truth, which Chriſt taught, and the Holy Ghoſt remembered them, of, and opened unto them. οὐ γὰρ ἄλλα Χριστοῦ διδάγματα, καὶ ἄλλα ἁγίου πνεύματος, The Doctrine of Chriſt, and the Holy Ghoſt, are not divers, but one and the ſame Truth of God. Cyril. qu. ſ.

Vs 27. my Peace I give unto you] He yet continueth in the ſame Argument of Conſolation ; according to the cuſtome of Friends departing, taking a ſolemne leave, giving charge, and wiſhing all proſperity and happy ſucceſſe ; all which the Hebrewes comprehended in שלום ſhalom, Geneſis 43. 26. 2 Chronicles, 15. 5. Exodus, 4. 18, &c. but Chriſt here intimateth a Peace, which the World can neither give, nor take away, Peace with God, Peace of Conſcience, and true comfort and Happineſs in Chriſt.

V. 28. if ye loved me you would rejoyce] They loved him, but their love was not yet well enformed concerning the iſſue of thoſe things : becauſe there was a dangerous mixture of ſelf-love with their love to Chriſt, ſo were they moſt ſorry for their own ſecular loſs, in Chriſts departure from them, who ſtill dreamed of a temporal kingdom of Chriſt

V. 29, that ye might believe] That is, increaſe in faith, and be aſſured, that I am indeed the Son of the living God, and Saviour of the elect (as Auguſtine expreſſeth it) Qui potuit hoc facere cum prædixiſſet, & prædicere, antequam hoc faceret, who could do it when he had ſaid it, and foretell it before he did it. See c. 13. 19.

V. 30. prince of this world] The devil: as c. 12. 31. He vvill ſtir up all the malignity of vvicked men againſt me. See Luke 22. 52. he vvill novv in his laſt charge and onſet muſter up all his forces againſt me, and here again is a preſent put for a future, cometh, that is, vvill very ſhortly come: as vvith many miſchievous and malignant ſpirits vvith him, ſo vvith Judas, his guard, and the high Prieſts ſervants, inſtigated by him, to deſtroy me; therein ſecure that he ſhall be conquerer; but herein deceived, that I ſhall deſtroy him and his vvorks, not by force of armes, but by ſuffering, and dying for the redempton of the elect.

and hath nothing in me] Nihil juris in me, no right nor power: that is, he ſhall not have his will in me, hecauſe he cannot tempt me to ſin, though according to the holy will of my Father, I ſubject my ſelf to death for mans redemption.

V. 31. but that the world may know] As if he ſaid, power is permitted to Satan and his accomplices to perſecute me to death, that dying for mans redemption, the world may ſee the obedience and love I bear to the Father, who hath thus determined.

ariſe let us go hence] They were yet ſitting at table; now he haſteneth to meet and encounter with his paſſion: let us go to the place where the Prince of darkneſſe hath prepared his armed troops to take and deſtroy me. See Mat. 26. 46. Thus appeared his love to God the Father, whom he willingly obeyed to death, and to all the elect for whom he died.

CHAP. XV.

Verſe 1. I Am the true vine] By theſe manner of ſpeeches he teacheth, that being by the Father ſpiritually implanted into Chriſt, we have life by faith in him; and bring forth fruits of good works by vertue of his Spirit working in us; whereas we are by nature barren and unfruitful. Probably theſe ſpeeches were occaſioned by their paſſing through or by ſome vineyard; his uſual manner being to take occaſions of leading his hearers from the ſight of things temporal, to the conſideration of the ſpiritual. See c. 4. 10. 32. 35. c. 6. 27. &c. By true Vine he meaneth here, the moſt excellent, that which beareth fruit for the elect of the whole World, at all ſeaſons, in all ages.

V. 2. every branch in me that beareth not fruit] Every one in my Church, (into which they are implanted by baptiſme, Rom. 6. 3, 5. & 11. 17, 20.) that beareth not good fruit, he pruneth off, an unprofitable and dead branch, Mat. 3. 10. and 15. 13. to ſhew that the regenerate have need of continual aſſiſtance and culture, without which they can do no good; he enlargeth his allegory, to ſhew Gods care of his vineyard, the Church (Iſai 5. 1. &c.) in pruning and correcting, to make it more fruitful: but for afflictions, men would grow high and barren; the mindes of men are commonly luxuriant and barren in proſperity.

V. 3. now ye] Chap. 13. 10. leſt they ſhould be terrified by any fear, in the apprehenſion of their own infirmities and failings in tentations, as if they therefore were to be reputed unfruitfull branches appointed to be cut off and caſt into the fire, he comforteth them with the aſſurauce of their being cleanſed from their ſins, ye are already clean. So the Syriack interpreteth this ἤδη, by כדו jam nunc, or huc uſque, already, thus farre; it only remaineth that ye perſevere.

are clean] Sanctified by my Spirit. See 1 Cor. 6. 11. 1 Joh. 1. 7.

word which I have ſpoken unto you] Being accompanied by the power of my Spirit (See chap. 17. 17. Epheſ. 5. 26. 1 Pet. 1. 22.) he meaneth the word of the Goſpel, which they all beleeved, Judas excepted, chap. 13. 11.

V, 4. abide in me, and I in you] Perſeverance is a condition of ſalvation, Col. 1. 23. Mat. 24. 13. Ab arbore frange ramum, fractus germinare non poterit, break a bough from the tree, that which is broken off cannot bud forth, Cyprian. tr. 3. de ſimpl. prælat. Out of Chriſt there is no life of grace, no ſalvation. Nec perveniet ad Chriſti præmia, qui relinquit Eccleſiam Chriſti, neither ſhall he come to the rewards of Chriſt, who leaveth the Church of Chriſt: ſo dangerous is the ſtate of a ſeparatiſt.

V. 5. without me ye do nothing] Or ſevered from me, ye can do no good: members divided from the head cannot live. Ye can do nothing truly good, but by me. See Hoſea 14. 8. Phil. 2. 13. Are ye afraid of taking away Free-will? Operante--Spiritu Dei juvatur arbitrium, non aufertur: & hoc agit gratia ut voluntas peccato corrupta--non remaneat in languoribus ſuis, ſed per opem miſerantis medici curata revaleſcat, &c. Ambroſ. l. 10. ep. 84. The Spirit of God working the will is helped, not taken away: and grace worketh ſo, that the will corrupted by ſin--remaineth not in its ſickneſſe, but by the aſſiſtance of the merciful Phyſician, being cured groweth well again. To the like purpoſe ſaith Proſper, contr. collat. on that Mat. 16. Bleſſed art thou Simon ſon of Jona, for fleſh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. Hac regula nulli hominum aufertur voluntas: quia virtus gratia non hoc in voluntatibus operatur ut non ſint; ſed ut ex malis bona, &c, This rule taketh not away any mans will; becauſe the power of grace doth not work this in wills, that they ſhould no more be, but that they ſhould become good of evill; of unfaithfull, faithful; and that they who were of themſelves darkneſſe, ſhould become light in the Lord; that that which was dead, might be quickned, &c.

V. 6. he is caſt forth] Out of the vineyard, as a branch cut off, &c. fit for nothing but the fire. See Mat. 3. 10. Ezek. 15. 2, 3, 4, &c. Here alſo appeareth the great danger of ſeparation from Chriſt: there can be nothing but Hell and damnation out of him. See on verſe 4.

V. 7, my words abide in you] If you continue grounded and eſtabliſhed in my doctrine.

ye ſhall aske what ye will, &c.] αἰτήσεσθε, that is, you may freely ask any thing according to Gods will.

V. 8. herein is my Father glorified] See 5. 16. Phil. 1. 11. Eph. 1. 12. Good works declare men the Sons of God; as the fruits ſhew the tree, as the effect the cauſe.

V. 9. as the Father loveth me, &c.] As the Father loveth the Son and communicateth all good to him, ſuſtaineth him in his ſufferings, and delivereth him from death; ſo doth Chriſt love all his; which is a ſingular ground of comfort to all thoſe who love God: for firſt none can love him, but thoſe whom he firſt loveth, 1 John 4. 19. Secondly, it is moſt certain, that the Fathers love to the Son, Chriſt, is eternal, and therefore unchangeable (he not only having love, as the creature in ſome weak meaſure may, but is, love, 1 Joh. 4. 8. it is no accident, but his unchangeable eſſence: for quicquid eſt in Deo, Deus eſt) now Chriſt ſo loving us as his Father loveth him, if we can be aſſured that he ever loved us, which by our love to him we may, we may be confident with Paul, Rom. 8. 38, 39. that no creature ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, becauſe no creature can be able to ſeparate Chriſt from the love of his Father.

ſo have I loved you] I have loved you to the death. See 1 John 3. 16. giving my ſelf for you. Epheſ. 5. 2. greater love can no man ſhew, verſe 13.

continue ye in my love] Only this have I required for all my love to you, that you conſtantly love me. See Deut. 6. 5. & 10. 12. But how ſhall we continue in the love of Chriſt, who neither have any ability in our ſelves to do any good, nor conſtancy to perſevere in that we are moved to? he ſaid verſe 7. ask what ye will, &c. Whereas we muſt needs feel a want of the grace of perſeverance; we ought to beg it of him, who only can give us to do that which he commandeth us. If any enquire concerning the rule, it followeth in the next verſe.

V. 10. if ye keep my commandements] 1 John 2. 5. Specially that which he nameth verſe 12. We can never love God if we love not our neighbours alſo. See 1 John 4. 20. Keeping Chriſts Commandments, importeth a remembring them and laying them up in faithful memories, with reſolution to do them.

V. 11. that my joy may remain in you] That is, the joy and comfort which ye conceive in me your Mediatour and Redeemer. See Rom. 14. 17.

V. 12. this is my commandement] Chap. 13, 34. 1 Theſ. 4. 9. 1 John 3. 11. This is the ſumme of the ſecond Table, and the mark by which Chriſt vvill own his Diſciples. Without this all gifts are vain. See Mat. 22. 37. chap. 13. 35. 1 Cor. 13. 1, &c. This is the end of the Commandment, 1 Tim. 1. 5.

V. 13. greater lover] A man vvill rather loſe his riches, and all that he hath, than his life; better, (ſaid the Philoſopher, vvhen he caſt his merchandize over-board in a ſtorm) that theſe ſhould periſh for us, than vvith us: vvhen a man therefore layeth down his life for his friend, it appeareth that he loved him better than any thing he had in this vvorld.

V. 14. ye are my friends if, &c.] This was Abrahams great priviledge, James 2. 23. But here is the condition of Gods holding friendſhip with us, if we do what he commandeth: principally if we love one another. See verſe 17. 1 John 3. 16. For ſinnes cometh the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience, Epheſ. 5. 6. The juſt God can have no peace nor amity with wilful contemners of his holy Commandements; and the chief end and ground of all the Commandemets is love to God and Man. See on verſe 12. and 1 Tim. 1. 5.

V, 15. all things that I have heard of the Father] all things neceſſary to ſalvation, See 2 Tim 3. 15.

V. 16. ye have not choſen me] He ſetteth of his love in the freedom thereof; it began not from any merit of theirs leſt they ſhould be proud. Miſericordia ejus prævenit eos ſecundum gratiam non ſecundum debitum; Auguſtiue de prædeſt. ſanct. lib. 1. cap. 17. His mercy prevented them according to (his) grace, not (their) merit, or) debt. Elegit ergo Deus fideles, ſed ut ſint, non quia jam erant; ibid. Auguſtine. God therefore choſe the faithful, but that they might be ſuch, not becauſe they were already ſuch Gods love is eternal, and therefore can have no cauſe but it ſelf: For as Auguſtine ſaith, Non eſt--gratia, ſi preceſſerint merita; it is not grace (but debt) if merits preceded it. See Rom.4.4. God made man at the beginning, not becauſe he had any need of man or his ſervice; but as Irenæus, lib. 4 cap. 28. ſaith well, Ut haberet in quem collocaret ſua beneficia, that he might have one on whom he might conferre his benefits; and therefore doth he require mans ſervice, that becauſe he is good and merciful, he might do good to them who perſevere in his ſervice, ſaith the ſame.

that ye ſhould bring forth fruit] This is true in two ſenſes. Firſt, that election is the cauſe of our fruits of ſanctification. See Rom. 8. 30. 2 Pet. 1. 10. and theſe fruits ſhall remain to eternity, Pſal. 1. 3. Mat. 25. 34. &c. Rev. 14. 13. Secondly, that the Diſciples ſhould go forth, and their preaching ſhould have fruit and ſucceſſe to the converſion of the Gentiles, and that the Church ſo planted by them ſhould continue to the worlds end, in ſpight of all her enemies; the perſecutions and all the machinations of Satan, becauſe God giveth the encreaſe, 1 Cor.3.7.

whatſoever ye ſhall ask] Here he layeth down a ſingular encouragement to Miniſters, in that they ſhall have free acceſſe to the Father to beg and obtain whatſoever they have need of in their miniſtery: there are indeed ever many lets, and enemies to our preaching the Goſpel, whoſe aſſaults we are no wayes able to bear, except the power and providence of God ſuſtain us; therefore he ſaith in effect, though you are unſufficient, the Father will not be wanting to you.

V. 17. that ye love one another] This he ſaith moſt ſeaſonably to admoniſh the Miniſters of the Goſpel to mutuall love and concord: if there be ſtrife of tongues, they muſt needs build to confuſion: they ought to love the rather, becauſe the world will ever hate them who love the truth. Love is the fulfilling of the law, no pretence will ſerve to the breach of this precept, ſeeing God hath commanded mutual love: thou wilt ſay, he is evill; and what art thou who hateſt thy brother? thou ſayeſt thou hateſt the evill only? but malice is a falſe medium, making that ſeem evill which God accepteth as good: but indeed, as Auguſtine ſaid to Macedonius, ep. 54. Omnes odit, qui malos odit: he hateth all who hateth the evill, ſeeing all men ſin. But therefore Diligendi ſunt mali, ut non ſint mali: we muſt love the evill that they may not continue evill, as we love the ſick to make them well.

V. 18. If the world hate you] That is, if the wicked hate you, as chap.14. 19. for ſuch only hate Chriſt and good men. Having admoniſhed his diſciples that they ſhould abide in him, and love one another, he now ſheweth them what they ſhall find contrary hereto, to wit an impious world, to draw them away from Chriſt, and from unity one with another, againſt which he fortifieth them in the following words.

ye know that, &c.] γινώσκετε, Know ye, or conſider ye; that you may be comforted in that therein you do but ſhare with me in my ſufferings.

V. 19. therefore the world hateth you] The wicked of the world (guided by the malicious ſpirit of Satan) hate the elect, for Gods favours beſtowed on them. See Geneſ. 4. 4, 5. 1 John 3. 12. And becauſe the image of God appeareth in their faith and ſanctimony of life and converſation: he ſeemeth to correct others who diſſenteth from them in judgement or practice: they think it ſtrange that you run not with them to the ſame exceſſe of riot, ſpeaking even of you: 1 Pet.4 4. the Phyloſopher noted this impious quality of the heatheniſh world, in the example of Ariſtides hated, only becauſe, præter modum juſtus erat, he was more juſt than other men.

V. 20. the ſervant is not greater, &c.] Mat.10.24. chap.13.16.

if they have kept my ſaying] That is, ſeeing they have not beleeved and obeyed my ſaying, but contemned it, it muſt not ſeem ſtrange to you that they will alſo contemn and diſobey your words. By this he will ſtrengthen them againſt deſpaire of ſucceſſe in their preaching, by his own example, be not out of heart when you perceive your auditours neglect and diſreſpect of the word you preach: all have not faith, and of rebellious Iſrael the Apoſtle ſaith, Hebr. 4. 2. The word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith, in them that heard it, and the ſame ſaith, 2 Cor 4. 3, 4. if our goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt: in whom the God of this world hath blinded the mindes of them which beleeve not, &c.

V. 21. becauſe they know not him that ſent me] They know not, or for malice will not acknowledge that which you preach to be the word of God. See Jer 43. 2. & 44. 16. Ignorance of God is the cauſe of the perſecution of his Miniſters.

V. 22. if I had not come] If I had not come unto the Jews according to the word of the Prophets concerning me.

they had not had ſin] Either not ſo much ſin, if they had not deſpiſed ſo clear light, and a truth ſo confirmed, as v. 24. or they ſhould ſtill have ſeemed innocent, if I had not diſcovered their hypocriſie. See chap.9 41 And truly, Minor erat culpa, ubi erat culpæ ignorantia, Ambroſe l 9 ep. 71. there was leſſe fault, where there was no knowledge of a fault, See Luke 12. 48. & Mat. 10. 15. But they that ſin againſt knowledge, have no cloak or excuſe for their ſin,

V. 23. hateth my Father] For they are one God, and one truth, ſo that he that hateth one, hateth both.

V. 24. not had ſin] Not ſo much ſin: the more men ſin againſt a convicted conſcience, the greater and more deſperate is their ſin, See on verſe 22.

V. 25. written in their law] Pſal.35. 19. See chap. 10. 34.

they hated me without a cauſe] Undeſervedly: for he did all things well, good to all, harm to none; ſo Davids enemies hated him, Pſal.15.19. חנם chinnam 70. οἱ μισοῦντές με δωρεὰν, freely; that is, without any of my offence given them, hating me. So Jonathan ſaid to his father King Saul, 1 Sam. 19. 5. why ſhouldeſt thou ſin againſt innnocent blood חנם, δωρεὰν undeſervedly.

whom I will ſend] So the holy Ghoſt is ſaid to be ſent of the Father (chap. 14.26.] and the Son, of the Father and holy Ghoſt, Iſai 61.1. Luke 4.18. not by change of place, but illo miſſionis nomine, under that name of miſſion, we muſt underſtand, opus manifeſtationis indultæ, the work of manifeſtation indulged, as Fulgentius ſpeaketh, de miſſ. ſp. He carried man to Heaven (as in his aſcending humanity) and ſent God (the holy Ghoſt) unto the earth. See alſo Hilar. de trin. l 8.

V. 27 ye alſo bear witneſſe] You who were eye-witneſſes, who have heard and ſeen the very ſame which the Spirit alſo teſtifieth, Acts 1. 8. 21, 22. & 5. 32. 1 John 1. 1, 2, 3.

CHAT. XVI.

Verſe 1, SHould not be offended] σκανδαλισθῆτε, cometh of σκάζω, to halt; σκάνδαλον, of the ſame is a ſtumbling block, or ſtone in the way, at which, ſuddenly ſtriking the foot we fall or ſtumble. See Rom. 14. 13 1 Pet. 2. 8. In both which places it is interpreted by πρόσκομμα, offendiculum; of προσκόπτω, impingo, to daſh ones foot againſt ſomething in the way. Here Chriſt telleth them before hand, what troubles they muſt look for in preaching the Goſpel; leſt ſtumbling at that which they expected not; they might fall from their patience, hope in, and profeſſion of Chriſt; fleſh and blood (ever too indulgent to it ſelf) being apt to ſuggeſt to them in their perſecutions and continual troubles, that God favoured not the preaching and doctrine of the Goſpel, which all the world diſliked and perſecuted, and for which ſuch grievous things were inflicted on the preachers and profeſſors thereof: therefore Chriſt fore-armeth them by fore-warning them what they muſt expect: for that which ſuddenly falleth upon one, may trouble a great and conſtant mind, but that which is foreſeen and expected, is more eaſily born, as Cyril noteth. But herein is a ſingular argument of the truth and ſincerity of Chriſtian Religion; that it could ever take root, and ſo many generations, according to the word of Chriſt. Mat. 16. 19. in ſpight of the gates of Hell, and powers of darkneſſe, it yet flouriſheth; though it hath been ſo conſtantly perſecuted in all times and places; and ſeeing that Chriſt, at the firſt propoſal thereof, never allured any one Diſciple to follow him by promiſe of honours, pleaſures, ſecular gains, or any thing which fleſh and blood liketh; but on the contrary told them plainly, as here, ſo, many other times, that they muſt expect perſecutions, malice of all the world, loſs of goods, and life it ſelf for profeſſing the ſame: He that on theſe terms and conditions is a reſolved Chriſtian, muſt, by the Spirit of truth, be aſſertained of the truth of his religion, otherwiſe he would never ſuffer ſuch things for the profeſſion thereof; the very ſpectatours of the Martyrs ſufferings (when they have ſeen them torne with ſundry torments, & under the tired hands of their tormentors, hold an invincible patience) have thought, as the truth is, that neither the conſent of ſo many, nor the perſeverance of dying men could be vain, *nec ipſam patientiam, ſine Deo, cruciatus tantos poſſe ſuperare, Lactant. lib.*5. *cap.*13. neither that patience it ſelf, without God, culd overcome ſuch great torments: hence came it, that the blood of the Martyrs was the ſeed of the goſpel.

V. 2. put you out of the ſynagogues] Excommunicate you. See Chap. 9, 22.

whoſoever killeth you will think] They ſhall in their blinde zeal think you ſuch pernicious and evill men, that you are worthy to die, as was commanded concerning the idolaters, Exod 32.27. and blaſphemers, Leviticus 24. 16. See Acts 22.22.

V. 3. becauſe they have not known the Father] See chap. 15. 21. ignorance of God, is the cauſe of perſecuters rage: ſo unhappy a mother of devotion is ignorance, this made them perſecute Chriſt in his ſacred perſon, Acts 3. 17. and in his ſervants, Acts 9 5. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

V. 4. I ſaid unto you at the beginning] He would not at firſt ſo expreſſely tell them of all theſe things which they muſt ſuffer, but conſidered their weakneſſe: and indeed while he was with them, the rage of the adverſaries fell upon him; but after his aſcenſion, when Satan could no more reach him, he ſtirred up all the fury of wicked men againſt the profeſſors of the truth of Chriſt: it was therefore neceſſary, both that now before his departure; they ſhould be forewarned of their dangers;and after his aſcenſion, that they ſhould be armed with a greater meaſure of the holy Ghoſt, as to inſtruct them in all truth, ſo to confirm them in their profeſſing and preaching the ſame, which was alſo done accordingly.

becauſe I was with you] He ſpeaketh as if he were not now with them, becauſe he was upon his departure from them. And we may hence learn that as Chriſt not at once declares all the myſteries of eternall life and ſalvation unto his hearers, but accommodateth his doctrine to their capacities, (as verſe 12. 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. Hebr. 5. 11, 12) ſo doth he in due time and meaſure inſtruct them therein, that the beleevers may be ſaved.

V. 5. and none of you asketh me] This is not ſimply to be underſtood, for Peter asked it, Chap. 13. 36. but he greatly reproveth their negligence, for that they no more cared to be further enformed what ſhould be the effect of his departure.

V. 6. ſorrow hath filled your hearts] Becauſe I tell you now of my departure, and your afflictions to come: whereas if you would have diligently enquired concerning the end of theſe things, you ſhould have found matter of rejoycing in the aſſurance of my glory, and the accompliſhment of your redemption therein.

V. 7. it is expedient for you] It ſhall make for your advantage. Such are the works of Gods power and unſearchable counſel, whereby he bringeth light out of darkneſſe, good out of evill; and comfort out of ſorrow: ſo he giveth them his peace in the worlds malice, and ſpiritual joy of the holy Ghoſt in the bitter ſorrows and afflictions of fleſh and blood: ſo he advantageth them in manifeſting to themſelves, and the world, their righteouſneſſe, by permitting them to be condemned of the world for malefactours: ſo he giveth them life, by permitting them, to death: ſo tryeth he the elect, and blindeth the carnal hearted.

if I go not away, the Comforter, &c.] Could he not have given the holy Ghoſt being preſent with them? Yes, but God had otherwiſe determined to confirm the truth of the Goſpel, by the manifeſt graces of the holy Ghoſt, and them therein, who were now to be weaned from the deſire of Chriſts bodily preſence, and to awaked out of their dream of a temporal and worldly kingdom of Chriſt. See 2 Cor. 5. 16.

V. 8 he will reprove the world of ſin] ἐλέγξει, he will not only accuſe but alſo convince the world of ſin, by ſuch evident and concluding arguments, as that πᾶσαν ἀπολογίαν αὐτῶν ἐκκόψει, Chryſoſt. hom 77 he ſhall take from them all excuſe, he ſhall convince their obſtinacy and unbelief,by the power of truth making it clearly appear, that I am the Chriſt. See Acts 2. 37.

V. 9. of ſin] Of unbeleef: See chap. 15. 22, 24. However the world and ſecure ſinners think themſelves free from the guilt of ſin and the juſt puniſhment thereto due, yet when by the light of Gods ſpirit they ſhall underſtand their own condition under the burden of original ſin, derived to them from Adam, and their many actual, contracted by their own wilful diſobedience, they ſhall ſo be convinced of ſin, as that they ſhall groan under the burden thereof as unſupportable, untill they by faith can lay hold on Chriſt for their peace with, and juſtification before, God. See Rom 8, 23. Rom. 7. 23, 24, 25. Rom. 5. 1. thus ſhall the light of the holy Ghoſt reprove the world of ſin, thereby moving the conſciences of the elect to faith and repentance, and terrifying the hearts of the reprobates, who can neither find peace to their ſouls under the curſe of the law, nor beleeve in Chriſt that they might be delivered from it.

becauſe they beleeve not] And therefore are ſtill lyable to the power and curſe of the law againſt ſinners, ſo long as they continue in unbeleef, being not made free by the Son, who only freely juſtifieth ſinners. See chap. 8. 34, 35, 36. Rom. 3. 19. 24. & 5. 1, &c.

V. 10. of righteouſneſſe] Not the worlds, but Chriſts: becauſe they contemned the true righteouſneſſe of God in Chriſt (1 Cor. 1. 30.) whom they blaſphemed, and condemned as a malefactour: hereof their conſciences ſhall be convinced, when they ſhall perceive the goſpel confirmed, by the admirable power of the holy Ghoſt, evidently working by the Apoſtles,

V. 11. of judgement] Becauſe they condemned him whom God the Father juſtified (which was not his injuſtice, but theirs) and appointed Judge of the living and the dead, Acts 17. 31. or my power of judicature exerciſed againſt Satan in part already, chap. 12. 31. Luke 10. 18, &c, prince of this world] Satan; not that he is ſo; for God alone is king, and and his providence ruleth over every creature, but becauſe he arrogateth to himſelf that high title (Luke 4. 6.) lying to deceive, and becauſe the wicked are permitted to his government, 2 Cor. 4. 4. of this ſee Acts 2. 22, &c. that they might periſh through his deluſions who received not the love of the truth that they might he ſaved. 2 Theſ. 2 11. 12.

is judged] Shall preſently be judged, that is, overcome, and his kingdome overthrown by Chriſts paſſion, and the preaching thereof. See Hebrewes 2. 14. Luke 11. 22. & 10. 18.

V. 12. I have yet many things to ſay unto you Thus he attemperateth to his hearers capacity: his doctrine diſtilleth like rain upon the herbs, (Deut. 32. 1.) by little and little as the hearers can receive it to nouriſh them, not by Cataracts to drown them. See 1 Cor. 3. 1. I have many deep myſteries, which you cannot now underſtand, or bear them without offence by reaſon of your weakneſſe, but the holy Ghoſt will reveal them unto you: See John 6. 56. 60. 1 Cor. 3. 1. See on verſe 4.

V. 13. he will ſhew you things to come] Concerning the kingdom of Chriſt, which they knew not till after his reſurrection.

V. 14. he ſhall receive of mine] He ſhall ſhew you the ſame truth which I have ſpoken to you, opening the treaſure of wiſdom and ſanctification, which are yet hid in me: he ſhall fill you with my ſpirit, and make you underſtand that which I have taught you, ſealing you up to the redemption which I work for you, and aſſuring you of your intereſt in, and conjunction with, me.

V. 15. all things that the Father hath are mine] This he ſpeaketh in the perſon of the Mediatour; becauſe of his fulneſſe we all receive. chap. 1. 16. and herein ſheweth the unity of eſſence in the holy Trinity, and community of power, wiſdom, ſanctity, truth, eternity, glory, majeſty, &c.

V. 16. becauſe I go to the Father] See chap 14. 18, 19. I paſſe by death and reſurrection into the glory which I had, and have eternally with the Father; yet ſhall I be more ſpiritually with you than ever, becauſe ye ſhall then have more experience of my ſpirit. See Mat. 28. 20.

V 17. Then ſaid ſome of his diſciples] Often had he mentioned his death, and going to the Father, yet underſtood they not; ſo deafe is fleſh and blood to the doctrine of the croſſe; and ſo blinde are we untill the Spirit of God illuminate us, 1 Corinth 2. 14.

V. 18 what is this that he ſaith] What meaneth he hereby? they underſtood not that he ſhould ſo ſoon die, and ſo quickly riſe again from the dead, the third day: therefore that ſame τὸ μικρὸν, a little while was obſcure and hard to them, untill this prophefie opened it ſelf in the fulfilling thereof. There is in the regenerate in this life, ſo great a remainder of carnal reaſon and wiſdom, which is but ſpiritual blindneſſe, as that they underſtand but in part (ſee Gal. 5 17. 1 Cor. 13. 9.) even ſometimes plain and eaſie things often taught them: as in this example appears he had often, and but lately acquainted them with his death, and ſuffering at Jeruſalem, and his riſing again the third day, yet they thought not that it had been ſo nigh, that he ſhould that very night be apprehended, and ſlain the next day; they underſtood nothing of theſe things, and this ſaying was hid from them, &c. Luke 18 31, 32, 33, 34.

V. 19. that they were deſirous to aske him] They, like good auditours, are not offended at that they do not preſently underſtand, but reſolve to ask that they may learn: he as a gracious Saviour, preventeth their enquiry by a further explanation of himſelf.

V. 20. ye ſhall weep, &c.] Ye ſhall have ſorrow and trouble of heart; when impiety and popular rage ſhall triumph: but you ſhall have a ſpiritual joy in receiving the holy Ghoſt; which ſhall take away, and make voyd ſecular and worldly ſorrows (as Aarons ſerpent did the inchanters, Exod. 7. 12.) ſo had they many ſharp encounters, injuries, preſſures, ſorrows as Chriſt foretold them, Mat. 9. 15, &c.) but they rejoyced that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the name of Chriſt: ſo are the ſaints advantaged in their ſufferings. See Acts 5. 41. 2 Cor 4. 16. 17, 18. Rom. 5. 3. when the Saints weep, the world ſhall rejoyce, but when all tears ſhall be wiped from their eyes, (Revel. 7. 17.) then ſhall all the kindreds of the earth wail and mourn, Mat. 24. 30. Rev. 1. 7. ſo do the ſaints and the world take their turns of ſorrows and tears, as Gideons fleece and floor did of the dew. Judg. 6. 37, &c.

V. 21 her hour is come] The time of her travel appointed of God. This ſimilitude often uſed in holy Scripture, importeth ſodain fear and ſorrow. Pſal. 48. 6. Jer. 6. 24. Jer. 13. 21. & 22. 23. & 49 24 & 50. 43. Mich. 4. 9, 10 1 Theſ. 5. 3 ſo ſhould their diſperſion, fear and ſorrow be, but they ſhould (and ſo did) rejoyce when the iſſue thereof, the reſurrection, and aſcenſion of Chriſt, the gifts and graces of the holy Ghoſt powred out upon them, and their admirable comfort in their faiths confirmation, as alſo in the converſion of the beleevers of Jewes and Gentiles to the faith, and their ſalvation by Chriſt.

V. 22. I will ſee you again] After my reſurrection from the dead.

no man taketh from you] αἴρει, taketh ἀρεῖ ſhall be able to take away: Becauſe Chriſt is their joy (ſaith Auguſtine) who ſhall die no more, but be to the fountain and authour of eternal joy. See 1 Pet. 1. 8. this joy is begun in this life, and compleated in the life to come.

V. 23. in that day ye ſhall aske me nothing] When ye ſhall ſee me me riſen from the dead; ye ſhall not then enquire of me thoſe things which you now doubt of; as chap. 13. 36. & 14. 5. you ſhall be taught of the holy Ghoſt, and ſo underſtand theſe things, 1 John 2. 27. or ye ſhall not ask of me as now ye do.

V. 24. ye asked nothing in my name] Hitherto you have not grounded your requeſts to God through my mediation and interceſſion, which you ſhall now learn to do in my bodily abſence. Hereby he comforted them in aſſurance of his ſpiritual aſſiſtance of them in all their trials, which they ſhould obtain in their faithful and earneſt prayers unto God in his name and mediation onely; which they according to this word of Chriſt doing, had a comfortable experience of the performance of this his promiſe on that behalf; whereof ſee Acts 4. 24, 29,30,31,32,&c. this was probably an unuſual manner of praying with the former ſaints before the coming of Chriſt; for the Apoſtles had not yet practiſed it after his manifeſtation to Iſrael, and their being ſo much inſtructed by and under his divine magiſtery, untill after his aſcenſion into heaven; to wit, their praying to God through the name and mediation of Chriſt.

V. 25. in proverbs] Or parables, in ſimilitudes, in dark ſayings, but openly, as verſe 29. & chap. 10. 24. & chap. 11. 10. Mark 8. 32.

no more ſpeak unto you] I will henceforth clearly enlighten you,

V. 26. Ye ſhall ask in my name] Chap. 14. 13, 14, for my ſake, through my mediation, and according to the will and promiſe of God: otherwiſe the name of Chriſt is but vainly pretended, Nam ſi id quod non expedit petitur, non in nomine Jeſu petitur pater, Gregor. hom 26. for if that which is not expedient is asked, the Father is not entreated in the name of Jeſus.

I ſay not unto you] Not that he will not mediate: but to ſhew the readineſſe of Gods love to hear the beleevers.

V. 27. becauſe ye have loved me] This ὅτι becauſe, here as Luke 7. 47. ſheweth a conſequence not a cauſe of Gods love to beleevers See on Luke 7. 47. we love Chriſt, becauſe God loved us firſt, which love of his can have no cauſe but it ſelf: our love to Chriſt is therefore a certain ſign of Gods love to us.

V. 28. I leave the world] In reſpect of my bodily preſence; but as his Deity left not heaven to come into the world by his incarnation; ſo neither left it the world by going to the Father in his aſſumption.

V. 29. ſpeakeſt no proverb] No parable, or obſcure thing; now we better perceive what thou meaneſt. They found in themſelves ſome encreaſe of illumination, ſo that they could truly ſay Chriſts preſent words were not now ſuch obſcure riddles, but that they in ſome meaſure underſtood the ſcope and meaning thereof; but herein they yet failed, that they thought they were ſufficiently enformed, or knew enough concerning his going to his father, with the effects thereof, much more clearly and evidently taught them after his aſcenſion, and the coming of the holy Ghoſt upon them, as he had promiſed; when we know moſt, we muſt know that we are yet to learn, as God ſhall be pleaſed further to reveal himſelf unto us.

V. 30. Now we are ſure] This they ſay as men fluctuant between fear and hope; therefore Chriſt preſently telleth them of that effect of their faiths weakneſſe which he foreſaw, that is, their forſaking him, whom they here profeſſe came from God, ſo infirm is the ſtrongeſt faith, ſo inconſtant the beſt reſolutions.

V. 31. Do ye now believe?] This interrogation hath in it the ſignifications both of pity and reproof of their too early confidence in themſelves, as if he ſaid, Ah poor ſoules! who ſeem to your ſelves thus ſtrong in faith you know not how quickly you ſhall be ſcattered for fear. See verſe 32.

V. 32. Behold the hour cometh] Mat. 26. 31. Mark 14. 27.

yet am I not alone] This alſo he addeth to confirm them againſt their tryal now at hand; as if he ſaid, let not go your confidence in me, when you ſhall find your own infirmity in your forſaking me for fear, God will ſtill be with me, when men deſert me.

V. 33. that in me ye might, &c.] That truſting in me, ye may have peace of conſcience, the ſureſt armour againſt ſecular afflictions.

I have overcome the world] Chriſt his victory is our victory. See 1 John 4. 4. neither the world, Satan, ſinne, death, nor any creature could overcome him; ſo neither ſhall they us, Rom. 8. 37 &c. though we muſt through many afflictions enter into the kingdom of heaven, Acts 4. 22. (for as Jerom lib. 2. ep. 19. ſaith quis ſanctorum ſine certamine coronatus eſt? which of all the Saints hath been crowned without a conflict?) yet herein is our comfort and aſſurance, we have overcome the world, becauſe Chriſt hath overcome it: this is the victory of our faith; we have overcome, though the fight be not yet done; becauſe we are certaine of victory in Chriſt, who hath overcome for us, both the world and whatſoever is adverſe to our ſalvation: the world may ſtill afflict us and try us, to advantage us, not finally to hurt us, becauſe we are in Chriſt by faith. See 1 John 5. 9. Rom. 8. 1.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. T*He houre is come*] This he ſaith, becauſe through Chriſt were manifeſted, by doctrine and miracles, power and great works; yet his ſpiritual kingdom, which after this, more clearly ſhined forth, was yet but obſcure towards the world: now the hour which the Father had appointed was come.

glorifie thy Son] He prayeth for that he was aſſured of: aſſurance of the truth of Gods promiſes is the cauſe and ground of faithful prayer, 2 Cor. 4. 13. ſo we daily pray for remiſſion of ſins, becauſe we are aſſured that they are remitted in Chriſt: God hath appointed that we ſhall attain through the merit and mediation of Chriſt, but the condition on our part to be performed is, that we ask like dutifull children, that he may give like a loving Father.

that thy Son may alſo glorifie thee] That I may glorifie thee in the afflictions which I ſhall ſuffer for the elect, that men may know that I loved thee. Euthym.

V. 2. as thou haſt given him power] Authority over all men, and all creatures.

V. 3. the onely true God] Not excluding himſelfe and the holy Ghoſt; but intimating the whole Deity in the name of God.

V. 4. I have glorified thee] By Doctrine and miracles; by my whole life on earth: now therefore glorifie me in my death and reſurrection, that thou mayeſt alſo therein be glorified. See chap. 5. 23.

V. 5. with the glory which I had, &c.] That the divine Maieſty which I had from all eternity may now ſhine forth in the perſon of the Mediatour; for the nature of the fleſh was not yet glorified, and taken up to Gods right hand, as Chryſtome noteth: this glory was (towards the world) clouded for a time by the veil of his fleſh, in the form of a ſervant, but nothing in himſelf leſſened thereby.

V. 6. unto the men] To my diſciples choſen out of the world, whom I have inſtructed. He preached to all the Jews publickly in their ſynagogues, and in the temple, as occaſion ſerved; even all that concerned their believing in, and ſalvation by him; but there were among them all, but a certain number of the elect who received that word, and beleeved to ſalvation.

thine they were] By eternal election. They were Gods, that is, the fathers, the ſonnes, and the holy Ghoſts, who gave and committed them to Chriſt as he was their redeemer, teacher, Saviour, and mediatour; not alienating them by that donation; but more nearly uniting them to God by that mediation, whereby they become, θείας κοινωνοὶ φύσεως, partakers of the divine nature. God gave them to the magiſtery of Chriſt, that in the dayes of his fleſh, and converſation with them, he might fully teach them thoſe things, which they were, after his aſcenſion into heaven, to teach all nations, that the elect among them might beleeve in him and be ſaved.

V. 7. are of thee] The elect beleeving know, that all that which they have in Chriſt is divine and heavenly, no invention or power of man, but the will and power of God to ſalvation to every one that beleeveth, Rom. 1. 16. See chap. 6. 69. 1 John 5. 20.

V. 8. and have known] Chap. 16. 27. for faith cannot be without knowledge. See chap. 9. 36. Romans, 10. 14. faith is the aſſent of the mind unto that it knoweth.

V. 9. I pray for them] Specially for the Apoſtles deſigned to ſo great and dangerous a work as was their preaching the goſpel to the obſtinate Jews and Idolatrous Gentiles. I pray not for the reprobates of the world. Chriſt intercedeth for the elect only who receive his word to faith and obedience; he neither prayeth for, nor heareth their prayers who will not hear, and obey his word and ordinance, ſee Zech 7. 11 13. Iſai 1. 15.

V. 10. thine are mine] For God the Father made him Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2. this he ſaith to give them aſſurance that the Father heard him; as if he had ſaid, I commend none unto thee, but thoſe whom thou gaveſt me, and ſtill owneſt for thine.

I am glorified in them] As in their beleeving and ſanctification, ſo in that they ſhall preach my triumphs over ſin, the croſſe, death, and hell, to all the world, out of which beleevers ſhall continually he gathered.

V. 11. I am no more in the world] I am preſently to depart from this world, and after my aſcenſion will be no more in it by my bodily preſence (Acts 3. 21.) by his governing and aſſiſting ſpirit, he ever is. See Mat. 28. 20.

keep through thine own name] That is (as the the interpreter of the Syriack hath it) by thy name; by thy power, mercy, and goodneſſe; for thy holy names ſake; or by the knowledge of thee: becauſe they are thine, and bear thy name: Διὰ τῆς σῆς βοηθείας, through thy help, or aſſiſtance. Chryſoſt.

that they may be one] Joyned in unity of faith and love as brethren in me. Of one heart mind and conſent, careful to keep the unity of the ſpirit in the bond of peace. Eph. 4. 3. the effect of Chriſts prayer concerning this, admirably appeared, Acts 4. 32. Acts 1. 14. & 2. 46. & 5, 12. & 15. 25. Lord Jeſus Chriſt, yeſterday, to day, and the ſame for ever; now remember and intercede for thy diſtracted Church, whoſe diſcordant parts like thoſe dry bones in the Prophets viſion lie ſcattered, O Lord God of peace and unity, breath the ſpirit of unitie upon them, that they may come together and live. Amen Lord Jeſus.

V. 12. ſon of perdition] This is an Hebraiſme. So 2 Theſ. 2. 3. ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, that ſon of perdition, Epheſ. 2. 3. τέκνα ὀργῆς, *chidren of wrath. Pſal.109. 7. &c. as on all other impious and unreconcileable enemies of the Church of God.

V. 13. I ſpeak in the world] That is, being yet bodily preſent, I pray for and with them, my joy fulfilled] Chap. 15. 11. by (in themſelves) he meaneth in their hearts; and in their comfortable aſſurance in this life, and accompliſhed ſalvation in the life to come; which he duely calleth his, who rejoyceth in our good, and cauſeth the ſame in us, by the preſence of his ſpirit,ſanctifying us, and living in us, Gal. 2. 20. whereas we have of our ſelves nothing but unreſt, terrour, and matter of deſpair; Chriſt onely is our peace, and joy.

V. 14. they are not of the world] Becauſe being ſeparated by the ſpirit of regeneration, they diſſent from it in affection and converſation, 1 Pet. 4. 4.

V. 15. take them out of the world] By preſent death, becauſe it was appointed that they ſhould preach the goſpel to the nations of the world.

V. 16. they are not of the world] Verſe 14. this he repeateth for their ſakes, that they might remember that they were but aliants here;and ſo no wonder if the world hated them,which loveth onely her own.

V.17. ſanctifie them through thy truth] Conſecrate, prepare, and enable them to preach thy truth to the world; as if he ſaid, let them firſt receive the rowl and digeſt it; to wit, the word: which they muſt preach to others. See Ezek. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. Revel. 10. 9, 10, 11.

thy word is the truth] Thus he meeteth with their hypocriſie, who boaſt much of truth and godlineſſe, yet ſecurely contemn or neglect the word of God; whereas, that only containeth the truth and will of God, for our ſanctification and ſalvation: all other truths pretended to, or alleged by men, are hereby to be examined. Aaron and his ſons were ſanctified to the miniſtration of the Levitical Prieſthood, with cleanſings and ſprinkling the blood of thoſe ſacrifices (Exod.29.7.) which could never make them perfect(Heb. 9. 9.) but, O my Father, ſanctifie and conſecrate theſe in the truth of thoſe ſhadows (now to be antiquated and done away, Epheſ. 5. 26. 1 Pet. 3. 18. John 10. 15. & 15. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 22.) which more clearly ſhineth forth in the Goſpel, than in thoſe figures of the Law.

V. 18. as thou haſt ſent me] Thou haſt ſent me to preach the goſpel, thy will for mans ſalvation, I now having finiſhed my courſe, aſſigne them to the ſame office, and aſſiſt and keep thou them,that they may perform it.

V. 19. for their ſakes] That I may for them merit remiſſion of ſins, and eternal life, that they may alſo be ſanctified and conſecrated to thee and thy ſervice, as I am to do thy will for the expiation of the ſin of man: he ſeemeth to ſet himſelf againſt the Leviticall ſacrifices and Prieſthood which prefigured him, and were thereto conſecrated and ſanctified, Exod. 29. 1. thoſe in the ſhadow, Hebr. 10. 1. but Chriſt was ſo conſecrated in the truth, chap. 1. 17. Acts 10. 38. Luke 4. 18. Acts 10. 38 Iſai. 61. 1. So were the Apoſtles anointed, according to their meaſure to preach the acceptable year; but not as Chriſt, who received the ſpirit, but not by meaſure,John 3. 34. but the fulneſſe of the deity, Coloſ. 2. 9. the ſumme of this petition, is, that God would be pleaſed to ſanctify the Apoſtles, and prepare them to preach the Goſpel to all nations, as he had ſanctified and appointed him to declare the ſame unto them; intimating that as all good in order to mans ſalvation was,and is derived from his death and the power of his reſurrection from the dead,ſo alſo all abilities and conſecration of the miniſters of Chriſt, ſubordinate to the ſame.

I ſanctifie my ſelf] That is, I conſecrate and voluntary offer up my ſelf an holy and unblemiſhed ſacrifice to thee for their redemption. So Euthymius, after Chryſoſtom,interpreteth.

might be ſanctified] Through the imputation of my righteouſneſs to them; in that I have been obedient to the death for them. See Heb. 10 10. as alſo for the reſt of thy elect, as verſe 20.

through thy truth] ἐν ἀληθεία, in the truth, or truly, and ſo it intimateth our true and real ſanctification by the one oblation of Chriſt, in oppoſition to thoſe cleanſings under the law by the offering up of beaſts in ſacrifice.

V. 20. for theſe alone] That is,the Apoſtles now with me; but for all the elect which ſhall hereafter believe. Here was comfort to the Apoſtles in that many ſhould believe through their miniſtery; ſo is there to all true believers, in that Chriſt (whoſe prayer and interceſſion preſerved Peters faith from falling in his dangerous trial) hath prayed for us alſo. God will deny him nothing,

V. 21; that they may all be one] Members of one body of Chriſt, whoſe unity is life.

in us] Not one in evil, ſin, malice; but in faith,charity,ſanctity, conſent in good, holding the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Sin ſeparateth man from God; Chriſt can have no communion with Belial, unhappy ſinner. Magna hominis miſeria eſt cum illo non eſſe, ſine quo non poteſt eſſe. Proſper. Epigram. It is a mans great miſery not to be with him, without whom he cannot be (happy.)

that the world may believe] Being convicted by their holy unity,may confeſſe the power of my Spirit in them,and be united to their ſociety of faith and holy obedience.

V. 22. and the glory] That is, Chriſtian unity, which is the honour of God, the gift of Chriſt, and the glory of true Chriſtians: or the heavenly felicity whereof the elect ſhall participate in Chriſt.

V. 23. I in them] That the life of my ſpirit may appear in their holy converſation, as Gal.2.20.

thou in me] By thy divine nature united to my perſon; and communicating the fulneſſe of thy ſpirit to me.

they may be made perfect in one] Being joyned to the Lord, and ſo united to him; and one to another, as true members of the myſticall body of Chriſt, they may be partakers of the divine nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. See alſo 1 Cor.6.17. 1 John 1. 3. John 6. 57, 58.

may know that thou haſt ſent me] See on verſe 21. That men ſeeing their godly converſation, who profeſſe to be my Diſciples, may thereby know that I am of God.

and haſt loved them] That is,thy grace, love and favour towards them, which directeth and preſerveth them.

as thou haſt loved me] That thou loveſt them for my ſake: all the effects of Gods love are directed to us through his love to Chriſt.

V. 24. Father I will, &c.] Chap. 12. 26 & 14 3. that is, I deſire and pray,that the elect may be united to me their head,in the eternall bleſſedneſſe in thy kingdom of glory, coheires with me thereof.

be with me] In eternal glory and happineſſe, in which I ſhall ſhortly be with thee.

V. 25. the world hath not known thee] The greateſt part of the world hath not known thee as they ought, (ſee Acts 17. 23. Rom. 1. 21, 28.) in the unity of the Trinity: I onely have known thee, and they to whom I have revealed thee, and thy counſel, Mat. 11. 27. John 8. 55. & 7. 29. & 10. 15.

V. 26. thy name] Thy mercy and goodneſs,by the doctrine of the Goſpel which I have preached unto them, and the ſpirit of regeneration, whereby they may underſtand that which I have taught them.

that the love, &c.] That thou mayeſt love them for my ſake as thou haſt loved me their Head: and that they may by faith fall in their hearts, that love wherewith thou loveſt me, and themſelves in me. See Rom. 5. 5.

and I in them] Dwelling in their hearts by the Spirit of Faith and Sanctification, Epheſ. 3. 17. Perfectius eis notus, Euthymius; being more perfectly known to them.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſe 1. HE went forth with his diſciples] Mat. 26. 36. To ſhew that he went out willingly to accompliſh our redemption, underſtand by ταῦτα, theſe words,all that which this Evangeliſt here recordeth from the thirteenth Chapter hitherto.

over the brook kedron] Mentioned, 2 Samuel 15. 22. 1 Kings 15. 13. It is (ſay ſome) the name of the valley, as well as of the brook running through the ſame betwixt Jeruſalem and the Mount of Olives: It is a ſhallow brook: the Syriac tranſlateth it, ad tranſitum pedis; that is, a Foord which may be paſſeth over on foot. See on Luke 22. 39. Over this brook and Valley, went David and his ſouldiers weeping, up the Mount of Olives, 2 Sam. 15. 23. 30.

V. 2. Judas, &c. knew the place] This he ſaith, to ſhew that Chriſt hid not himſelf: for in the night where could he more eaſily and certainly be found, than in that place, to which he often reſorted in the night, Luke 21. 37. This place Judas well knew, and that he ſhould there finde Chriſt, and Jeſus knew that Iudas would ſeek him there; therefore that he might according to his fathers will, be found by Iudas and ſuffer for the ſin of man, he that could have avoided Iudas finding, by going to ſome other more remote place with his diſciples in the night and darkneſſe undiſcovered, would go into that very garden which he uſed to frequent, and Iudas well knew.

V. 3. having received a band of men] Mat. 26. 47. Mark 14. 43. Luk.22.47.which he had obtained of the Governour of the Temple or rather which the Prieſts and elders had entreated Pilate to aſſign for their aſſiſtance; that they might the more ſurely lay hold on him, and more ſecurely bring him away with them: now though moſt probably their own Centurion commanded the company, yet becauſe Judas was to bring them to the place where Jeſus was, it is ſaid that Judas received a band of men,&c.

with lanthorns and torches] Jeſus is apprehended as a Maleſactour, that we may be acquitted as innocent.

V. 4. went forth] That is, from that part of the garden where he was towards them who came to apprehend him.

whom ſeek ye?] He asketh not as doubting, but to amate the Guard, and that he might rather appear preſenting himſelf, than be taken, as by force, ſeeing he wittingly and willingly offered up himſelf for our ſinnes, as was prefigured in the Law. See Exod. 35. 5. 21, 22, 29. Levit. 22. 21, 23. Numb. 15. 3. & 29.39. Deut 16. 10.

V. 5. they anſwered him, Jeſus of Nazareth] They ſay not, we ſeek thee, but Jeſus, &c. As ſpeaking to ſome third perſon: It ſeemeth then that they knew not Jeſus preſent, ſpeaking to them, though maniſeſted with lights, and marked out by Judas's treacherous kiſſe, and though often ſeen ſpecially of the High Prieſts ſervants, who ever noted him with a malicious eye. All which (as alſo the following words) ſhews, that he willingly offered himſelf.

Judas alſo, &c.] Judas perplexed, in that, that the ſigne of his treaſon took not, and that he had in vain diſcovered himſelf, who probably hoped, that having ſaluted Jeſus, the Guard would preſently have fallen in and layed hands on him, and ſo in the tumult, his ſelf ſhould not be diſcovered He came not over to the Diſciples, from whoſe ſociety he was departed, but ſtood with the enemies of Jeſus.

V. 6. fell to the ground] No wonder; for as Auguſtine noteth, Deus latebat in carne, the Deity was vailed in his Humanity: Chirſt did this to make them know, that the arms, multitude and power they brought, could do nothing except God permitted: and to teach all obſtinate enemies of his Church, that they ſhall not be able to ſtand before his Majeſty judging in his glory, ſeeing they could not in his ſtate of humiliation, and when their hour was, that they were permitted to judge him, then ſuſtaining the perſon of a ſervant, and in their cenſure, a delinquent.

V. 7. then asked he them again] After that the ſame power which caſt them down, permitted them to riſe again.

they ſaid, Jeſus of Nazareth] They perſiſt in their obſtinacy notwithſtanding their preſent experience of a divine power caſting them down at the word of Ieſus: the moſt evident miracles can neither convert nor work upon the obſtinate, untill God turn their hearts.

V. 8. let theſe go their way] For he alone was to ſuffer for our redemption. He ſheweth his love to them, unto the laſt: if ye ſeek me onely ἐμαυτὸν παραδίδωμι, Chryſoſtom I yeild my ſelf to you.

V. 9. that the ſaying might be fulfilled] Theſe are the Evangeliſts words, conciſely ſpeaking, omitting theſe words, this he ſaid, or this was done, that the ſaying, &c.

the ſervants name was Malchus] He nameth the party, and where he was hurt, for the evidence of the ſtory.

V. 11. put up thy ſword] Chriſt prohibited him to ſmite, though in defence of his own ſacred perſon; and he healed him that was hurt, though his enemy: to teach us firſt to do good to them, who perſecute and hurt us. And ſecondly, that zeal muſt be limitted by the bounds of every mans own calling: we may not uſe the ſword to private revenge. See Deut. 32. 35. Rom. 12. 19. Thirdly, that he willingly taſted that bitter cup of his paſſion. Fourthly, that he needed no externall defence; he could have commanded legions of Angels. Laſtly, that no miſ-informed, or miſplaced zeal is juſtifiable.

V. 12. and the captain] χιλίαρχος (See Acts 21. 31.) the tribune; ſome think theſe were ſuch as we call High Marſhals, *Henr. Bebel. de Mag. & ſacr. For as Vegetius lib. 2. cap. 6. de re militar. ſaith, In una legione decem cohortes eſſe debere. So Ibid. cap. 12. in one legion muſt be ten cohorts, the firſt whereof being the chief, conſiſting of 1105. and bound him] As a malefactor: this they did to pleaſe their impious Governours: and this Ieſus ſuffered to fulfill, that which preceded in his types, Iſaac, Geneſ. 22. 9. Joſeph, Geneſ. 37. 24. Sampſon, Judges 16. 9 and the legall Sacrifices which were bound and layed on the Altar, and to deliver us from the bonds of Death and Hell, Pſalm 116. 3. V. 13. to Annas firſt] See Luke 3. 2. Some conjecture that his houſe was in the way from the garden: others, that becauſe no matter of great moment was acted at Annas houſe, beſides his examining Ieſus concerning his doctrine and diſciples, verſe 19. and that illegall and impious act of one of the ſervants ſmiting Ieſus verſe 22. therefore the other Evangeliſts omit this part of the Hiſtory, not ſo much as mentioning Annas, but ſo following the ſeries of the Hiſtory, as if from the garden they led Ieſus firſt to Caiaphas, Mat. 26. 57. themſelves went not, &c.] Acts 10. 28. It was not lawful by their tradition to accompany the Gentiles: eſpecially being to eat the Paſſeover. This they make conſcience of; but none to kill the Lord of life. See Acts 10. 28. and 11. 5.

but that they might eat the Paſſeover] That is, thoſe Sacrifices which they uſually were to offer, at that feaſt of the Paſſeover; (as ſome ſay) becauſe the Paſchal Lamb, they were (by the Law) to eat the eaven before, Deut. 16. 1. and certainly Chriſt with his diſciples, had eaten the Paſchal Lamb the even before he was apprehended, and led to Pilate, as it is clear, Matthew 26. 17. &c. Mark 14. 12. &c. Luke 22. 7. &c. Others think otherwiſe, and that Ieſus eat not the Paſſeover the ſame day on which the Jews ate it, (againſt which the forecited places ſeem to expreſſe:) they ſay, becauſe that they finde find no expreſſe place of Scripture clear enough, whence it may be gathered, thoſe Sacrifices to be offered on the ſeven days of unleavened bread, were ever called by that name: Deut. 16. 2. Thou ſhalt ſacrifice the Paſſeover (פסח) &c. צאן ובקר of the flock of ſheep, and herd, or bullocks. See hereof Numb. 28. 29, 14. and Deut. 16. 2. &c. And you ſhall finde theſe Paſſeover-offerings expreſly called פסחים Peſachim, the plural of the word פסח πάσχα. See V. Shindlar Pentegl. in פסח 2 Chron. 35. 8, 9. 70. εἰς τὸ φασὲκ, &c. So Chryſoſtom underſtandeth τὸ πάσχα, τὴν ἑορτὴν πᾶσαν, the whole time of the ſolemnity of that feaſt of Peſſeover. But what place of Scripture ſheweth expreſly, or by neceſſary conſequence, that Chriſt ate the Paſſeover, not on the ſame day on which the Jews did eat it? The firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread, Chriſt ate it, Mat. 26. 17. &c. Mark 14. 12. &c. Luke 22. 7. then it was by the Law to be eaten. See Numb. 28. 16 &c. Deut. 16. 1, 2, 3, 4 At even, Deut. 16. 6. And how can it appear that the Jews did not now obſerve the Law on this behalf? or that (as ſome think) their ſtrict caution againſt defilement, making them uncapable (by the Law, or their tradition) of eating at the feaſt, of their offerings, muſt needs relate onely to that day on which the Paſſeover was to be offered and eaten, or the firſt and laſt dayes of the feaſt? ſeeing every uncleanneſſe (whether determined by the Law, or conceived to be ſo, by their tradition) did make them for the time uncapable of eating things offered in ſacrifice to the Lord, as Levit 5. 1, 2. &c. Levit. 7. 19, 20, 21. Numb. 18. 11, 13. Numb. 19, 20. or in their opinions ſo, if it were but conceived ſuch by their own traditions.

V. 29. what accuſation bring you, &c.] So Mat. 27. 23. Mark 15. 14. He ſaid, What evill hath he done? for he knew that they had delivered him out of envy, Mark 15. 10. Therefore though they had accuſed him as a perverter of the people, yet he alſo publickly profeſſed, I finde no fault in this man, Luke 23. 4, 14. So alſo here, verſe 38.

V. 30. if he were not a malefactour, &c.] As if they ſaid, we are godly people, and would not accuſe any but a malefactour: there is no cauſe why you ſhould ſuſpect our charity, or queſtion our integrity (yet which of the Prophets did they not perſecute? Acts 7. 52.) ſo blinde and preſumptuous is hypocriſie: but if it be enough to accuſe, who ſhall be innocent?

V. 31. judge him according to your law] This he ſpake, either becauſe he conceived it to be a matter of their religion, and ſo fit for the cogniſcance of their Sanhedrin: or ironically he derideth their fury againſt right and equity; for the Romans permitted them no power of judicature in capital matters, as they confeſſe, nor did they condemn any man to death for favour, or unheard. See Acts 25. 16.

V. 32. that the ſaying of Jeſus] How he ſhould dye condemned by a Gentile, (Mat. 20. 19.) and be crucified, John 12. 33. for that was then the uſe of the Romans, and as the moſt grievous, ſo the moſt ignominious kinde of death.

judgement-hall] Or Pretory, v. 28.

V. 34. ſayeſt thou this thing of thy ſelf] Is this thine own prejudicate opinion of me? or is this the objection of my accuſers? have they enformed thee ſo, or ſuggeſted any thing to induce thee to think, or ſuſpect ſo?

V. 35. am I a Jew] What care I for the King whom the Jews expect? or for their religion? I am no Jew: I ask not for any intereſt of mine own: it is the inſtigation of thy own contreymen; they queſtion whether thou art their expected King Meſſias, and convent thee as the author of ſedition, under pretence of thy affectation of that title.

V. 36. my kingdom is not of this world] Not that he governeth not in heaven and earth: for though his kingdom be not of this world, tamen rex eſt, etiam in hoc mundo, Bernard in Epiphan. ſerm. 2. when Pilate had openly declared whoſe accuſation it was: Jeſus plainly telleth him, that his kingdom was not ſecular, but ſpiritual; not of this world. So that he nothing intrenched on Caſars right; which he ſaith, not that he might avoid death, but to ſhew that he was unjuſtly accuſed.

V. 37. Thou ſayeſt that I am, &c.] It is an Hebrew manner of conceſſion; meaning, I am, as Mark 14. 62. or thou gathereſt by my words that I am a king.

V. 38. What is truth?] What truth do you ſpeak of? what ever Pilates meaning was in this quere, it is more improbable that he did not therefore enquire concerning truth, with a purpoſe to be inſtructed thereby, for he not ſo much as expected Ieſus anſwer, but preſently went out to the Jews.

V. 39. But ye have a cuſtom] Mat. 27. 15.

and ſcourged him] That is, cauſed him to be ſcourged by his officers; poſſiby hoping thereby to appeaſe the fury of the Jews. The Prophet Iſaiah 53. 5. foretelleth the effect, that with his ſtripes we might be healed.

V. 2. a crown of thorns] The crown is a ſoveraign ornament; and ſo was the purple robe (See Pompon. Lat. de Magiſtr. Rom. de Rege) in ſo much as that it was once accounted treaſon, for any private man to wear it: the Romans admitted it to Kings, (ſo ſaith Jerom in Iſai. 61. it is inſigne regii decoris, &c.) great men in triumphs ware it, and others at ſacrifices; and funerals: ſo that although they did this in deriſion of Chriſts kingdom, yet it did as it were proclaim him a king, and a ſacrificer, by his death triumphant. See Iſ. Caſaubon Exerc. 16. N 79.

V. 3. Hail king of the Iews] Or God ſave thee O King, Syriac שלםלך ſhelom lach, peace be to thee, it was a common manner of ſalutation among them. So Judges 6. 23. שלום לך ſhalom lecha. So Judges 19. 20 1 Sam. 25. 6. 1 Chr. 12. 18. Luke 10. 5.

ſmote him with their hands] Or gave him ſtripes with rods, ῥαπίσματα, ῥαπίζειν is of ῥαπὶς, virga, a rod, or ſwitch. See on chap. 18. 22.

V. 4. I bring him forth to you] For they would not enter into the Pretorie. See on chap. 28. 18. therefore he cauſed Jeſus after he had been ſcourged, to be brought out unto them; who were waiting before the pretorie, to attend what ſhould finally be done to him.

I finde no fault in him] See chap. 18. 38. you accuſe him of many things, but upon ſerious examination thereof, I find in him no crime, no cauſe why I ſhould condemn him; this ſheweth that Pilate ſlighted all that they urged concerning his affecting to be a King; as either proceeding out of their envy and malice, or Chriſts otherwiſe pretending to a kingdom, than could at all be prejudicious to Cæſar, and the ſtate of Rome, had he, either by any ſecret, or publick practices of Jeſus, by drawing a dangerous party, providing armes and treaſure, or caſting out ſedicious words againſt Cæſar or the ſtate, (which things Pilate being the Roman Deputy, would diligently enquire after) perceived any endeavour of Jeſus, in their ſenſe, to make himſelf king, he durſt not have pronounced Jeſus innocent, leſt himſelf ſhould have been impleaded, guilty of confederacy with him.

V. 5. wearing the crown of thorns] So bare he, and took away that curſe of the earth, Geneſ. 3. 18. this may have an alluſion to that ſacrifice taken by the head in the thorns, which Abraham found upon the ſame mountain, whereon Chriſt began his paſſion. See Gen. 22. 2. 2 Chr. 3. 1. & Clem. Alexand. Pæd. l. 2. c. 8.

behold the man] Behold what a king you are afraid of: or this he ſaid to move them to compaſſion, whom they ſaw and knew cauſleſſely torne with whips.

V. 6. they cryed out ſaying, crucifie him, &c.] ἐκραύγασαν: it importeth, an importunate confuſed, vociferation or yauling out; ſuch as troubled crows make, when they cry altogether: ſo Euſtat. κράζειν and κρώζειν, is ſaid de cornicibus & corvis. So Clem. Alexandr. ad Gent. uſeth the word, οὐ κρώζοντα, οὐ χλάζοντα, &c. They who could alledge nothing againſt Chriſt, cry him to death with noiſe of multitudes; by ſo much more violently reaſonleſſe, by how much more reaſon the Judge alleaged to appeaſe them. So cryed the multitude againſt Paul, Acts 22. 22. So cryed the Epheſians for their Diana, Acts 19. 28. So the Heathens were wont to cry in any publick calamity, Chriſtianos ad leonem, caſt the Chriſtians to the lyon, Tertul. adv. Gent. cap. 40 take ye him and crucifie him] This expreſſeth Pilates indignation at their clamorous proceedings, as Chryſoſtom noteth: he permitted him not to their power to kill, which the Romans gave them not: but in effect denied to be a ſervant to their unjuſt paſſion; which the following words ſeem to intimate.

V. 7. We have a law] By their law a blaſphemer ought to be ſtoned to death, Levit. 24. 16. which might juſtly have taken hold on themſelves, it could not on Chriſt; for he is indeed the Son of God: but here appeareth the daring impiety of the wicked, wreſting laws to their own luſts, thereby to take away the righteouſneſſe of the moſt innocent, and to condemn even Chriſt himſelf.

V. 8. he was more afraid] Hitherto the innocency of Jeſus made him fear to condemn him, though ſo may confuſed outcries ſounded in his ears; ſometimes the Law, ſometimes neceſſity of ſtate, and Caſars right was pretended: yet fluctuant between theſe, and his own fear, his conſcience told him that Jeſus was innocent: and now a ſharper ſcruple toucheth him, leſt he ſhould condemn one more than a man, and that prove true which they objected againſt him for a crime, that he was indeed the Son of God,

V. 9. whence art thou?] Of what parents? the Jews laſt article, and Ieſus own former ſpeech, chap. 18. 36, 37. that his kingdom was not of this world, encreaſe his jealous fear: Jeſus knowing that Pilate would at laſt comply with the Jews fury;and being now to die, not for himſelf, but for us, anſwered not to this, as they who plead to be delivered.

V. 10. Knoweſt thou not that I have power, &c.] By this, Pilate condemned himſelf, when confeſſing that he had power to releaſe him, he would yet without any fault crucifie him, to ingratiate with the Jews: mala poteſtas licere quod noceat, Ambroſ. in Pſal. 118. ſerm. 20. it is an evill power to be able to miſchief.

V. 11. except it were given thee from above] Except God gave it thee (as chap. 3. 27. 31.) or permitted it to thee, how ever great thy authority, and the ſtrength of the wide-ſpreading eagles wings, the Roman empire be, thou couldeſt do nothing at all againſt me, did not God for the preſent permit thee to do that which is in order to the performance of his holy will for my ſuffering, to redeem his elect.

hath the greater ſin] Greater ſin than thine, the Syriac hath it, as comparing Pilates ſin in comdemning Chriſt for fear, with the high prieſts ſin, delivering him up to Pilate for malice; or he taxeth the Jews in that they ſinned againſt God, for whom Judges muſt judge, and whoſe office it is to defend the innocent: and againſt Pilate, whoſe authority their importunity abuſed and miſled; and againſt holy JESUS the Lord of life,whom for envie they delivered.

V. 30. it is finiſhed] That is, mans redemption; and all the ceremonies monies of the Law, are fulfilled and ended in the exhibition of that truth which they prefigured: He ſpeaketh here of that which preſently ſhould be; and in the yielding up his ghoſt was accompliſhed. See chap. 17. 4.

V. 31. for that Sabbath was an high day] Μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα, a great day, that is a very ſolemn day, in reſpect of the concurrence of a double celebrity: the Sabbath, and a day of this feaſt of Paſſeover: (See Numb. 28. 17, 18. So here chap. 7. 37. the laſt day of the feaſt is ſaid to be, that great day of the feaſt) ſo that they might not take him down thereon.

V. 32. brake the legs of the firſt] The ſouldiers which crucified them came and broke their legs to diſpatch them, after they had obtained it of Pilate, verſe 31 that they might not remain upon the croſſe on the Sabbath; therefore when they ſaw Jeſus dead already, they ſaved that needleſſe labour: this did Gods providence diſpoſe ſo, becauſe he was ſhortly to riſe again: for though he could as eaſily have made his bones whole, as cure his heart-wound, and riſe again from the dead; yet other concurrent difficulties hindring the faith of infirm men, he would not have this added thereto.

V. 34. there came out blood and water] They pierced his ſide, to prove if he were indeed dead, or otherwiſe to make him ſure; this water and blood forthwith iſſuing out ſhewed that he was truly dead, the pericardium which keepeth that water about the heart, being pierced: thus was fulfilled that which was foretold, Zach. 12. 10 and they ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, as verſe 37. thus came Jeſus by water and blood, 1 John 5.6. thus was there a fountain opened to the houſe of David, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem (even to all the Elect) for ſin and for uncleanneſſe, Zach. 13. 1. this was done that the enemies might not object, that he roſe again becauſe he was but half dead on the croſſe, and ſo, taken down, revived: to teſtifie the contrary truth, John ſo ſeriouſly affirmeth (verſe 35.) the certainty of his death, his heart-blood ſtreaming out, which he ſaw that ſtood by the croſſe.

V. 35. He knoweth that he ſaith true] He knoweth exactly, and certainly, who was ſo near an eye-witneſſe, that he could not be deceived therein, as they eaſily may, and often are, who take up things upon the bare report of other relaters.

V. 36. that the Scripture might be fulfilled] Exod. 12. 46. Numb. 9. 12. Pſal. 34. 20. that thoſe types might be accompliſhed in Chriſt the truth which they prefigured. So it appeareth that Chriſt our Paſſeover is offered, 1 Cor. 5. 7. and that he is that onely Lamb of God which taketh away the ſin of the world, chap. 1. 29. and that which was here done fell not out by chance or the counſel of man, but by Gods all diſpoſing providence, working by the impious murderers of Chriſt, that which his own hand and counſel had pre-ordained, as Acts 4. 28.

V. 6. Then cometh Simon] See on Luke 24. 12.

V. 7. the napkin that was, &c.] See Luke 24. 12. It was now light enough to ſee the white clothes there lying. See Mat. 27. 59. Mark 15. 46. Luke 23. 53. John 11 44 and thus Gods providence had diſpoſed, that even theſe ſmall,and,things,to mans judgement not much conſiderable, ſhould ſerve to the evidence of the truth of Chriſts Reſurrection, and the refutation of the falſe report of the Jews, that his Diſciples ſtole away his body out of the Sepulchre; for in all reaſon and probability, they would not have carried him away naked but in the linnen in which Joſeph and Nicodemus had interred him.

V. 8. and believed] That Chriſts body was taken away according to Maries report: for as yet they knew not the Scripture, that he muſt riſe again from the dead, verſe 9.

V. 10. went away again] They made haſt away, while yet but few were ſtirring about, for fear of the implacable malice of the Jewes.

to their own home] Where they before were, and from whence they ran to the ſepulchre: finding there nothing certainly appearing to their ſenſe, but onely their miſſing of the body of Jeſus, which poſſibly they might think was ſtolen away. See verſe 13. they returned to the reſt of the diſciples, wondering with themſelves how theſe things could ſo be, and what would be the iſſue, Luke 24. 12. relating to the reſt, that Jeſus body was not in the ſepulchre where it was laid, Luke 24. 24. and ſilently expecting the event.

V. 11. But Mary ſtood without, &c.] Peter and John made haſt away, leſt notice ſhould have been taken of them, as Chriſts Diſciples; and here the weaker ſex ſheweth more ſtrength of reſolution.

weeping] Not yet underſtanding the myſtery of Chriſts reſurrection, ſhe venteth her grief with tears.

ſhe ſtooped down] See on verſe 5. Either moved by the ſplendor of the Angels, or ſome noiſe by them made. She was not yet ſatisfied with others report, but as in the loſſe of that which we dearly love, conceiveth hope againſt ſenſe and reaſon; and, as Gregory ſaith, hom. 25. amanti ſemel aſpexiſſe non ſufficit: a lover is not ſatisfied with one look: nor looked ſhe in vain, to whoſe better information God ſent his glorious Miniſtring Spirits.

V. 12. ſeeth two Angels] Whether ſhe knew them to be Angels, or ſuppoſed them to be men, it is not here expreſſed: in white clothes, or garments.

the one at the head, &c.] That is, at that part of the ſepulchre where the head of Jeſus was laid when they buried him.

V. 13. Woman, why weepeſt thou?] That is, weep not: it is not now a time to weep, but to rejoyce: they ſaid more unto her, which the other Evangeliſts mention; but this, omitteth: this is a ſpeech mixed of reproof and comfort.

ſhe ſaith unto them] Surcharged with ſorrow ſhe conſidereth neither who theſe glorious creatures were, nor much what they ſaid to her, but mindeth onely the occaſion of her own preſent ſorrow.

they have taken away my Lord] Friends, or enemies, I know not whether, have conveyed away the body of my dear Lord Jeſus, here buried: ſo too much paſſion maketh one for preſent uncapable of reproof or comfort.

V. 14. and ſaw Jeſus ſtanding] Hearing ſome behind her, or perceiving by the Angels geſture, or countenances, ſome other preſent, ſhe looked back.

knew not that it was Jeſus] She ſaw, but knew not him ſhe ſought See Luke 24 16. Mark 16. 12. Mat. 28. 17. probably, he would not ſuddenly be known to her, leſt now riſing from the dead he might have affrighted her, which this, her ſlowneſſe to believe (being before inſtructed concerning his death and reſurrection and now again by the Angels) juſtly deſerved: yet ſee the mercy of Chriſt; ſhe firſt found him, who moſt affectionately ſought him

V. 15. Ieſus ſaid unto her] He well knew why ſhe wept, and for whom ſhe wept, but thus he takes occaſion to manifeſt himſelf to her.

Sir, if thou haſt born him hence, &c] Probably ſhe might ſuppoſe that he had overheard, what ſhe anſwered the Angels, therefore ſhe replyeth as preſuppoſing it: if thou haſt barn him hence; yet ſhe did no aſpire to the thought of Chriſts divine power to raiſe him from the dead: ſo hard is it to ſhake off the deluding dreams of fleſh and blood.

V. 16. Mary] In this familiar and uſual compellation, ſhe underſtood that it was Jeſus which ſpake to her.

Rabboni] Sudden joy intercepted what ſhe might more deſire to ſay: this hath the force of an interrogation; Is it my Maſter? my Lord Chriſt? See on chap. 1. 38.

V. 17. touch me not] She being too much addicted to ſenſe, Chriſt would teach her to lift up her mind to the conſideration of his ſtate of glory in heaven, where we muſt find him now with the eye of faith, not bodily ſenſes, 2 Cor. 5. 16. according as Auguſtine ſaith to Paulinus. ep.59 he would intimate, tactum ſpiritualem, i. e. acceſſum fidei, ſe requirere: that he now requireth a ſpiritual touching; that is, that we come to him with faith, whereby we beleeve him to be on high with the Father: and he would now ſhew her, that ſhe muſt attend another office, which was to teſtifie his Reſurrection from the dead: as if he had ſaid, thou needſt not make ſo much haſte to touch my feet; I am not yet aſcended, neither ſhall I ſo quickly, but that thou mayeſt be aſſured, by ſeeing, hearing, and touching me, that it is I who now am indeed riſen from the dead; the pledge and aſſurance of your life and reſurrection. See on Mat 28. 9

my brethren] The diſciples. See on Mat. 28. 10. notwithſtanding they had been ſcattered, and Peter had denyed him in his great infirmity; yet without exception to him, he calleth them his brethren.

my Father, and your Father] Mine by nature, yours by adoption. Cyril Hieroſ. Catec. 7. and 11.

V. 18 Magdalene came and told, &c.] This Evangeliſt recordeth not how Jeſus appeared to her with the other women as they were going to tell theſe things to the diſciples, which, Mat. 28. 9. is recited.

V. 19. Then the ſame day] Mark 16. 14. Luke 24. 36.

when the dooers were ſhut] Shut (either becauſe it was night, or for feare of the Jews) but he could make them open to himſelf, as he afterward did for Peter, Acts 12. 10.

Peace be unto you] This was an Hebrew manner of ſalutation; who by peace, meant all proſperity. See on Matth. 28. 16

V. 20. He ſhewed unto them his hands, &c.] Which were pierced with nails faſtning him to the croſſe: thus confirms he them by all means, that they might be aſſured, that it was he who was indeed riſen from the dead; leſt otherwiſe they might have thought it had been but ſome apparition, or ſome other body, and not he. See on Luke 24. 40.

V. 21. As my Father hath ſent me] He gave them a miſſion, and charge before, but as preachers to warn the Jews to hear Chriſt: but now he ſendeth them as Apoſtles, and Ambaſſadours into the other Nations: committing that miniſtery to their execution, which himſelf had performed in teaching: he appointeth them and their ſucceſſours his ſurrogates in his abſence. See Epheſ. 4. 11. and that their authority to preach, might be underſtood to be Gods own ordinance. he telleth them, that as his Father ſent him, ſo he ſendeth them to preach to all nations in his Name. See chap. 6. 38 Mark 16. 15. Mat. 28, 19. Chriſt ſpeaketh the ſame truth by the Apoſtles and Miniſters of the Goſpel, which his ſelf preached when he was converſant with men on earth.

V 22. he breathed on them] By this ſign prefiguring what they ſhould receive; to wit, the gifts and graces of the holy Spirit, proceeding from the Father and the Son.

V. 23. Whoſoever ſins ye remit] Mat. 18. 18. this power is equally given to all the diſciples,, and their ſucceſſours reſpectively; firſt in reſpect of the doctrine of faith, and repentance, as the key of Heaven committed to their miniſtery, which (according as it is received and obeyed) bindeth or looſeth; if we believe and repent here on Earth, God forgiveth in Heaven; and it is the miniſters office to preach the ſame in general, and to apply it particularly, for the comfort and inſtruction of the truly penitent. Secondly, in reſpect of the power of excommunication and abſolution, which is in diſcipline, that the ſpirit might be ſaved in the day of the Lord, 1 Cor. 5. 5.

V. 24. called Didymus] See on chap. 11. 16. Thomas recited under the character of one of the twelve, is ſpoken of c. 11. 16. we may not underſtand this with relation to the number of the Apoſtles now being; (for Judas was gone to his own place, and Mathias was not yet choſen into his office, Acts 1. 25, 26.) but that which had been, when Jeſus had firſt choſen twelve Apoſtles, according to the number of the Tribes of Iſrael.

was not with them] Probably he was not yet returned (after they had been diſperſed for fear) to the company of the Apoſtles.

V. 25. I will not believe] So dangerous is it to be once abſent from holy aſſemblies where Chriſt will be preſent (Mat. 18. 20.) to indulge to our own ſenſe, to meaſure things divine and ſpiritual by our own carnal reaſon, and to give our ſelves lawes of believing

V. 26. his diſciples were within] Within the houſe where they remained, verſe 19. For they or ſome of them, having been well known to divers in Ieruſalem, they could not ſtir much abroad without great danger; the heat of the Iews rage being yet very little abated; (neither could they before go away out of the city, the feaſt of unleavened bread being not ended) now Thomas, how ever weak, and disbelieving their report and firm teſtimony concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt, the maine and fundamental Article of our belief, yet would he not ſeparate from their conventions.

Ieſus came, &c.] On the eighth day after his reſurrection; that is, the next Lords day. Where Ieſus was in the mean time, the Scriptures being ſilent, we may not curiouſly enquire: more ſafely note that Thomas being then with them it appeareth that neither did he in unbelief ſeparate from the Church repreſentative, nor did they deſert him, or abſtain from communion with him, for ſo great an infirmity as was expreſſed in his profeſſed unbelief: therefore Ieſus came to them who hath promiſed the bleſſing to the unanimous, Pſal 133. and Mat. 18. 19.

V. 27. reach hither thy finger] Chriſt made ſuch uſe of Thomas preſent unbelief, that he thereby left the truth of his reſurrection, more certain and undoubted unto us: mark the admirable clemency of Chriſt, for one ſouls ſake, he would appear again, and ſhew his wounds to all the reſt.

V. 28. my Lord, and my God] Here Thomas confeſſeth his faith (which Chriſt approveth, verſe 29.) veram in illis cicatricibus patientis ac reſurgentis virtutem divinitatis agnoſcens. Fulgent. de incarn. & Gra. D. Ieſu &c. 11. acknowledging in thoſe wounds of him that ſuffered and roſe again. the true power of the deity; without which he could not have riſen again. Thus Thomas ſpake, as one coming to himſelf again: and this abrupt ſpeech importeth a vehement admiration, at Chriſts mercy, and his own ſtupidity and dulneſſe to believe: it containeth a ſhort, but abſolute confeſſion of faith; he collecting from his reſurrection, that Chriſt was the very Meſſias, Redeemer, and Lord of all (See Rom. 1. 4.) and with an explicit faith, profeſſing his own intereſt therein: So far did his faith now excel ſenſe, on which he before ſo much depended, that he who felt onely the manhood, believed and confeſſed the united Deity of Chriſt: ſo ſoon can God change pertinatious unbelief into ſaving faith. See Acts 9. 2. Gal. 1. 23, 24 Thomas twice emphatically repeateth, my, to declare that he now ſpake out of deep and ſerious ſenſe of faith. So God permitteth his to infirmity, and ſome ſlips; as that in their recovery, themſelves and others, are more confirmed See on verſe 27. plus enim nobis Thomæ infidelitas, ad fidem, quam fides credentium diſcipulorum profuit, &c. Greg. hom. 26. in Evang. For Thomas his doubting more advantageth our faith, than the faith of the believing diſciples: If Thomas had not doubted, we had not been ſo aſſured that it was indeed the ſame Chriſt, who was crucified, dead and buried, and riſen again; his doubting, put that out of doubt.

V. 29. they that have not ſeen] Which ſhall hereafter believe through the preaching of the Goſpel, though they ſee me not in the fleſh, or theſe wounds now ſhewed thee.

V. 30. many other ſignes] Chap. 21. 25. He did theſe in the preſence of his diſciples to confirm them; after his reſurrection, we read not, that he ever appeared to the wicked or ſhewed himſelf to them after his reſurrection from the dead: he reſerveth that to their greater terrour in the day of judgement. See Rev. 1. 7. Acts 10. 41.

which are not written in this book] As being ſufficiently recorded by the other Evangeliſts: or foraſmuch as God knew that to be ſufficient which is written. See 2 Tim. 3. 15.

V. 31. But theſe things are written] Theſe things which Jeſus taught and did: as a father (ſaith Optatus l. 5.) having many children, while he liveth, and is preſent with them, governeth them his ſelf, and needeth no will and teſtament; but drawing towards his end, fearing leſt after his deceaſe, his children may fall out, he calleth witneſſes, voluntatem ſuam de pectore morituro transfert in tabulas diu duraturas; out of his dying breſt he tranſlateth his will, on long-laſting tables, if any controverſie happen, non itur ad tumultum, ſed quæritur teſtamentum: & qui in tumulto quieſcit, tacitis de tabulis loquitur vivus: they run not to the grave (of the dead) but ſeek the will and teſtament; and ſo he that reſteth in the grave, in thoſe ſilent tables ſpeakes his mind, as if he were alive: He who made his will is in Heaven; yet thus, his children conſult with him: So Chriſt being bodily preſent with his Church, did teach and govern them; but at laſt ordered that his will and teſtament ſhould be written, for a conſtant rule of faith and manners, to all his children on earth, until his coming again to judge.

that ye may believe] For, faith in Chriſt, and our ſalvation thereby, as it was the onely ſcope and end of Chriſts doing of miracles, ſo was it of the Evangeliſts recording the ſame.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſe 1. S*Ea of Tiberias*] The ſea of Galilee (John 6. 1.) ſo named from that adjacent Province, or City of that name near to it: of old it was named כנרת Chinnereth. Numb 34. 11. Deut. 3. 17. Joſh. 11 2. & 12. 2. Chalde גינוסר Ginnoſar: 70. Κινερὼθ, χινερέθ. See on Luke 5. 1 John 6 1. Jerom de loc. Hebr. calleth it, Chennereth the bound of Judea, in the Tribe of Neptalim: Herod called the city Tiberias, in honour of Tiberias Cæſar, Jerom ib. they ſince called it Tabaria. Adricom. Theatr ter. S. Zabulon, Ptolome, Strabo, and other Greek Authours, call it as in the Goſpel γεννησαρὲτ. Mat. 14. 34. See Tremelius note thereon. Joſeph de bel. Jud. l. 3. c. 18. calleth it Geneſar. Plini. l. 5. c. 15 this lake Geneſar is ſixteen miles long, and ſix miles broad; beſet with pleaſant Towns: on the Weſt thereof ſtood Tiberias; it abounded with divers ſorts of fiſhes: the River Jordan runneth through it. Adricom. q. ſ. the Apoſtles, according to the command of Chriſt, and the admonition of the Angels, after his reſurrection, the dayes of unleavened bread being ended, leaving Jeruſalem, went to Galilee. See Matth. 26. 7. Matthew 26. 32.

on this wiſe ſhewed he] He ſetteth down the time, place, perſons, occaſion, and manner of Chriſts appearing to them, to ſhew the evidence and certainty of his reſurrection.

V. 2. Nathaniel of Cana] See chap 1. 49 Some think this was he who is called alſo Βαρθολομαῖος Bartholmew, the ſon of Toolomeus, of בר bar, a ſon, and תלמי thalmai. Numb. 13. 23. Jud. 1. 10. 70. Θελαμὶ or Θολμὶ.

V. 3. I go a fiſhing] For though they were fiſhers of men, they were not yet ſent out, neither had they received thoſe viſible gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, which were to furniſh them out to that great work of preaching the Goſpel to all Nations: moreover, they wrought in their callings, to ſupply their preſent neceſſities, as Paul alſo ſometimes did, 2 Theſ. 3. 8. See Luke 24. 49. therefore he acquainteth the reſt with his purpoſe, that they might joyne with him; which they accordingly did.

we alſo go with thee] We will goe with thee, and joyne with thee in fiſhing: for albeit the word be of the preſent tenſe; yet becauſe it relateth to an action not preſent, but future, it is well interpreted by the future. It may be the Evangeliſt, who was one of them, would hereby expreſſe their preſent aſſent and readineſſe of mind upon the firſt motion of Peter, as alſo their certain reſolution to go.

that night they caught nothing] Thus the providence of God diſpoſed it, for the more clear evidence of the enſuing miracle: had they caught any thing the power and preſence of Chriſt had not ſo clearly appeared, in this ſudden ſucceſſe: all labour and endeavour of man is vain, unleſſe God bleſſe it with ſucceſſe, Pſal. 127. 1. See Gen. 11. 78. Hag. 1. 6, 9. &c. Deut. 28. 13 &c. God often exerciſeth the patience of his: ſhould all our labours ſucceed well, how few would beg Gods aſſiſtance? how ſeldome would men acknowledge his bleſſings?

V. 4. When the morning was now come] He expected until theſe diſciples (weary with ſucceſſeleſſe labour, and out of hope to get any thing) would leave work; to declare that the opportunity and time which God taketh to ſupply and relieve his, is then, when there appeareth to them leaſt hope of help from ſecond cauſes.

but the diſciples knew not, &c.] Either becauſe it was not yet clear day, or becauſe of the diſtance, they being ſo far from ſhore; but ſpecially becauſe Jeſus would firſt be known by the miracle; and then by his countenance.

V 5. children have ye] Or, Sirs.

have ye any meat?] Have ye taken any thing? have ye any thing to eat? as the Syriac hath it: he asketh as one who came to buy; but his purpoſe was in his eating, to teſtifie his reſurrection from the dead, and to give them aſſurance thereof by a further manifeſtation of himſelfe unto them.

V. 6. caſt the net on the right ſide] Thus he counſelleth them, as ſome ordinary perſon, the right ſide of the ſhip, is that which is one right hand of him that ſitteth at the helme, which the Seamen call the ſtarboard ſide: he aſſigneth one certain part of the ſhip, ne fortuita videretur captura, Euthymius: leſt it ſhould (rather) ſeem that they had taken ſuch a draught by chance, than divine providence.

V. 7. it is the Lord] It is Chriſt who hath thus admirably bleſſed our labours in this draught of fiſhes.

girt his fiſhers coat unto him] Some cloſe linnen coat, which hindred not his ſwimming.

for he was naked] Before he put on this, he had ſome thing on; for we may not ſimply underſtand that he had none other clothes on: 1 Sam. 19. 24. it is ſaid that Saul ſtript off his clothes, and laid down naked all that day and all that night; that is, he put off his Kingly Robe, not all other his clothes. So walked Iſaiah the Prophet, naked, and barefoot, Iſa. 20. 2. that is, without his Prophets garment. We may not think he went ſtark-naked to the diſcovery of his ſhame, and contempt of his perſon: and ſo Peter here was naked; that is, had not on that uſual outward garment with which he uſed to go in publick: except we ſhall underſtand, that he in his work of fiſhing had onely the coat here mentioned on his otherwiſe naked body, which, hearing that it was the Lord, he preſently girded ſo cloſe to him, that it might not hinder his ſwimming aſhore, and ſo hide his nakedneſſe; but this ſheweth with what diligence they had laboured without ſucceſſe, until Chriſt came to them.

caſt himſelf into the ſea] He leapt over-board to ſwim a ſhore, that he might come to Jeſus (which the Syriac addeth) impatient of the delay, which the ſhip muſt neceſſarily make, being to bring ſuch a draught to ſhore: ſerum æſtimans ſi cum cæteris navigio perveniret. Ambroſ. in Luc. ſub. fin. eſteeming it too late to come with the reſt in the ſhip: he valued no gains, but to come to Chriſt.

V. 8. dragging the net with fiſhes] σύρω, is properly to ſweep the ground, as they do who fiſh with trailes, or draught-nets, whoſe plummets ſink the lower part of the net to the ground leſt the encloſed fiſh ſhould eſcape.

V. 9. they ſaw a fire of coals there, &c.] It ſeemeth while they were labouring in an ordinary calling, that Jeſus (ever mindful of his) prepareth food for them by an extraordinary way, againſt they came aſhore, weary and hungry, ſo that they find there all neceſſaries ready: nor need we doubt who provided or how; He being preſent, who prepared Iſrael a table in the wilderneſſe, who fed ſo many thouſands with five loaves and two fiſhes: all creatures obey him; he gave them here an example of his divine providence, which never faileth thoſe that truſt in him. See Exod. 34. 28. 1 King. 19 8. Hebr. 13 5.

V. 10. bring of the fiſh &c.] That they might not neglect his bleſſing, and loſe that which he gave them, nor think that it was a viſion: he biddeth them bring of the fiſh which they had now caught; it was his bleſſing, and their labour: his beneficence, and their propriety: ſo we ſay our daily bread, yet pray God to give it: that is ours, in which Chriſt giveth us, a Divine, and civil right.

V. 11. Simon Peter went] Not he alone, but he with the reſt: he chiefly is named, (who in zeal to enjoy the preſence of Chriſt, waved the uſuall means of coming to him) and is now inſtructed to uſe the ordinary means to receive, and ſave Gods bleſſings, beſtowed on him. Chriſt would not diſtract us from, but bleſſe us in our lawful callings, that we may therein acknowledge his mercifull providence. See 1 Tim. 4. 4.

V. 12. Come and dine] Not that he now wanted food, but this was to aſſure them of the truth of his manhood then preſent, that they might not think it to be onely a dream or phantaſme; but that they might be evidently aſſured of his reſurrection from the dead.

knowing that it was the Lord] He ſo evidently manifeſted himſelf to them, that they durſt not queſtion the certainty of his reſurrection and preſence with them.

V. 13. taketh bread] They knew him in the manner of his breaking of bread. See Luke 24. 35.

V. 14. this is now the third time] That is, the third time that he appeared to his Diſciples together, for otherwiſe he had more often appeared to ſome ſingly, chapter 20. 16. Luke 24. 15.

V. 15. loveſt thou me more than theſe] More than thou loveſt theſe; or more than theſe love me: one reaſon of this quere might be; for that Peter leaping into the Sea to come to him before the reſt, might ſeem to intimate ſo much: but the maine is, becauſe Chriſt had remitted a great ſinne of his. See Luke 7. 47 feed my lambs] That is, the ſouls committed to thy charge: for this is a ſure argument of the Miniſters love to Chriſt, if he conſcionably labour to edifie thoſe whom Chriſt (the great ſhepherd of our ſouls) loveth, and for whom he dyed, they love the world, not Chriſt, who ſeek their own gains, but neglect their auditours ſalvation; this Peter now learned, and afterward faithfully taught it others in the like miniſtration to them given in charge, 1 Pet. 1. 5. 1. 2. &c.

V. 16. feed my ſheep] The repetition of the ſame charge, ſheweth the importance thereof; and the neceſſity of our endeavour in this duty, which Chriſt ſo often, and ſo ſeriouſly enjoyned him and all other faithful Paſtors and Miniſters of the Goſpel, in and by him.

V. 17. he ſaid unto him the third time] This often repetition of the charge doth not onely occaſion Peters threefold confeſſion, oppoſed to his thrice denying; but chiefly declareth to the other Apoſtles, that Peter was not to be rejected from their fellowſhip, office, and communion, for his threefold fall; being graciouſly received again by Chriſt, in his threefold confeſſion of his love and obedience to him: and thus is waſhed off his former ſinne, confirming him to his Apoſtleſhip and preaching the Goſpel.

Peter was greived, becauſe, &c] Remembring how he had fallen, and fearing leſt he ſhould ſo fall again as he had done when he promiſed great conſtancy; or doubting that Chriſt (to whom he was better known than to himſelf) taxed him of diſſembling: we grieve to have our fidelity queſtioned. Peter had been more cautious at firſt, had he well obſerved Chriſts words, Mat. 26. 34. but he had not then ſo much experience of himſelf, as now: now he cautiouſly appealeth to Chriſts omniſcience; he preſumeth no more; moſt dangerouſly they fall, who moſt preſume.

Lord, thou knoweſt all things] τὰ παρόντα ϗ τὰ μέλλοντα, Chryſoſt. all things preſent and future: what I now am, and what I ſhall be: thus modeſtly anſwereth he now, having had dear experience of his infirmity and failing.

V. 18. girdeſt thy ſelf] This he ſpake, alluding to the manner of thoſe Eaſtern Countries, where wearing long looſe garments, they could at their pleaſure, gird them to their bodies, to prepare themſelves for labour or travel, and withal, in the next words, to the binding of Peter, as a priſoner for execution, and ſuffering martyrdome for the teſtimony of the truth of the Lord Jeſus.

whither thou wouldſt not] τῆς φύσεως λέγει τὸ συμπαθὲς, ϗ τῆς σαρκὸς τὴν ἀνάγκην, &c. Chryſ. He ſpeaks the affection of nanature, and neceſſity of fleſh and blood; intimating that the ſoul unwillingly parteth from the body, how ever willing, by the comfort of the grace of regeneration, we are in Spirit.

V. 19. he ſhould glorifie, God] This he ſaid that we may know, that to ſuffer for Chriſts ſake is δόξα τοῦ πάσχοντος ϗ τιμή, the glory and honour of the ſufferer; in that he honoureth God in ſuffering, which is the end for which we were created and redeemed. See 1 Cor. 6. 20. Revel. 4. 11. and thoſe who honour God, will he aſſuredly honour, 1 Sam. 2. 30.

V. 20. Whom Jeſus loved] Chap. 13. 23. and 20. 2.

V. 21. What ſhall this man do?] That is, ſhall he not alſo feed thy ſheep? ſhall he be divided from me? or how ſhall he die?

V. 22. What is that to thee] He ſlighteth this curious unprofitable queſtion of Peter: admoniſhing him not to trouble himſelf about others, but to look to himſelf: if I would have him live unto my ſecond coming; what concerneth it thee? follow thou me in that I command thee.

V. 23. then went this ſaying abroad] The Evangeliſt here correcteth this errour riſing from the miſunderſtanding Chriſts words concerning himſelf; leſt when he died the malitious adverſary ſhould hence take occaſion to aſperſe the truth of Chriſt, whom the very Diſciples underſtood not, but miſtook in that matter: man is naturally prone to miſtake: the more to be admired, is their overdaring ignorance of themſelves, who think they cannot erre: ſo high an opinion of a mans ſelf concludeth him, neither good, nor wiſe.

V. 24. This is the diſciple which teſtifieth] Hitherto he mentioneth himſelf under a third perſon: now he declareth himſelf, an ear-witneſſe, and an eye-witneſſe, of that which he wrote for the greater certainty thereof. The Apoſtles doctrine is certain, his modeſty is obſervable; he calleth himſelfe a diſciple, a learner, who excelled the moſt accompliſhed Doctors, of the ages ſince: John Baptiſt called himſelfe the voice of a cryer in the wilderneſſe, chap. 1. 23. Peter and Paul, thoſe great lights of the Church and Apoſtles of Chriſt called themſelves, ſervants of Chriſt, Rom. 1. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 1. &c. what Spirit ruleth in thoſe vain-glorious Prelates, who think no titles high enough for them?

V. 25. there are alſo] Chap. 20. 30.

the world it ſelfe could not contain] Herein he followeth the vulgar manner of ſpeaking, as chap. 12. 19. the meaning of the hyperbole is, there would be very many books: moreover, he here glanceth at the depth of ſome myſteries, in the words and actions of Chriſt, which the world could not have apprehended, had they been written, which are to be put on account to thoſe things which are reſerved to be revealed unto us in the world to come; When that which is perfect is come, and that which is in part ſhall be done away, when we ſhall know, even as alſo we are known, 1 Cor. 13. 10, 12.

ANNOTATIONS

On the ACTS of the APOSTLES.

The Argument.

T*He Penman of this* Scripture was Luke the Evangeliſt (as appeareth in the firſt words hereof) for the moſt part, an Eye-witneſſe of theſe Things he recordeth, being conſtantly a fellow-Labourer with Paul.

His purpoſe in writing this Story, was, (as he intimateth in his firſt Preface) That the Church might have the certain knowledge of Chriſt, his Goſpel and Kingdom, that our Faith might not be built on the uncertain reports of Pretenders to Truth; As alſo, That he might ſhew how God fulfilled his promiſe in calling the Gentiles, and the Apoſtles, their Charge and Office, by Preaching the Goſpel to all Nations: And that he might fore-arm all the Faithfull, by diſcovering the rage and malice of Satan, perſecuting the true Miniſters and Profeſſours of the Goſpel, even from the firſt publication thereof: And the gracious providence of God, preſerving and increaſing his Church, in the midſt of all her preſſures, giving us an evident aſſurance of the truth of the Goſpel, not only in that the powers of Hell, all the machinations of Satan, and malice of wicked men, could never prevail againſt it; but alſo, that Gods providence, by theſe oppoſitions, confirmed it to the hearts of Chriſtians, in the conſtancy of thoſe that ſuffered perſecution for it.

This Story ſetteth out.

1. The Truth of Chriſt after his Aſcenſion; performing his Promiſe to the Apoſtles, ſending the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter, unto them.
2. The malice of Satan, labouring to ſuppreſſe the Goſpel, by raiſing up tumults, conſpiracies, ſlanders, perſecutions, and (where he could not prevaile by violence) Hereticks to corrupt the Truth thereof.
3. The vigilant providence and power of God over his Church, overthrowing the malicious enterpriſes of the enemies, and filling the world with the ſound of the Goſpel, by ſo few unlearned men.
4. The many divine Sermons of the Apoſtles and Diſciples, concerning the Death, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion and Kingdom of Chriſt, the Mercy of God in the free Remiſſion of our ſins by him, the Immortality to come: Care that Miniſters ought to have of Chriſts flock, Repentance and Fear of God, and other principal Grounds of Faith, that we bearing our trials patiently (knowing that the Croſſe uſually accompanieth the Goſpel) and reſting confident in his mercy, who is unchangeably the ſame good God to his now, that he was to the firſt Chriſtians) we may at laſt attain the end of our hopes, the ſalvation of our Bodies and Soules. Which He grant us, who gave ſo great a price for our Redemption, as the unvaluable Blood of Chriſt Jeſus. AMEN.

CHAP. I.

Verſe 1. T*He former treatiſe have I made*] That is, the Goſpel by Saint Luke.

all that Jeſus began] This is, not ſimply to be underſtood, of all that Jeſus did and ſaid; for John chap. 21. 25. declareth it impoſſible; but of ſome things, which Jeſus began to do and teach, that is, as Chyſoſtome interpreteth, from the beginning to the end; from the ſtory of Chriſts birth, unto the relation of his reſurrection, Luke wrote in the Goſpel: but yet he ſaith not πάντα, all things, but περὶ πάντων, concerning all, that is, ἁδρομερῶς ϗ παχυμερῶς, or παχυτέρως, craſsâ Minervâ, groſſely, or ſummarily, to wit, of all that which the Holy Ghoſt thought neceſſary to dictate. Chryſoſt. To reveal and make known unto me concerning the Goſpel of Chriſt, and which his pleaſure was, that I ſhould write, for the edification of his Church.

both to do and to teach] That is, Chriſts doctrine, and miracles for the confirmation of the ſame.

V. 2. taken up] Into heaven, by his aſcenſion, Luke 24. 51. which ſtory he now more particularly proſecuteth, as alſo thoſe things which, in further order to edification of his Church, followed the ſame in the Actions of the Apoſtles, and the ſucceſſe of their preaching according to the commandment of Chriſt, Mat. 28. 19, 20. Mark 16. 15.

after that he through the holy Ghoſt had given commandements, &c.] Some otherwiſe joyn theſe words (through the holy Ghoſt) with the following, (whom he had choſen) ſo the Syriack hath it, quos elegit in ſpiritu ſancto: whom he choſe by the holy Ghoſt, both are true, therefore here needs no controverſie: the rule is, that the works of the holy Trinity ad extra, are common to the three perſons; ſo the Father ſanctifieth, John 10. 36. the Son ſanctifieth, John 17. 19. 1 Cor. 6. 11 and the holy Ghoſt ſanctifieth, Rom 15. 16. and ſo the Father calleth, the Son calleth, and the holy Ghoſt calleth: ſo the Father commandeth, the Son commandeth, and the holy Ghoſt commandeth: the firſt reading, teacheth, that the Apoſtles commiſſion to preach and do miracles was from the holy Ghoſt, and therefore their word is to be valued as his word and infallible truth: the ſecond way of reading, ſheweth, that the Apoſtles calling or election to their miniſtery was not of any humane, but divine authority: neither is the calling and ordination of any faithfull Miniſter grounded on humane, but divine authority wherein albeit God uſeth the miniſtery of man, as in impoſition of hands in their conſecration, or preſentation, inſtitution or induction, into ſome paticular cure; yet as God alone can give them ability to miniſter, and power and ſucceſſe in their miniſtring, ſo he onely calleth thereto, (or they are not rightly called, but are hirelings & intruders: See Act. 20 28.) and their authority to preach dependeth not on the authority of man but God: however the ordinance of God in men of authority thereto, may not be deſpiſed, nor can without contempt of God himſelf: Luke 10. 16. ſo then we may underſtand this place thus, that God to the Apoſtles gave command to preach the Goſpel, and execute that function and charge which he had given them.

V 3. by many infallible proofs] Τεκμηρίοις the word is of τέκμαρ, an end, and importeth ſuch undoubted ſignes, as neceſſarily, and conſtantly importing one and the ſame thing (Ariſt. Rhet. l. 1) conclude and put an end to any doubt, or controverſie; as to ſpeak walk or eat and drink, are τεκμήρια, undoubted ſignes, and proof of life,&c. See Quintilian l. 5. c.19. Suidas giveth it by ἀπόδειξις, a demonſtration: ſuch proofs of Chriſts reſurrection were, their ſeeing Chriſt, talking, eating vvith him, and touching him after the ſame.

pertaining to the kingdome of God] What the Apoſtles vvere afterward to deliver to the vvorld, either in preaching, or vvriting; whereby God may reign in us here by grace; and ſuch as concern our being vvith him in future glory.

V. 4. aſſembled together with them] Converſing vvith them; having gathered them together (vvho vvere diſperſed vvith fear) that they might novv be vvitneſſes of his aſcenſion into heaven.

not depart] Or ſeparate themſelves. The Greek vvord μὴ χωρίζεσθαι, ſignifieth, both that they ſhould not divide or diſperſe themſelves, nor depart from Ieruſalem; vvhere he vvould have them receive that admirable gift of tongues, as Chap. 2. becauſe at the feaſt there uſed to be a very great confluence of people from ſeveral parts of the world,& many nations who might be conpetent witneſſes of their ſpeaking of divers tongues, which in ſome more private place they had not had; and that by this meanes, they who were ſtrangers (of ſeverall nations) at Jeruſalem, returning home again, and reporting that which they heard and ſaw, might ſo farre prepare thoſe nations for their reception of the Goſpel.

but wait for the promiſe] That which the Father had promiſed; that is, the holy Ghoſt; as verſe 5.

which, ſaith he, ye have heard of me] Which I have told you of. Luke 24. 49 John 14. 15. & 16.

power. after the holy Ghoſt is come upon you] Or the power of the holy Ghoſt coming upon you: gifts of tongues, healing, interpretation, boldneſſe to preach, enlarged hearts, &c.

uttermoſt part of the earth] Both to the Jewes and Gentiles, according to their commiſſion. Mark 16, 15.

V: 9. and when he had ſpoken] Luke 24. 51. they ſaw him riſen, not riſing; and aſcending, not aſcended; the one perfected, the other begun.

a cloud received him,&c.] The Apoſtles lookt after him aſcending, untill a cloud intercepted their ſight of him.

V. 10. two men ſtood by them in white apparell] Two Angels in the ſhape of men. See Mark 16.5. Luke 24. 4. John 20. 12.

V. 11. into heaven] To which he is gone to take poſſeſſion for us,by carrying thither the ſame fleſh & blood of which we conſiſt.

ſhall ſo come] At the laſt day, he ſhall locally come, in the ſame body, manifeſtly appearing in the clouds. 1 Theſ. 4. 16, 17. Mat. 24. 38.

V. 12. a ſabbath-dayes journey] How farre it was lawfull to walk on the ſabbath day, the law of God determined not; but their tradition limited it to two thouſand cubits, or about two miles. John 11. 18. it appeareth, that Bethany was fifteen furlongs, that is, almoſt two miles from Jeruſalem; and Luke 24. 50. So far did Chriſt lead them out, when he would aſcend, which is here called a ſabbath-dayes journey: ſo that either Chriſt having taken leave at Bethany, came back thence with them, and aſcended from the mount of Olives, which lyeth between it and Jeruſalem; or elſe the ſabbath-dayes journey here mentioned, muſt be two miles wanting one furlong; though ſome learned authours ſay otherwiſe.

V. 13. they went up into an upper room] εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον, a room in the top of the houſe, where they might be freeſt from diſtraction by company coming in and out,and alſo moſt private and ſecure from the Jews, who having put their Maſter to death, would not ſpare any that ſhould confeſſe him to be the Chriſt.

Peter, and James, and John, &c.] Probably the Evangeliſt recounteth their names, to ſhew that Chriſt had not rejected them, for their forſaking him in his ſuffering; but that they were reſtored to their former office and dignity, that none might derogate from the authority of their preaching or writing.

and Judas brother James] Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου: Judas of James, an uſuall ellipſis; the Syriac ſupplyeth it with בר bar: ſon of Iames; it may be both his fathers and brothers name was Iames; it was the ſame who is called Lebbeus, and Thaddeus. Mat. 10. 3. Mark 3. 18. Jude 1. his relation to Iames is here mentioned to diſtinguiſh him from the other Iudas the traytour.

V. 14, continued with one accord, &c.] The word is of καρτερεῖν, ſignifying a continuance in performing or ſuffering ſome thing, with an invincible and ſtrong conſtancy.

in prayer and ſupplication] Their hazard was then very great; their implacable enemies about them, many, and thoſe alſo in authority: Chriſt had often warned them to watch and pray, leſt they entred into tentation; therefore thus take they up the armour of Chriſtians, unanimous prayer; what they prayed, is not mentioned; probably amongſt other bleſſings; it was for deliverance from their enemies, as chap. 4. 24. and for the coming of the holy Ghoſt the comforter, which he had promiſed them, and for which he commanded them to ſtay at Jeruſalem.

with the women] Thoſe who went to follow the Lord (Luke 8. 2. 3.) and the Apoſtles wives.

with his brethren] That is, Chriſt his kinſmen according to the fleſh: poſſibly thoſe of whom it vvas ſaid, John 7. 5. that they believed not in him: God hath his times to call.

V. 15. in thoſe dayes] While they attended at Jeruſalem for the promiſed comforter.

which the holy Ghoſt, &c.] By him were all the holy ſcriptures endited. 2 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 21. Now leſt any ſhould be ſcandaled at the fall of Iudas; Peter beginneth from the ancient Propheſie, to ſhew that it was the ſame which was long before Propheſied of; all vvas foreſeen and ordered by the providence of God, to accompliſh the work of our redemption. See chap. 4. 28.

guide to them which took Ieſus] Mat. 26. 47, 48. John 18. 2, 3. For he undertook for thirty pieces of ſilver, for which the chief Prieſts had contracted with him to deliver him unto them, and he well knowing the place, the garden which Chriſt with his diſciples frequented, led the officers and ſoldiers thither to take him; and he gave them the ſignall by which they knew him.

V. 17. for he was numbred with us] Chriſt had choſen 12. Apoſtles, according to the number of the tribes of Iſrael, of whom they ſhall be judges. Mat, 19. 28. Therefore one falling away, they were to choſe another, which election Peter here propoſeth unto the reſt, and the Church there aſſembled: he ſaith Iudas was numbred with them; that is, choſen to be one of the twelve.

obtained a part of this miniſtery] That is, was appointed to the ſame Miniſtery of the Goſpel with them.

V. 18. Now this man purchaſed a field] Mat. 27. 7 This the Evangeliſt Luke ſpeaketh in reſpect of the event: becauſe with the thirty pieces (the price of blood) a field was bought by the Prieſts, for the burial of ſtrangers. Mat. 27. 6, 7, 8.

falling headlong] Caſting himſelf from the place where he hanged himſelf. Mat. 27. 5.

V. 19. in ſo much as that field is called in their proper tongue, &c.] The Syriack giveth it,in the tongue of that region; thus it was publickly named in their own tongue: he ſaith not in our tongue, but in their &c. to point out the conſciouſneſſe of the authours of this piety. See Mat, 27. 7, 8.

Aceldama] Haceldama,or Aceldama is a name compounded of two Syriack words, חקל (which in the Chalde and Syriack ſignifieth a field, of the Hebrew root חלק chalack, diviſit in partes, hareditatem &c. thence by a metatheſis and tranſpoſition of letters חקל chakel a part,portion,or field; or poſſeſſion of fields divided from others. Iſai. 61. 7. Hoſ. 5. 7.) and דם, dam blood: Peter alſo might ſay it is called in their proper tongue,or dialect (See ch. 2. 8.) in regard he was a Galilean; their pronunciation ſomewhat differing from that about Jeruſalem: therefore had they ſo urged that he was a Galilean, and one of Chriſts diſciples, for (ſaid they) thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee. V. 21. went in and out amongſt us] Or was converſant with us as man; and preached unto us. See Deut. 31. 2. 2 Chron. 1. 10. &c.

V. 22. From the Baptiſme of Iohn] From the time that Chriſt was baptized of Iohn, Mat. 3. 16. Luke 4. thence began Chriſts publick Miniſtery.

of his reſurrection] In that he mentioneth the principal article of our faith (ſee 1 Cor. 15. 14) he comprehendeth all the reſt.

V. 23. they appointed two] The before mentioned Apoſtles: put two in election, that is, Ioſeph called Barſabas and Matthias.

V. 24. and they prayed] Becauſe the Apoſtles were immediately choſen by God, therefore they here pray God to direct the lot, for the choyce of one in Iudas room.

V. 25. that he may take part &c.] See verſe 17. that he may be a partner with us, in our Apoſtleſhip and Miniſtery: here κλῆρος, is put for μέρος, a part, or partnerſhip.

his own place] To hell and eternall damnation, to which God who foreſeeth all things,had juſtly deſigned the traytour. See Pſal. 9. 17.

V. 26. they gave forth their lots] Lots were ſeveral wayes drawn or given out, either from the lap. Prov. 16. 33. or ſome veſſel, an urne, pot, or head-piece: however, as they were in uſe for diviſion of lands or goods, or for compoſing of any controverſie, God diſpoſed them, Prov. 16. 33. therefore Auguſtine ſaid well, lots are nothing elſe: but in rebus dubiis indicatio divinæ voluntatis, the declaration of Gods will in things doubtfull: they are here called, their lots, after the common uſe of ſpeaking, in reſpect of the two, put into election for Judas place for Apoſtleſhip.

he was numbred with the eleven, &c.] Or acknowledged to be one of the twelve Apoſtles; συγκατεψηφίσθη: as they ſay, communibus calculis eſt electus: the word is of ψῆφος, a ſtone or counter, with which they were wont to give voyces in commiſſions or judgments: ſometimes it is taken for the event determined by lot, as here it is intimated; they all reſted contented vvith the lot, as being cunfident, that God diſpoſed and approved the event thereof: he vvas numbred vvith the eleven Apoſtles, by a common declaration of their general conſent.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. P*Entecoſt was fully come*] When the fiftieth day from the Paſſeover vvas come. See Deut. 16. 9. Levit.23. 15. which time God choſe to ſend the holy Ghoſt; much people being then gathered to Jeruſalem, that it might be divulged to the world. See on chap. 1. 4.

they were all &c.] The Apoſtles; for this was divinely and extraordinarily to conſecrate and fit them who were to preach the Goſpel to all nations.

V. 2. a ſound from heaven &c.] This preternatural winde God ſent before, as it were a meſſenger to ſtirre them up to attention, and to give them notice of the coming and preſence of the holy Ghoſt: alſo to intimate in the type, the ſpeedy, unexpected, and unreſiſtible ſucceſſe of the Goſpel; and that the whole diſpenſation thereof ſhould be by the power and providence of God.

V. 3. tongues] The ſimilitude or appearance of tongues, to ſignifie their gift of tongues, or ſpeaking divers languages; miraculouſly infuſed into them who were to preach to divers nations; as a remedy for the confuſion of tongues. Gen. 11.7. by which a great part of the world was ſeparated from communion with God and his Church.

of fire] To ſignifie the admirable force which ſhould be therein, by the ſpirit of God.

V. 4. filled with the holy Ghoſt] With his gifts and graces; with a greater and more admirable acceſſe and increaſe thereof; more abundant knowledge of the myſteries of ſalvation by Chriſt, which before they did not ſo well apprehend; greatneſſe of mind and conſtancy, to do and endeavour all things for the teſtimony of the truth of Chriſt; the gift of tongues, largeneſſe of heart, and admirable utterance; power and evidence of the ſpirit in preaching and praying.

to ſpeak with other tongues] Beſides their mother tongue, they ſpake languages which they never ſtudied, or underſtood before that moment: ſo it was promiſed. Mark 16.17. and ſo it was neceſſary that they might be able to ſpeak the tongue of every nation to whom they were to preach the Goſpel.

V, 5. dwelling at Jeruſalem, Jews devout men out of every nation] They were of Jewiſh parents, though they were born, or had dwelt in other nations; theſe came up from divers nations, or were of divers nations hereafter mentioned. and were at Jeruſalem at the feaſt.

under heaven] That is every nation; this hyperbole is familiar with the Hebrews. See Deut. 2. 25. thus was fulfilled that which was ſaid by Iſaias. Chap.43. verſe 5,6.

V. 6. when this was noyſed abroad] γενομένης δὲ τῆς φωνῆς ταύτης, when this voyce was made; that is the report and rumour of theſe things, being ſpread abroad, or ſpoken of among the people, to wit, how the Apoſtles ſpake all languages upon the ſodain; when this was voyced abroad.

confounded] Or troubled in minde: or as verſe 7. amazed, and marvelled, foraſmuch as they knew not the cauſe thereof, nor what theſe things would come to at laſt.

V. 7. are not all theſe which ſpeak, Galileans?) Theſe which ſpeak ſeveral languages; are they not ſuch as have been conſtantly bred in Galilee, and never learned theſe tongues at home, nor travelled abroad to gain them?

V.8. how hear we every man] Not that in the ſound of one voice, every man heard his native language, as if one and the ſame word ſpoken by Peter, ſhould ſound Greek to the Grecian, Latine to the Roman, Egyptian to the Egyptian (for ſo had this been a miraculous gift of interpretation, or ſpeaking, in the hearers, (the people) not in the Apoſtles, the ſpeakers) but becauſe every Apoſtle now ſpake all languages, as occaſion and the auditory ſerved him.

V. 9. Parthians, and Medes] For the greater evidence of the miracle, he inſtanceth in thoſe men of ſeveral nations, now preſent at Jeruſalem, and ear-witneſſes of theſe things.

V. 10. Proſelytes] Gentiles converted to the Iſraelites Religion. See Mat.23. 15.

V. 11. the wonderfull works of God] τὰ μεγαλεῖα τοῦ θεοῦ, as Luke 1. 49. the Syr. giveth it, mirabilia Dei: he meaneth the Goſpel, the wonderful counſel of God for mans ſalvation in Chriſt; which Paul calleth the power of God. Rom. 1. the hidden myſtery. Eph. 3. 3. the unſearchable riches of Chriſt. Eph. 1. 18. So that here are noted two cauſes of their wondring, firſt that unlearned men, bred in ſuch a place as Galilee ſhould ſodainly ſpeak ſo many tongues: Secondly, that they were able to ſpeak ſo deeply, wiſely, learnedly, and divinely in thoſe heavenly matters.

V. 12. what meaneth this?] What will this come to? what will this be? ſome of theſe were to be converted, and therefore it may be they ſpake not as contemning, but enquiring what might be the end, uſe, and fruit of theſe new and admirable things.

V. 13. others mocking] Cavilling; and calumniating the Apoſtles; theſe moſt likely, were of the Scribes and Phariſees, men of carnall wiſdom (which is ever enmity to God) juſtly delivered up to Spiritual blindneſſe, and ſuch hardneſſe of heart, that nothing (no not the moſt evident teſtimony of Gods power and preſence) could move them: thus are there ever ſome ſuch impudent adverſaries of truth, that will not be afraid to jeere at the gifts of Gods own Spirit, and vilifie his Miniſters; See Joh 6. 41. Joh. 8. 13. & 10. 20. & 11. 37. Mat. 11. 9. there is nothing ſo holy and ſacred which precipitate malice, dareth not blaſpheme.

full of new wine] γλεύκους which the vulgar Latine, and Eraſmus giveth muſto, ſo the word ſometimes ſignifies Muſt, or new wine: alſo it ſignifieth ſweet, or pleaſing wine, as the Prophet Iſai. 49. 26. uſeth עסיס haſis, which (though the 70. give οἶνον νέον; new wine) we there interpret ſweet-wine.

V. 14. But Peter ſtanding up with the eleven] The holy Ghoſt had now confirmed and emboldened him, ſo that without fear of Prieſts and Phariſees, he ſtood up that he might be heard of the multitude, with the reſt of the Apoſtles, as witneſſes of the ſame things, and partakers of the ſame gifts of the holy Ghoſt, and ſpeaketh with a loud voyce.

V. 15. Theſe are not drunken] Firſt he cleareth himſelf and the reſt of the Apoſtles from that unworthy calumny of drunkenneſſe which they caſt on them; and that mildly, as 1 Sam. 1. 13, 14, 15. Acts 26. 24, 25.

but the third hour of the day] Meaning but early dayes; the third hour according to their account (who reckoned the hours from ſun-riſing, and ſo made them longer in ſummer, and ſhorter in winter) might be, as with us, about nine of the clock in the morning: as if he had ſaid, they that are drunken, are drunken in the night. 1 Theſ. 5. 7. now it is but early in the morning.

V. 16. This is that which is ſpoken by the Prophet Joel] This which you conceive to be drunkenneſſe, is the gift of Gods holy Spirit, foretold by the Prophet Joel. 2. 28. it is herein fulfilled.

V. 17. it ſhall come to paſſe] See Iſai 44. 3. he waſheth off the the unjuſt aſperſion, by interpreting and applying the propheſie: and ſheweth their impudency, who durſt deride the very mercies of God powred out on his Church.

in the laſt dayes] When the Meſſias ſhall be exhibited in the fleſh, for ſo thoſe dayes are accounted in the new Teſtament, 2 Tim. 3. 1. Hebr. 1. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 3. 1 John. 2. 18. Jud. 18,

I will powre out] I will give graces, in abundant meaſure. The meaning is, that God under the Goſpel would give a greater meaſure of his grace and holy ſpirit than formerly he had done: greater knowledge, and clearer demonſtration of the truth concerning the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation by Chriſt, which before lay under the ſhadowes of the ceremonial law. Moſes ſaid, Deut. 32. 2. My doctrine ſhall drop as the rain: my ſpeech ſhall diſtill as the dew, as the ſmall rain upon the tender herbs, but here he ſaid by the Prophets, Iſai. 44. 3. Joel 2. 28. I will powre out my ſpirit upon all fleſh. So are there here two parts of the antitheſis: firſt in this word powring as if it had been ſaid, under the law God gave grace and knowledge of Chriſt; but ſparingly, not in that abundant meaſure as ſince Chriſt the branch, as it were the golden pipe, emptied his fulneſſe into his Church. The other part is in the univerſality of the receivers; the law was confined to Iudæa, but the Goſpel, like an overflowing flood, ſhall extend to all fleſh, all nations of the world.

upon all fleſh] Upon all ſorts of people, Jewes, and Gentiles, bond and free, high and low, &c.

young men ſhall ſee viſions] Dreames, and viſions, were one ordinary meanes whereby God revealed his will to the Prophets. Numbers 12. 6. So we muſt underſtand the Prophets ſpeaking of things to come, attemperated to the capacity of the preſent times wherein they preached and wrote: ſo when they ſpeak of Gods ſervice, they name; altars, ſacrifices, gold, ſilver, incenſe, &c. all which when they relate to times of the Goſpel, are to be underſtood, as alluſions to legal rites, not proprieties of the Goſpel: ſo that here, dreames, and viſions import excellent gifts of the Spirit, and underſtanding of things revealed by the Holy Ghoſt: as if he ſaid, under the Goſpel, there ſhall not be a few Prophets or Miniſters, to whom (as of old) God will reveale his will; many ſhall know it, as Jerem. 31. 34. there ſhall be a cleare revelation of Gods will in Chriſt: ſo that the Apoſtles purpoſe in citing this propheſie is, to invite his hearers to a participation of the ſame grace, as if he ſaid; the ſame Spirit which God hath now powred out on us, he is ready to poure out on others, far and near; ſo that, except your ſelves hinder your ſelves by your obſtinacy and unbelief, you ſhall alſo receive of the ſame fountain with us; the ſame graces. God ſtill offereth, and reſpectively beſtoweth now on his Church, in the Spirit of ſanctification, though not in the faith of miracles.

V. 18. and on my ſervants] So he limiteth and reſtraineth the promiſes to Gods ſervants only, to them that believe and obey, of what ſex or condition ſoever they are; Men, women, Bond, Free, all are one in Chriſt. See Gal. 3. 28.

V. 19. and I will ſhew wonders in heaven] As he had two ſorts of hearers, ſo uſeth he two kindes of arguments: to the holy he citeth Gods promiſes; to the wicked he urgeth his threatnings, to terrifie thoſe ſcorners, and to bring them to repentance: he nameth certain prodigies, as preſages of Gods wrath, and the callamities of men in the laſt dayes; ſome in heaven, as theſe fearful Chaſma's, Comets, Blazing-ſtars, and ſtrange eclipſes of the Sun and Moon; which though they have natural cauſes, in the ordinary power of God, yet are they ſometimes extraordinary and certain tokens of Gods anger, and ſome imminent miſeries coming on men: it is indeed but the voyce of experience, Nunquam futilibus excanduit ignibus æther. By ſignes on earth, he meaneth earthquakes, inundations, monſtrous births, and ſuch prodigious and monſtrous things. And the Prophet by thoſe expreſſions, blood, fire, vapour of ſmoke, darkneſſe of the Sun, and bloody or red colour of the Moon, intimated a turbulent and calamitous condition of the World in the laſt times; ſo that whither ſoever wee ſhall look, they ſhall ſee the terrible ſignes and effects of Gods anger, as if the whole fabrick of the World were upon the point of confuſion and diſſolution. See Iſai. 13. 10. 25. 34. Ezek. 32. 7. Joel 3. 15. Amos 8. 9. Mat. 24. 29. Luke 21. 11.

V. 20. the ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſſe,] Joel 2. 31. Meaning, that God will ſhew ſuch ſignes of his wrath through all the world, that man ſhall be no leſſe amazed, than if the whole order of Nature were changed, or the Sun darkened.

V. 21. whoſoever ſhall call upon, &c.] Joel 2. 32. Romans 10. 13. He ſheweth the onely way to eſcape thoſe evils threatned, faithful and fervent prayers: the Name of the Lord importeth all his Attributes, Wiſdom, Power, Mercy, &c. the only ſanctuary in diſtractions, fears, and dangers, is calling on the Name of the Lord in faithful and fervent prayer.

V. 22. Jeſus of Nazareth, &c.] Now he cometh to his purpoſe, which was to ſhew, that Chriſt whom they crucified, was the true Meſſias promiſed by all the Prophets, by whoſe merit and beneficence, thoſe gifts of tongues, &c. were now poured out on his Apoſtles; and that therefore this was the accepted time and day of ſalvation, of which the Prophet Joel fore-ſpake; alſo that if they meant to be ſaved, they muſt not neglect and over-ſlip it; he nameth Chriſt, Jeſus of Nazareth, to the end that they might plainly know that he ſpake of that very Jeſus, whom they in ſcorn and contempt called Jeſus of Nazareth, and upon whoſe croſſe they fixed that title, a man approved of God among you] He doth not preſently affirm that Jeſus is the Meſſias, but cometh to it by degrees: firſt ſaying that he was a man approved of God: as appeared by his miracles, of which the Jewes themſelves were witneſſes.

V. 23. by the determinate counſell, &c.] chap. 4. 28, Not that the counſel of God herein excuſed the Jews, or Judas wickedneſſe, ſeeing God wrought not in them, but by them, making good uſe (for mans redemption) of that they did wickedly. He mentioneth here the determinate counſell of God, as chap. 4. 28. to let them know who were to beleeve to ſalvation that the ſufferings of Chriſt were neither caſual, nor by any counſel or power of man, as their firſt or principal cauſe, but of Gods good providence, he was delivered to the power of Jews and other ſinners of the heathens, that they crucifying him, Gods juſtice being ſatisfied in his death, we might be ſaved from the curſe of the law and death eternall.

ye have taken] Thus he would ſmite their conſciences, not yet acquainting them with the end and fruit of Gods counſell herein; leſt the Jewes ſhould think, either that Chriſt was not of God or that Gods determinate counſel excuſed their fact; he ſaith, ye have taken, and by wicked hands, &c.

V. 24. whom God hath raiſed up] Now cometh he to prove him to be the true Meſſias, by his reſurrection from the dead. See Rom. 1. 4, for none but he that was God and man (Immanuel. Iſai. 7. 14. Mat. 1. 23.) could raiſe himſelf from the dead.

the pains of death] Meaning the power of death, and bands of the grave.

V. 25. I fore-ſaw the Lord] Pſal. 16. 8. Hebr. שויתי ſhivithi, I have ſet. 70. προωρώμην, I foreſaw. So here.

on my right hand] Or at my right hand Ever ready to help me. The meaning is, that in all the preſſures which he ſuffered for our ſins, he propoſed to himſelf, both the will of God concerning his paſſion, and his promiſe and power to preſerve him, as alſo his will concerning mans ſalvation by his ſufferings.

V. 26. my fleſh ſhall reſt in hope] In ſpe reſurrectionis, Auguſt. in Pſal. 16. 9. in hope of victory through the power of God, by a glorious reſurrection from the dead.

V. 27. thou wilt not leave my ſoul in hell] See on Luke 16. 33. or, my life, my perſon in the grave, ψυχὴ often importeth ſo, Rom. 13. 1. And the word ᾅδου here uſed, is in the Hebr. שאול ſheol, Pſal. 18. 5, 6. which ſometimes is put for the place of the damned, but is alſo ſometimes to ſignifie the grave, and can no otherwiſe be reaſonably underſtood, as Job 17. 13. Geneſis 37. 35. in both which places, as alſo Pſal. 16. 5, 6. whence this here is cited, the 70. uſe the word ᾅδης and if it be not reaſonably conceived, that Job, Jacob, or David in his own perſon thought of going to Hell, or of ever being there; what neceſſity is here of underſtanding this place concerning Chriſt, otherwiſe than that God would not leave him long in grave? See verſe 41.

ſuffer thy holy one] That is, ſanctificatum corpus, Auguſtine qu. ſ. the ſanctified and ſacred body of Chriſt lay not ſo long in the grave, as to be corrupted, to ſee corruption] That is, to be corrupted, Quomodo enim poterat vel in carne marceſcere, cujus nomen unguentum exinanitum eſt, de virg. lib. 3. inter opera Ambroſe; how can he corrupt whoſe name is an oyntment poured forth? Cant. 1. 3. Auguſtine to more purpoſe ſaith, ep. 120. to Honoratus, his fleſh corrupted not, quæ tam celeriter reſurrexit, which roſe again ſo ſoon.

V. 28. the wayes of life] In reſtoring me from death to life, and that moſt happy and pleaſant, as in thy preſence, Pſal. 17, 15. This preſent life is full of bitterneſſe and troubles; but in the next, we ſhall be conformed to Chriſt, and filled with joy.

V. 29. let me freely ſpeak] Or, I may freely, &c.] He now ſheweth, that the Pſalm ſpake principally of Chriſt: for David is dead (ſaith he) and we have his Sepulchre amongſt us to this day. But this Pſalm ſpeaketh of one that liveth, whoſe body, though buried, ſaw no corruption, which could not be ſaid of Davids body, long before turned to duſt and corruption.

of the Patriarch David] See 1 Kings 2, 30 As if he had ſaid, I well know that you have the memory of that excellent King, Prophet, and Patriarck in high eſteem, ſo that you think this Pſalm endited by Gods ſpirit, ſpeaketh only of him, but if you will more nearly look into it and conſider the particulars, you may underſtand that it did not, as to the main, concerne David, who died, and his ſepulchre to this day with us teſtifieth his corruption and turning to duſt, but Chriſt: for this Pſalm ſpeaketh of one who muſt dye and be buried, but ſo ſoon riſe again, that his body might not be corrupted; this is true of Chriſt, but of David in his own perſon, as David himſelf both knew by the holy ſpirit: and propheſied as a peculiar mark of Chriſt, the Meſſias, verſe 30. 31.

V. 30. therefore being a Prophet] And ſo knew by ſpeciall revelation, that which was to come concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt.

and knowing that God] Pſal 132. 11.

V. 31. that his ſoul] Pſal. 16. 10. See verſe 27.

ſoule was not left] As verſe 27.

in hell] Or in the grave, Gr. εἰς ᾅδου, as verſe 27. See on Luke 16, 23. the word ſignifieth a lightleſſe place, and ſo is here put for the grave; for the Apoſtle ſaith, that David being a Prophet ſpake concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt; who was not left in the grave, when he roſe from the dead. See Iob. Druſ. præter. lib. 5.

V. 32. this Ieſus hath God raiſed up, &c.] This Jeſus, the Chriſt and Meſſias whom David foreſaw in ſpirit: this Jeſus whom ye deſpiſed and crucified. hath God raiſed up: and of this truth, we (whom God hath thus filled with his Spirit) are all witneſſes.

V. 33. by the right hand of God] By the power of God. By another argument he will here prove Jeſus to be the very Meſſias of whom David ſpake, that is, from his aſcenſion into heaven and ſitting at Gods right hand: Chriſt not only roſe again, according to the Scriptures, but alſo aſcended into heaven, which we ſaw with theſe eyes; of this aſcenſion David alſo propheſied. Pſal. 68. 18. Epheſ. 4. 8. and Pſal 110. 1. cited verſe 34. now that which is hereto annexed in the Propheſie (giving the gifts of Gods holy ſpirit to men as the ſpeaking all tongues) can neither agree to David nor any creature, but to Chriſt only; David therefore ſpake not of himſelfe, but Chriſt.

V. 34. the Lord ſaid unto my Lord] Pſal. 110. 1.

ſit thou on my right hand] Have thou glory and power over all. See Epheſ. 4. 9, 10. David ſpeaketh this concerning Chriſt, not of himſelf: for he concerning whom that was ſpoken, ſaw not corruption, which David did: therefore that was ſpoken concerning another who ſaw not corruption, See chap. 13. 36, 37. Neither is David ſo aſcended into Heaven body & ſoul, as to ſit at Gods right hand, and to have power over all creatures: neither can this agree to any, but Chriſt only.

V. 35. thy footſtool] Untill I ſubdue, and ſubject them all to thee.

V. 36. both Lord and Chriſt] The anointed King: So that the Jewes muſt know that he vvas called Chriſt, becauſe he was the Lords anointed. See Eph. 1, 21. and 4. 10 Phil. 2. 9, 10.

V. 37. that they were pricked in their heart, &c.] This is the effect of Peters Sermon: firſt their conſciences tell them that Jeſus was indeed the Meſſias, of whoſe death they were guilty; and ſo liable to Gods heavy judgement, who had cried out, his blood be on us, and on our children. Next they break out into a confeſſion of their crime, in that they aske Councel of Peter, and the reſt what they ſhould novv doe, who could by no means undoe what they had done.

what ſhall we doe] Not what muſt we ſay: let the wiſe man ſhew his wiſedome; (ſaid Clemens Romanus, epiſt. ad Corinth pag. 50.) not in words onely, but good workes alſo.

V. 38. Peter ſaid unto them repent] This he did like a good Phyſitian, whoſe part is not onely to diſcover the diſeaſe, but to preſcribe the remedy, Pœnitentia hujus temporis, dolor medicinalis; Auguſtine in Pſalm 57. Preſent repentance is a medicinable grief. The firſt of innocency is not to ſin: the ſecond to acknowledge our ſins. Illic currit innocentia integra & illibata quæ ſervet; hic ſuccedit medela quæ ſanet. Cyprian epiſt. 3. lib. 1. there runneth intire and untoucht innocency which might ſave: here followeth the medicine to heal. But this repentance is not onely in knowing, acknowledging our ſins, or ſaying, God be merciful, but in the change of our minds, purpoſes and evil courſes of our lives, as Auguſtine de Eccleſ. Dogmat. cap. 54. ſaith very well; Pænitentia vera eſt, pænitenda non admittere, & admiſſa deflere, true repentance is no more to commit things to be repented of, and to bewaile ſinnes committed. See alſo Tertul. adv. Marcion. lib. 2. cap. 24. fin. See on Matt. 3. 2.

in the Name of the Lord Jeſus] He ſpeaketh of and reſpecteth here not the form of Baptiſm, but the uſe and end thereof, which is to implant us unto Chriſt, Rom. 6. that we may be Chriſtians. See on c. 10. 48.

V., 39. the Promiſe is unto you] Chriſt is promiſed both to Jewes and Gentiles: but the Jewes had the firſt place.

V. 40. untoward generation] This corrupt World: perverſe and wicked men: he meaneth principally Scribes and Phariſees; and all the enemies of Chriſt and the Goſpel.

V. 41. ſouls] Or perſons. See on v. 27. Here began to appear the fruit of Chriſts prayer, Luke 23. 34.

V. 42. in breaking of Bread] This is a terme taken from that which Chriſt did, at his laſt Supper, Matthew, 26. 26. uſed to ſignifie the Holy Supper of the Lord, which they uſed to celebrate, when they made their Love-Feaſts: or Feaſts of Charity. See Acts, 20. 7. 11. Jude 12. though not alwayes ſo.

V. 43. feare came upon every ſoule] They vvere all amazed, at the nevv and marvellous ſtate, encreaſe, gifts, miracles, and povver of the Church: ſo that no man durſt oppoſe them.

V. 44. had all things common] That community was not of all goods, of all the faithfull: but of that which every one, would conſecrate to the publick neceſſity, or to the relief of any particular perſon, this was no abſolute community, as Anabaptiſts dream (for that overthroweth all propriety Divine and Civill) for yet they retained propriety in their Houſes, c. 12. 12. and 16. 15. had they not had propriety, they had had nothing to give, or exerciſe their love and charity withall. Paul profeſſed that he had coveted no mans gold or ſilver, c. 20. 33. which had been a vain profeſsion, if it had not been lawful for Chriſtians to poſſeſſe any thing: the community here mentioned ſpeaks them charitable who gave ſomething, not unlawful poſſeſſours, who gave not all: and this the words of the Text intimate, verſe 45. Firſt, in that ſome parted their poſſeſſions and goods, or gave them (which none but proprietors could juſtly doe.) Secondly, in that theſe donors made a choice (as every man had need:) neither needed Paul to have given precepts concerning gathering for the poore, 1 Corinthians, 16. 1, &c. if in the Church there had then been any ſuch communion as excluded propriety: for then one had had as much right to any goods or poſſeſsion, as another.

V. 45. and parted them] Diſtributing their goods, or the price of their poſſeſsion, ſold.

as every man had need] As far as they were able to relieve their poor brethren.

V. 46. in the temple] Not that they might joyn with the Jews in antiquated Ceremonies of the Law; but becauſe they might there have dayly occaſion of teſtifying the truth of Chriſt to the multitude there aſſembling.

and breaking bread] The Syriac hath it domi frangebant portionem; that is, they invited each other home, and eat together; prayſing God for his benefits, ſpiritual and temporal. See Iſa. 58. 7. This breaking of bread κατ' οἶκον from houſe to houſe, underſtand of their eating and inviting one another, according as ſome were able and others had need to be relieved, as religious, good, and charitable neighbours uſe, or ought to do.

V. 47. having favour with all] That is, with many, generally, or with all good men; though they had ſome implacable enemies among the Phariſees.

the Lord added to the Church &c.] It is mans miniſtery, but Gods bleſsing, (ſee 1 Cor. 3. 7 8.) who ſuffers not his Ordinance to be fruitleſſe (Iſa. 55. 10.) though the reprobate be as the Sea to the ſweet ſhowers; what ever falleth is preſently turned into that invincible bitterneſſe of the receiver; yet the Elect ſhall benefit by it: neither is it here to be omitted, that if by the miniſtry of the Goſpel God dayly addeth to his Church, number, ſociety, and external communion of the faithful, ſuch as ſhall be ſaved; then is it a dangerous ſymptome or prognoſtick of their reprobation who ſeparate from the Church: this is indeed that Temple of God, out of which if any depart, à ſpe vitæ, ac ſalutis æternæ alienus eſt, Lactant lib. 4. cap. ult. So Rahabs houſe typum portabat Eccleſiæ. Cyprian. lib. 1. Ep. 6. bare a Type of the Church, out of which if any goe, His blood ſhall be upon his own head.

CHAP. III.

Verſe 1. THe ninth houre] Which was their three of the Clock in the afternoon: the time of their evening, ſacrifice, at which the Apoſtles would be preſent, not to communicate therein, (See on Chap. 2. 46.) but to enform them that the ſhadowes of the Law vvere aboliſhed by Chriſt, whom they all prefigured.

V. 2. lame from his mothers wombe] Born lame, lame, not by any external violence or accident; but native indiſpoſition of his joynts; ſo infirm, that they carried him up and down, and it was of no leſs continuance than fourty years, c. 4. 22. and ſo incurable by man: This ſetteth out the Truth and greatneſs of the miracle done in the Name of Jeſus.

called beautiful] Built inſtead of that of Solomon, and ſo called.

to ask almes] See c. 9. 8. to ſuſtain him with food, and viands neceſſary for the preſervation of his life, a wretched condition of, and in it ſelf; but if we conſider the event we may ſurely conclude, it was a happy lameneſſe, by which he came to the knowledge of Chriſt, and to feel his Divine Power and Vertue, repairing and curing him: conſider the admirable providence of a merciful God, who bringeth ſome to his knowledge and their happyneſſe by poverty, ſome by ſickneſſe, ſome by lameneſs, others by other grievous afflictions, impriſonment, plundering, baniſhment; few by proſperity prove finally happy.

4. looke on us] They would have him diligently mark by what power he ſhould be healed; they being well aſſured of the certain event, by the Spirit of God, would have him mark by whoſe Name he ſhould be healed and to vvhom he ſhould aſcribe the honor and praiſe for ſo great a mercy received: as if they ſaid, believe that thou ſhalt receive ſomething of us: look on us, but believe in Chriſt Jeſus.

V. 5. expecting to receive ſomething] He looked for money, but obtaineth that which no money could have purchaſed for him.

V. 6. ſilver and gold have I none] As if he ſaid, If I had wherewith to relieve thee in that thou deſireſt, I would give it thee, but having none, I give thee that which is better, that which Chriſt hath given me power freely to diſtribute.

in the name of Jeſus Chriſt] By the power and command of that JESVS CHRIST, whom in contempt and ſcorne you called Jeſus of Nazareth, be healed, riſe up and walke.

V. 7. took him by the right hand] Being confident on the promiſe of Chriſt. Matth. 10 8 Mark 16, 17, 18.

and immediately his feet, &c.] This ſpeed ſheweth that the cure was by divine power, which can do all things how and when God pleaſeth.

V. 8. he leaping up] This ſheweth a perfect cure and ſetteth out the truth and excellency of the miracle done in the name of Jeſus Chriſt: here were no remainds of the old malady which are commonly ſeen long in the moſt abſolute cures by the art of men, but having at once received perfect ſoundneſſe and vigour of his limbes, he leapeth up, and walketh with the Apoſtles into the Temple.

prayſing God] Attributing his health to God alone: to conceal the mercies of God is ingratitude; to aſcribe them to ſecond cauſes, ſacriledge.

V. 9. all the people ſaw, &c.] So publickly was it done, that none could modeſtly deny it: therefore the enemies acknowledged, cap. 4. 16. that a notable miracle was done by them.

V. 10. they knew it was he] That it was the ſame Creeple which they ſaw daily lying at the gate of the Temple begging, therefore they wondred to ſee him ſo ſuddenly walking: Who they all well knew had been lame from his infancy and never able to goe, and that for the ſpace of about fourty years, c. 4. 22. the Syriac addeth here, by way of interpretation, quod is eſſet ille mendicus qui, &c.

V. 11. all the people ran together to them] With deaf ears, taking no notice of the Name of Jeſus by which the lame was reſtored; they come about the lame man, and thoſe that cured him, looking on them with admiration: Here (all) is again ſet for (many.)

that is called Solmons,] It is likely that this porch was built in the place where Solomons formerly ſtood (1 Kings 9 3.) and thence was named ſo. For the Temple built by Solomon being demoliſhed by the Chaldees, Zerubbabel and Ezra in their re-edification thereof, imitated the old pattern as near as they could. See John 10.23. He nameth this place, becauſe hither came that concourſe of people who were witneſſes of theſe things.

V. 12. as though by our own power] He correcteth the abuſe of men, who commonly attribute that to mans power or godlineſs, which appertaineth onely to God.

V. 13. the God of our fathers] Chap. 5. 30. The ſame onely true God, whom Abraham, and all our Holy fathers worſhipped. He teacheth them firſt the efficient principal cauſe of this miracle, The God of our Fathers ; and next, the final in theſe words, hath glorified his ſonne Jeſus; in that he gave ſuch Divine Power to the Apoſtles to doe theſe miracles in, and by the Name of Jeſus raiſed from the dead, whereby he was mightily declared to be the Sonne of the living God, the Meſſias and Saviour of the world, and in theſe words, the God of Abraham, Iſaac &c. He remembreth them of the promiſes of God concerning their Meſſias, made and often repeated to their fathers, Geneſis, 12.3. Gal.3.8. that they might know that they now propoſed no other God than the ſame whom all their fathers worſhipped, neither any other Doctrine than that which they all received, and conſtantly in their generations profeſſed.

whom ye delivered &c] hereby he aggravateth their immane wickedneſs that he might move them to repentance, and faith in Chriſt, that they might obtain mercy and be ſaved.

V. 14. but ye denied the Holy One] Matt. 27. 20. John 19. 15. when Pilate had determined to acquit him as innocent, urging the moſt impious and diſhonourable end of their requeſt, which was to put their King to a ſhamefull death, they cried out, We have no King but Caeſar; John 19. 15. whereby they publickly denied Chriſt the Holy one, and long expected Meſsias to be their King and in his ſtead, profeſſed their allegiance to Caeſar, no wayes compelled thereto for fear of the Romans, whoſe Deputy again and again, declared him guiltleſs, and himſelf willing to diſmiſſe him.

deſired a murderer] That is Barabbas, Mark 15 11. Iohn 18.40. This aggravateth and ſets off the horrid atrocity of the malicious Jewes, who having the free choyce which of the two ſhould be ſaved, the Holy Jeſus, or the murderous Barrabas, they would have the murtherer freed, and the innocent and moſt beneficient Jeſus crucified. Sin and wickedneſs knoweth no limit: when once the ſinner forſaketh the known right, he cannot ſtay till he come to Hell.

V. 15. and killeth the Prince of Life] Or Authour of life, Chriſt Jeſus. So ſtill the impious and unjuſt world favoureth the wicked, and perſecuteth the juſt.

V. 16. through Faith in his Name] Becauſe by Faith he apprehended him who was riſen from the dead, whoſe Name he heard of us; or Name may here import Chriſt himſelfe, or his Power.

V. 17. through ignorance ye did] He excuſeth not their malice; but becauſe ignorance and blinde zeale led many of them into their ſinne, he putteth the penitent among them in hope of pardon. See 1 Tim.1.13. it is like that which is ſaid, 1 Cor. 2.8. and Luke 23. 34.

your rulers] He meaneth ſome of them; not all. See Luke 23. 50,51. John 3. 1.

V. 18. by the mouth of all his Prophets] See verſe 21. The Prophets were many, yet being all inſpired with one Spirit of God, they ſpake all one truth: in reſpect whereof, the Holy Ghoſt here attributeth but one mouth to them all.

V. 19. time of refreſhing ſhall come] It is a figurative manner of ſpeaking, taken from workmen repoſing themſelves in the cool ſhades, to repreſent eternall reſt, after the labours and travels of this life. See Luke 16. 25. Revelation 7. 15, 16. and 14. 13. or He pointeth here at that which Paul writeth Romans 11. 23. 26. the final calling of the Jewes by the Goſpel preached, to which thoſe words (which before was preached unto you) may alſo relate, verſe 20.

V. He ſhall ſend Jeſus Chriſt] To judge the world: This he ſaith to ſhew them, that the contempt of the Goſpel cannot be unpuniſhed; and alſo to give them aſſurance of comfort, who believe in him.

V. 21. whom the heaven muſt receive] That is contain, having received his humanity which was thenceforth reſident in Heaven, and ſhall be no more here on earth, untill he come to judgement, for he hath a true, and therefore circumſcribed body; not confounded with the Deity, as to have any of its incommunicable properties, as ubiquity, omnipreſence, &c. He hath ſtill a true and reall Body, though glorified, as ours ſhall once be which ſhall not in that ſtate be every where or in more places than one at once.

times of reſtitution of all things] Unto the perfection of the Kingdom of Chriſt, wherein all ſhall be repaired which ſin hath diſordered and ruined; wherein the creature ſhall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God. See Rom. 8. 21.

ſince the world began] Or from all ages.

of your brethren] Of the ſtock of Abraham; for he ſpake this unto the Jewes, who were the children of Abraham, of whom Chriſt came according to the fleſh; and ſo was one of their brethren.

V. 23. every ſoul] Every perſon, as Chapter, 2. 27. Romans, 13. 1. Geneſis, 46. 26. Here is deſtruction threatned to all contemners of Chriſt and his Miniſters. See Luke 10.12. 16.

V. 24. All the Prophets from Samuel] After Moſes, He nameth Samuel, between whoſe times, the Word of God was pretious, 1 Samuel 3. 1. from Samuel, all the Prophets foretelling of Chriſt, as many as have ſpoken, have foretold of theſe times of grace.

V. 25. ye are the children of Prophets] Or Patriarchs, Abraham, Iſaac Iacob, &c. you are they to whom the promiſes were made, and the Prophets addreſſed, and with whom God made the Covenant, See Rom. 9 4.

V. 26. unto you firſt] To you before the Gentiles, is the Goſpel and Doctrine of Chriſts reſurrection to be preached, Matt. 10. 6. Acts, 1. 8. and 13.46. or ἀναστήσας, raiſed, here is of the ſame ſignification with ἀναστήσει, verſe 22. and Deuteronomy, 18.15,18. 1 Samuel 2. 35. 1 Kings 14. 14. the word קום uſed among other things to ſignifie, conſtituit, He appointed to an office; the 70. give ἀναστήσει (See 2 Samuel 23. 1.) So Zacharias ſaid, God hath raiſed up an horn of ſalvation, Luke 1. 69. and the people ſaid, Luke 7. 16. A great Prophet is riſen up among us, that is, being appointed of God, is ſent among us; for no man taketh this Honour to himſelfe, but he that is called of God, Hebr. 5.4.

to bleſſe you] In giving you Faith and Repentance by the Spirit of regeneration: (Gal. 3. 9. 14.) the bleſſing hath a condition annexed to the promiſe; if ye convert and repent you of your iniquities; the Syriack expreſſeth it, אן תתפנון in tethpenum, if ye convert, &c. we muſt perform this condition if we will have the bleſſing: ſin bringeth the curſe: therefore no man can be bleſſed in impenitency, and continuing in ſin.

CHAP. IV.

Verſe 1. Captain of the Temple] Or Ruler: ſome thinke that he was a ruler or commander over the Levites, who miniſtred by turns, and guarded the Temple. See 2 Chronicles, 35, 4. 5. but more probably he calleth him στρατηγὸν τοῦ ἱεροῦ, the Ruler or Tribune of theſe ſouldiers, whom the Romans allotted the Iewes for the guard of the Temple: for Pilate ſaid, Matt. 27, 65. ye have a watch. See Luke 22. 4. Iohn 18. 12. It was one who had committed to him the guard of the Temple. Vatabl. See alſo Io. Druſ. praeterit. lib.5.

the Sadduces came upon them] Who deny the reſurrection of the body from the dead, See Luke 20. 27. Matt. 22. 23.

V. being grieved] They were angry; the Syr. giveth it: ſome colour had they, for if any man intruded into the Office of a Preacher, it belonged to the Prieſts to ſuppreſſe ſuch audacity; as alſo to retain the people in the Doctrine of the Law, and Prophets to prevent their ſeducements, by any new Doctrines; therefore, ſeeing men, to them unknown, or not allowed by any publick authority, preaching in the Temple, they reproved them, not underſtanding, or acknowledging their extraordinary calling, and the main being, that the Sadduces Atheiſtical opinion contradicted, they exaſperated the Prieſts, and Rulers againſt the Apoſtles. See Chap. 23. 8.

V. 3. They laid hands, &c.] Hands not yet clean from the blood of Chriſt: the Argument of the wicked is violence: now the Apoſtles have experience of the truth of Chriſts Words. See Luke 21. 12.

V. 4. many of them which heard the word believed] Many who heard what Peter had ſaid unto the people, Chap. 3. 12, &c. the Word never deſcended in vain. See Iſa. 55. 10.

about five thouſand] Of thoſe who adhered to the Apoſtles; ſo the blood and injury of the Martyrs, is ſtill the ſeed of the Church; the Apoſtles were now ſhut up in priſon; but the Church flouriſhed the more ſhe was wounded, ὁρᾷς θείαν ἐνέργειαν φανεράν, Oecumen. you ſee the working of God manifeſt herein. It is no ſmall demonſtration of his power, defending believers againſt all the rages of Satan, and giving them more boldneſs and conſtancy, by how much more they are oppoſed and injured: in this number we muſt underſtand the whole Church then being, not a new acceſſion of ſo many: as Peters firſt Sermon, Acts 2. 41. they were about three thouſand: now they are at his ſecond Sermon encreaſed to five thouſand: thus appeareth the effect of Chriſts promiſe to make them fiſhers of men. See Phil. 1. 13, 14.

V. 5. Rulers and Elders] Which the Hebrewes called זקנים zekinim zekinim, old men: theſe were the Judges of their greater Sanhedrim; they call a Councel to oppoſe the truth by a ſeeming legal proceeding, deſiring that it might appear juſtly damned: but there is no Counſel againſt God and his Truth. See verſe 25, &c. Pſal. 2.1,4. Prov. 21.30. Iſai. 46.10.

and ſcribes] See on Luke 20.1.

V. 6. as many as were of kindred, &c.] Thus ſtrengthened they their party, to countenance the matter: theſe had indeed by Gods appointment the charge of things Eccleſiaſtical: theſe were Aarons ſucceſſours; for which they had alſo about 1500. years preſcription: theſe were the men, who now flouriſhed among the Jews in honour and wealth yet theſe now combine and aſſemble againſt the Goſpel.

V. 7. by what name] By what authority, and by whoſe command have ye cured the lame man: hence, as in many other things appears their ſtupid, or wilful ignorance, that they would queſtion the authority of an Aćt which none but God could do: they asked not with any purpoſe to believe in Chriſt, but that they might awe and terrifie the Apoſtles under pretence of their juriſdićtion and authority to command in all things to be done in and about the Temple, eſpecially concerning preaching, leſt any new and erroneous dоćtrine ſhould prevent the people, or any without their Ordination ſhould preſume to teach them.

V. 8. Peter filled with the Holy Ghoſt] Aſſiſted by the grace of Gods Holy Spirit enabling, and emboldening him to ſpeak, who before was terrified by the voyce of a maiden.

V. 9. if we this day] Or Seeing that.

examined of the good deed done] Meaning, whereas you queſtion us for doing good, who ought to queſtion and puniſh evil doers onely, and to defend and encourage the good.

V. 10. be it known unto you all] Such admirable confidence had the Holy Ghoſt now given him, that He thus openly profeſſeth and declare the truth of Chriſt, before the moſt implacable enemies thereof.

of you builders] You Prieſts and Elders, and Governours who ſhould edifie the Church of God; which you (as it hath elſewhere often come to paſſe) endeavour all you can to pull down; leſt your Honour, and the revenue of the Temple and Prieſt-hood ſhould be impaired, or decay: So dangerous a let and hinderance to mens ſalvations, is love of this preſent world and the things thereof.

among men] ἐν ἀνθρώποις, that is, as the vulgar hath it, datum hominibus: given to men; to wit, appointed by God for their ſalvation.

V. 13. unlearned and ignorant men] ἀγράμματοι, illiterate men, men without letters: not brought up in the Schools of the Scribes and Phariſees, but in a ſchool incomparably better; that is, in the School of Chriſt: therefore this is not ſimply ſpoken (for they had ſpent ſome time in the ſtudy of the Holy Scriptures, and were all θεοδίδακτοι taught of God, 1 Theſ. 4. 9. John 6. 45. and 14. 26.) but in relation to ordinary means of attaining learning by the Magiſtery and teaching of men, humane learning, or the Phariſees eſteem of them: ἰδιῶται private men, Suidas interpreteth it by the foregoing word, ἰδιώτης, ὁ ἀγράμματος, an unlearned man: and ὁ ἀμαθής, an ignorant and unskilful man; ſuch as private, unimployed men commonly are: the word is of ἴδιος private. See more hereof, Ioh. Druſ. præterit. lib. 5. Theod. Bez. annot. major. on this place.

V. 14. nothing againſt it] It was ſo eident a miracle, and good work, that they could neither deny it, nor ſay ought againſt them, as the Syriack giveth it.

V. 15. conferred among themſelves] they would not let the Apoſtles hear that which an evident and undeniable truth extorted from their own mouths, verſe 16. becauſe they would maintain their credit with men, and ſtill pretend that the Apoſtles were delinquents, worthy of ſuppreſsion and puniſhment, as innovators, and diſturbers of the peace.

V. 16. What ſhall we do, &c?] Here is a true pattern of malitious injuſtice; they convent them as malefaćtours, and then ſeek for, and conſult about ſome accuſation againſt them: ſomething they would do, but knew not what; becauſe however unjuſt they were, they would by no means ſeem ſo to men: this is the miſery and madneſſe of great ſinners, they had rather ſin ſtill, than ſeem to have ſinned, reſolving to palliate, if they cannot juſtifie their faults, majore facinore.

V. 17. but that it ſpread no further, &c.] They count it a principal piece of policy, to keep the people ignorant, that they may the more eaſily beguil them: it is a great, but miſchievous skill, in ſuch motions to leſſen the light, that their legerdemain may not be diſcovered by the ſpećtatours.

ſtraitly threatned them] ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα, threatning, let us threaten; an uſual Hebrew Pleonaſme; for, let us ſtrićtly, or ſtraitly threaten them.

to no man in this name] That is, that they preach concerning Chriſt no more. They more valued their credit with men than their own or the peoples ſalvation; therefore however convinced in conſcience, they would hide the light of Chriſt from the people.

V. 18. not to ſpeak at all] That is, not to ſpeak any word concerning Jeſus, that he had taught, done or ſuffered, and do no more miracles in his name, or pretend to his power for the doing of the ſame.

V. 19. judge ye] we appeal to your own conſciences herein: God commandeth us to preach in this name, you under pretence of your authority, command us not to preach; ſhall we now obey God for you? will God judge it right, will he excuſe us, if againſt his commands we obey yours?

V. 20. We cannot but ſpeake the things] We cannot chuſe but obey Crhiſt, who hath commanded us ſo to do: for the diſpenſation is committed unto us, and woe ſhall be to us if we preach not the Goſpel. See 1 Cor. 9. 16 it is the power of God to ſalvation, Rom. 1. 16. How fearfull a ſacriledge were it, to with-hold it from the Iſrael of God. We have heard, ſeen and believed theſe things, and therefore ſpeak. See Pſalm 116. 10. Aćts 17. 16. I will not make mention of him, nor ſpeake any more in his name (ſaid the Prophet Jeremie in his great tentation, Jer. 20. 9.) but his word was in my heart as a burning fire ſhut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not ſtay; for the grace (and Spirit) of Prophecie, incited him unwilling to ſpeak, ſaith Theodoret in Ier. where the Spirit of God is in the Miniſter, no fear or threatnings of men, can ſo ſilence him, but that at laſt, the Word of Truth ſhall break out.

V. 21. all men glorified God] All that believed, or many men: they found no fault in them, and without ſome colorable pretence of Juſtice, durſt not harm or puniſh them for fear of the people, who prayſed God for the good which he had done by them.

V. 22. above fourty years old] It may ſeem ſtrange, that being ſo old, and dayly laid at the gate of the Temple, into which Jeſus ſo often entred (conſidering that it appeareth not, that he ever denied to heal or cure any that entreated it) He did not receive help from him all this time: but certain it is, he was reſerved unto this time, and means of healing by the all-diſpoſing providence of God, for the further confirmation of the Apoſtles, and truth of the Goſpel.

V. 23. they went to their owne] To glorifie God, and to encourage them, by letting them know, how God had aſſiſted them.

V. 24. they lift up their voyce] Either all ſpeaking this ſame thing, as they were guided by one Spirit; or which is moſt probable to avoid confuſion, (that the company might diſtinćtly hear, and ſay, Amen.) ſome one or few in the name of the reſt, thus prayed.

V. 27. againſt thy Holy Childe Jeſus] Thy Holy Son Jeſus, παῖδα here, as v. 25. is ſet, not ſo much to import years, as dearneſſe, or obſequiouſneſſe to God, as c. 3. 13. So Joſhua, though in years a man is called נער nahar, the child or ſervant of Moſes, Exod. 33. 11. if ſuch plots and combinations were againſt Holy Jeſus; let us in all our ſufferings run with patience, looking up unto the Authour and finiſher our Faith, let us conſider Him that ſuffered ſuch things for us (See Hebr. 12. 1, 2, 3, 4) it is no diſhonour to us to ſuffer of our brethren that which Chriſt ſuffered of his, nec illis gloria eſt facere, quod fecerit Judas, nor is it any glory to them, to do that which Judas did, Cyprian. lib. 1. epiſt. 3.

V. 28. for to do whatſoever] Though they meant nothing leſs than to obey God in crucifying Chriſt, but had ſeveral other ends, yet God ordered this to our redemption. See Aćts 13. 27. Iſa. 10. 7.

thy hand and counſel]Thy power and thy providence:for as Cyprian forecited ſaith well: nihil intereſt quis tradat aut ſaviat, cum Deus tradi permittat, quos diſponit coronari:it skilleth nothing who betrayeth or rageth, ſeeing God permitteth thoſe to be delivered up(or betrayed) whom he appointeth to be crowned.

V. 29. behold their threatnings] Conſider what they threaten: divert their rage and malice, who enterpriſe againſt thee and thy truth.

and grant,&c] Becauſe God onely can give patience, conſtanſtancy and perſeverance in truth, and alſo boldneſs to preach the Goſpel, they pray him to give it, who well knew they could not have theſe gifts of themſelves; here is the Saints refuge in all their wants and neceſſities, earneſt prayer.

V. 30. by the name of thy holy child Jeſus] See on v. 10. 27. by the power, and in the name of thy Holy Son Jeſus: for their aim and hearts deſire was to advance his Honour and Truth.

V. 31. place was ſhaken] By this ſenſible ſigne, God ſhewed his preſence, and readineſſe to heare and confirm them in their miniſtration.

all filled with the Holy Ghoſt] They were ſtrengthned, and enabled with greater confidence and largeneſſe of heart to ſpeak. Mark here, firſt the reſult of impious Counſel: the Jewes conſulted againſt the goſpel, laboured to ſuppeſs it by power, threatned and charged the Apoſtles to ſpeak no more in the name of Jeſus; God gave them greater courage to preach it, and more excellent gifts than before: all oppoſition more propagateth truth. Secondly, here it appeareth, that the ſafeſt refuge in danger, and the happieſt iſſue of fear is, when it awakes us to a more fervent calling on the name of God; which to the perplexed ſoul is, as the ark to the tyred dove: as David ſaid Pſal. 116. 7. Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoul: in which ſence it is true which Gregor. Nazianzen ſaid, epiſt. 16. Κάμνουσα ψυχὴ, ἐγγὺς ἐστὶ Θεοῦ the weary ſoul is near God.

V. 32. were of one heart] So unanimous, as if they had all but one and the ſame heart, and one ſoul; becauſe they were all united and guided by one Spirit of God, whence you may know, that where ſtrife, envy, malice, and contention is, there an evil ſpirit governeth. See Jam. 3. 14, 15, 16. &c.

was his own] They gave, as if the needy brethren had as good intereſt in their goods, as their ſelves who were owners thereof. See on c. 44.

V. 33. witneſſe of the reſurrection,&c.] This by a Synecchdoche is put for the whole goſpel:this the Sadduces lately quarrelled at, therefore they teſtified it the more powerfully.

great grace was upon them all] As God gave them that great grace of real charity (with which the preſent world is little acquainted) ſo was this very effectual for the gaining a good opinion among the people, both concerning their perſons and doctrine, which they ſaw ſo admirably exemplified; and thereby they were the more eaſily invited to joyn themſelves to their ſociety whom they perceived ſo far from any ſecular and worldly ends, that they gave freely what they had to the relief of others who wanted.

V. 34. any among them that lacked] That is, who was deſtitute and not relieved.

for as many as were poſſeſſours,&c.] Not that they who believed, did all of them ſell all that they had, but as need required: as if it were ſaid, the owners did not onely relieve thoſe who wanted,with their rents divided among them; but as there were further neceſſity, they ſpared not the Fee-ſimple, but ſold of that alſo.

V. 35. down at the Apoſtles feet] That is, ſubmitted it to their diſpoſal: this intimated, as Oecumenius notes, τὴν πολλὴν τιμὴν, &c. that great Honour and reverence of the Hearers towards the Apoſtles.

according as he had need] They who moſt wanted,had moſt relief given them.

V. 36. Joſes, who by the Apoſtles was ſirnamed Barnabas] This Levite was of Cyprus: he is mentioned as an example of that which was ſaid; the Apoſtles named him Barnabus (the ſonne of conſolation, or a Comforter) not onely for that he gave ſo liberally to comfort the needy Chriſtians; but probably in reſpect of thoſe excellent gifts he had in comforting afflicted minds of hearers. Hieronym. de ſcriptor. eccleſ. calleth him Ἰωσῆ,ſo alſo many Greek copies:ſo alſo the Syriac. Others reade Ἰωσῆς. Some, but improbably think him called ſo from the Syriac word בר bar and נבא nabba conſolation of the Verb ביא baia, conſolatus eſt, (c. 20. 1. and 16. 40,&c. Epheſians, 6. 2. Coloſſians, 4. 8, &c.) others more probably derive it from בר bar, ſonne, and the Hebrew word נבא naba to propheſie, intimating him a ſon of conſolation in his gift of Propheſie: and indeed a principal part of the Prophets. or Miniſters function is to comfort the hearers, by applying the promiſes of the Goſpell unto their Conſciences. This Barnabas Chap. 11 24. is ſaid to be a good man, and full of the Holy Ghoſt, that is, an excellent Prophet or Teacher:a Man of excellent gifts.

V. 37. having land, ſold it] Here is rehearſed one inſtance of that is ſaid,v. 34.

at the Apoſtles feet] See on v. 35.

CHAP. V.

Verſe 1. Named Ananias with Saphira, &c.] The ſcope of this Hiſtory is to ſhew how odious to God that perfidiouſneſs is, which counterfeiting ſanctity would impoſe upon God, as if he ſaw not what men do: (for otherwiſe, Ananias giving a part, had been commendable) ſo great a miſchief is Hypocriſie, ſo dangerous the perverſion of an Holy purpoſe and the withdrawing of things conſecrated to the Churches uſe (though by himſelf who gave) that the ſacrilegious periſhed by detaining a part of that whole which he would ſeem to give: by this was Ananias (as Chryſoſtome ſaith) κλέπτων τὰ ἑαυτοῦ φωραθεὶς, taken ſtealing his own goods. It is the heart, not the hand which God looketh into: the poor Widow (Luke 21. 3.) caſt in but two Mites, and it was better accepted than all thoſe who offered greater ſums. Here Ananias ſelleth a poſſeſſion, and preſenteth the price, reſerving to himſelf, but a part thereof, and yet is condemned for it: if he that taketh from the Church but a little of that which was his own, be ſacrilegious, aud ſtricken dead for the ſame what puniſhment will the ſame Divine Juſtice lay on him, who by fraud or violence taketh away the poſſeſſions wherewith other men endowed the Church? See more hereof Chryſoſt. in Act. hom 12.

V. 2. kept back part of the price] Syriac, he hid a part. So he did; for pretending to be as charitable as the beſt, he ſold, and ſeemed to bring the whole price, as others did, but he concealed a part, which he would reſerve to himſelf and his wife. So Suidas and Chryſoſtome interpret νοσφιζόμενον by ὑφαιρούμενον, ſurripientem, intervertentem —— and ἰδιοποιούμενον which Æmilius Portus alſo rendreth Illum qui res aliquas ſuas facit, ſuffurantem, impropriating or ſtealing. See what ambition will do: Ananias would not come behind the beſt in ſeeming charitable: therefore though he was loath to part with his money; yet you ſee how dear he would purchaſe the good Opinion of Men. In the mean time, not conſidering that God ſaw him, and would once ſeverely revenge it.

V. 3. but Peter ſaid] The matter being Divinely revealed to Peter; or he might know the poſſeſſion, and conjecture the value of it; the firſt conjecture ſeemeth moſt probable.

to lye to the Holy Ghoſt] that thou ſhouldeſt thus lye, or deceive: of ψεύδω, fallo, fruſtro. So Sophocles cited alſo by Suidas, μὴ ψεῦσαι —— τῆς ἐπιούσης ἐλπίδος, ψεύσασθαί σε deceive not your approaching hope. So ementita auſpicia, Cicer. Lying preſages, deceiving hope. He calleth this lying to the Holy Ghoſt: for when they had dedicated the poſſeſſion to God, for the relief of his ſervants, the fraud and falſehood concerned his intereſt, and this their ſeeming Charity was Hypocriſie and lying to God: though they ſo behaved themſelves in this buſineſs,as if they had to deal with men onely, not with God: they preſumed that Man could not diſcover this ſacriledge,and detention of that which was conſecrated to the uſe of the Church, neither conſidered they that God would.

V. 4. while it remained] οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμενε; remaining, did it not remain to thee? That is, it was thine own righs; thou mighteſt juſtly have kept the poſſeſſion to thy ſelf, or the price thereof, to thine own uſes, neither would that have made thee unworthy of the ſociety of Chriſtians: the fault is aggravated in that he was urged by no neceſſity: had the Apoſtles compelled him to ſell, there might have been ſome colour for his detention of ſome part of the price; but now, it being his own to diſpoſe of, his ſinne was, that dedicating the whole to the Churches uſe, he kept back a part thereof. Here appeareth, that they had no Law or Decree made, or in uſe among Primitive Chriſtians, to alienate and and ſell their poſſeſſions; for Peter clearly ſheweth, that Ananias might juſtly have kept his own in land or money: For otherwiſe, he would have ſaid, it remained not to thee, but to the Church, by right of community. They who now would have all things in common, have no ground from theſe practiſes of the Primitive Church, as they pretend: their community was not compulſory,but free and voluntary: otherwiſe, it had neither been thankſworthy, nor ſuch a leading example of Piety in the particulars, as the Holy Ghoſt here ſetteth out: It is conſiderable which Chryſoſtome ſaith, hom. 12. See (ſaith he) how they (who were owners of poſſeſsions) permitted not the Apoſtles to ſell (them) but the (owners) their ſelves ſold, and gave the price to them, to diſtribute. Neither could they have given them, nor the Apoſtles juſtly received; had not the giver been bonæ fidei poſſeſſores, true and lawfull proprietors. It is theft without the owners conſent, to give that which is not our own, and no leſs to receive it.

was it not in thine own power] No man compelled thee to ſell and give; but to make God a Proffer of all, and to perform but a part; this was to tempt God (as verſe 9.) to try whether he ſaw and vvould revenge.

thou haſt not lied unto men, but, &c.] Thou haſt not lied to us onely, or chiefly, but unto God, whoſe intereſt thou haſt invaded, by cancealing that which thine owne pretence made ſacred

V. 5. hearing theſe words fell down] Thus God ſometimes preſently revengeth ſinnes, to terrifie others, and to reſtrain them from the like, as here: So God is known when he judgeth, Pſalm 9. 16. Neither may any think ſacriledge no ſinne now, becauſe God doth not preſently puniſh it with ſudden death, as here: the puniſhment following will once ſhew it an abominable ſin, and come too ſoon on him on whom it ever cometh. He is the ſame God ſtill of unchangeable juſtice: and if we mark well, this age hath afforded many remarkable examples, of ſacriledge heavily puniſhed; eternity will ſhew innumerably more.

V. 6. and the young men aroſe] Which were of the Church, they aroſe, that is, ſet themſelves about it; an uſual Hebraiſme, Joſh. 8. 3. and 24. 9. Jud. 20. 8, &c.

V. 7. came in] To the Apoſtles and others with them, in the Temple, or private houſe, where they uſed to aſſemble. See chap. 2. 46. See alſo v. 12. Unto the foregoing example of divine juſtice, Luke annexeth the narration of another in Saphira, who conſenting to her husbands ſin, ſhared with him in the like puniſhment: to the evidence of the truth of this hiſtory, the circumſtance of time is recorded: about the ſpace of three hours after Ananias was dead, Saphira his wife, not knowing what was done, came into the place where the Apoſtles were.

V. 8. yea for ſo much] She who had agreed with her husband what to ſay, thus vailed her ſin with a lye: a fault too common now a dayes, to endeavour to cover ſin with ſin. She knew, and her conſcience told her it was a lye, and ſo a grevious ſin; yet ſhe who conſented to her husbands ſin, addeth ſin to ſin. Such is the ſinners miſery, one ſin unrepented, draweth on other ſins, until deſtruction come.

V. 9. to tempt the Spirit of the Lord, &c.] It is the ſame in effect which he ſaid, verſe 4. to lye unto God, or in the preſence of God: as often as men ſin againſt their own conſciences, they do preſumptuouſly tempt God, or try whether God will be juſt or no.

behold the feet of them] Meaning they that buried thy husband are returned: and here alſo by a divine revelation, he foretelleth of her death preſently to enſue.

V. 10. then fell ſhe down ſtraitway] They that are in the ſame faults muſt expect the like puniſhments or worſe (except in caſe of timely repentance) which being prolonged are ever greatned. It were well to be wiſhed, that the ſacrilegious of theſe times would timely be warned by theſe examples; and remember that it is the ſame God of unchangeable juſtice now looking on this ſin, who ſo ſeverely puniſhed it in theſe two: and that detaining that which they have received any-wayes from other unjuſt poſſeſſours, is conſenting with them in the ſame crime, and that, except in caſe of reſtitution and true repentance, they muſt once ſuffer grievous puniſhment, becauſe God is impartially juſt: nor will it availe the hypocrite that he maketh conſcience of ſome ſinne, or ſinnes, if he wilfully diſpence with any; the Apoſtle ſaying --- thou that abhorreſt idols, committeſt thou ſacriledge? Rom. 2. 22.

V. 11. and great fear came upon all] All that ſaw or heard of this ſevere judgement of God, which was to warn all to be ſincere, and to beware of hypocriſie. Such reſtraints fleſh and blood have ſometimes need of, to make them know that it is a dreadful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, Hebr. 10. 31. See 1 Sam. 6. 19, 20. 2 Sam. 6. 7, 9.

V. 12. many ſigns and wonders] Miraculous things done by the Apoſtles, whereby not onely the power of Chriſt, and his juſtice in this example of Ananias and Saphira, but alſo his mercy appeared in healing all diſeaſes, that thereby they might be invited to the faith; and theſe were neceſſary to the Goſpel, as the other for reſtraining thoſe corruptions wherewith Satan would otherwiſe have infected the Churches minority.

they were all with one accord] This he ſaith, to ſhew that none among them was ſchiſmatical, to forſake their publick aſſemblies, or in neglect thereof to hold private Conventicles. Of Solomons Porch, ſee chap. 3. 11. Here appeareth their conſtant reſolution, to teſtifie the truth of Jeſus, from which no fear or danger could now deter them.

V. 13. of the reſt, durſt no man joyn himſelf to them] They were ſo terrified with this example againſt Hipocrites, that they who were not ſincere, durſt not now make falſe ſhewes of religion, contemn the Apoſtles, or encounter with them by argument.

V. 14. believers were the more added] The example of Ananias, &c. was ſo far from diſcouraging men from Chriſtianity, that it more encreaſed the Church: theſe evil branches cut off the Lords vine, the Church, flouriſhed the better.

V. 15. into the ſtreets] Or in every ſtreet, the Apoſtles did ſo many and admirable miracles, in healing the ſick, reſtoring the lame, &c. and that ſo publickly, notwithſtanding the rage and vigilant malice of the chief Prieſts and Phariſees; that the people brought their ſick out into the open ſtreets to be cured even ſuch as could not come out themſelves, but were by their friends brought out of doors on beds and couches.

the ſhadow of Peter paſſing by] See alſo c. 19. 12. Not that the body of the Apoſtle, much leſſe the ſhadow, or garments, had any ſuch inherent vertue, as to heal the ſick; but God exerciſed the power of healing ſo abundantly, as that the weakeſt and otherwiſe improbable means were made effectual thereto; that men might know that it was his power onely, teſtifying the exhibition of the Meſſias.

V. 16. bringing ſick folks] Hearing the rumour of the Apoſtles healing: and this was by the providence of God, that thereby the truth of Jeſus might appear, and the Goſpel be more propagated.

V. 17. filled with indignation] Or envy, or prepoſterous emulation: ζῆλος, in Scripture ſignifieth many things; ſometimes good, 2 Cor. 9. 2. Gal. 4. 18. Tit. 2. 14. But here it importeth an evil affection, as c. 7, 9. and 13. 45. and 17. 5. 1 Cor. 3. 3. and 13. 4. &c. Here was indeed a zeal, but without knowledge; which is but a kind of blind heat (ſo Chriſt taxed the ignorance of the Saduces, Mat. 22. 29.) violent zeal without knowledge, is but as ſtrength in a blind Sampſon, ſerving to deſtroy himſelf and others: Holy zeal, is to Religion as the natural heat to the body, wherein the life thereof is preſerved; but it muſt be fetcht (like that coal wherewith one of the Seraphims touched the Prophets lips, Iſa. 6. 6.) from the altar, and word of God, not humane phancies.

V. 18. put them in the common priſon] Where common Malefactors were put: here is a fruit of blind zeal: they were not able to deal with the Apoſtles by Scriptures or reaſon; therefore they betake themſelves to open violence. See John 16. 2. Luke 21. 12.

V. 19. but the angel of the Lord] God could otherwiſe have delivered them, but thus he would now confirm them when they ſhould ſee by experience, that he gave his Angels charge over them, and had made them miniſtring Spirits for their good. See Pſal. 34. 8. Hebr. 1. 14.

V. 20. ſtand and ſpeak in the temple] There was a time when Chriſt would not have them preach, ſomethings afterwards to be preached, Mat. 16 20. and 17. 9. But now was that ſeaſon of which he ſaid Mat 10. 27. preach on the houſe tops; that is, in publick: Gods diſpenſations have their times and ſeaſons: and he delivereth his, that they may more boldly preach the truth.

all the words of this life] See John 6. 68. That is, the Goſpel which is the Word of life eternal; which directeth believers to eternal life in Chriſt.

V. 21. when they heard that, they entred] When they had received commiſſion ſo to do, they feared not the moſt apparent dangers, but committed themſelves and the iſſue to Gods providence: Faith adviſeth not with fleſh and blood, which would eaſily ſuggeſt; Behold Lord, they ſought our lives but now, for preaching there, and ſhall we expoſe our ſelves to their malice by a further provocation? but preſently they obey Gods Word, to whom they lived, and for whom they now feared not to dye.

but the high prieſt] Malice is reſtleſſe: they call a Council, (that is, other Prieſt and Scribes, their Colleagues, as the Syriac giveth it; not that Sanhedrin, or great Council of 71. Judges which ſat on higheſt cauſes within their juriſdiction. See Mat. 5. 22.) they muſt ſeem juſt and legal who leaſt intend to be ſo: they ſend to the priſon, confident that they had the Apoſtles ſure enough.

V. 22. and found them not] So eaſily can God when he pleaſeth, fruſtrate the counſels and expectations of the enemies Theſe very ſervants were witneſſes of their fighting againſt God, by whoſe divine power they muſt know the Apoſtles were delivered out of priſon; ſo cloſely guarded, that they could not elſe have made any eſcape, but they that wilfully ſhut their eyes, cannot ſee things in the cleareſt light.

V. 23. the priſon truly found we ſhut, &c.] This miraculous deliverance might have converted the adverſaries, who might eaſily have concluded, that a Divine Power, againſt which there is no ſtriving, had delivered theſe priſoners, the doors being all faſt, ſhut with all ſafety, ἐν πάσῃ ἀσφαλείᾳ, with all poſſible diligence which might ſecure them, the Guard watching without: but their hearts were hardned, and they could think of nothing but the impious and vain purſuance of their own counſels againſt the truth of Chriſt.

V. 24. they doubted, &c.] διηπόρουν; it cometh of ἀπορία, ad anguſtias detruſus inexplicabiles hæſito: it is commonly ſaid of thoſe who know not which way to turn themſelves; ſuch ſhall be the condition of the wicked, when they ſhall ſee the evident preſages of Gods eminent judgement, Luke 21. 25. Thus Gods judgements often ſtartle the wicked, but convert them not.

V. 25. then came one and told them, &c.] This meſſage troubleth them more: while they are conſulting to deſtroy them for preaching, they hear that they are preaching again in the Temple. There is no counſel againſt God. Prov. 21. 30.

V. 26. then went the captain with the officers] See on c. 4. 1. No doubt they ſent now with greater indignation than before, as conceiving their authority contemned: yet durſt they not uſe violence as before, becauſe they feared the people might take part; they feared Men but not God: yet he maketh that fear of a guilty conſcience a bridle to reſtrain the rage of the wicked.

V. 27. ſet them before the council] Here was ſome ſhew of equity; to hear them before they would condemn them.

V. 28. did not we ſtraitly command you] Chap. 4. 18 The enraged high Prieſt chargeth them with three pretended crimes: firſt contumacy againſt their authority: did not we ſtraitly command you, &c.

behold ye have filled Jeruſalem, &c.] Here was the ſecond charge of ſchiſme and hereſie: that was by their law, likewiſe capital, Deut. 13.

this mans blood upon us] That is to make us ſeem guilty of Chriſts death: thus Hypocrites will be guilty, but not ſeem ſo. This was their third charge: it ſeemed to be an intolerable diſgrace and diſhonour to the chief Prieſts and Elders, to be accuſed openly of injuſtice and ſhedding innocent blood.

V. 29. we ought to obey God rather than man] That is, when men command or forbid us any thing contrary to the Word of God; we ought to obey God, and not Man. See c. 4. 19. Dan. 3. 18.

V. 30. the God of our fathers] Chap 3. 13.

V. 31. his right hand] τῇ δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ. God with his mighty power hath ſet up him to be a Prince and Saviour. See c. 2. 36. This is the ſum of the Apoſtles doctrine, the ground on which the anchor of their ſouls faſten who ſhall be ſaved. The office of Chriſt is deſcribed by two things. Firſt in that he is a Prince to govern his Kingdom, to beat down the rebellious, and to protect his ſervants and ſubjects. Secondly in that he is alſo a Saviour, as his name Jeſus importeth, and the Angel interpreted it, Mat. 1. 21. herein he declareth, as their impiety who would ſtrive againſt their Prince and Saviour; ſo their madneſſe who perſecute him whom God exalteth by his mighty power. See Pſal. 2. 4, 6. Phil. 2. 9.

to give repentance] This ſheweth how Chriſt reigneth in and for his, giving them hearts to repent, that through him they may be reconciled to God, Rom. 5. 1. This they ſay, to win (if it were poſſible) ſome of their enemies to Chriſt, ſhewing them the onely way to be ſaved in him: it is no more in mans power to repent, than to create himſelf; this Chriſt giveth by the Spirit of regeneration, and hereunto is remiſſion of ſins moſt certainly annexed. So that the Jews might hence have gathered an argument againſt deſpair, though they had crucified Chriſt if they could but have repented. See Luke 24 47. and c. 2. 38.

V. 32. whom God hath given to them that obey him] That obey Chriſt, who believe in him; the Syriac hath it: indeed there is no true obedience without faith, nor faith without obedience. Oecumenius gives this ſenſe; that he giveth remiſſion of ſins, we are witneſſes, and the holy Ghoſt alſo, who would not have come upon us, εἰ μὴ πρότερον αἱ ἁμαρτίαι ἐλελύωντο, except our ſins had firſt been forgiven; and that the Jews, notwithſtanding their ſin in crucifying Chriſt ſhould not be deprived of their ſhare in the ſame gift, if they would now repent and obey: but we muſt not underſtand that God gave the Spirit of regeneration to any becauſe he obeyed: the effect cannot precede the cauſe; the holy Ghoſt giveth an heart to believe and obey, without which we can neither believe nor obey. But if this (whom God hath given) relate to the extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, (as ſpeaking tongues, power of healing, &c.) then the ſenſe may be, as Oecumenius intimateth; God gave theſe extraordinary graces, to us whom he made obedient to the faith, and ſo will he to you, if ye will obey. Now the ſum of this argument is, that Chriſt is thus exalted: Firſt we are eye-witneſſes, who eat and drank, and converſed with him after his reſurrection, and after his charge given us to teſtifie theſe things, ſaw him aſcending into heaven. Secondly, the holy Ghoſt witneſſeth the ſame in our gifts and tongues and power to do theſe miracles (which your ſelves have ſeen, or otherwiſe certainly know) in the name and by the power of Jeſus whom you crucified; which miracles it had been utterly impoſſible to have done by his command and power, except he had not onely lived being raiſed from the dead, but alſo were ſo highly exalted, to glory and ſupream power, as to be able to give us ability to do all that he herein commandeth us.

V. 33. they were cut to the heart] διεπρίοντο, πρίω, is properly to cut with a Saw: here it ſignifieth a bitter perturbation of anger; taken from them that ſaw or grinde their teeth for anger: the Syriac giveth it, they were cut aſunder with anger: ready to burſt with anger and indignation, ſo that they conſult again to kill them: and why are they ſo angry? the Apoſtles giving them no uncivil or provoking words, it muſt needs appear an influence of Satan, who hateth all truth; therefore they (as our moderne hereticks and ſchiſmaticks) regard not the moſt evident proofes from Scripture; but burn with a deviliſh and revengful malice againſt the Apoſtles.

V. 34. Gamaliel] This was Pauls Tutor, chap 22. 3. whom Gods providence ſtirred up to moderate and allay the precipitate heat and fury of the reſt of the Council who were reſolved to deſtroy the Apoſtles: God ſometimes raiſeth up friends among our enemies to ſpeak for us and to ſave us. See Gen. 37. 20, 21. Joh. 7. 50, 51.

V. 25. take heed to your ſelves] Do nothing raſhly, and out of paſſion: but adviſe well, before you enterprize that which may hurt your ſelves.

V. 36 roſe up Theudas] A notorious Impoſtor; who under pretence of being a Prophet, moved ſedition among the Jews: now he ſpeaketh hereof as of a thing not very freſh, nor much before thoſe times: this Council was held about the year of our Lord 35. See Iſ. Caſaubon. exerc 2. N. 57. and Theod. Bez. in loc.

V. 37. in the dayes of taxing] The inſurrection which this Judas the Galilean (not Judas the Gaulonite) made againſt the Romans, was, when they ſent out another tax, after that which is mentioned, Luke 2. 2. See Iſaac Caſaubon., Exercit. 2. N 59. Ioh. Druſius prateri. lib. 5. and Theod Bez. ibid.

V. 38. now I ſay refrain] He perſwadeth them to moderation by a Dilemma: either this work which theſe Apoſtles and followers of Chriſt act, is of Man, or of God: if of Men, it will come to nought without your troubling your ſelves with them: but if it be of God, you can never reaſonably hope to prevail againſt it: it is vain and impious to fight againſt God.

V. 39. leſt happily ye be found, &c.] μήποτε; leſt, that is, beware, take heed leſt, &c. It is a conciſe and ſhort manner of ſpeaking: as Gen. 3. 22. leſt he put his hand, &c. That is, proſpiciamus ne, &c. See Mat. 25 9. Budæus noteth that this word, is not ſo much, percontantis, as addubitantis & addubitanter decernentis.

V. 40. When they had beaten them] This kind of puniſhment, it ſeemeth, the Romans permitted the Jews to execute within their Synagogues, but not publickly Mat. 10 12. 2 Cor 11. 24.

they commanded that, &c.] In ſome things they are adviſed by Gamaliel, but other things they act againſt his counſel, in that they beat them and prohibited their preaching, in which they but fought againſt God.

V. 41. rejoycing that they were counted worthy, &c.] They were not Stoicks, men not ſenſible of injuries and diſgraces, but they who had in their infirmity forſaken their Maſter, now in ſtrength of Spirit, rejoyce that they may ſuffer for his name? they remember now that Chriſt told them, that they are bleſſed who ſuffer ſo, Mat. 5.

V. 42. and daily in the Temple, &c.] Conſtancy accompanieth their joy: they are not deterred by their enemies threatnings, but preach the word freely, in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon. (2 Tim. 4. 2) Oppoſitions of truth, are as the conflicts of the wind with fire, which enflame it more: ſuch is the admirable work of Gods ſpirit giving confidence in Chriſt, and aſſurance of victory in him: gaudet Petrus in verberibus, qui ante in verbo timebat. Gregor. hom. 30. in Evang. Peter rejoyceth in ſtripes, who before, was afraid at (a damoſels) words.

CHAP. VI.

Verſe 1. THe Grecians againſt the Hebrews] Theſe were Jewes of Paleſtine, which are here called Hebrews, born and bred there; and Jewes of Greece, here called Grecians: whoſe anceſtors were Jewes, though they had dwelt in Greece, and uſed the Greek tongue as their native. See Jo. Druſ. prater. l 5.

were neglected in their daily miniſtration] They were not duely relieved by thoſe who had the care and overſight of the poor.

V. 2. and ſerve tables] To make proviſion for, or ſerve at tables, in their ordinary diet provided for the poor; and at their feaſts of charity; becauſe they had greater work in hand; that is, to preach the word of God, as, verſe 4.

V. 3. Look out among you ſeven men, &c.] Thus they ſhew them a meanes to take away the grievance, and to compoſe the difference, that they may hold unity, and eſtabliſh ſome diſcipline and order, without which no Church can ſubſiſt: they name ſeven, not tying other Churches to that number, but conſidering what was ſufficient for them; and they ſhew how Church Officers ought to be qualified, as in the following words appeareth --- of honeſt report, &c.

V. 4. but we will give our ſelves continually, &c.] They meant not to aſſign the charge to ſome ſurrogates, or deputies, that their ſelves might live at eaſe, but to follow a more principal part of their miniſtry, conſiſting in theſe two ſpecified duties, prayer and miniſtry of the word a proſelyte of Antioch] See chap. 2. 10.

V. 5. Philip] Chap. 21. 8.

V. 6. and laid their hands on them] By this impoſition of hands the Primitive Church ſignified a conſecration of a man to God, in ſome office or deſign, as chap. 13. 3. this rite the Hebrews uſed in their ſolemn ſacrifices, and in their prayers, and private bleſſings, as Gen. 48. 14. Mat. 19. 13 and this ſame rite the Chriſtian Church uſed in ordination of Minſters, as here, ſo 1 Tim. 5. 22. and many other places it appeareth; to avoid intruſion into that ſacred office; and to ſignifie the approbation of the Church thereby declaring them fit, and authorized to their miniſtry, by it, as by their publick ſeal. See 1 Tim. 4. 14. 2 Tim. 1. 6. Hebr 6. 2. Which being now caſt off, and deſpiſed by ſchiſmaticks hath brought in ſo much confuſion and miſery upon the Church: every vain babler now, (without any ordination by impoſition of their hands whom God truſted with that power) intruding at his pleaſure, into the Office of the Miniſtry.

V. 7. obedient to the faith] That is, the doctrine of the Goſpel, Rom. 1. 5 and 16. 26. the ſenſe is, that now many of the Levitical Prieſts (before, the moſt implacable enemies to Chriſt, and the moſt active adverſaries of the Goſpel) were converted to the faith, and truth of the Goſpel; though it be moſt probable, that this (πολύς τε ὄχλος, a great multitude, or company) rather relates to the Jews in general, than peculiarly to the Prieſts, the Syriac gives it, & populus multus ex Judæis obediebat fidei, much people of the Jews obeyed; multitudes, among whom were alſo ſome, or many Prieſts.

V. 8. Full of faith] That is, of an excellent meaſure of faith, and powerful in miracles.

V. 9. certaine of the Synagogue] It is likely that the Romanes permitted other nations, having trade at Jeruſalem, to have their Synagogues, or Church by themſelves.

the Libertines] Thus the Romans called the iſſue of their ſlaves when they were manumiſſed, or ſet at liberty, as Beda thinketh, Chryſoſt. hom. 15. taketh theſe Libertines for any whom the Romans manumiſſed. Philo. legat. ad Caium, cited by Theod. Beza, deſcribed them thus; that Tiberius ſuffered a good part of the City beyond the Tiber, to be inhabited of the Jews, whereof the moſt part were Libertines, who being taken captives and brought home, were afterward ſet at liberty, and not compelled to change any thing of their countries rites; all which makes it more probable, that it was not a colledge for youth, but a Synagogue for thoſe who came from Rome, or other places to Jeruſalem, being men of this condition.

Cyrenians] A ſort of Philoſophers, of whom Cicero ſpeaks l. 1 de fin. Diog. Laert. l. 2. Ariſtip.

of Cilicia] A countrey in Aſia the leſſer, in which was Tarſus, the City where Paul was born, c. 22. 3.

V. 10. They were not able to reſiſt] Here alſo was the promiſe of Chriſt, Luke 21. 15. fulfilled. So much were theſe ſophiſters deceived, who promiſed themſelves an eaſie encounter with, and victory over, an unlearned antagoniſt; they knew not that they had to deal with the invincible wiſdom of the holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in him.

V. 11. then they ſuborned men that ſaid] They inſtructed falſe witneſſe what they ſhould ſay againſt Stephen: to ſuch artifices, Satans inſtruments ſtill turn themſelves, not able to make their party good by Scripture, and evidence of truth, they flee to falſe witneſſe, lies, and calumnies.

we have heard him ſpeak, &c.] The devil the father of liars, as alſo his children perjured falſe witneſſes are aſhamed of no lies: otherwiſe they would not have accuſed this Saint of blaſphemy: what was the matter of that blaſphemy they accuſed him of, is ſet down v. 14. they counted it high blaſphemy for any man to ſpeak concerning the abrogation of the ceremonial Law; becauſe they could not for the vail laid over their hearts, look unto Ieſus the end of the Law; or the demoliſhing of the Temple of Jeruſalem, with which poſſibly they dreamed, the World muſt have its end. Now becauſe Stephen probably preached the abolition of the Ceremonial Rites, when all was fulfilled in Chriſt the truth and ſubſtance of all legal ſhadows, they preſently conceive that he preached blaſphemy. 'Tis a common folly, ignorant men accuſing them of errour, whom they underſtand not; diſcover their malice and ignorance.

V. 12. They ſtirred up the people] Being foiled in their diſputes, they burn with revenge, compoſing their plot againſt him, firſt by ſuborned witneſſes, next by clamouring among the people, and complaining of him to the Prieſts: and then by laying violent hands on him to convent him before the council.

V. 13. To ſpeak blaſphemous words, &c.] The accuſations run very high; firſt that he ſpake words againſt that holy city, and the temple; and ſecondly that he alſo blaſphemed the Law: it is uſual for the moſt impious to accuſe the ſervants of God, of greateſt impieties: ſo they accuſed the moſt Holy Ieſus: ſuch accuſations faſten not on the juſt, (for God will finally judge) but render the accuſers the more unjuſt and guilty.

V. 14. That this Jeſus, &c.] This they ſpake in ſcorn and contempt: ſo they miſconſtrued, and wreſted the words of this holy Preacher; as the enemies of Religion ſtill do.

the cuſtomes] Or rites.

V. 15. as it had been the face of an Angel] With an admirable ſplendor and Majeſty, ſuch as we read of Moſes, Exod. 34. 30. an argument of a good conſcience, and the Divine preſence of the Holy Ghoſt aſſiſting him.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1. ARe theſe things ſo] This ſaith he, having heard the accuſations of the falſe witneſſes; as if he would give Stephen a fair liberty to defend himſelf, whom he yet prejudged, reſolved before hand to condemn any thing which ſhould be alleaged in defence of the truth of Chriſt. See alſo Iohn 9. 22. therefore he demanded not why Stephen preached, as he did, but whether he preached ſo, as intimating that if he preached Chriſt, he was to be condemned.

V. 2. men, brethren, and fathers, &c.] Thus he ſtileth them, becauſe how ever they were profeſſed enemies of the Goſpel, yet were they governours of the Church of Iſrael, which God had not yet rejected and thus he would gain attention to that which he ſpake, in hope it might take with ſome of them, for whom he alſo prayed: and ſo did it. See chap. 8. 1, 9, 19, 20.

the God of glory] See 1 Cor. 2. 3. He to whom all honour and glory is due, Rev. 4. 11. and 5. 12. Rom. 11. 36. this he ſaith to diſtinguiſh him from all falſe gods; and to ſhew that he worſhipped and preached none but the true God.

when he was in Meſopotamia] In U of the Caldees, Gen. 11. 28. he ſpeaketh here of Meſopotamia, as comprehending Babylon, and Chaldæa in it: and this he ſaith to intimate, that the true Religion was not (as ſome of them vainly conceived) tyed to Jeruſalem, or Paleſtine: for God appeared to Abraham being yet in Meſopotamia, and called him thence, and that he went not immediately into Canaan, but dwelt a time in Carran, a City of Meſopotamia, unto the death of his Father Thare: the purpoſe is to ſhew them, that there was truth of Religion with Abraham, before he ever ſaw Canaan, or that he received circumciſion, and before any of the ceremonies appointed by the miniſtry of Moſes were in uſe; before there was either Temple, or Tabernacle. See Rom. 4. 10. &c. Carran was a city famous for the deſtruction of Craſſus, and the Roman Army there. Plutarc. Craſ. Dio. Roman. lib. 40. Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 5 cap. 24.

V. 3. Get thee out of thy Countrey] Gen. 12. 1. Hebr. 11. 8. He will ſhew them, that neither the land of Canaan which Abraham had yet never ſeen, nor the ceremonies of the Law not yet given by the miniſtry of Moſes, nor the Temple which was not yet built, did any thing availe Abraham, as to the favour of God; but this faith which the Author to the Hebrews forecited, ſpeaketh of; and therefore it was a frivolous objection concerning their rites, and holy place: as if God could no where elſe be ſerved but at Jeruſalem, or would no otherwiſe than by legal ceremonies: nay but faith and obedience to Gods command here ſet off the excellency of Abraham; both which have here a ſharpe tryal; in that God commanded him to go out of his Countrey, from his kindred, and that to a place and people utterly unknown to Abraham; herein Abrahams obedience was an evident demonſtration of that faith which was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe, Rom. 4. 3.

V. 4. Then came he out] When he had received a command from God; which commendeth the readineſſe of his faith, ſubjecting all his intereſt and affections, to Gods will and pleaſure.

he removed him] God removed him, or removing him cauſed him to dwell, by commanding him to go into Canaan, which he would give to his poſterity, Gen. 11. 26.

V. 5. gave him no inheritance, &c.] Theſe things are ſaid in reſpect of the general and full poſſeſſion, which he gave him in his poſterity: for otherwiſe he purchaſed a field of Ephron, Gen. 23. 17. thus God tryed Abraham, and thus he tryeth many of thoſe whom he calleth heirs of the world, (Rom. 8 17. Tit. 3. 7. 1 Cor. 3. 22) ſuffering them for the preſent to want poſſeſſions, that they may learn with Abraham to caſt themſelves wholly on Gods providence, and to follow his guidance, and to look for a city which hath foundation (in heaven) Hebr. 11. 10.

when as yet he had no child] This ſetteth off the excellently of Abrahams faith. See Gen. 15. 2. &c. believing the promiſe of God in things to carnal reaſon improbable: for the promiſe of the land of Canaan to be given to Abrahams ſeed and poſterity, when as yet he had no child; his wife was barren and old, his ſelfe in years, ſeemed in relation to ſecond cauſes, more than improbable; yet Abraham believed, againſt hope, in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was ſpoken, ſo ſhall thy ſeed be, Rom. 4. 18.

V. 6. that his ſeed ſhould ſojourn] This alſo ſheweth Abrahams faith depending on God, while yet to carnal reaſon there appeared no probability of enjoying thoſe promiſes; God telling of a poſterity, but to be as he ſaid, Gen. 23. 4. גר־ותושב ger-vethoſhab. 70. πάροικος καὶ παρεπίδημος, a ſtranger and ſojourner; that they ſhould live in bondage, and be evilly entreated ſo long.

four hundred years] Gen. 15. 13. beginning to reckon the years from the birth of Iſaac. See Exod. 12. 41. yet Abraham believed the Lord: true faith hath heavenly eyes, and can ſee the truth of God through a thouſand difficulties: ſee the ground, Rom. 4. 18, 19, 20, 21. Abraham was fully perſwaded, that what he had promiſed, he was able to perform: Gods promiſes are for determinate times, and therefore ſometimes to us, ſeem ſlow, but are ever ſure; and the more difficulties ſeem to intercept them, the more comfortable ſhall their performance be to us at laſt.

V. 7. The nation to whom] That is, the Egyptians. That was added to comfort him that was not weak in faith: the ſtrongeſt faith is ſubject to tentation, and therefore hath need of confirmation.

I will judge] κρινῶ I will puniſh. So 1 Cor. 11. 31. which he did in ſundry plagues, Exod. 7. 20. & 8. 6, 17, 20. Exod. 9. 6, 10, 23. & 10. 14, 22. & 12. 29. & 14. 27, 26. fear not the enemies, but be patient: God will aſſuredly judge for his people. See Deut. 32. 23. Rom. 12. 19. Iſrael long ſuffered, but at the very appointed day, God revenged them, and delivered them with a mighty hand.

after that] The 400 years ended, Iſrael the ſeed of Abraham ſhall come out of Egypt, the ſelfe ſame day. Exod. 12. 41.

and ſerve me in this place] That is on Mount Horeb. See Exod 3. 1. 12. Exod 17. 1, 6. Deut. 1. 2, 6, 19 & 4. 10, 15 & 18 16 & 29. 1. God delivereth his people out of preſſures, and miſeries, that they may ſerve him. See Luke 1. 74, 75.

V. 8. and he gave] Gen. 17. 9. which ſignified the cutting off carnal affections. Theophylact. which was to continue until the promiſed ſeed was come, and had fulfilled all righteouſneſſe, Gal. 5. 2, 3 Mat. 3. 15.

Abraham begat Iſaac] Gen. 21. 3 Mat. 1. 2.

Iſaac begat Jacob] Gen. 25 26. Mat. 1 2.

Jacob begat the twelve Patriarchs] Gen. 29. 31. &c.

V. 9. the Patriarchs moved with envy] Gen. 37. 28.

God was with him] He favoured, bleſſed, and delivered him, verſe 10.

V. 10. and delivered him] This was the effect of Gods preſence, never inactive for his ſervants good: he did at laſt deliver Joſeph from the ſervitude and calamity into which his brethren ſold him, from the malice and calumny of his lewd Miſtreſſe, and from priſon: if God be with thee, fear not, Rom. 8. the ſoul cannot be in the body without ſome ſhews, and effects of life; much leſſe can the Spirit of God be with the Elect in vain.

and gave him favour] Gen. 41. 37.

V. 11. then came a dearth, &c.] Gen. 41. 54.

V. 12. but when Jacob heard] Gen. 42. 1.

V. 13. at the ſecond time] Gen. 45. 4.

V. 14. all his kindred] πᾶσαν τὴν συγγένειαν, the word ſignifieth both conſanguinity and affinity, as doth the word cognatio among the Latines (which the Interpreter of the Syriac here uſeth) import kindred, or alliance: and ſo συγγενὴς is kin, or allie, either man or woman, as Suidas interpreteth: the number here mentioned, compared with that number coming out of Egypt, Exod. 12. 37. ſix hundred thouſand men beſides children, conſidering their abode in Egypt, and Pharaohs cruelty to deſtroy their children, may well be reckoned among the admirable works of God, Deut. 10. 22.

threeſcore and fifteen ſouls] Whereas theſe perſons are variably reckoned 66. 70. & 75. we may conceive that this variety proceedeth from the ſeveral accounts; in one account they onely are reckoned, who lineally deſcended from Jacob, to be ſixty ſix perſons, Gen. 46 26. in a ſecond account, the whole number of the promiſed ſeed going into, or being in Egypt, are reckoned ſeventy perſons; for ſo, if we account, Jacob; Joſeph, Ephraim, and Manaſſes, with the ſixty ſix of the firſt account, the number is ſeventy ſpecified, Gen. 46. 27. in a third account are reckoned Jacobs Sons wives (excepted in the former reckonings as appeareth, Gen. 46. 26.) to make up the ſeventy five perſons in this word συγγένειαν, ſignifying, as hath been ſaid, as well affinity (or kindred by marriage) as conſanguinity or kindred by blood; one thing in this and the like places, is ever neceſſarily to be remembred, that the Apoſtle did not in vain warn us of too much curioſity about fruitleſſe queſtions. See 1 Tim. 1. 4. Tit. 3. 10.

V. 15. ſo Jacob went down into Egypt] Gen 46. 5. Hereby he would ſhew them that their fathers had the truth of Religion, and Gods favour in Egypt, before they had either Ceremony Temple, or Canaan to repair to, to the end that they might not vainly put Sanctity in place, or Ceremony.

V. 16. and were carried over] Meaning Jacob, and Joſeph at leaſt, if not all the reſt of the Patriarchs dying in Egypt.

into Sychem] Underſtand this diſtributively, as if he ſaid; ſome were buried in Sychem which Jacob bought, Gen. 33. 19 as Joſeph, which fell to his lot in his ſon Ephraim, Joſh. 24. 32. and ſome (as Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob Gen. 50. 13.) were buried in Hebron, in the field that Abraham bought for money of Ephron (Gen. 23. 17.) See Mat. 26. 8. John 12. 4.

of the ſons of Emmor] Or, beſides that of the ſons of Emmor of Sychem, beſides that place, or Sepulchre which Jacob bought of the Sons of Emmor of Sychem, where Joſephs bones were buried; here is ſet παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν, for παρὰ τὸ μνημεῖον τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὼρ, that is, præter illud Sepulchrum filiorum Emmor.

V. 17. when the time of promiſe drew near] That is, when the time of fulfilling Gods promiſe made to Abraham, drew near; for multiplying his ſeed, Gen. 15. 5. then God encreaſed them, when men endeavoured malitiouſly to deſtroy them.

V. 18. until another King aroſe] Another Pharaoh: (ſo their Kings were called, as the Roman Emperours Ceſars) ſucceeded that Pharaoh, who had Joſeph and his kindred in ſo much honour.

V. 19. The ſame dealt ſubtilly with our kindred] The Syriac hath it, he compoſed, or ſet himſelf againſt our kindred: the word κατασοφισάμενος, of κατασοφίζω (which is ſophiſtically to deceive, to beguile or circomvent with a fallacy) importeth, craftily deviſing, or plotting againſt one: he alludeth to that which Pharaoh ſaid, Exod, 1. 10. come, ſaid he נתחכמה לו nithchachema lo. 70. κατασοφισώμεθα αὐτούς; the word here uſed, חכם chacham ſignifieth aſtutus fuit, he was crafty, and, ſapuit; he was wiſe: and ſo חכמה chochma, is craft, as well as wiſdom: ſo here it importeth a clandeſtine and ſecret deſtroying the Iſraelites: For ſo he firſt gave in charge to the Midwives: but that not taking, he uſed open violence, commanding the male infants to be caſt into the River. See Pſalm 105. 24.

V. 20. in which time Moſes was born] Exod. 2. 2.

was exceeding fair] Hebr. 11. 23. Or fair to God ἀστεῖος τῷ θεῷ the Hebrew hath it טוב, which with them ſignifieth, good, or beautiful, Exod. 2. 2. the 70. give it ἀστεῖον, and Gen. 24. 16. Rebecca is ſaid to be טבת tobath, where the 70 give it καλὴ, very fair to look upon, beautiful to God, which Stephen here addeth, as emphatical; for every excellency is attributed to God, ſo Ninive is ſaid to be עיר־גדולה לאלהים gir-gedolah lelohim, a city great unto the Lord; that is a very great, or beautiful city. So Moſes was fair τῷ θεῷ, that is, by the ſingular providence and counſel of God that hereby Pharaohs daughter might be moved to ſave him, and bring him up as her Son, thereby fitting him for the great work to which God had aſſigned him; of his beauty Juſtin. alſo ſpeaketh. hiſt. l. 36.

V. 21. for her own Son] Exod. 2. 9 10. Hebr. and he was unto her לבן leben, the 70. as here, εἰς υἱὸν (chald. לבר) Elias Hutter rendreth it, quem illa adoptavit in locum filii whom ſhe adopted her ſon; ſo ſhe kept him and brought him up, as if he had been her own ſon.

V. 22. in all the wiſdom of the Egyptians] In Philoſophy, and all the liberal ſciences of the Egyptians.

V. 23. to viſit his brethren] ἐπισκέψασθαι; which as it ſometimes importeth viſiting to puniſh, Jer. 5. 9. μὴ ἐπὶ τούτοις ἐπισκέψομαι? ſhall I not viſit for theſe things? ſo alſo it ſignifieth, to viſit for help and comfort; as Phyſicians viſit their patients: ſo they ſaid, Luke 7. 16. the Lord ἐπεσκέψατο hath viſited his people: ſo were the governours of the Church, called ἐπίσκοποι, quorum eſt inſpectio in præſidiis Chriſti, & ſumma cura ſaith Budæus: becauſe they were quaſi ſpeculatores; overſeers of the faith and manners of the people committed to their charge. See chap. 20. 28. So the Apoſtles viſited the Churches which they had planted, to reform their errours in faith and converſation and to confirm and comfort them in the truth: now that Moſes having been brought up fourty years in King Pharaohs Court, ſhould on a ſudden have it come into his heart, to look into the condition of his afflicted brethren the Iſraelites, it appeareth to be by the inſtinct and motion of Gods Spirit, to do that which neither they, nor Moſes before thought of.

V. 24. ſeeing one of them] Exod. 2. 11.

ſmote the Egyptian] See Exod. 2. 11. he did not herein give an imitable example for any private revenge, but to ſhew them that he was appointed a deliverer for Iſrael, which he hoped they would have underſtood, verſe 25. the power of the ſword is in the lawful Magiſtrate onely.

V. 26. the next day] Exod. 2. 13.

he ſhewed himſelf] He offered himſelf again unto them, in that poſture of a deliverer out of thoſe afflictions, and that appointed by God.

would have ſet them at one] συνήλασε: Syr. interpret, Suadebat eis; he gravely exhorted them to peace: it is a principal part of a governours office, to compoſe contentions, and to preſerve peace.

Sirs ye are brethren, why do ye, &c.] He remembreth them of their near conjunction, and the bonds of nature which ought to unite them in love and peace: all diſſention is evil, but that worſt, which breaketh the bonds of nature, or holy profeſſion. It was Joſephs charge to his brethren, Gen. 45. 24. See that ye fall not out by the way; and their argument of reconciliation to Joſeph, forgive the treſpaſſe of the ſervants of the God of thy father, Gen. 50. 17. diviſions between brothers and profeſſors of one religion, are offences multiplyed by all the bonds which ſhould unite them together.

V. 27. But he that did his neighbour wrong, thruſt him away, &c.] Which ſheweth that the injurious are moſt averſe from peace, an evil conſcience hating any diſcovery, and ſin being impatient of any reproof. See Prov. 15. 12 yet they to whom God hath committed this charge, muſt perform it for their own indemnity. See Ezek. 3. 19.

V. 28. wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt, &c.] Moſes dealt meekly with him, but he that was faulty (as Oecumen, ſaith) πατρῴᾳ χρώμενος κατὰ τῶν εὐεργετῶν ἀσελγείᾳ, uſing his countrey (a Jewiſh) procacity againſt their benefactours rejected him; by this his intended recrimination aſſailing to cauſe Moſes to deſiſt from reproving: ſo the guilty would ever vail their crimes by others failings.

V. 29. Moſes fled at this ſaying] See Exod. 2. 15. &c. When Moſes perceived that it was carried to Court by ſome of his own brethren, and that Pharaoh ſought to ſlay him, he ſaved himſelf by flight into another nation and dominion.

a ſtranger in the land of Madian] Or Midian: a people that came of Madian Abrahams ſon by Keturah, Gen. 25 1, 2. Here Moſes married with Zipporah, daughter of Jethro, or Jether (he was alſo called Revel, Exod. 2. 18. and Hobah. Numb. 10. 29. Jud. 4. 11.) Prieſt or Prince of Midian: where he had two ſons born.

V. 30. When fourty years were expired] Exod. 3. 2 Here was the long tryal of Moſes faith; and the miſchief that one or few mens ſins brought upon all Iſrael, driving away their deliverer; and as much as in them was, lengthening their heavy oppreſſion fourty years: this was their ingratitude to God and Moſes, whom they ſorely wanted all that time.

in the wilderneſſe of mount Sina] Where he kept the flock of Jethro his father in law, on the back-ſide of the deſart of Arabia. Exod. 3. 2. (with ſo much humility, as if he had never been brought up at court, as a ſon of king Pharoahs daughter) with admirable patience expecting Gods time for Iſraels deliverance: this place was called the wilderneſſe or deſart of Sina, or ſin; which is all that countrey that lyeth between Elim (where Iſrael found twelve wells of water, &c. Exod. 15. 27.) and Sinai. Exod. 16. 1. there was much paſture for cattel: it took name from that very high mount Sinai, which was alſo Agar. Gal. 4. 25. and Horeb, the mountain of the Lord, which is a part thereof, it having two heads or tops; that on the weſt is Horeb, that on the weſt part of the mount, Sinai: it was called the mountain of the Lord, becauſe it was great, high and excellent (See on verſe 20.) or becauſe it was ſanctified of God by his appearing to Moſes firſt, Exod. 3. 2. &c. and again when he came down upon it to give the law, Exod. 18. 5. and 19. 3, 17, 18. fifty dayes after their departure from Egypt See Jerom To. 3. Fabida. Oct. Manſ. and de loc. Hebr. Horeb ſignifieth dryneſs, of חרב charab, aruit. So Hag. 1. 11. I called חרב Choreb a drought, or dryneſſe for this wilderneſſe had not waters, Deut. 8. 15. this mount had the name of Sina, Exo. 19. 1, 18. either of the buſhes there growing, (for סנה ſeneth is a buſh or bramble, Jerom, Fabiola q. ſ.) or becauſe God there appeared to Moſes in the buſh burning, but not conſuming.

an angel of the Lord] The angel of the covenant Chriſt, as appears, verſe 32. here he ſheweth by whom Moſes was called to that great and difficult charge of bringing Iſrael out of Egypt; not by any counſaile, or deſigne of man, but by the Son of God, Chriſt, who is ſtiled the Angel, Mal. 3. 1. in reſpect of his office of mediatorſhip: for the ſame is here avowed, verſe 32. to be the God of the Fathers, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob.

of fire in a buſh] Thus God here appeared to Moſes, who at other times, and on other occaſions appeared to the holy fathers in other aſſumed viſible repreſentations of his preſence, accommodated ever to thoſe things which he would thereby teach them, or declare unto them: ſo here he appeared in the forme of fire in a buſh, not conſumed thereby, to intimate that Iſrael in their fiery tryals and hard afflictions ſhould not be conſumed, but admirably declared to be the people, whoſe God was amongſt them to keep them ſo that the moſt devouring creatures ſhould not deſtroy or harme them.

V. 31. when Moſes ſaw it he wondred] To ſee the fire in the buſh, and it not conſumed, which bare a type of the Church in fiery tryals not deſtroyed. See Ierom q. ſ. this was done, that, Moſes might be toucht with the ſence of Gods preſence, and ſo be made more attentive to that which he would then give him in charge.

the voice of the Lord came unto him] ἐγένετο φωνὴ, it is an uſual Hebraiſm, Jer. 7. 1. &c. 70. ἐγένετο λόγος κυρίου, &c. Jer. 1. 4. the Syriac hath it here, the Lord ſaid unto him בקלא bekolo, in a voice; that is, the Lord ſpake to him, not in a viſion or dream (as ſometimes he did to the Patriarchs and Prophets) but in an audible voice.

V. 32. I am the God of thy fathers, &c.] That Moſes might not doubt of his calling, God who called him, revealeth himſelf to him; to which end alſo he mentioneth his mercies to the Fathers, unto whom he made the promiſes of delivering his people, their poſterity, from the bondage they were now in; to aſſure him that he would perform the ſame, and that the time was now come wherein he would do it: hereon was Moſes confidence grounded, becauſe he had the ſure covenant of God with the Fathers, and his word to himſelf for warrant: from this place, Exod. 3. Chriſt proveth the reſurrection of the dead, Matth. 22. 31.

Moſes trembled and durſt not behold] So dreadfull is the preſence of God to fleſh and blood, though appearing in mercy. See Exod. 19. 16. Daniel 8. 17. this was to ſtrike the greater reverence into Moſes. See alſo Exod. 20. 20 nulla quippe admiratio eſt ſine quadam formidine, Auguſtin in Pſal. 105. there is no admiration without a certain fear, how terrible will it be, when he cometh to take vengeance on thoſe who have obſtinately contemned him in his ordinance and holy laws?

V. 33. put off thy ſhoes from thy feet] In ſigne of reverence, and reſignation of thy ſelf unto my providence. See Ruth. 4. 7.

is holy ground] In reſpect of Gods preſent manifeſtation of his preſence and majeſty there, not otherwiſe.

V. 34. I have ſeen, I have ſeen] Exod. 3. 7. ראה ראיתי rao raithi, 70. ἰδὼν εἶδον, I have ſurely ſeen; this doubling among the Hebrews is emphaticall: God is ſaid to ſee our evil or affliction, when he regardeth it ſo as to undertake our deliverance: as on the contrary he is ſaid to ſhut his eyes, or ears, or to turn away; when he will not regard, or deliver: this is ſpoken to our capacity: and ſo he is ſaid to hear their groanings, and to come down; though indeed the evidence of every fact or paſſion be ever preſent with him, and though he who filleth heaven and earth, comprehending all, comprehenſible of none, changeth not place (Jer. 23, 24) yet is he ſaid to deſcend when he evidently manifeſteth his preſence: this Stephen here mentioneth to beat down all opinion of merit in their fathers, God ſaw nothing in them but afflictions to pitty. See verſe 51.

V. 35. by the hands of the angels] This Moſes whom they ingratefully calumniated as a delinquent did God honour in making him a ruler and deliverer of Iſrael, by the hand of the Angel of the Covenant, Chriſt. Gr. ἐν χειρὶ in the hand, that is, by the hand. Hebrews uſed to ſay ביד bejad in the hand, for by the hand. So Levit. 26. 46. &c. they called any thing which was an inſtrument to act by יד jad: but here it importeth the principal agent, Chriſt; (as 1 Cor. 10. 4.) by whoſe power Moſes was enabled to that great work.

V. 36. ſhewed wonders] Exod. 7. 9. &c.

in the red ſea] Exod. 14. Hebr. ים סוף jam ſuph; mari junci, or juncoſum; becauſe of the abundance of bulruſhes growing on the ſhore, ſome think it is ſo called: nor is it called the red ſea; from the colour of the ground or ſand appearing through the ſhallow waters, as V. Shindler. Pentegl. notes. So Ariſtophanus Avib. calleth it ἐρυθρὰν θάλατταν. See Strabo lib. 16. Plin. lib. 13. 25. Some give the Hebrew by mare finis; becauſe it is mare ultimum terræ ſanctæ: the bound of the holy land (Schindl. citeth Benjamin itenerar.) ſo indeed it is to the ſouthward. Exod. 23. 31.

lively oracles] The powerfull words which God ſpake to Moſes. See Numb. 12. 6, 7, 8. John 6. 68. See Deut. 32. 47.

V. 39. Our Fathers would not obey] He ſheweth here, that their fathers of whom they ſo much gloried, were rebellious againſt God, who delivered them by the Miniſtery of Moſes, as they now were againſt Chriſt; who came to ſave them from ſin and deſtruction: ſo that neither they, nor their fathers had any merit to ſave them.

in their hearts turned back] That is, in their deſires and affections. (See Numb. 14. 3, 4.) underſtand here by Egypt, all that ſuperſtition and idolatry to which that impious nation was given; which interpretation appeareth from the following verſe.

V. 40. Saying unto Aaron] Exod. 32. 1.

make us gods to go, &c.] That is, images to be carried before us; or to prepare our way: this ſhews their minde to return to Egyptian idolatry, and impious manners, and the abominable levity of that people, who having had ſuch late and admirable experience of Gods favour toward them, and preſence with them, were ſo ſoon turning back to the ſenſleſſe vanities of heathens, who had no knowledge of the power or law of God.

we wot not what is become of him] Thus ſtupidly and ingratefully do they contemn that admirable deliverance which God wrought for them, by Moſes; they knew he was gone up into the mount by Gods command, that he had left Aaron and Hur to govern them, untill he returned, Exod. 24. yet ſo quickly had they forgotten God, of whoſe power and gracious preſence, they had ſo much, ſo late experience, Pſal. 106. 13. 21.

and offered ſacrifice unto the idol] Sacrificing was then proper to God alone (as Auguſtin proves, de civ. Dei. l. 10. 4) but here was their groſſe idolatry, though they might poſſibly pretend that they would ſerve God by the idol, their worſhip being not (as ſome now would excuſe it) by any meanes terminative in the creature ſeen. See 1 Cor. 10. 20. but theſe making an idol, forſook God.

rejoyced in the works of their own hands] See Exod. 32. 6. So prone are idolaters to adore their own, though moſt irrational & fooliſh, inventions, as this was; and to pleaſe themſelves with (that which diſpleaſeth God) the moſt ſacrilegious prophanations: this is the devils joy; cujus gaudium eſt ruina ſanctorum. Proſper. reſ. ad. Gal. whoſe joy is mans ruine.

V. 42. Then God turned, and gave them up] So Rom. 1. 25, 26. God withdrew that talent of general grace, or light of knowledge which they made ſo bad an uſe of, giving them up to wretched apoſtacie: yet as Fulgent. de prædeſt. ad Monim. l. 1. truely ſaith: no man juſtly ſins, though God juſtly permits him to ſin: for juſtly is he forſaken of God: who forſaketh God and becauſe man forſaking God, ſinneth; God forſaking the ſinner, doth juſtice.

Martyr. dial. cum Try, Jud*, or Ῥεφφὰν as Oecumenius it ſheweth much variety of reading; rather than matter: other idols were variably called likewiſe; it may be it was the ſtature of a Gyant, as the Egyptians were wont to make Hercules, whom they called Chon, which varied into another tongue, might eaſily make Chijun, and it may be Ῥεφὰ or Ῥεφάν, might in the change from Hebrew to Greek, come of רפא Rapha, (a Gyant) as Gen. 14. 5. and ſmote רפאים the Rephaims in Aſteroth, that is, the Giants, or men of ſtrength, or monſtrous ſtature: it may be that Stephen ſpake the words of the Prophet in his own tongue, and that Luke writing in the Greek, followed their manner of ſpeaking: it is not material, the ſin here reproved was not in the name, but thing, which was an idol, and abomination, how ever variably called. Moſt probably it was Moloch or Saturn: now Saturn among the Egyptians (where the 70. tranſlated) was called Ῥεφάν: ſee the notes of Ludovicus de Dieu upon this place; and Athanaſius Kirkerus c. 5. Prodrom. Copti. pag. 147.

and I will carry you, &c.] Or therefore, &c.

beyond Babylon] Into Perſia; a countrey in the eaſt part of Aſia; the Prophet Amos, 5. 27. hath, therefore will I cauſe you to go into captivity beyond Damaſcus: that is, further than the people of Damaſcus, which Stephen here interpreteth, beyond Babylon: for as the learned Junius ſaith, the people of Damaſcus were carried away (by the king of Aſſyria Thiglath-Pileſer) into (Kir) yromedia near Suſa (that royal city, where Cyrus had his magnificent Palace Eſter 3. 15. & 8. 15. & 1, 2, 3. and other Perſian Monarches) 2 Kings 16. 9. but the Iſraelites both much further into Perſia, and alſo into the region of the Caſpians; as appeareth, Ezra 8. 17.

V. 44 the tabernacle of witneſſe ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου, that which the Hebrews called אוהל מועד ohel mohed; either the tabernacle of condition, becauſe Iſrael was commanded to come thither to ask counſeil of the Lord: compare Exodus. 33. 7. with Exodus 40. 2.) or the tabernacle of the congregation. Exod. 33. 7. becauſe there Iſrael congregated in ſolemn aſſemblies; and here Stephen calleth it, the tabernacle of witneſſe, becauſe here God principally witneſſed or ſhewed his glorious preſence, and where the ark of the covenant was, and the law and teſtimonies, concerning the appointment and making hereof. See Exod. 25. Exod. 26. & 27.

that he ſhould make it, &c.] Exod 25. 40.

V. 45. in with Jeſus] With Joſhua, who bare both name and type of Jeſus Chriſt, in that he brought Iſrael into the promiſed reſt.

V. 46. deſired to finde a tabernacle, &c.] David found favour to know where the ark ſhould reſt, and the temple ſhould be built, as alſo by whom; when he had begged it in earneſt prayer. See Pſal. 132. 2 Sam. 24. 18. 2 Sam. 7. 10. 13. 1 Chron 21. if then unto Davids time the tabernacle had no fixed ſeat, it muſt follow, that the worſhip of God is not tyed to place.

V. 47. But Solomon built him an houſe] 1 Chron. 17. 12. 1 Kings 6. 1, 2 &c. 2 Chron. 3. 1, 2.

V. 48. the moſt high dwelleth not in temples made, &c.] Chap. 17. 24. that is, is not comprehended in any place, though he will be worſhipped in place: he taxeth the impiety of them, who truſted in an imaginary ſanctity derived to them from the temple, which they yet prophaned, abuſed, and neglected the true worſhip of God, there to have been duely performed. Theſe words he inſerteth, leſt any ſhould fooliſhly conceive, that after the temple was built and conſecrated, the worſhip of God was ſo tied to that place, as if God were ſhut up therein: no no, the moſt High, filleth, and comprehended of none, comprehendeth, heaven, earth, all places.

V. 49. Heaven is my throne] Iſa. 66. 1, 2.

V. 50. hath not my hand made, &c.] Hands are attributed to God, according to our capacity: the ſcope is to intimate, that God hath no need of gold, curious ornaments of his temple, nor ſacrifices; as Pſal. 50. 10, 11, 12. &c. and that the ſubſtance of Gods worſhip conſiſteth not in outward ceremonies, neither did he require any offerings for his own ſake: but to exerciſe men in the duties of piety, and obedience to him: whereby it appeareth, how much diſtant humane inventions are, from true religion and worſhip of God.

V. 51. ye ſtiff necked] He alludeth to the words of Jeremie 7. 26. and other like. See Exod 33. 3. Deut. 9. 6 meaning that they were ever obſtinate, and would not ſubmit to the guidance of Gods word.

uncircumciſed in heart and ears] Who carry the external ſigne of circumciſion in the fleſh, but have not the effect thereof, and inward regeneration of the heart. See Rom. 2. 28, 29. Jer. 9. 26.

V. 52. which of the prophets] He ſheweth that their diſobedience to God, and perſecution of the Prophets was not new with them, but even as it were hereditary; ſo that their pretence of ſucceſſion and holy anceſtors was but a vain oſtentation.

of the juſt one] That is, Chriſt, 1 John 2. 1. Acts 22. 14. Chriſt our righteouſneſſe. 1 Cor. 1. 30. in whom onely we are juſtified, Rom. 5. 1.

betrayers and murderers] They betrayed him, who hired Judas to betray him; and they murdered him, who delivered him up (with their importune and outragious ſuffrages and outcries) to be crucified. See c. 2. 23, 36.

V. 53. by the diſpoſition of angels] By the miniſtery of Angels, by the mandate (as the Syriac hath it) or proclaiming of Angels, Deut. 33. 2. Gal. 3. 19. Hebr. 2. 2. the meaning is, if ye deſpiſe the law given by ſo glorious and dreadfull a miniſtery; no marvell if you deſpiſe the goſpel propoſed to you in ſo ſimple and mean a mannner, as by infirme men.

V. 54. were cut to the heart] See chap. 5 33. It is very true, nunquam ſine querela, ægra tanguntur: Senec. de Ira cap. 10. you can never touch the ſore without grief of the patient: all would be praiſed, nulli grata reprehenſio eſt (ſaith Salvian de gub. Dei lib. 8. init.) none love reproof (none but the wiſe, Prov. 9. 8. & 19. 25) that which is worſe, the moſt wicked caſt-away would rather hear his own falſe praiſes, than true reprehenſion, and be deceived with jeering applauſe, than ſaved with wholſom admonitions.

V. 55. the glory of God, &c.] In this extraordinary viſion, he ſaw the admirable glory of Chriſt in heaven, (as mortal man could apprehend) to ſtrengthen him in this trial.

V. 56. I ſee the heaven opened &c.] This he teſtifieth, to aſſure them, that they did but vainly ſtrive againſt the truth of Chriſt, whom they ſuppoſed to be deſtroyed by their malice, for he was now in the higheſt glory, reigning with God in heaven.

on the right hand of God] See Pſalm 110. 1. Mark 16. 19. Hebr. 1. 3. this is a tranſlatitious ſpeech complying with our underſtandings, taken from things familiar and known to us, with whom the right hand is the place of honour. See 1 Kng. 2. 19. Pſalm 45. 9. here underſtand not with the fooliſh Anthropomorphites (of whom Socrat. hiſt. eccleſ. l. 6. c. 7.) that God hath parts and lineaments like man, but as Peter Chryſologus well expreſſeth it. Serm. 57. Deus loca neſcit, divinitas recipit nil ſiniſtrum: God is not in any place (circumſcribed) the deity hath no left hand: and as Gr. Nazianzen, ora. 37. ſaith of ſuch like attributes, καὶ τοῦτο ἡμέτερον, thus alſo belongeth to us: and is attemperated to our capacity: here he intimateth Chriſts ſtanding as an advocate with the father, 1 John 2. 1 who is elſewhere deſcribed ſitting as a Judge Mark 16. 19. &c. So ſaith Ambroſ. lib. 10 ep. 82. ſtabat Jeſus quaſi advocatus —— ſedens enim judicat, all importeth his power and kingdom over all, and his care of us.

V. 57. then they cryed out] This they do to interrupt his further audience: ſo wicked men contend with clamours and violence: ſo grievous was it to Chriſts enemies to hear of his glory: what will it be to ſee it, and feel his power (See chap. 22. 23.) when he ſhall come to judge the living and the dead!

V. 58. and ſtoned him] Thus that impiety which began with ſhew of juſtice endeth in tumultuous and raging violence: thus they were to proceed againſt falſe Prophets, Deut. 13. 10. and to caſt out blaſphemers. Levit. 24. 14. but here tyranny turned judgment into wormwood; and the wicked and damnable condemn and deſtroy the innocent and juſt: the Romans permitted them not this power, but this they acted in a popular rage. See John 18. 31.

the witneſſes laid down their clothes, &c.] For the true witneſſes againſt blaſphemers were to begin ſtoning, Deut. 17. 7. they were before, murderers in their tongues by their falſe witneſſe, and now their ſeared conſciences fear not to embrue deſperate hands, in innocent blood.

at a young mans feet whoſe name was Saul] See chap. 22. 4, 20, afterward called Paul, that excellent Apoſtle of Chriſt, chapter 9. on whom God ſhewed ſo great mercy in his converſion, 1 Timothy 1. 13. &c. in how deſperate a condition was he, whoſe youth was ſo active in perſecuting Chriſt? yet God ſhewed mercy on him, that none might deſpair, who can but repent and convert.

V. 59. Lord Ieſus receive my ſpirit] Probably he uſed more words, but theſe were the ſumme of all. See Pſalm 31. 6 this is the true comfort of the elect, that they are aſſured that Chriſt Jeſus, who dyed for them, in their diſſolutions receiveth their ſouls, into his ſafe and bleſſed cuſtody (See 1 Peter 4. 19.) to live with him who is the life, and God of the living. Luke 23 43.

V 60. And he kneeled down] The moſt decent geſture of humble ſuppliants. See 2 Chron. 6. 13. Pſalm 95 6 Dan 6. 10. Acts 9. 40. and 20. 36. & 21. 5. Epheſ. 3. 14. Ezra 9. 5. Luke 22. 41.

Lord lay not this ſinne to their charge] This was the precept and practiſe of our Saviour; Matth. 5. 44. Luke 23. 34. this is invincible charity, which ſhall give us boldneſſe before the Lord, and aſſurance that we are his, where God giveth this heart, all the injuries of the world ſhall make the ſufferers more happy: and certainly this prayer was not without ſingular effect, as appeareth in the example of Saul afterward converted, 1 Tim. 1. 16.

he fell aſleep] That is, quietly dyed, as if he had fallen into a ſweet ſleep: which term the Scripture often uſeth to give us ſecure and certain hope of reſurrection from the dead.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 1. AND Saul was conſenting, &c,] Chap. 7. 58. So that though he acted not, yet his conſent ſpake him guilty of the ſame crime: a minde to do evil, is ſin in the ſeed, which time bringeth forth, James 1. 14, 15. there is an adultery of the heart, Mat. 5. 28. and a murder of the heart, Mat. 22. John 8. 44. God eſteemeth the evil we would do, as done, though we have not done it, and ſo, juſtly puniſheth it, merito autem malus punitur affectus, etiam cui non ſuccedit effectus. Auguſtin. de C. D. lib. 16. cap. 4. deſervedly is an evil affection puniſhed, though the effect (or ſucceſſe thereof) follow not, they that allow of the evill which others do, become guilty of the ſame ſin by their allowance: ſo were the Jews guilty of all the blood. ſhed by their fathers from Abel, ſo many ages before they had being in the world, Mat. 23. 35. becauſe in ſhedding innocent blood, they ſhewed their conſent with them, who firſt did ſo; conſider their ſtate who are now pleaſed with all the injuries done to Gods ſervants; the Syriac hath it, Saul was deſirious, and a partaker in his death, at that time there was a great perſecution] When the people quietly ſuffered Stephens death, then they who before were awed with fear of the people, fell violently on the Chriſtians: hitherto their rage was onely againſt the Apoſtles, but now it was againſt all the Church.

all ſcattered abroad] Divided in perſons, not in doctrine; fear of their perſecutors compelling them to ſave their lives by flight: now began they to do that which Chriſt fore-commanded them. Mat. 10. 23. and ſo began the partition wall between Jews, and Gentiles to be broken down, Epheſ. 2. 14. and whereby it appeared that the time was now come, wherein the Gentiles were to be called and joyned in communion with the people of the God of Abraham, who believed in Chriſt: and now began to be fulfilled that propheſy of Noah, Geneſ. 9. 27. God ſhall enlarge (or perſwade) Japhet, and he ſhall dwell in the tents of Shem.

except the apoſtles] They yet ſtayed by it, having received command firſt to preach the Goſpel at Jeruſalem. Luke 24. 47. not becauſe they were more free from perſecution than other Chriſtians; they were then, as many faithful Miniſters of Chriſt ſince, more hated and perſecuted than others; but becauſe God would yet a little longer by them hold forth his grace and mercy in Chriſt, to the murderers of his dear Son Chriſt Jeſus, and bloody perſecuters of thoſe, who by his charge and comiſſion, offered them gratious conditions of Gods mercy, if they would yet repent and believe in him from the free remiſſion of their ſins; which they obſtinatly rejecting and putting from them, judged themſelves unworthy of any mercy, and therefore were juſtly rejected, and utterly deſtroyed. See c. 13, 43.

V. 2. carried Stephen] The body of Stephen, theſe faithfull ſervants of Chriſt, (notwithſtanding the fury of their enemies, thoſe raging butchers) buried ſolemnly, and with great mourning, conſidering the Churches loſſe in him: a moderate, and pious mourning for the dead is juſtifiable, by the example of Chriſt, John 11. 35. the Patriarchs, Gen. 50. 1. &c. and the ſaints here, which is obſervable againſt the unnatural apathie of Stoicks, rather than Chriſtians.

V. 3. Saul, he made havock] Which he afterward relateth of himſelf, c, 26. 10, 11. See alſo c. 9. 1. Gal. 1. 13. he ſpared no ſex, but brake into houſes, to drag out Chriſtians to priſon, and worſe than that, cauſed them to blaſpheme, c. 26. 11. all this in his converſion, ſetteth off the mercy of God, who made ſo excellent a paſtour, of ſo bloody a wolf.

V. 4 went every where preaching, &c.] Thus doth God turn the malice of the enemy to the propagation of the goſpel, while they being driven from Jeruſalem, carry the light thereof, unto the Gentiles, augetur religio Dei, quanto magis premitur. Lactant. lib. 5. c. 20. Gods religion flouriſheth the more, by how much more it is oppreſſed.

V. 5. then Philip went down] Probably, this was Philip the Deacon, chap. 6. 5. for the Apoſtles ſtayed at Jeruſalem, verſe 1.

the city of Samaria] See on John 4. 4. and on Luke 17. 11. the city of Samaria is here put for Samaria (as Urbs Roma, for Rome(Samaria was the name of a mountain, city, and region. See 1 Kings 16. 2 Kings 17. Samaria was the metropolis of that province: it being demoliſhed by Hircanus, was built again by Herod, and named Sebaſte. Euſeb. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 13. cap. 15. the Countrey of the Samaritans lyeth between Iudea and Galilee. John 4. 4.

and preached unto them Chriſt] That is, repentance, and remiſſion of ſins by Chriſt, as Luke 14. 27. preached unto them concerning Chriſt. Syr.

V. 6. with one accord gave heed, &c.] This ſheweth the admirable power of God uniting hearers hearts, and preparing them to attend, where he purpoſeth to ſave: the Syriac paraphraſeth here, they attended unto him, and מתטפיסין methtephiſin, acquieſcebant omnibus, they conſented to all, or were perſwaded to all that he ſaid, טפס מתטפיסין tephas, acquieſcere obedire, &c. I. Buxtorf. Iun. lex. Chald. Syr. the ſame word is rendred ſometimes to be perſwaded, as chap. 21. 14. ſometimes, to obey, as Gal. 5. 7. Heb. 13. 17. &c. See chap. 5. 29 Sometimes to believe, as John 3. 36. the meaning of this place is, that the Samaritans diligently hearkned to Philip, preaching, and carefully marked what he ſaid, it is a main duty of an hearer: faith is by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. here was now the firſt degree thereto, reverend attention to the word of God; no wonder that faith is now ſo rare, how few attend to Gods word preached.

V. 7. unclean ſpirits] See Mark 1. 23. Luke 4. 33, 36. and 6. 18. and 8. 29. ſo called, becauſe they are delighted with the ſpiritual uncleanneſſe and filthineſſe of ſin, and thereto allure and inſtigate men.

Crying with a loud voice] By which it appeared that they went out by conſtraint, not willingly. See Mat. 8. 29. 31. which declareth the omnipotency of Chriſt, in whoſe name, and by whoſe divine power they were forced out, however unwilling and reluctant they were.

taken with palſies] This is that which was promiſed Mark 16. 17, 18. for under theſe few recited ſpecies, we muſt underſtand all maladies; according to the promiſe of Chriſt, Mark 16. 17, 18.

V. 8. great joy in that city] This was the effect of faith, und hope of reconciliation to God, and future ſalvation; the effect of Gods kingdom, See Rom. 14. 17. (ſuch variable effects doth one and the ſame word preached, produce; devils and wicked men are vexed, and cut to the heart with it (c. 7. 54.) but the elect, who have intereſt in Chriſt, are glad and rejoyce at it, in this one example obſerve, what confidence concerning religion and ſanctity may be repoſed either in places, or counſells and ſocieties of men; the goſpel was exploded, blaſphemed and perſecuted, at Jeruſalem, the once holy city, by the Scribes, Phariſees, high Prieſts, elders and their great councils; and the ſame is joyfully received in the deſpiſed Samaria.

V. 9. A certain man called Simon] This was a Magitian, witch, or conjurer, who of a long time had beſotted, and deluded the people of Samaria vvith his magical inchantments, ſo that they had generally a great opinion that he vvas ſome one of the Gods, or that he had ſome extraordinary favour and power vvith them: ſo did he profeſſe himſelf ſome great one, the Syriac hath it he ſaid, I am the greateſt: of his blaſphemies ſee Euſeb. lib. 2. cap. 13. eccel. hiſt. Ireneus. adverſ. hæreſ. lib. 1. cap. 20. Epiphanius. adv. hæreſ. lib. 1. hæreſ. 21. init. it is reported that in Claudius Cæſars time there vvas a ſtatue ſet up in Rome, in his honour with this blaſphemous inſcription, Simoni deo Sancto, that is, to Simon the holy god, Iuſtin. Martyr. apol. 2.

V. 10. to whom they all gave heed] They marked and believed his words, as oracles; ſo eaſily are men perſwaded to believe lies: vvhereas Luke ſo diligently ſetteth dovvn their great opinion of this impoſtor, he thereby ſhevveth the divine povver of the holy Ghoſt in Philips Miniſtery, vvho vvas to break through ſuch difficulties, that he might plant the goſpel there.

V. 11. of long time he had, &c.] Old diſeaſes are more hardly cured; they having been ſo long time ſtupified vvith lying miracles, might ſeem the moſt unapt hearers of the goſpel, but truth ſhal prevail, againſt all the power of Satan.

V. 12. but when they believed] Faith ought to precede baptiſme, in men and vvomen of years, vvhen they vvho vvere aliants and ſtrangers come to be baptized; for it is neceſſary, that they ſhould confeſſe their faith, and teſtifie their converſion, before they be admitted by baptiſme.

if perhaps, &c.] Not that Gods mercy to the penitent is fortuitous or uncertain (if perhaps) in ſcripture is not alvvayes. ſet to expreſſe doubting, ſometimes it relateth to a condition of the ſinners pardon; as ἐὰν ἄρα. &c. Ezek. 3. 11. אם---ישמעו Hebr. ſi audierint Ar. Montan, on vvhich place ſaith Ambroſ. de pœnit. lib. 2. c. 5. neſciebat ergo eos poſſe aut non poſſe converti? non ergo ſemper dubitantis iſta eſt elocutio, but God doth therefore propoſe his mercies and mans ſalvation, under conditions, that man may knovv both his duty vvhich God requireth at his hands, and the free and bountifull revvard thereof, vvhich God vvill give to them that obey his voice; ſuch are faith, repentance, converſion, obedience, &c. vvhich are not cauſes, but conditions of our obtaining mercy, neither propoſed dubiouſly on Gods part, vvho vvell knovveth (as that man cannot have them except he give them, nor ſhall have them in vain, ſo) the certain iſſue and effect of them in that man to vvhom he pleaſeth to give them.

V. 23 in

V. 23. in the gall of bitterneſſe] Meaning in a bitter and deſperate preſent condition. Gr. εἰς χολὴν πικρίας, here firſt, εἰς is put for, ἐν in: and χολὴν πικρίας, for χολὴ πικρίας, in which words he ſheweth the hypocriſie and ambition of Simon, as odious and diſpleaſing to God, as bitterneſſe is to the palate of man.

V. 24. pray ye to the Lord for me] At leaſt for fear of Gods judgements, he commendeth himſelf to the prayers of the Church; whether he truely converted or not, the Scripture being ſilent, we cannot determine.

V. 25. When they had teſtified] This importeth their office and duty enjoyned them by Chriſt, c. 1. 8. which they faithfully did, preaching the word, as they had received it from Chriſt; not onely in Samaria, but in many villages adjoyning, ſuch was their unwearied and invincible induſtry.

V. 26. unto Gaza, &c.] It was deſtroyed by Alexander the great, and ſo remained waſte: ſome ſay, another of the ſame name was long after built in another place.

V. 27, an Eunuch of great authority] Or, a great officer, or nobleman of the Queens court. See Gen. 37. ult. & 40. 2. Eſther 4. 5.

Candace Queen, &c.] This name was not peculiar to one Queen, but was given to all that reigned there, Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 6. c. 29. as Pharaoh to the Kings of Egypt, or Cæſar to the Roman Emperours.

V. 28. read Iſaias the Prophet] This ſheweth that he had ſome knowledge of the true God, and that he came not to worſhip according to his own phancy; for he joyned reading Gods word, with his externall worſhip which was to direct him therein.

V. 29. Then the ſpirit ſaid unto Philip] By revelation, or Divine inſpiration, the holy Ghoſt thus moved him to do that whereof he would preſently ſhew an admirable effect in the converſion of the Eunuch.

V. 30. Philip ran thither, &c.] He readily obeyed Gods command, and found him to whom he was ſent, ſtudious of the way of God: therefore he asked him, whether he underſtood that which he read, with purpoſe (according to the guidance of Gods Spirit) to interpret it unto him.

V. 31. how can I except, &c.] That is, except ſome who underſtandeth it interpret it unto me, here appeared a very religious comity in ſo great a perſon, ſo wel taking Philips queſtion, and meekly acknowledging his ignorance: therefore he invited Philip to come into his chariet and ſit with him.

V. 32. he was led as a ſheep to the ſlaughter] Iſaiah 53. 7. as a ſheep in reſpect of his patience, and as a ſacrifice for our ſinnes: as a ſheep for our redemption, ἀλλὰ ποιμαίνει τὸν Ἰσραήλ. Gr. Nazianzen orat. 35. yet is he the ſhepherd, to feed and keep his Iſrael, Pſal. 8. 1.

V. 33. in his humiliation] Becauſe he took on him the form of a ſervant, ſubjected himſelf to death, and ſtate of condemnation, due to us; God highly exalted him, Phil. 2. 8, 9.

his judgement was taken away] When he had ſuffered death, and fully ſatisfied the juſtice of God due to our ſins, even in the loweſt degree of his humiliation, then was he delivered ſafe from that judgement, which he ſubjected to for us.

who ſhall declare his generation] τὴν δὲ γενεὰν αὐτοῦ, his age, that is the continuation of his life, for, as Rom. 6. 9. Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more: in the Hebr. Iſa. 53. 8. דורו dor o (70. γενεάν, as here) דור dor, is duratio, ætas, ſeculum, &c. So Gen. 15. 16. ſomtimes it being doubled, it ſignifieth, many ages, or eternity, Iſa. 13. 20. & 60. 15. Exod. 17. 16. Iſa. 49. 11. &c. his kingdom ſhal have no end, Luke 1. 33. and who can declare, or reckon that which is eternal.

for his life is taken from the earth] His death was the paſſage to his endleſſe and eternall glory, however this ſeem improbable to carnal reaſon with the Prophet there foretold, concerning Chriſt his exaltation into his eternall kingdom and glory from this ground to be attained --- for his life is taken from the earth: yet the holy Scripture teſtifieth, that by the admirable counſel of God, it was ſo determined, that Chriſt through aſſlictions and death ſhould enter into his glory, Luke 24. 26. and becauſe he became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſſe, therefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, and hath given him a name, which is above every name, &c. Phil. 2. 8, 9.

V. 34. Of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this?] He enquireth of the perſon concerning whom the Prophet ſpake, becauſe that was a neceſſary degree toward the opening of this propheſie; when we doubt concerning the meaning of the Scripture, we ſhould conſult them who have knowledge and the gift of interpretation.

V. 35. Philip opened his mouth] This was an uſual manner among the Hebrews, to expreſſe a begining to ſpeak of ſome weighty matter.

V. 36. What doth hinder me to be baptized?] It appeareth hence, that among other parts of Chriſtian religion, Philip had preached to him concerning baptiſme, and that this great man had admirably profited in ſo ſhort a time of hearing as to deſire to become a Chriſtian.

V. 37. If thou believeſt, &c.] With a ſincere and perfect heart, without which baptiſme cannot ſave; he had here to do with a man of years, and yet an aliant, and therefore might not admit him into the Church of Chriſt untill he had made profeſſion of his faith. See on verſe 12.

I believe that Chriſt is the Son of God] As baptiſme and the effect thereof is grounded in Chriſt, ſo the Eunuch deſiring to be baptized, ſpeaketh onely of Chriſt: he knew that there was one God, who from the beginning had promiſed a Meſſias to ſave the world, now he acknowledgeth by that he heard from Philip, that Chriſt was he, prefigured under all the legall ſacrifices and ceremonies: under this title he comprehendeth all that the Scripture ſaith of Chriſt our Saviour: the like confeſſion of faith, See in Peter, Matthew 16. 16, and here we muſt know that naming Chriſt, he underſtood the Sacrament of baptiſme to be adminiſtred in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt: and ſo, as in faithful prayer, when we name one of the perſons, in him we addreſſe our petitions to the whole bleſſed Trinity; ſo where we read of men baptized into Chriſt, we muſt know that it was performed in expreſſe terms naming all, as Chriſt appointed, Mat. 28. 19.

V. 38. They went both down into the water] They were wont to dip the whole body, or go down into the water as here, and Matth. 3. 16. and ſprinkling with water hath alſo been of uſe in the Church; the effect is all one: and indeed, baptiſme is ſometimes expreſſed by waſhing, 2 Cor. 6. 11. Tit. 3. 5. and ſometimes by ſprinkling. Hebr. 10. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 2. which doth well anſwer to the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus, as was prefigured in the type, the ſprinkling of the blood of the Paſchal Lambe. Exod. 12. 3. the vertue of the Sacraments conſiſteth not in the quantity of elements, but in the power of Gods ordinance: as in the Lords Supper, it skilleth not, how much or little thou eateſt or drinkeſt (with diſcreet moderation) but how worthily: to him that eateth more (as to the gatherers of Manna) there is not the more; nor the leſs grace to him that eateth or drinketh little; ſo in baptiſme. See on verſe 39.

V. 39. That the Eunuch ſaw him no more] He was ſuddenly taken away, and tranſported by the Spirit of God, as 1 King. 18. 12. Ezek. 3. 12, 14. this was done that the Eunuch might know that Philip was ſent to him by God. Jerom de loc. Hebraic. ſaith, this water was a brook at the foot of Bethſur, or Bethſoron, where the Eunuch was baptized.

V. 40. But Philip was found at Azotus] That is, he was preſently at Azotus, a town in Paleſtine: ſome think this city was alſo called Aſhdod, one of the five cities of the Philiſtins; Joſhua 15. 47. wherein was that idol Dagon. 1 Sam. 5. 3. Jerom de loc. Hebr. Aſt.

CHAP. IX.

Verſe 1. AND Saul] Chap. 22. 4, 5. Luke being to deſcribe the admirable converſion of Saul; firſt ſheweth what a one he was before his converſion; a bloody and violent enemy of the Church; that none might deſpair of Gods ſaving grace and mercy, who can convert, and become new creatures, in faith and obedience to God.

breathing out threatnings] This ſignifieth a vehement heat of an enraged heart, which his very breath diſcovered in his words: being blooded in the death of Stephen, he purſueth other Chriſtians,, with the like cruel rage: the Syriac readeth here, Saul was yet full of injuries, and cruel anger againſt the diſciples of our Lord: but we muſt underſtand (againſt the diſciples) to be all that there profeſſed Chriſtianity, as verſe 2. appeareth,

V. 2. and deſired of him letters] That his perſecution might have the countenance of juſtice and authority he requireth commiſſion from the High Prieſt: for the Romans having conquered all Judea, with all the adjacent countreys, permitted the Jews to live according to their own Religion (whence the High Prieſts, as Preſidents of their Great Councell, had power to examine and impriſon any of theirs, who diſſented therein, though they had no power to determine in matters capitall) therefore Saul deſired their commiſſion to convent the Chriſtians.

to Damaſcus] Damaſcus, the chief City of Syria, bearing North from Canaan; from Jeruſalem ſix dayes journey.

any of this way] That is, profeſſed Chriſtians, chap. 24, 14. all which aggravated his ſinne, in that he not onely raged in Jeruſalem, but purſued them into other cities, and in that he ſpared neither man nor woman, though they are commonly priviledged, or pittied among armed enemies, by דרך derech, way, the Hebr. underſtood any courſe of life, or profeſſour: Pſalm 91. 11. 1 Kings 15. 26.

V. 3. ſuddenly there ſhined a light] He willingly perſecuted, who deſired licence ſo to do, but was converted againſt his intentions, and beſides his will: God ſuffered him to gain letters, to approach near Damaſcus, to conceive hope, and to frame bloody thoughts for the execution of thoſe cruel deſignes, and then ſuddenly he ſtayed his courſe, who ran ſo headlong to his own deſtruction: ſo true is that of Fulgentius ad Monim. lib. 1. prævenit impium, ut fiat juſtus, ſubſequitur juſtum, ne fiat impius; prævenit eliſum, ut ſurgat, ſubſequitur elevatum, ne cadat; he preventeth the impious, that he may become holy, he followeth the holy, that he may not become wicked; he preventeth the broken that he may riſe, he followeth him that is raiſed, that he may not fall; and that ſuddenly and without, and beyond their expectation. See chap. 22. 6.

V. 4. and he fell to the earth, &c.] Caſt down by the power and appearing Majeſty of Chriſt (See John 18. 6.) aſtoniſhing and terrifying him. Here the authority and letters of the high prieſts could nothing availe him, but he is enformed to yeeld to the all-ſubduing power of Chriſt, whoſe name and memory he ſo violently endeavoured to put out of the tongues and hearts of all men.

why perſecuteſt thou me?] See on chap. 4. 26. This ſheweth that thoſe who perſecute the ſervants and profeſſours of Chriſt, in them perſecute Chriſt himſelf, who liveth in them. Galat. 2. 20. See Matth. 25. 40. Iſaiah 63. 9. Zach. 2. 8. for he is the head of the Church. Coloſ. 1. 18. the Saints are his members. Eph 5. 30. it ſhould teach perſecuters a cautious moderation (See c. 5. 35.) and us who ſuffer, patience; rejoyce in as much as ye are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, 1 Pet. 4. 13. See verſe 5. Chriſt in his own ſacred perſon, and human nature, was now in heaven far above the reach of any creature, but he taketh all that is done here on earth againſt his ſervants on his own accompt, therefore he ſaith, not, why perſecuteſt thou my ſervants, who believe in me, but why perſecuteſt thou me? neither ſaith he, Matth 25. 35. the poor was hungry, and ye gave him no meat, &c. but I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat, neither ſaith he, Mal. 3. 9. ye have robbed the Miniſters of tithes and offerings, but ye are curſed with a curſe, for ye have robbed me.

V. 5. and he ſaid, who art thou Lord?] Theſe words proceed from an aſtoniſhed minde, in ſuſpence and doubt what to do: being dejected and humbled, he is now prepared to receive Gods commands, who before in his Phariſaical heigth of minde was upon a furious march againſt him.

Jeſus whom thou perſecuteſt] See on verſe 4. in that thou perſecuteſt them that profeſſe my name, who are one with me their head.

to kick againſt the pricks] This was a proverbial ſpeech, noting their contumacy and folly, who would obſtinatly hurt themſelves in purſuit of others: it ſignifieth here, a reſiſting God to a mans own hurt, Jer. 7. 19. 1 Cor. 10. 22.

V. 6. what wilt thou have me do?] He thought he had done right before (See John 16. 2. Phil. 3. 6.) but now finding the power of God reſiſting him, he ſubmitteth, and deſireth to know the will of God, thus extraordinarily calling him from his intentions. See Pſal. 25. 4.

ariſe and go into the city] That is, into Damaſcus (v. 8.) now near, verſe 3. God could eaſily have inſtructed him, but he would have him go into the city, that Ananias might inſtruct, and baptize him; firſt that he might teach Saul humility, the ground and foundation of all true religion, by ſending, and aſſigning him to their magiſtery, whom but now he not onely proudly deſpiſed, but impiouſly reſolved to afflict and deſtroy. Secondly God would alſo hereby teach all men to reverence and ſubmit to his ordinance in the miniſtery of men thereto called and authorized by him.

it ſhall be told thee there what thou, &c.] That is, there Ananias ſhall inſtruct thee concerning my will: thus Chriſt who could as eaſily have told him immediately what he would have him do, would yet ſend him to Ananias (Ananias is ignoraut of Gods will herein, as Saul; at preſent, and ſtarting at, and declining the office enjoyned him) to confirm the authority of mans miniſtery; to teach all hearers to attend unto it, as the very ordinance and power of God to ſalvation, Rom. 4. 16. and to free the preaching of Paul from all ſuſpition of compact: he could likewiſe, eâdem operâ have inſtructed the devout Centurion Cornelius (chap. 10.) by the Angel, but he cauſed him to ſend for Peter to Joppa, to come to enform him for the ſame end.

V. 7. hearing a voice] That is, Sauls voice (as c. 22. 9. See Dan 10, 7) not the voice of Chriſt, except ſome confuſed ſound, the meaning whereof they knew not.

but ſeeing no man] No man ſpeaking to Saul,

V. 8. he ſaw no man] He was ſmitten blinde by the brightneſſe of that light which ſhined unto him: to teach him that he was ſpiritually blind in his opinion of wiſdom, and rage againſt Chriſt and ſhould now in being obedient unto the heavenly viſion (Act, 26, 19.) be illuminated with a better, even an heavenly light, ſhewing the way to eternal life and ſalvation,

V. 9. and neither did eat nor drink] So much was he amazed at that which happened to him; it may be then was his rapture which he ſpeaketh of, 2 Cor 12. 2.

V. 10. a diſciple at Damaſcus named Ananias] Thus God would beat down Sauls arrogancy; ſending him, not to any of the Apoſtles for direction, but to an inferiour Chriſtian.

to him ſaid the Lord in a viſion, &c.] This was neceſſary to prepare Ananias, leſt otherwiſe he ſhould have been hindred by fear of Saul, from the duty enjoyned him for Sauls converſion: though he knew that God called and commanded, yet he excuſed; ſo did Moſes, Exod. 3. 11. &c. Exod. 4. 1. 10. &c. therefore God confirmed him,

V. 11. called Saul of Tarſus] This was a famous city of Cilicia near Antioch, chap. 21. 39. now called Hama.

for behold he prayeth] It appeareth that God revealed to Ananias, that Saul prayed, and how he would enlighten him body and ſoul, and therefore commanded him to repair to him for the accompliſhment thereof,

V. 12. and hath ſeen] Or, he ſaw; it is doubtful whether theſe words be a continuation of Gods ſpeech to Ananias, or Lukes concerning Sauls viſion; ſome think the former moſt probable.

V. 13. Lord I have heard by many of this man, &c.] Here was Ananias infirmity: fleſh and blood objected many lets, and fears to divert men from, or to hinder them in the ſervice of God; but the Spirit of God prevaileth in them againſt all.

V. 14. and here he hath authority, &c.] His name was ſpread far and near for a bloody perſecuter, the more famons was his converſion: and it appeareth that the Saints at Damaſcus had knowledge of his coming now, and commiſſion againſt them.

V. 15. a choſen veſſel unto me] σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς, a veſſel of election; it is an Hebraiſme, importing a choice, or elect veſſel; σκεῦος hath a more general ſignification, and is put (as כלי cheli with the Hebrews) for a veſſel, receptacle, or any inſtrument or utencill: here it ſignifieth one whom God had choſen, to bear the divine treaſure of the Goſpel, to the Gentiles, 2 Cor. 4. 7.

V. 16. I will ſhew him how great things he muſt ſuffer] He muſt ſuffer many things for my names ſake, whereof I will before inform him, to frame him to invincible patience; as if he had ſaid, thou ſhalt not need to fear him, as heretofore a perſecuter, for henceforth he muſt his ſelf ſuffer great things for my names ſake; for his profeſſing and preaching the truth of the Goſpel.

V. 17. putting his hands upon him, &c.] Ananias ſheweth his obedience in going, and God his purpoſe to confirm the authority of the externall Miniſtery, in directing it ſo, that Saul ſhould receive his ſight by the impoſition of Ananias hands, who could have reſtored him to a double ſight, by his own immediate power; concerning impoſition of hands, ſee chap. 6. 6.

brother Saul, the Lord, &c,] He being aſſured by Chriſt of his coverſion and adoption in Chriſt, ſaluteth him by the name of brother: alſo he ſheweth his authority and miſſion from Chriſt, which that Saul might be aſſured of, he nameth a private token, Chriſt appearing to him by the way as he came: and the end of his commiſſion, that he might receive his ſight, and be endued with ſuch admirable gifts of the holy Ghoſt, as might further enable him to his charge, and confirm him in the faith and truth of Jeſus.

V 18 fel from his eyes] Theſe ſcales falling off, ſhew that his blindneſſe was not ordinary, but ſuch as might minde him of his former ſpiritual blindneſſe: for though, being brought up at Gamaliels feet, he had much profited in that kinde of learning, yet his life, after his illumination, accounted that knowledge no better than blindeſſe, Phil. 3. 7, 8.

and was babtized] It was neceſſary for him by this ſolemn ſigne and ſeal of Gods covenant of grace, to give his name to Chriſt, to teſtifie his converſion, and to confirm his faith in Chriſt, and him in the profeſſion of the Goſpel.

V. 19, when he had received meat, &c.] A prudent and moderate care of health muſt be had, whereby we may be enabled to our calling. 1 Tim. 5. 23. ſuperſtitious abſtinence is will-worſhip, Coloſ. 2. 18. and doctrine of devils. 1 Tim. 4. 4. 1 Tim. 5. 23.

certain dayes with the diſciples] He joyned no more with Chriſts profeſſeſſed enemies, but with the Saints: it ſkilleth much what company we keep. See 1 Cor. 5. 9. 11. Prov. 1. 15. & 2. 12. & 5. 8.

V. 20. and ſtraightway he preached Chriſt, &c.] Declaring him to be the Son of God, and Saviour of the Elect, which doubtleſſe he copiouſly delivered. (See verſe 22.) by that largeneſs of heart which the holy Ghoſt gave him, beating down that double errour of the Jews, who thought, 1. that this Jeſus the Son of Mary, was not Chriſt, 2. That the Meſſias, was to be a meer man, a victorious and glorious ſecular Prince.

V. 21. were amazed] Becauſe in his ſuddain converſion they perceived the hand of God: this made his preaching more powerfull and effectual in them.

is not this he that deſtroyed, &c.] Remembring his former actions, they admire that ſuch a perſecutor ſhould now preach the ſame Goſpel which he ſo lately, and violently oppoſed: and they glorified God for him, ſee Gal. 1. 23, 24.

V. 22. proving that he is very Chriſt By comparing or maching places of Scripture, ſee c. 17. 11. & 18. 28. So the word συμβιβάζων ſignifieth, ſaith Budeus on this place, ex collatione ſacrorum vaticiniorum docens & probans, teaching and proving by comparing ſacred propheſies.

V. 23. after that many dayes were fulfilled] That is, three years, God would not preſently expoſe him to conflicts with, and aſſaults of, adverſaries, but for a convenient time reſtraine the fury of perſecuters: for it appeareth that after his converſion, he went into Arabia and returned again unto Damaſcus, and three years after he went up to Jeruſalem, —Gal. 1. 17, 18.

V. 24. but their laying of wait was known of Saul] 2 Cor. 11. 32. this was after his return from Arabia, that the Jews at Damaſcus plotted to deſtroy him: but God diſcovering their deſigne, he foreknowing the danger, eſcaped from them.

V. 25. the Diſciples took him by night] That is the faithful Chriſtians, thus provided for his ſafety.

V. 26. but they were all afraid of him] Between his converſion and coming again to Jeruſalem, were three years expired; Gal. 1. 17, 18. wherein he preached in ſome parts of Arabia, and thence came back again to Damaſcus: in this time was the conſpiracy of the unbelieving Jews againſt him: he eſcaping, and coming to Jeruſalem, and deſiring to unite in external communion with the Diſciples, as now he did in the faith of Chriſt, they remembring his former rages againſt them, ſuſpected his pretences which was a great tryall to him.

V. 27. But Barnabas took him, &c.] Of him ſee chap. 4. he being thereto incited by the holy Ghoſt, preſented Saul to Peter and James, acquitting him from the jealouſie they had of him: which he did by three arguments. 1. Becauſe he had ſeen the Lord Jeſus in the way, when he was going to Damaſcus to perſecute. 2. Becauſe Chriſt had ſpoken to him. 3. Becauſe he had boldly, and openly preached the Goſpel at Damaſcus.

V. 28. was with them coming in, and going out] Converſant with them, that is, Peter and James, Gal. 1. 18, 19.

V. 29. he ſpeak boldly] He openly profeſſed the Goſpel of Chriſt.

the Grecians] Acts 6. 1.

V. 30. forth to Tarſus] See on verſe 11. that he might preach the goſpel to his own countrey-men.

V. 31. then had the Churches reſt] When Saul (againſt whom the adverſaries were implacably enraged) was gone out of their ſight.

were edified] In that the Church ſtill encreaſed in the number of the faithful, and they in knowledge, faith, love, and holineſſe: this word οἰκοδομούμεναι, edified is a metaphorical expreſſion taken from building, ſpiritually the church the houſe of God, 1 Tim. 3. 15. (as every faithfull ſervant of Chriſt, is a temple of the holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 3, 16. 1 Cor. 6. 19) and we are all living materials, 1 Peter 2. 5. prepared and fitted here by the word preached, which is compared to an hammer that breaketh the rock, Jerem. 23. 29. ſo as that there ſhall be in the finiſhing and ſeting all up in heaven, no noice thereof; as in the building of Solomons temple, 1 Kings 6. 7. there was neither hammer nor ax heard.

V. 32. all quarters] Where the Saints were, whom he was to viſit, to confirm them in the faith.

at Lydda] This town in Jeroms time was called Dioſpolis: it was a famous place, not far from the Mediterrane ſea: near to this was Joppa, now named Japha. (Syr. לוד lud, and Hebr. לד lod,) 1 Chron. 8. 12. in the tribe of Benjamin. See Ezra 2. 33. Nehem. 7. 37.

V. 33. a certain man named Æneas] Mentioning the diſeaſe, and the antiquity thereof before the cure, he ſetteth out the excellencie of the miracle, end certainty of the hiſtory.

V. 34. Jeſus Chriſt maketh thee whole, ariſe, &c.] This he ſaid, being aſſured of the will of God herein, ſhewing that himſelf was but a ſervant unto the power of Chriſt, who wrought the cure. Here appeared the excellent faith of Peter, aſſured of the truth of Chriſt's promiſes: ſee the marvelous difference of a man left but a little to his own ſtrength (as he was when he denyed Chriſt, Mat. 26. 70. &c.) and the ſame confirmed by the power of the holy Ghoſt, as Peter now was, when he confidently told Æneas, Jeſus Chriſt maketh thee whole; and in full aſſurance of a cure beyond all art of man, or power of the creature, biddeth him, ariſe, and make his bed.

make thy bed] As they who have ſlept, riſing caſt up their bed: this ſheweth that he was perfectly cured and enabled ſo to do.

he aroſe immediatly] Which ſheweth that it was done by a divine power: art worketh in time and by degrees, but God when he pleaſeth in an inſtant.

V. 35. all that dwelt] As many as ſaw it; very many.

and Saron] Σάρωνα, Hebr. שרון Sharon, Iſa. 33. 9. 1 Chron. 27. 29. 70 Σάρων, a champion countrey, or tract of fruitful land between Ceſarea of Paleſtine, mount Tabor, and the lake of Geneſareth, running along beyond Joppa: this place it ſeemeth was near Lydda. See Jerom de loc. Act. and Joh. Druſ. ad Voc. N. T. com. 1 Saronas.

V. 36. was at Ioppa] A city by the ſea ſide. See on v. 33. and c. 10. 5.

V. 37. whom when they had waſhed] They uſed to waſh their dead, and to anoint them before they put them into the linen in which they buried them.

V. 38. they ſent unto him two men, &c.] Here they ſhewed their faith and charity, deſiring that the pious woman might recover, and be longer profitable unto the Church.

V. 39. Peter aroſe and went] Both they who ſent for him, and Peter going were directed ſo to do, by the holy Spirit and providence of God, for the advancement of his glory, and the confirmation of the truth of the goſpel, elſe might it have ſeemed a ſtrange requeſt of the one, or undertaking of the other, to raiſe the dead.

ſhewing the coats] Which ſhe made to give to the poor.

V. 40. put them all forth] Probably he either meaneth all thoſe, who with importunate mourning might diſtract him praying; or, all, here, as verſe 35. and many other places, goeth for many. Syr. he put out all the men.

opened her eyes] Her life being reſtored at that word, Tabitha ariſe, ſhe looked and ſate up.

V. 41. preſented her alive] Syr. he gave her to them alive: that is, reſtored again to life, and doubtleſſe, to good health and ſtrength, for in all the admirable cures done by Chriſt or any of the Apoſtles or Diſciples, in his name we never read that the diſaffected perſon was leſſe than perfectly recovered.

V. 42. many believed] This was the end and fruit of the miracle to bring them by faith to Chriſt and eternal life.

V. 43. he tarried many dayes] Until Cornelius by Gods appointment, ſent for him hence, c. 10. 6. 24, &c. it is likely that he ſtayed here to inſtruct them further in the truth of Chriſt, and to confirm them in the faith.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 1. Cornelius] An Italian Captain of a garriſon; Souldiers of the Romans at Ceſarea.

V. 2. a devout man] It ſeemeth he was a Proſelyte in heart, though not of the circumciſion and open profeſſion.

with all his houſe] This was a good ſigne of his devotion, that his ſervants alſo feared God: and a good example for Maſters of families thus to order them: it was holy Abrahams praiſe, Gen. 18. 19.

to God alwayes] His prayers are commended, 1. from the object, he prayed to God; not as the ſuperſtitious, to creatures: 2. from their perſeverance, they were not by certain fits, in ſome fear or danger onely (then even Jonahs mariners will be devout, Jon. 6. 1.) but alwayes without ceaſing, though not without intermiſſion.

V. 3. He ſaw in a viſion] Not in a trance or rapt of ſpirit, but in a viſion, and that not obſcurly, but ſenſibly and evidently: it is called in the Gr. ὅραμα, viſum, that which is evidently and certainly ſeen, as this appearance of the Angel was; ſo the Syriac giveth the Greek φανερῶς, by גליאית by which they meant, apertè, palàm, manifeſtè, ſo it ſeemeth was this, for it was not only about the ninth hour of the day, three hours before night, about which time they uſed to offer the evening ſacrifice, (Exod. 29. 41.) with prayers, but the Angel of God appeared to him, not in a dumb ſhew, but bringing a divine oracle, which he clearly ſpake and delivered to him in an audible voice and words which he underſtood. See verſe 30.

the ninth hour] Which was one of the Jews ſet hours of prayer, Chap. 3. 1. See Exod. 29. 41.

V. 4. thy prayers and thine alms, &c.] It is a manner of expreſſion borrowed from their burnt-offerings, which they called הולות holoth, aſcenſiones, holocauſts, burnt-offerings, Deut. 12. 6. &c. or aſcenſions: (it is of the verb הלה halah, aſcendit, &c.) or incence, whereof David ſaith, Pſal. 141, 2. let my prayer be ſet forth before thee, as incenſe: and Rev. 8. 4. the ſmoak of the incenſe which came with the prayers of the ſaints, aſcended up before the Lord out of the angels hand. So came up Cornelius alms with his prayers for a memorial before God; with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed, Heb. 13. 18. ſuch contributions to the ſaints the Apoſtle calleth, an odour of a ſweet ſmell a ſacrifice acceptable, well pleaſing to God, Phil. 4. 1. without charity God accepteth no ſacrifice of prayers, Mat. 5, 23, 24. Prov. 21. 13.

V. 5. now ſend men] The angel ſeemeth to reſigne the office of teaching to Peter, whom God had aſſigned therto: ſo did Chriſt to Ananias, chap. 9. 10. God will be heard in thoſe men whom he appointeth to preach, Luke 10. 16. and it is very dangerous to contemn his ordinance.

to Ioppa, and call] See on chap. 9. 36. it was a port town, where Ionah took ſhipping, when he would flie from God, Jon. 1. 3. here dwelt Simon the tanner where Peter lodged, verſe 6. Hebrew יפו japho, Greek, Ἰόππη: a very ancient town of Paleſtine, ſo named for its beauty, of יפה japha, pulcher, formoſus, as ſome think: others ſay of יפת japheth, in Jeroms time it was called Joppa, ib. in loc. Actor. now Jaffa, G. Mercat. Atl. min. in terra ſanct.

V. 6. he lodgeth with one Simon, &c.] Theſe particular inſtructions not onely informed him where to finde Peter, but alſo confirmed him in his faith and obedience to Gods command.

V. 7. a devout ſouldier] See on verſe 2. though it were in carnal reaſon full of danger to change religion, ſpecially in compliance with thoſe who were commonly accuſed of attempting new matters in the government of Paleſtine and Syria, yet Cornelius faith in God overcometh theſe difficulties, and preſently ſent according to Gods command: in matters of religion we muſt rely on Gods commandments, wherein delayes are dangerous, and not on carnall reaſon. The ſouldier he entruſted, was formed according to the happy example of his maſter, verſe 2. and in his devotion not only expreſſeth his maſters religious care to teach his family by precept and example (that moſt powerful Rhetorick) but alſo his obſequious readineſſe to learn good: In every calling, men may ſerve the Lord: theſe ſhall riſe in judgement to condemn wicked ſouldiers.

V. 8. declared all theſe things unto them] Which he did, as to furniſh them for their treaty with Peter, ſo to encourage them in this ſervice, wherein the cauſe of God, and his and their ſalvations were interreſſed: his choice of ſuch men of truſt is imitable.

V. 9. about the ſixth hour] About noon, which was another hour for prayer, Pſal. 55. 17. he went up to the top of the houſe, which was flat rooft, that being a place, as moſt remote of all the houſe, from diſturbance by any domeſtick buſineſſes, ſo, moſt fit and accomodate for prayer, which ought to be free from all diſtractions.

V. 10. he fell into a trance] A Supernatural elevation of the minde, by the Spirit of God, filling all the ſenſe and faculty of the ſoul with a divine revelation.

V, 11. and he ſaw heaven opened] This was the viſion which he ſaw, we may not think this viſion, reall or ſenſible according to the outward man: his ecſtaſie gave him other eyes, that is, ſpiritual.

V, 12. were all manner of four footed beaſts] Wherein ſeemed to him to be all manner of beaſts, and creatures, as well thoſe which by their law were to be accounted unclean, as others.

V, 13. and eat] That is, indifferently without any reſpect to the diſtinction of clean and unclean: and therefore God affected him with ſo ſharp and ſodain an hunger, verſe 10. becauſe he meant to preſent him a viſion ſutable thereto.

V. 14. common or unclean] That is, which the preſcript of the law made ſuch. See Mark 7. 2. See Deut. 14. 4. &c. Peter did not yet well underſtand how this rapt and viſion agreed with that law of God; therefore leſt he ſhould have done any thing raſhly or with a reluctant conſcience, he expreſſeth his ſcruple, moſt probably, that he might be better enformed and ſatisfied therein, leſt he ſhould do that which by the law would render him prophane or unclean.

V. 15. what God hath cleanſed] By taking away the difference; which he had put for the time of the ceremonial law only, by this he was taught, not to abhor the Gentiles, ſeeing God had taken away the difference, Epheſ. 2. 14.

call thou not common] Or unclean, μὴ κοίνε, (See on Matth. 15. 11.) Syriac ne contamines: do thou not ſay, or make as unclean, that is in thy eſteem or valew of them: ſo the Hebrews uſed to ſpeak: as Proverbs 17. 15. מצדיק רשע matſdik raſhah, juſtifying the wicked: that is, accounting the wicked juſt; So the 70: ὃς δίκαιον κρίνει τὸν ἄδικον, &c.

V. 16. Received up again] That is, ſeemed in this viſion to be taken up again.

V. 17. While Peter doubted. &c.] διηπόρει. Syr. מתדמר methdamar, wondred: but διαπορεῖν ſignifieth (as hath been noted) ſuch a ſuſpenſion of the minde, as perplexeth and ſtraitneth it ſo, that one knoweth not what to do.

what this which he had ſeen, ſhould mean] τί ἂν εἴη. So the Syriac, what it ſhould be: that is, what it ſhould ſignifie, what the Lord would hereby inſtruct him to do.

behold the men] The ſervants and the ſouldier which Cornelius ſent, verſe 7, 8.

V. 18. and called] As ſtrangers in civility uſe to do: the rather, becauſe they being Gentiles (with whom the Jews converſed not) would not by any importunity give offence: a good pattern for all godly ſouldiers.

V. 19. while Peter thought on the viſion] While his thoughts were troubled, and he ſeriouſly meditated on that which God had ſhewed him and ſaid unto him.

the Spirit ſaid unto him] By an inward revelation, the holy Ghoſt further, and more evidently inſtructed him what the meaning of the viſion was: God will never leave them without ſufficient inſtruction who faithfully meditate on that he revealeth to them.

V. 20. doubting nothing] μηδὲν διακρινόμενος. διακρίνεσθαι, is in matter of judgement to waver, as now inclining to one ſide, and then to the another: Budæus interpreteth this place, without any diſpute, not doubting; citra heſitantiam; qui enim heſitant, ſecum ipſi diſputant ſententiis alternantibus: without heſitation or ſticking: for they that doubt, or ſtick at a thing, diſpute with themſelves with variable concluſions; this ſheweth how our minds ought to be reſolved toward Gods word, we muſt not waver. See Rom. 4. 20. & 14. 23. there can be no peace or reſt of conſciences, but on Gods word, and reſolute adhering to the ſame.

I have ſent them] I moved him that ſent them: ſo that here is nothing fortuitous, but all directed by Gods Spirit, and holy providence.

V. 21. What is the cauſe, &c.] What buſineſſe have ye with me? he knew not yet whither all this tended, and therefore enquired more diligently.

V. 22. a juſt man, &c.] He being a Gentile, and a ſouldier, they give Peter this character, in three excellent attributes, 1. that he was a juſt man. 2. that he feared God. 3. that he lived in the good opinion and report of all the Jews that knew him; and this, not (as officious ſycophants uſe) to flatter him; but to do him right, and ſpecially to free Peter from ſuch jealouſie as might otherwiſe, make him fearefull to come to him: in all, here is a good example for ſervants, ingenuouſly to give their maſters their due honour, and faithfully to obey them.

was warned from God by an holy Angell] See Matt. 2. 12. this was their main argument to perſwade Peter to go, becauſe God called him; and had an hand in all this, and that it was no motion of man, who may ofttimes propoſe things inconvenient and evill (as Balac did when he ſent for Balaam to curſe the Iſrael of God) but this was of God who cannot erre nor command any evill.

V. 23. and lodged them] Courteouſly entertained them as gueſts and ſtrangers, ξενίζειν ſignifieth alſo ξενίας χάριν τινὰ ὑποδέξασθαι. Suidas: to receive one for hoſpitality ſake, or to hoſpitality: a good example to all good men. See Heb. 13. 2. 1 Tim. 5. 10. Gen. 18. 2. 3. Gen. 19. 1, 2, 3. Exod. 2. 20. Judg. 19. 20. ſpecially for prelates. 1 Tim 3. 1.

On the morrow, &c.] Here was Peters ready obedience to God, he would not beyond neceſſity delay to execute that which he underſtood God would have him do: ſo holy Abraham; having received that grievous precept to ſacrifice his onely dear Sonne Iſaac, roſe up early in the morning to take his journey according to Gods command, Gen. 22. 3. delayed duty (beſides the danger of prevention by ſome unexpected accident) looſeth the value which a cheerfull expedition might have given it: God loveth a cheerful giver, and a quick ſervant.

and certain brethren] So the unanimous Chriſtians eſteemed each other. See c. 9. 17. theſe out of thanfulneſſe and honour to Peter, would accompany him on the way, but Gods providence ſo diſpoſed of it, that they alſo might be witneſſes of his grace and mercy to the gentiles.

V. 24. his kinſmen, &c.] To the end that they alſo might be partakers of the grace and mercy of God with him.

V. 25. worſhipped, &c.] Not as God, with Divine worſhip; yet with too much humility, which Peter correcteth: ſee Revel. 12. 19. and 22. 8. προσεκύνησε here tranſlated (worſhipped) ſignifieth alſo ſaluted reverendly. So the Hebrews uſe their verb שחה ſhacha, to fall down, or bow down to adoration Divine, or civill, Gen. 23. 7. Abraham aroſe וישתחו vajiſhtachu, and bowed himſelf to the people of the land, 70. προσεκύνησε τῷ λαῷ — the word here uſed: ſo that προσκυνεῖν, importing both to adore, or worſhip with Divine worſhip; and to ſalute with civill worſhip, ſuch as man oweth to man reſpectively: we cannot reaſonably think, that Abraham adored the people as God, or Cornelius Peter; yet it appeareth that Cornelius being ſtricken with reverence at the preſence of ſo great a ſervant of God exceeded the bounds of more civil reſpect, as appeareth by Peters words, verſe 26.

V. 26. I my ſelf am alſo a man] This ſheweth that Cornelius falling down, too much enclined to the impropriation of Gods honour, and giving it to a creature, which Peter prohibiteth by this reaſon, I my ſelf am a man: he need ſay no more: man muſt adore his creatour, but not be adored by his fellovv-creature: here is no kiſſing of Peters feet.

V. 27. as he talked with him] As Peter vvent on talking vvith Cornelius into his houſe, probably they declared either to other, the vvork and providence of God in their meeting, Peter excuſing himſelf thereby, for his comming to the Gentiles; and Cornelius, for his ſending for him.

V. 28 A man that is a Jew] John 4. 9. & 18, 28. The lavv of God forbade them to marry vvith heathens, to have familiar converſation vvith them, &c. but their tradition barred them from eating vvith them, or coming into their houſes &c. chap. 11. 3. ſo that vvhere Peter ſaith it is unlawfull, beyond that vvhich the lavv of God prohibited, you muſt underſtand Peter to ſpeak ἐπὶ κοινῷ, after the common tradition, or ſenſe of the Jevvs.

one of another nation] Being a Gentile and not a Jew.

common or unclean] Meaning in reſpect of the diverſity of nations, for now he hereby underſtood, that God would call the Gentiles to faith and ſalvation by Chriſt.

V. 29. I aſk therefore, for what intent, &c.] It is probable that he ſaith this for the companies ſake aſſembled there, that they alſo might be acquainted with the whole paſſage, and ſo be better ſatisfied, and more attentive unto that which they ſhould hear;for the ſervants by the way, and Cornelius in that diſcourſe which they might have going into the houſe, probably had given Peter ſome light concerning the buſineſſe.

V. 30. Untill this hour] Until this time of day. See verſe 3. untill about three of the clock in the after-noon.

a man ſtood before me] The angel in mans ſhape, verſe 3.

V. 31. thy prayer is heard] See verſe 4.

V. 32. ſend therefore] See verſe 5.

V. 33. immediately therefore I ſent unto thee] This probably he ſaid to aſſure Peter, that he would be a carefull and attentive hearer of the myſteries of faith, which is a great encouragement unto miniſters, to a cheerfull execution of their miniſtery, whereas on the contrary a drouſie or inattentive auditory, not onely diſhearten's the miniſter, but intercept's the bleſſing of God thereby to have come upon them, and hinders the power of the word preached.

thou haſt well done] This is a kinde of thankfull acknowledgement of Peters care and pains taken in comming to him.

We are all here preſent before God] Thus he declareth for himſelfe, his friends and family, their attention, and future obedience to his doctrine: O that this thought were in all that hear the word of God, we are all here preſent before God.

V. 34. Of a truth] Certainly. See Deut. 10. 17. Rom. 2. 11. 1 Peter 1. 17. as if he ſaid, hitherto I have been carried along with the common ſtreame of the Jewiſh errour, thinking that Gods grace and mercy were entailed upon the Jews, and that they only were heirs of all his promiſes in Chriſt, and the only nation of the world which he would accept, and own for his people; but now I know for a truth, that God is no accepter of perſons.

no reſpecter of perſons] Or, hath no regard in his acceptance, to the externall condition of the perſon, as, of what nation, family, name, or quality he be of, he ſpeaketh here of thoſe following degrees of grace, faith and obedience, which where ever they are found, tis evident they are acceptable to him.

V. 35. he that feareth him] He that is truely religious toward God, and juſt toward man: by the fear of God the Hebrews underſtood, the whole worſhip of God: Peter, intimating that Cornelius feared God in that he believed in him that came into the world to ſave ſinners, ſheweth that the Sacraments are ſeals of adoption, in children, and of faith, of thoſe who are of years, as Rom. 4. 11. So that they are deceived, who ſo tie the holy Spirit. and the effects thereof, to the receiving the Sacrament of baptiſm, as if none could fear God, or be accepted of him, and ſaved by him, who is not baptized: for firſt, none before Chriſt received this ſeal, as ſince we do: and next, it is the contempt, not the privation, which God herein condemneth. (See v. 44. and John 3. 5.) here it appeareth, that Cornelius was accepted of God, before he had received the external ſeal of his covenant.

V. 36. preaching peace] This is, reconciliation between God and man, through Chriſt, Iſa. 57. 19. Epheſ. 2. 14, 16, 17. Col. 1. 20.

Lord of all] Not only the God of the Jews, but of the Gentiles alſo; and he will gather his elect out of all the world, Rom. 3. 30. & 10. 12.

V. 37. After the baptiſme] That is, after John, the forerunner of Chriſt, had preached, and baptized in his name.

V. 38 God anointed Jeſus] That is, indued his human nature, with the graces of the Holy Ghoſt, and conſecrated, or dedicated his whole perſon to the office of a mediatour, both which were prefigured, by the ancient rite of anointing.

for God was with him] In the fulneſſe of the deity, as he was the eternal Son, Col. 2. 9. and in power, grace and favour, as he was man, and Mediatour. John 8. 29 & 16. 32.

V. 39. and we are witneſſes] We the Apoſtles who attended on him, choſen for this end, that we might teſtifie what doctrine he preached, and what miracles he did; as verſe 41, 42.

Whom they ſlew, &c.] Thus ſpeaking of the death of Chriſt, he mentioneth the ingratitude and in humanity of his countrey-men the Jews toward Chriſt: and that we might conſider what he ſuffered to deliver us from the curſe of the law. See Gal. 3. 13. Deut. 21. 23. Here ſee how neceſſary, a good end propoſed, and a good intention is to every action: for albeit, as Lactantius ſaith well, lib. 3. cap. 15. nihil intereſt quo animo facias, quod feciſſe vitioſum eſt: it ſkilleth not with what intention thou doeſt, that which is wicked to be done: yet doing any thing with an evill intention, though the thing done were ſo far decreed of God, as that he will draw good out of that evil (as it was in Chriſts death for our redemption) yet is that ſame action a ſin in the agent, or agents, and Gods goodneſſe (ſo much above all evill, ſo invincible, that he draweth a good end out of the wicked actions of men) doth no wayes juſtifie the ſins of men, becauſe he never decreeth ſin. See Gen. 50. 20. 1 King. 12. 8. 15. 19. 1 Sam. 10. 26. 27

V. 40. him God raiſed] Leſt the Gentiles ſhould think, therefore Chriſt, whom theſe men preach, is deſtroyed, he preſently inferreth, that (which declareth him to be the Son of God, Romans 1. 4. and conquerer of death and hell) he was raiſed up from the dead.

V. 41. Not to all the people] God ſhewed Chriſt alive from the dead, but not to all the Jews, but to all thoſe who were appointed witneſſes of the ſame; and thoſe not a few: he was ſeen alive after his reſurrection from the dead, to above five hundred brethren at once, 1 Cor. 15, 6. he appeared not to the enemies, becauſe his ſtate of humiliation and ſuffering by them, was finiſhed; and it concerned not them (whoſe impenitency and unbelief he knew and foreſaw) otherwiſe than that they ſhal ſee him coming again in the clouds to judge them Rev. 1. 7.

V. 42. commanded us to preach] See chap. 1. 8. Luke 24. 47. 48. Mark 16. 15. Mat. 28. 19. becauſe the power of Chriſt's reſurrection and the glory of his kingdom, which is now, by mens ſpirituall blindneſſe and unbelief, much clouded, which ſhall in his coming to judge the living and the dead, clearly and terribly ſhine out to all the nations of the earth. therefore Peter annexeth this declaration unto the foregoing diſcourſe, as that which Chriſt principally gave them in charge to preach, and which is of a very high concernment for all auditors of Gods word to attend, and diligently mark and obſerve.

of quick and dead] Of theſe who being found alive at his coming, ſhall be changed; and of thoſe that ſhall be raiſed from the dead, to come to judgement. 1 Theſ. 4. 15. Rom. 14. 9. 2 Tim. 4. 1. 1 Pet. 4. 5.

V. 43. to him give all, &c.] Jer. 31. 34. Mich. 7. 18. Luke 24. 27. as if he had ſaid, this doctrine which we according to the commandment of Chriſt, preach to you and muſt preach to all nations, is no new doctrine, but ſuch as all the holy Prophets atteſted concerning Chriſt, even free remiſſion of ſins and ſalvation, by him who died for us wretched ſinners, and roſe again for our juſtification, who believe in him, Rom. 4. 24, 25. It is more than probable, that Peter cited many places of the Prophets, and opened the ſame unto theſe hearers, thereby evidently proving thoſe things by him alleadged, which for brevity ſake are not here recorded, it being ſufficient that the ſums of theſe things whereof Peter diſcourſed, are here ſet down.

through his name] By his merit.

V. 44 while he yet ſpake] The Holy Ghoſt accompanied the ſincere preaching, and attentive hearing the word, and here by an evident miracle confirmed that which Peter had preached unto them, that Gods mercy in Chriſt belongeth as well to the Gentiles as to the Jews.

the Holy Ghoſt] That is, the graces of the Holy Spirit, in illumination, regeneration, and the gifts of tongues, &c. By this miracle God declared, that the merit of Chriſts paſſion belongeth as well to the Gentiles as to the Jews; and that (the Spirit, thus coming on theſe before baptiſme) the righteouſneſſe of God is not attained by any thing external, without the inward working of his Spirit, which here came on Cornelius, being neither circumciſed nor baptized. See on verſe 35.

V. 45. Becauſe that on the Gentiles] They did not before this underſtand, that the grace of God appertained unto them, which had been ſo long (like the dew in Gideons fleece) diſtilled onely on the the Jews, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. this made thoſe Jews which came with Peter, amazed, that ſuch an admirable meaſure of Gods ſpirit was alſo powred out upon the Gentiles, as on the day of Pentecoſt on the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem.

V. 46. for they heard him ſpeak] It was the vulgar errour of the Jews that the covenant of grace, and the Meſſias, belonged only to themſelves, but now they perceive that the Gentiles alſo had intereſt therein, hearing them ſpeak unſtudied languages, they knew that they had received the holy Ghoſt.

then anſwered Peter] This is an uſual manner of ſpeaking with the Hebrews, anſwered, for, then ſaid, &c. ſo the Syriac ומאר vemer, and he ſaid: Peter ſeeing what was done, better underſtood what thoſe gifts of the holy Ghoſt meant, to wit that the believing Gentiles ſhould alſo be partakers of Salvation by Chriſt.

V. 47. Can any forbid water] He reaſoneth from the thing ſignified, unto the ſigne, and this queſtion is in effect a vehement aſſertion, as if he had ſaid, we ought not to withhold the ſigne; it were a ſin to deny it: his reaſon may thus, more at large, be formed. Thoſe that are in Chriſt by the inward effect of the Holy Ghoſt, ought to be implanted into the Church by baptiſme; but theſe Gentiles are in Chriſt by the inward effect of the Holy Ghoſt, therefore they ought to be implanted into the Church by baptiſme: the ſame reaſon will conclude for baptizing infants, whom the Holy Ghoſt hath made, and pronounced holy, if born of believing Parents, 1 Cor. 7. 14. the meaning of theſe words is; ſeeing God hath given them the inward grace and ſpiritual part, ſhould we, who are but Miniſters, deny to communicate to them the external ſign and ſeal of incorporation into Chriſts body the Church?

V. 48. To be baptized in the name of the Lord] For baptiſm is the ſigne whereby believers are openly declared to be the people of God: that which he ſaith, in the Name of the Lord, we muſt underſtand as relating to the uſe, not the forme of baptiſm: They were baptized in the Name of the Father. Son, and Holy Ghoſt, as Chriſt commanded, Matth. 28. 19, but here, baptizing in the Name of the Lord, importeth, conſecration to the Lord Chriſt, and implantation into the Church, whereof he is the Head. So chap. 2. 38. chap. 8. 16. and chap. 19. 5.

to tarry certain dayes] Cornelius and the Church in his houſe prayed him to tarry; both that they might be further inſtructed, confirmed, and comforted by his Miniſtry, and alſo to expreſſe their thankfulneſſe to him for ſo great a bleſſing as God had ſent them by his miniſtry: the beſt have ever need to learn, and to be confirmed: and by our deſire to know more, we may, not obſcurely, gather how we have profited: no man hath ever taſted of true grace offered in the Goſpel, but he deſireth more.

CHAP. XI.

Verſe 1. THat the Gentiles alſo had received] Which was yet a wonder to them: a myſtery hid from the beginning of the World, Epheſ. 3. 10, 11. which cauſed the holy Angels to ſtand at gaze. See 1 Pet. 1. 12. The Jews held the Gentiles as wicked, incorrigible, deſperate ſinners, and meer aliants from God. See Epheſ. 2. 12. But now that which God here did, was ſo publick (by reaſon of thoſe Jewes which were of Ceſarea with Peter; relating the miracle to the Apoſtles and Brethren at Jeruſalem) that it might ſufficiently teach them the contrary.

V. 2. that were of the circumciſion] So were alſo all the believing Jewes, who did not quarrel with him, neither are here mentioned: but this pointeth at them onely, who were too much addicted to legall ceremonies, in ſo much that they thought circumciſion ſimply neceſſary to ſalvation. See chap. 15. 1, 5. and would have the believing Gentiles alſo circumciſed.

V. 3. thou wenteſt in to men uncircumciſed] Chap. 10. 28. Thus they accuſe Peter, as if it had been ſome greivous ſin: whereas the Law of God forbade not all commerce with Gentiles, but that onely which might corrupt them; not that which might gain others to God and ſalvation by them.

V. 4. Peter rehearſed the matter in Order, &c.] Peter willingly ſubmitted to the judgement of the Church, to give them account of that he had done. (See 1 Cor. 14. 29.) by this means he both taught us what every one of us ought to do, and alſo better inſtructed them who erred. Peter pretended not to be above the Church.

V. 5. I was in the city Joppa praying] This whole narration. See chap. 10. 9 &c.

V. 15. as on us, &c.] Chap. 2. 4. In the like power, though not in the ſame ſignes of fiery tongues, nor with the ſame degrees of fulneſſe.

V. 16. John indeed baptized with water] John 1. 26.

V. 17. What was I that I ſhould withſtand] This was Peters concluſion when he had rehearſed the matter: the meaning is; ſeeing that God hath made the Gentiles equal in grace, with the Jews converted to Chriſt, it was not in me to deny them an equal ſhare and communion in the external ſeals and ſigns thereof: he that ſhall exclude thoſe who have received the graces of Gods ſanctifying Spirit by barring them from the external communion of the Church; in the rule (by Peters concluſion) are reſiſters of God.

V. 18. They held their peace] They reſted ſatiſfied; which is indeed the property of good men, who contend not ſo much for victory, as for truth; whereas the perverſe will be ſatisfied with no reaſon.

V. 19. They which were ſcattered] Chap. 8. 1. He further proſecuteth here, that which was onely hinted, chap. 8. 4. concerning the propagation of the Goſpel, by the miniſtry of thoſe who were diſperſed by reaſon of the cruel perſecution: it ought to be a ground of comfort unto us who have long feared a ſad darkneſſe coming on the Chriſtian World, and a dangerous eclipſe of the Goſpel: yea but the Spirit ſaith, Rev. 2. 10. -- fear none of theſe things, &c. The more Satan laboureth to oppreſſe the Elect, and obſcure the truth, the more he marketh them for Saints whom the impious world hateth, and that for truth which Satan ſtirreth up his ſervants to oppoſe: Stars never ſhine ſo clear as in the uncouth ſhade of night.

Phenice] A Region of Syria,

Cyprus] An Iſle in the Carpathean Sea, between Cilicia, and Syria.

Antioch] A famous city in Syria, near Cilicia.

V. 20. Cyrene] There were two cities of this name, one in Lybia, chap. 2. 10. the other in Aſſyria.

the Grecians] He meaneth not here the ſcattered Jews (who uſed the Greek tongue in their Synagogues; as chap. 6. 1. for of them he ſpake, verſe 19.) but the Grecians which were Gentiles.

V. 21. the hand of the Lord] The power and grace of God, in miracles, and inward working of the hearers, accompanying their miniſtry, See Luke 1. 66. & 5. 17.

V. 22. they ſent forth Barnabas] Of him ſee, chap. 4. 36. the burden of forming and ordering the Church of Chriſt, appointing and deſigning Paſtours and Miniſters to the ſeveral congregations, and holding them in an holy unity, they lay now upon the Apoſtles, therefore to confirm them that were converted to the faith, they ſend this ſon of conſolation to Antioch, where a famous Church was now beginning, to order and eſtabliſh the ſame.

V. 23. had ſeen the grace of God] Meaning the admirable effects thereof, beſtowed upon the people of Antioch in their converſion to Chriſt.

cleave unto the Lord] Deut. 10 20 & 30 20 with ardent deſire, and zeal reſolving to ſerve him, and to reſt aſſured in expectation of his promiſes.

V. 24. he was a good man] Meaning Barnabas, verſe 22.

much people was added, &c.] They are here ſaid, added to to the Lord, who were won to the faith in Chriſt, and the Church there preſent: mark here the fruit of Miniſters unity; many were added to the Lord; for Barnabas preaching was to confirm that truth which others had taught: it is not ſo where one caſteth down that which another buildeth; conſider well Mat. 18. 7.

V. 25. to ſeek Saul] His ambition was, that the Goſpel and glory of Chriſt, in the converſion and ſalvation of ſouls might be advanced; therefore he that might have been in great honour and eſteem at Antioch, goeth to ſeek Saul, that they might joyn in the work of Chriſt.

V. 26 with the Church] Or in the Church ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. Hence appeareth their great diligence in preaching and propagating the truth of the Goſpel, and that ſet out by the circumſtance of time, a whole year, which wanted not an excellent effect, ſpecified in the next following words.

were called Chriſtians firſt, &c.] Whereas before they were called Diſciples, and Nazarens (under which name they uſed to curſe the profeſſions of the Goſpel thrice a day: as Jerom in Iſaiah 49. ſpeaking of the unbelieving Jews, ſaith, ter per ſingulos dies ſub nomine Nazarenorum maledicunt in ſynagogis ſuis See c. 24 5.). Now at Antioch they were firſt called Chriſtians. So much honour had this city, that from thence Chriſt, as it were ſpread his Banner; that it might appear to the world, that there was a people who would follow him, and glory to be called by his Sacred Name.

V. 27 came Prophets to Jeruſalem] See chap. 13. 1. God then furniſhed his Church with variety of gifts: he gave ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, &c. See Epheſ 4. 11 and inſpired theſe with revelations for the good of his Church. See chap. 21. 9.

V. 28. named Agabus] Chap. 21 10. He foretold of the great general dearth in Claudius Ceſars dayes, not by judicial Aſtrology, but the ſpirit, as it followeth in the next words: Theſe new calamities he foretelleth that the Chriſtians, having ſuch timely notice thereof, might (as good Joſeph did) lay up ſtore and ſo provide for themſelves and others ſafety, in the ſad calamity which was then coming upon the world.

ſignified by the ſpirit] By divine Revelation: whereby God gave them occaſion to relieve the brethren at Jeruſalem.

V. 29. every man according to his ability] See Luke 11. 41. Meaning every one of the Chriſtians at Antiochia; becauſe they of Jeruſalem might probably be in more neceſſity, by reaſon of the malice of the Jews there, and their perſecution. See Rom. 15. 26. 1 Cor 16. 1. 2 Cor. 8. 4. & 9. 1, 2. Gal. 2. 10.

CHAP. XII.

Verſe 1. King Herod] He was nephew of Herod the great, and ſon of Ariſtobulus; a Vice-Roy, or Deputy King to the Emperour of Rome, for the government of the Jews: Syr. ſirnamed Agrippa. See Joſeph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 4. 5. &c. See on Mat. 14. 1.

ſtretched forth his hands] Or laid hands on, or began to lay hands on ſome Chriſtians.

V. 2. killed James] This was one of the ſons of Zebedeus, Mat. 4. 21 and 10. 2. there was another ſo named which was the ſon of Alpheus: of whom, verſe 17. See Matthew 20. 20.

V. 3. the dayes of unleavened bread] Theſe words intimate the cauſe why he deferred Peters execution, for reverence of the Paſſover, which laſted eight dayes. See chap. 20. 6. Sins never go ſingle: Herods tyranny will draw on hypocriſie to vaile it: he would ſeem to reverence the inſtitution of God in the Paſſeover and by all means to avoid the profanation thereof; not for any good conſcience toward God, but becauſe he feared to offend and provoke the Jewes: however, God uſed the hypocriſie of this bloody tyrant, to the preſervation and ſafety of Peter, whom he would miraculouſly deliver and preſerve, as for the confirmation of his faith, ſo for the advancement of Gods glory in the propagation of the Goſpel.

V. 4. four quaternions of ſouldiers] The number being ſixteen, was divided by fours, to keep divers wards, or watch by turns: therefore the Syriac hath it, he delivered him to ſixteen ſouldiers; all which impious diligence of theirs, ſerved to manifeſt the evidence of the miracle, and Gods merciful providence in delivering and preſerving his from the fury of their enemies and perſecutors.

V. 5. prayer was made without ceaſing] Or inſtant and earneſt prayer was made: ἐκτενής, is ſedulus, diligens. Sudias interpreteth ἐκτενῶς by ὁλοψύχως, with all the ſtrength of the ſoul; and ſo this prayer was made with all fervency of ſpirit, and perſeverance: it was their own cauſe; therefore they give all the aſſiſtance they can, according to the Apoſtles rule, Hebr. 13. 3. Coloſ. 4. 2. 1 Theſ. 5. 17 this ſhewes that they believed that God would hear them according to his promiſe, Pſal. 50. 15. Mat. 18. 19. &c.

V. 6. the ſame night] The Syriac Interpreter paraphraſeth thus in the ſame night on whoſe morning following he would bring him out. God many times ſuffereth his to come to the pits brink, and then delivereth them; that they may be the more ſenſible of his mercy, and have the more evident matter of rejoycing and prayſing him: alſo that he might by ſuch experience give them aſſurance, that in the greateſt dangers, he can, and will deliver them when he knoweth it beſt.

ſleeping between two ſouldiers] All theſe circumſtances ſhew Herods bloody intent, and Gods power in delivering Peter, in ſpite of his chains and guards.

V. 7. the Angel of the Lord] Chap. 5. 19. For he hath made his Angels Miniſtring ſpirits for their ſakes, who are heirs of ſalvation. See Hebr. 1. 14. Pſal. 34. 7.

the light ſhined] As to light Peter, ſo to aſſure him of aſſiſtance from heaven: whether it ſhined to Peter onely, or in the place where he was or went, it ſkilleth not; the guard probably were either aſleep, or ſo ſtupified, that they could either not perceive, or not reſiſt: neither is it behooful to enquire what light this was? whence or how it ſhined? whether it were onely the refulgence of an Angelical nature, or of ſome natural cauſes permitted to the power of the Angels? if theſe, or the like things had been neceſſary to ſalvation, they had been written.

the priſon] Or houſe. Gre. ἐν τῷ οἰκήματι, in the houſe, which was the priſon.

ſmote Peter on the ſide] To awake, and lead him out: which ſheweth the merciful providence of God, watching over us when we ſleep; and providing for our ſafety, when we think not of our own dangers, and keeping us, when ſleep hath ſhut up all our ſenſes. See Gen 19. 16.

his chains fell off] This was done by the power of God, whom all creatures obey. See Chap. 16. 27. So eaſily can God (whoſe will is his word; and his word, his work) deliver us: So admirable is the power of faithful prayer to open priſon doors, make chains fall off, and to cauſe the ſun and moon to ſtand ſtill in the heaven, Joſh. 10. 12, 13. to open and ſhut heaven for rain, James 5. 17.

V. 8. thy ſandals] Which were a kind of high ſhoes, tyed on with ſtrings, after the manner and convenience of thoſe hot countreys. Herein Gods fatherly providence appeareth: He knoweth what things we have need of, Mat. 6. 8. and therefore will have us ſupplyed with all neceſſary accommodations, as in other infinite examples; ſo in the Angels bidding Peter gird himſelf, bind on his ſandals, and caſt his garment about him, and follow him.

V. 9. and wiſt not that it was true, &c.] He knew not yet whether it were a reall thing, or a viſion: he knew that God could deliver in life and in death, therefore he readily obeyed the voyce of the Angel, though at preſent amazed at the glory of the ſame, he knew not whether it were reall which he ſaw and heard, or a viſion.

V. 10. the firſt and ſecond ward] The watch which kept court of guard in the firſt and ſecond place: God could at once have ſet him free by carrying him from ſo many difficulties; but thus he ſeemed to give him many deliverances, becauſe from many, and through many difficulties; that the divine power, and the Churches comfort might more evidently appear.

leadeth unto the city] That is, by which they went from the priſon into the inward parts of the city: it is not likely that the priſon was out of the city.

which opened to them of his own accord] αὐτομάτη; the word ſignifieth, that which moveth, or doth ſomething of it ſelfe, non alieno impulſu, not moved by another; but this was done by the command and power of God, whoſe will all creatures muſt obey.

forthwith the Angel departed] Having performed his charge, and that for which God had ſent him; he left Peter free, to go to his company.

V. 11. When Peter was come to himſelf] For before, he was as a man in a trance, or dream; out of himſelf (See verſe 9) amazed at that which befel him: but now recovering a better underſtanding, he knew what God had done for him. This manner of ſpeaking the Latines alſo uſed, who in great and ſudden joy, or vehement anger, uſed to ſay --- vix ſum apud me — from all the expectation of the people] For they looked that Herod would have put him to death, as he purpoſed, and had done to James before, verſe 2.

V. 12 where many were gathered together praying] Becauſe they could not publickly aſſemble, they divided company, and met to pray and preach, as they could in thoſe dangerous times, wherein the enemies of the Goſpel ſo violently raged: hither Peter haſteth, to declare Gods goodneſſe in his deliverance: and herein they taſted the comfortable fruit of their prayers.

V. 13. came to hearken] To aſk who was there: the Syriac gives it, that ſhe might anſwer: to wit, thoſe who knock't.

V. 14. ſhe opened not the gate for gladneſſe] Sudden joy (as any other extream affection) diſturbeth reaſon, and for a time, perverteth the offices thereof (as here, in Rhode) in ſo much that ſome have dyed with ſudden joy.

V. 15. thou art mad] μαίνῃ, becauſe they thought ſhe ſpake improbable things: ſome read art thou mad? for by ſaying thus, ſhe diſcompoſed them, and likely, interrupted their prayers: Syr. omninò turbata es: verily thou art troubled in mind.

it is his Angel] Meaning according to the common opinion, an Angel guardian, which they might poſſibly ſuppoſe, came to ſignifie his death, whom they in reaſon might give for dead. See Mat. 18. 10. Pſal. 34. 7 & 91. 11.

V. 16. But Peter continued knocking] Among ſo many dangers of the Church, he might eaſily know they would be fearful to open doors in the night, until they could be well aſſured who was there: therefore he continued knocking, that he might ſhew himſelf, and declare what God had done for him, for their comfort and confirmation.

V. 17 beckning unto them with the hand] κατασείσας Budæus ſaith that κατασείω is non voce ſed manu ſilentium indico, to warn ſilence by the hand: this did Peter, leſt at any ſudden voice of joy of the brethren, ſome notice might be taken by thoſe who paſſed by, or dwelt at the next houſes, and ſo Peter might be further purſued, and they endangered another place] Some more ſecret and ſecure place, for fear of purſuit, when they ſhould miſſe him in the priſon; for in all likelihood miſſing him there, they would have made very diligent enquiry for, and narrow ſearch for all conventions and houſes of Chriſtians who were moſt likely to harbour him; and had they found him, both he and others with him muſt probably have periſhed by Herods rageing cruelty.

V. 18. there was no ſmall ſtir, &c.] Syr. there was great contention; probably, all being troubled with fear and admiration, they would lay the ſuppoſed fault of the priſoners eſcape, on the keepers; they were not ignorant of Herods tyranny, nor the ordinary danger of letting priſoners eſcape.

V. 19. put to death] ἀπαχθῆναι, to be led away; that is, to execution: ſo the Syriac, he commanded that they ſhould die.

So Chriſt told the impious Jews, John 8. 44. ye are of your father the devil. So Paul here calleth this enemy of all righteouſneſſe, child of the devil, that he might diſcover the author of thoſe impoſtures by which Elimas had bewitched the people; as alſo to beat down the arrogancy of the falſe Prophet, who impudently profeſſed himſelf to be Bar jeſus: the Syriac calleth him בר־שומא which ſaith the learned Tremelius, in Latine ſoundeth filium nominis, a man of name: it is an Hebraiſme, ſignifying a famous man So Gen. 6. 4. ſuch are called אנשי השם that is, men of renown: and as בן in Hebrew, ſo בר in Syriac often times ſignifieth praditum, indued, qualified, or meet, as Deut. 3. 18. V. 17. exalted the people] This relateth to that dignity of Joſeph in Pharaohs Court, and that which his father and brethren had for his ſake, until another Pharaoh aroſe who knew them not. He ſpeaketh theſe things concerning their fathers to make them know, that whatever excellency they or their fathers had, was not of their merit, but Gods free mercy: and that they now taught no new Religion, but the very ſame in which their fathers were ſaved, all depending on Gods free election of the Jewes whereby he became their God. Deut. 32. 11. indeed he did both: he endured their many rebellions with great mercy, and did feed and carry them like a tender nurſe; though here the Apoſtle aimeth at the firſt, that he might ſhew, that Gods free election of their fathers was the cauſe why his goodneſſe would not ſtrive with their ingrateful wickedneſſe: they many times provoked him to anger, yet God (though he often corrected them) deſtroyed them not, but with admirable lenity, bare their perverſe qualities, that in the fulneſſe of time he might perform the promiſe made to their fathers.

Rom. 3. 20. Hebr. 10. 1, 4.

V. 40. ſpoken of in the Prophets] Hab. 1. 5. Iſaiah 28. 14. the ſubſtance of whoſe words he here citeth and applieth to them, who contemning the word of God, do in effect think they have made a league with death and hell, ſo that the judgement of God ſhall not come on them, who have made lyes their hope; whereas Chriſt is that onely precious corner-ſtone and ſure foundation laid in Sion, in whom whoſoever believeth ſhall not periſh. See Iſaiah 28. 16.

V. 41 Behold ye deſpiſers] This ſeemeth to be taken from Iſaiah 28. 14. where the Prophet ſaith, Hear the word of the Lord אנשי לצון anſhe latſon, ye men of deriſion: Ar. Mont. irriſion. V. Shindl. pent. viri illuſores. Vatablus & Vulg. (it is of לוץ luts, deriſit, cavillatus eſt) mockers and deſpiſers of Gods word: the reſt, for ſubſtance out of Habak. 1. 5. which by analogy and proportion he accommodateth to his preſent purpoſe: as God, when the people moſt ſecurely deſpiſed propheſies, brought heavy plagues and deſtructions on them by the Chaldees who demoliſhed their temple, and ruined their city (wherein they ſo much gloried and truſted) becauſe of their contempt of his word, and other crying ſins following the ſame, 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16. &c. So did it now come upon them again by the Romans, for their deſpiſing Chriſt and the Goſpel.

V. 42. might be preached to them the next Sabbath] Or in the week between, on ſome day before the next Sabbath, as ſome interpret: but verſe 44. the convention was on the next Sabbath: ſo much were they affected with that they heard, that they deſired much to hear it again, that they might better underſtand and remember the ſame; we would often hear what we love.

V. 43. many of the Jews] Though ſome were averſe and more enraged againſt the Goſpel, yet God ſtill hath a part. Proſelytes; Suid. quaſi προσεληλυθότας, becauſe they came to the Religion of the Jews from Paganiſm. See chap. 2. 10. theſe and other converts the Apoſtles exhort to conſtancy in the faith of Jeſus, well knowing with what fierce encounters Satan uſeth to charge the infancy of true Religion, and our firſt good beginnings.

V. 44. almoſt the whole city] A Metonymical expreſſion; city for citizens: ſome coming of zeal to the goſpel; ſome of malice, to cavil: ſo are our aſſemblies mixed ſtill.

V. 45. filled with envy] ζῆλος here ſignifieth, an envious indignation, at the great confluence of the Gentiles following the Apoſtles. See on chap. 5. 17. they envied the growth and happy ſucceſſe of the Goſpel.

contradicting and blaſpheming] Contradicting, and cavilling at the doctrine of the goſpel. and likely reviling their perſons, diſcrediting and calumniating them: blaſphemie, and perſecution of the Miniſters of Chriſt ſeldome goe aſunder.

V. 46. It was neceſſary] Becauſe ſo commanded, Mat. 10 6. This ſetteth off the odiouſneſs of their ingratitude to God, in that they, of whom God had ſo great a care before all the nations of the world, to have the means of ſalvation by Chriſt made known unto them, obſtinately rejected the ſame.

and judge your ſelves] This your unbelief and contempt of the goſpel, ſpeak you unworthy of eternal life, which is onely by Chriſt, your own fact judgeth you not worthy, &c.

V. 47. I have ſet thee to be a light, &c.] Iſaiah 49. 6. To give the people, that ſate in darkneſſe, &c. Mat. 4. knowledge of the way to eternal life. See Joh. 17. 3.

V. 48. When the Gentiles heard this they were glad] When they underſtood their own intereſt in Chriſt, and their calling to the hope of ſalvation, they received the Goſpel with greater reverence and joy of heart: they had hitherto no reſt in their conſciences, but Chriſt now thus propoſed to them, and apprehended by faith, giveth them that, Rom. 5. 1. therefore they cannot but rejoyce. See chap. 8. 39 Rom. 14. 17. 1 Pet. 1. 8.

to eternal life, believed] Here is the fountain of all ſaving grace, Gods free and eternal mercy ordaining the means, as he hath the end: they now obtaining the means (knowledge of Chriſt by the Goſpel preached to them, and feeling the power thereof in their faith and converſion) bleſſe, and give thanks to God for this favour, being aſſured of the end thereof to life eternal.

V. 49. publiſhed throughout all the region] In ſpight of all oppoſitions: ſo true is that which Chriſt intimated in the parable of the leaven, Matthew. 13. 33. concerning the proceſſe of the Goſpel.

V. 50. devout and honourable women] Which had embraced the law of Moſes, and the Jewiſh religion, and were lead with blind zeal againſt the goſpel which they knew not: ſo that calling them devout, the Evangeliſt ſpeaketh according to the worlds eſtimate of them: The corruption of the beſt is worſt; where Satan can but gain ſuch agents to his party, there are commonly the bloodieſt perſecutions of the Prophets and Miniſters of Chriſt: Jezabel, Herodias, and theſe Piſidians here are examples enough; I would we had no more.

V. 51. Shook off the duſt] See Matth. 10. 14. Mark 6 11. Luke 9. 5. and 10. 11. It was a ſigne of execration with the Jewes.

came to Iconium] Some ſay this was a town in Lycaonia near to the famous mountain Taurus, Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 5. 27. mentioneth it: others ſay there are others of the ſame name in other Provinces. See chap. 14. 1.

V. 52. the diſciples were filled with joy] Becauſe of the ſucceſſe of the goſpel and becauſe the Spirit of God reigned in them, to direct and make them glad: the ſcope is to ſhew that the diſciples were ſo far from being diſcouraged with the Jewes blaſphemies, calumnies, oppoſitions, and perſecutions, that they were more confirmed hereby, and glad for their ſufferings for the truth of Chriſt. See chap. 5. 41.

of the Greeks] Proſelytes frequenting the Jews ſynagogues, though they received not circumciſion.

V. 2. unbelieving Jews] ἀπειθοῦντες, thoſe that believed not, or thoſe that obeyed not the Goſpel, as not ſuffering their hard and obſtinate hearts to be perſwaded to receive the truth thereof. So Syriac, qui non obediebant.

againſt the brethren] The believers, who with brotherly love and unity call upon one heavenly Father.

unto the word of his grace] The word in which his grace and free mercy is preached and declared to thoſe that believe in Chriſt.

and granted ſignes] Theſe words expreſſe how God gave teſtimony to the doctrine which Paul and Barnabas preached. See Mark 16. 20.

V. 4. was divided] ἐσχίσθη; they were cut ſtudia in contraria, into contrary factions, or opinions, ſo that ſome took part with the Jews, and others with the Apoſtles.

V. 5. an aſſault made] 2 Tim. 3. 11. Here appeareth the effect of unbelief; ſedition and violence offered to the ſervants of Chriſt: impiety cannot contain it ſelf, but on every occaſion breaketh out from worſe to worſe.

V. 6. fled to Lyſtra] Matth. 10. 23. See here verſe 20 when they were in hazared of being deſtroyed they fled according to our Saviours command, Matthew 10. thereby to decline the fury of their adverſaries: this was wiſdom, not inconſtancy.

V. 7. there they preached] Thus, by their flight they reſerved themſelves to better opportunities of doing good, in theſe cities of Lyſtra and Derbe (where they found Timothie chap. 16. 1. Rom. 16. 21.) theſe were towns near Lycaonia in Aſia the leſſer.

V. 8. creeple from his mothers womb] This ſetteth off the excellency of Gods power in the cure, as chap. 3. 2 &c.

V. 9. perceiving that he had faith to be healed] Perceiving by his attention, countenance, or ſome words by him uttered, that he had faith for his cure which unbelief hindereth, Matth. 13. 38. Mark 6. 5.

V. 10. with a loud voice] That the people there preſent might hear: and that Paul might thereby profeſſe his confidence of the cure.

he leaped and walked] Shewing a ſound recovery, as chap. 3.

V. 11. the gods are come down] Their idol worſhip was not terminative in their images, but they vainly thought they worſhipped ſome deity by thoſe images, ſo that though their idols were preſent with them, yet here they dreamed that thoſe gods who were thereby worſhipped, were now come perſonally down among them. So blind is fleſh and blood unto the cleareſt light of the Goſpel; though Paul had preached Chriſt unto them, and his doctrine was preſently confirmed with a ſingular miracle, which by their own principles of reaſons, none but a divine power could have done, yet they impute that work to their falſe and imaginary gods; ſo little can miracles prevail for the ſpectatours converſion and confirmation, except the holy Ghoſt open their hearts to underſtand and believe the truth.

V. 12 called Barnabas, Jupiter, &c,] They called them by the names of their falſe gods: Barnabas, Jupiter; their chief idol-god: and Paul, Mercury; whom they feigned to be the interpreter of their gods, becauſe Paul here appeared the chief ſpeaker.

V. 13. brought oxen and garlands] Trimmed with garlands of flowers, according to the cuſtom of the heathens.

unto the gates] Meaning the gates of the houſe where the Apoſtle lodged; for their temple was without the town: and therefore the prieſt brought the ſacrifices (as he thought) to the gods themſelves.

V. 14 rent their clothes] In token of their deteſting and abhorring it: knowing that in ſuch impious and fooliſh ſacriledge, their ſelves ſhould have been made idols and robbers of God, had they but conſented to receive ſuch vain honour from them.

crying out] That all the people might be undeceived, and not held any longer in thoſe ſnares of the devil.

V. 15. we alſo are men] See chap. 10. 26.

of like paſſions] ὁμοιοπαθεῖς; mortal, as you are, ſubject to death, as all others. See James 5. 17 not without the infirmities of fleſh and blood: Budæus interpreteth this place, eadem conditione mortalitatis, &c. ſimili conditione vobiſcum humanitus afficimur. In the ſame condition of mortality, &c. in the like nature are we humanely affected, as you are.

V. 15. turn from theſe vanities] That is, from idolatry, ſuperſtition, &c. this is after the Hebrew manner, who called idols הבל hebel, vanity. So Deut. 32. 21. they provoked me to anger בהבליהם behablehem, with their vanities, which the 70 give there, ἐν τοῖς εἰδώλοις αὐτῶν, Jer. 10. 8, 15. the ſame word they give by τὰ μάταια, vanities, the word here uſed See alſo 1 Kings 16. 13, 26. Jer. 8. 19. certainly adoration of ſenſeleſſe which made heaven and earth] Geneſis 1. 1. Pſalm 146. 6. Rev. 14. 17. Paul and Barnabas had here to deal with Heathens who knew not God; ſo that it was neceſſary to lead them by certain degrees to Chriſt the Saviour: therefore they begin from that which was not ſo much remote from common ſenſe; drawing them off from the worſhip of their inactive and ſenſeleſſe Idols, to the conſideration of the true God, who both created Heaven, Earth, and all Creatures, and ſtill governeth and preſerveth the ſame: probably they ſpake much more concerning, Gods Juſtice, Mercy, and Eternity, and ſo prepared the way to lead them up to the knowledge of Chriſt the Saviour.

Idols, is the moſt irrational vanity that ever Satan put into the ſtupified heart of man: how much more truly do dumb creatures naturally judge of your gods, (ſaid Minucius Felix Octav.) Non ſentire eos ſciunt, rodunt, inſultant, inſident: they know they have no ſenſe, they gnaw them, leap on them, ſit on them; the birds would breed in the mouth of your god, and ſpiders hang their ſlender threds on their head, &c.

V. 16. who in times paſt] Pſal. 81. 12. Acts 17. 30. Here they ſeem to prepoſſeſſe an objection which their hearers might have made; if God were alwayes of ſuch power, why did he not ſooner reveal the ſame unto us? how came it that he ſo much proſpered our anceſtours, who ſerved the ſame gods, with the like worſhip and rites, as we have hitherto done? had he not approved this ſervice, he would not have favoured us therein: the Apoſtles anſwered to this purpoſe: God was not ignorant of theſe your impious manners; but in his juſt judgement gave you up to your own vile affections (Rom. 1. 24, 28.) to periſh therein: but now that God vouchſafeth you the knowledge of his will for your ſalvation, neither conſent of multitudes erring, nor antiquity of ſin, ought to hinder you from embracing a ſaving truth; but rather the long-ſuffering of God, muſt lead you to repentance.

to walk in their own wayes] To live after their own fantaſies: not that God ever approved of their wickedneſſe, but becauſe he juſtly gave them over (Rom. 1. 24.) to their ſin and ſuperſtition, not beſtowing on them his Laws and ordinances, as he did on Iſrael, Pſal. 147. 19, 20

V. 17. he left not himſelf without witneſſe] Here he prepoſſeſſeth an objection: if any ſhould ſay, how ſhould they not erre, ſeeing that God neither revealed his will nor himſelf unto them? the anſwer is, that God might be ſeen in the works of his wiſdom, power, and providence, in all the known courſes of Nature, and things appointed for the common uſe of man, as ſhowers, fruit, corn, &c. See Rom. 1. 19. As alſo in his admirable patience, and invincible goodneſſe, in that he giveth to the juſt and unjuſt, indiſcretas pluvias, unſevered ſhowers (Cyprian de bon. patient) and all other ſecular goods. See Mat. 5. 45.

with food and gladneſſe] With gladneſſe for the abundance with which he crowneth the year. See Pſal. 65. 9. &c.

V. 18. with theſe ſayings ſcarce, &c.] All that they could ſay, could hardly perſwade theſe obſtinate idolaters to forbear ſacrificing to them. So hard is it to make carnal hearts underſtand the things of God: ſo hard, to remove an errour, to which time, cuſtome, and popular example hath given deep root.

V. 19. certain Jews from Antioch] See chap. 13. 14. Here appeareth Satans reſtleſſe malice in aſſaulting the Miniſters of Chriſt: now trying them with ſacriledge and robbing God of his honour, in accepting ſacrifices ond divine honour, when that artifice failed; he inciteth the Jews, and they the people, to perſecute and ſtone them. See alſo the inconſtancy of the vulgar; but even now mad to adore them as gods, and forthwith as little ſober in the other extream, perſecuting them, as if they had been the worſt of men, ſtoning Paul, and dragging him out of the city as dead.

V. 20. as the diſciples ſtood round about him] That is, the believers, who followed the Apoſtles: theſe forſook not Paul, but compaſſed him round to keep him, if poſſible, from further rage of the ſeditious multitude.

he roſe up] He revived, and came to himſelf again, and entred again into that injurious city, to reſt, and refreſh himſelfe.

to Derbe] See verſe 6. It was a city of Iſauria in Aſia the leſſer, as ſome ſay, though near to Lycaonia, Joh. Druſ. ad voc. N. T. tom. 1. Jerom de loc. Act. ſaith Derbe civitas Lycaoniæ provinciæ, which the ſixth verſe ſeemeth to intimate: but that may be interpreted, they fled unto the cities of Lycaonia, to Lyſtra and Derbe, and unto the region that lyeth round about: and that not reckoning Lyſtra and Derbe as cities of Lycaonia, but ſhewing that the Apoſtles did not onely flye to the cities of Lycaonia, but alſo to Lyſtra and Derbe, and other places in the adjacent region: the Syriac ſeemeth to favour this interpretation, which ſaith, they fled into the cities of Lycaonia, ולוסטרא ודרבא velyſtera vedarbi, and Lyſtra, and Derbe, they fled into the cities of Lycaonia, and into Lyſtra, and into Derbe.

V. 21. and when they had preached the Goſpel, &c.] This was their undaunted courage and unwearied induſtry to preach the Goſpel, notwithſtanding ſo many dangers.

and had taught many] μαθητεύσαντες ἱκανοὺς, and had taught a ſufficient number: that is had by teaching brought many to the faith of Chriſt, making them diſciples, who were baptized; for the word μαθητεύειν, doth not here ſignifie onely τὸ διδάσκειν, to teach, but by teaching of the capable; and baptizing to make diſciples of Chriſt, as Mat. 28. 19. So the Syriac interpreteth here, they made many diſciples: the Jews, and Proſelytes were made Moſes diſciples when they were circumciſed, and catechumeniſts and infants of Chriſtian Parents are made Chriſtians, and Diſciples of Chriſt by baptiſme.

V. 23. ordained them elders] χειροτονήσαντες: This word ſignifieth making of ſuch a choice, as was made or confirmed by lifting up of hands, to ſignifie Suffragies, or conſents: it is alſo uſed to appoint or ordain in general, as c. 10. 41. the Syriac readeth; and they appointed unto them Elders in every congregation. It ſeemeth that Paul and Barnabas did not all alone in ordinations and Church government; other Chriſtians ſhewed their conſent, or approbation of the perſons who were ordained elders, by lifting up their hands; as very well knowing of what behaviour they had been among them: ſo ἀποχειροτονεῖν ſignifieth, to diſallow of ſome act, election, or decree: Suidas interpreteth the word χειροτονία by ἐκλογὴ: his interpreter giveth it, electio, delectus -- per ſuffragia confirmatio, populi totius conſenſus, an election, chooſing -- by voices, a confirmation or conſent of all the people. CHAP. XV.

Verſe 1. C*Ertain men that came down*] Epiphanius hæreſ. 28. 2. ſaith, Cerinthus and others: this policy of Satan whereby he aſſailed the Church by civil diſſention, was concerning the office of Chriſt; whether we are juſtified onely by faith in Chriſts righteouſneſſe, or muſt therewith joyn the works of the Law.

except ye be circumciſed] Gal. 5. 2. Luke briefely ſtateth this troubleſome queſtion: theſe Impoſtors would have laid a neceſſity of keeping the whole Law, on mens conſciences; for every man that is circumciſed, is a debter to do the whole law, and ſo Chriſt is become of no effect unto him, Gal. 5. 3, 4. but he is ſtill under the curſe of the Law: theſe adverſaries acknowledged Chriſt to be the true Meſſias, and had given their names to him, onely they would with faith in Chriſt, joyn a neceſſity of obſerving the Law for ſalvation; which poſſibly ſeemed an excuſable errour to ſome: But Paul, who for ſmall external matters would not have contention to the violation of peace (Rom. 14. 1.) would not in this cauſe be ſilent. Firſt becauſe a neceſſity of obſerving the whole Law being granted, mans ſalvation, which onely can be in the free grace and mercy of God in Chriſt ſhould be grounded on the Law; and ſo it would follow, that Chriſt died without cauſe or in vain, Gal. 2. 21. Secondly, by ſuch a conceſſion, Chriſtian liberty muſt be taken away. See Gal. 4. 1. &c. Thirdly, by this means Satan would eaſily have obſcured the honour of Chriſt, and light of the Goſpel, if he could have carried on this ſtratagem: Paul therefore here ſtandeth up for defence of Gods free mercy in our ſalvation, for diſcharge of our conſciences from the curſe and heavy burden of the Law; and that the glory of God, his grace and mercy, ſaving us, might like a clear light from Heaven ſhine to all the World.

V. 2. no ſmall diſſention] ςάσεως, for ἀντιςάσεως: the Syriac giveth it commotion: it was an eager contention, Satan (as his manner is) ſtirring up factious men, to trouble the peace of the Church, and to corrupt the doctrine thereof, Paul and Barnabas like conſtant champions of Chriſt defending the truth.

they determined to ſend] To wit, the brethren of Antioch (for a remedy againſt this emergent miſchief) determined to ſend Paul and Barnabas with ſome others, to the Apoſtles and Elders then being at Jeruſalem, to deſire them to decide this controverſie; to this Paul willingly ſubſcribed, though he were nothing inferiour to the very chief Apoſtles, 2 Cor. 12. 1. (for as Cyprian de ſimpl. prælat. ſaith well, Hoc erant utique & cæteri Apoſtoli, quod fuit Petrus, pari conſortio præditi & honoris & poteſtatis, the reſt of the Apoſtles were as Peter, endued with equal partnerſhip of honour and authority) that he might thereby ſatisfie the believers concerning thoſe falſe Apoſtles, who pretended the authority of the Church at Jeruſalem for the maintenance of their Hereſie: he knew his doctrine was of God, and not to be ſubjected to the judgement of men: yet for the ſatisfaction and confirmation of the weak, he willingly ſubmitted to their judgement who were at Jeruſalem.

V. 3. brought on their way by the Church] That is, by the believers. Some of them being appointed to accompany Paul and Barnabas on their way, leſt they ſhould ſeem to have gone of their own accord, or to have diſſented from the Church of Antioch.

declaring the converſion] To all the Churches as they paſſed along they ſhewed the brethren for their comfort and confirmation, what God had done in the converſion of the Gentiles to the faith of Chriſt: it is a joy of heart to all good men to hear the Goſpels flouriſhing.

V. 4. they were received of the Church] Of all the Church they were acknowledged for ſingular inſtruments of Gods glory, and mens ſalvation, by the propagation of the Goſpel.

they declared all things] That they might underſtand by the ſucceſſe of their Miniſtery, that the calling of the Gentiles (which the adverſaries laboured by their falſe doctrines, and mixture of antiquated ceremonies to annul and overthrow pleaſed God.

V. 5. but there aroſe up] Some underſtand this, as if theſe (according with the ſeducers who came to Antioch,) roſe up to trouble them at Jeruſalem alſo: but others more probably refer theſe words to the relation which Paul and Barnabas made to the brethren at Jeruſalem, concerning thoſe things which were agitated at Antioch; for the deciſion whereof they were come up to adviſe with them at Jeruſalem.

ſect of Phariſees] See on Luke 14. 1. ἀπὸ τῆς αἱρέσεως. of the hereſie of the Phariſees: theſe had given their names to Chriſt, but yet retained ſome reliques of the antiquated ceremonies; Cerinthus and Ebion were condemned for the ſame, that they endeavoured to mingle the ceremonies of the Law, with the Goſpel of Chriſt: ſo while they would be Jewes and Chriſtians, they became neither: theſe being hypocrites, and therefore too intent to external rites, whereby they might appear more conſpicuous to men, would pervert the truth of Chriſt, for their own vain-glory's ſake.

V. 6. Apoſtles and Elders came together] To theſe appertained the deciſion of all controverſies of faith: theſe being enformed of the preſent buſineſſe, came together to conſider what courſe to take therein; they being by the influence of the holy Ghoſt, both qualified and authorized to be the moſt competent judges in ſuch caſes: poſſibly they diſcuſſed this queſtion, the Laity being preſent (as verſe 12. 22.) but leſt any ſhould dream that the vulgar were admitted to judge of this controverſie, the Apoſtles and Elders which were Miniſters are here named.

of this matter] περὶ τοῦ λόγου τούτου of this word: it is a common Hebraiſme; word put for the buſineſſe ſpoken of.

V. 7. much diſputation] συζήτησις, here uſed, ſignifieth, among other things, a conferring of reaſons, pro and con: for the finding out a truth, by ſtating the queſtion and allegation of arguments thereto ſerving. See chap 9. 29. and Mark 1. 27.

men and brethren] Chap. 10. 20 and 11. 13.

a good while ago] At our beginning to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles. Peter in this great diſpute it ſeemeth had hitherto held his peace, poſſibly leſt he might ſeem to preſcribe his fellow Apoſtles; but now he opportunely taketh occaſion to declare his judgement in this matter, for the defence of the tenet of Paul and Barnabas, teaching that juſtification, and ſalvation, are by faith in Chriſt, without the deeds of the Law (Rom 3. 28.) Now this ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων, jampridem, jam inde ab initio, or as ſome tranſlate, ab antiquis diebus; from the dayes of old, or a good while ago, relateth to the calling of Cornelius and his friends, chap. 10. and the controverſie following the ſame, chap. 11. 2, 3. &c.

ſhould hear the word of the Goſpel] His purpoſe is here to ſhew that Chriſt is ſufficient to the believing Gentiles: and that there needed no legal ceremonies to perfect them: this God revealed to him, that they ſhould receive the Goſpel and believe to ſalvation, not that they ſhould be circumciſed or charged with any legal ceremonies.

V. 8. giving them the holy Ghoſt] As if he ſaid, when I had accordingly preached the Goſpel to them, preſently God gave them the Holy Ghoſt, as he had done to us; when they were not circumciſed, neither obſerved the ceremonial Law. Seeing then God looketh principally on the purity of the heart, and hath ſufficiently teſtified his reception of the Gentiles, by equalling the uncircumciſion with us of the circumciſion, in the ſame gifts and graces of the holy Ghoſt, why ſhould we force upon them who are begun in the Spirit, to be perfected in the fleſh? See Gal. 3. 3.

V. 9. put no difference] Touching adoption and eternal life: though heretofore he diſtinguiſhed between Jews and Gentiles, by circumciſion and other legal rites; yet now in Chriſt both are made one, the middle wall of partition between us being broken down, Epheſ. 2. 14. See Mat. 27. 51.

purifying their hearts by faith] Chap. 10. 43. 1 Cor. 1. 2. He oppoſeth to legal purifications, the ſubſtace thereby figured, purification of the heart, and whole man, by the blood of Chriſt, and the ſpirit of regeneration, Heb. 9. 14.

V. 10. why tempt ye God] He calleth it a tempting of God to lay more upon mens conſciences, than either God hath laid on them, or they are able to perform: as here by impoſing circumciſion; they would bind them to that which God commanded not the Gentiles, and lay a neceſſity of their keeping the whole Law upon them, which none can do. Therefore to wave the means of ſalvation by the free grace of God in Chriſt, and to put ſalvation on terms ſo impoſſible, as is our perfect obedience to the whole Law, is to tempt God.

to put a yoke upon the neck] Mat. 23. 4. Gal. 5 1 were able to bear] For every one that is circumciſed, is bound to keep the whole Law, Gal. 5. 3. under a ſevere curſe, Gal 3. 10. If he fail in any thing, he is guilty of the breach of all, James 2. 10. this none of the Fathers could bear; it were meere tempting of God to profeſſe it, ſeeing Chriſt bare it for us, 1 Pet. 2. 24.

V. 11. we believe that through the grace, &c.] The elect Jews were not ſaved by their works of the Law (Gal. 3 11. Rom. 3. 20.) but by grace in Chriſt; therefore he equalleth them herein with the Gentiles, and profeſſeth his hope of ſalvation, by no other means: Seeing then we cannot obtain ſalvation by grace, except the yoke and curſe of the Law be taken off; neither can ſalvation be by the works of the Law. And laſtly, becauſe they cannot be ſubject to the curſe of the Law who believe in Chriſt, therefore it is vain to go back from the fountain of ſalvation, unto thoſe beggerly rudiments which were but a School-maſter to bring us to Chriſt, Gal. 3. 24.

V. 12. all the multitude kept ſilence] As entertaining his diſcourſe with a reverend ſilence: this ſheweth the part which the people have to act in counſels concerning controverſies in religion, which is a modeſt ſilence, that they may hear and learn of thoſe whom God hath aſſigned to the miniſtery of his Word.

and gave audience to Paul, &c.] They relating what ſignes and wonders God had done by them among the Gentiles, confirm the ſentence of Peter: for thoſe their works concluded, that God was pleaſed with their miniſtration to the Gentiles.

V. 13. after that they held their peace] James would not interrupt the diſcourſe of Paul and barnabas, but when they had ſpoken, then he alſo ſpake: 'Tis a Babel and confuſion of tongues where many ſpeaking at once, none are diſtinctly heard.

James] Son of Alpheus. See on chap 12. 19.

V. 14. Simeon] That is, Peter, 2 Pet. 1. 1. It ſeemeth the Gr. ſaid Σίμων, (as reading שִׁימוֹן inſtead of שִׁמְעוֹן becauſe they could not pronounce the letter ע) for ſo he is commonly named Simon, not Simeon. So Irenaus, l. 3. c. 12.

for his name] To bear his Name, to acknowledge and worſhip him for their onely God. Gre. ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ, That is, as the Syriac giveth it, לשמה to his Name; which might be named his people. See v. 17 and Rom. 9. 25, 26.

V. 15. to this agree the words of the Prophets] Concerning the calling of the Gentiles the Prophets in many places ſpake, though here be but one cited v. 16 Note here the rule by which the Apoſtles themſelves proceeded, the written Word of God; they equal not any humane traditions with it, they take not on them to judge the Scriptures, much leſſe to determine any thing againſt them: for there is but one truth, and one Spirit of God ſpeaking both in the Prophets and Apoſtles.

V. 16. after this will I return] Amos 9. 11. Gre. ἀναστρέψω, which word hath divers ſignifications; among which, ſometimes it importeth actively to return; So it may relate to God returning to ſhew mercy to his people, who in his juſtice left them to themſelves; as Rom. 1. 24. See Acts 17. 30. ſometimes paſſively, or neutrally, retrorſum reverti cogo. So if it relate to the people converting, the ſenſe may be; that God would cauſe them to return from their ſins, and calamities, of which the Prophet there ſpake, that they might under the Meſſias, be reſtored to their former glory and happineſſe: according to which Suidas ſaith ἀναστροφὴ is called the very reſtoring, or returning into ones former place whence he was driven; alicujus in priſtinum ſtatum reſtitutio, ſaith Æmilius Portus; a reſtoring one to his ancient ſtate, which was beſtowed on Iſrael in Chriſt. Luke citeth not the words of the Prophet, but ſo varieth them as to the ſame ſenſe more clearly interpreted concerning the repair of Iſrael by Chriſt.

tabernacle of David] Meaning the Church of God to be repaired, and reſtored by the Meſſias. Some (ſaith Oecumenius) underſtand it concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt, whom God the Father raiſed, and us in him: for no otherwiſe could our nature be repaired and raiſed up, except by his hand who firſt made us ---

V. 17. that the reſidue of men might ſeek after the Lord] Reſpecting the general ſentence of the Prophets concerning the calling of the Gentiles, he ſpeaketh the ſame ſenſe with the Prophet Amos 9 12. in words ſomewhat varying, inſtancing firſt in the reſidue of Edom: but James here more generally, in the reſidue of men; that is, as he expreſſeth, all the Gentiles, as the Prophet alſo ſaith כל־הגוים col haggoim, all the nations upon whom my Name is called.

who doth all theſe things] Do not think much that God calleth the Gentiles, whom ye count unclean, God hath done it, who doth all things well. See Pſal. 118. 23. Mat. 21. 42.

V. 18. known unto God are all his works] Thus he ſtrengtheneth weak mindes againſt ſuſpition of novelty: indeed this calling of the Gentiles is ſudden to men; but God knew this from the beginning, determining in eternity whatſoever he would bring to paſſe in time: he it is, who both revealed theſe things to the Prophets, and fulfilled the ſame in the appointed time.

V. 19 my ſentence is, that we trouble not them] Out of Scripture he concludeth with Peter, that the yoke of the Law was not to be put upon the Gentiles; it had been a wretched perplexity to their conſciences to put them vainly to ſeek any other means of juſtification, than faith in Chriſt.

V. 20. pollutions] 1 Cor. 8. 1. &c Pollutions of Idols, are things polluted by Idols to whom they were offered.

of idols] Becauſe ſome thought it no offence to be preſent at the Idols temples, and there to feaſt with Idolaters, which the Apoſtle ſaith, is to drink the cup of the Devils, 1 Cor. 10. 21. The Syriac giveth it, from the pollution of things offered, à vanitatibus idolorum, the interpreter of Irenæus, l. 3. c. 12. See on chap. 14. 15.

and from blood] He knoweth that theſe ceremonies to which they were accuſtomed many years, could not without great diſtraction be ſuddenly aboliſhed, until they could better learn their liberty in Chriſt. Therefore though they were dead in Chriſt paſſion, no more to be revived (as Gal. 5.) yet they did not preſently drag them out of doors, but gave them time, as it were, for a decent burial of them.

V. 21. for Moſes of old time] He ſignifieth hereby that the Jews could not ſo ſuddenly bear the abolition of the legal ceremonies, to which they had been long accuſtomed by the continual hear- of the Law read in every Synagogue; and that therefore they ought to purchaſe unity with a charitable compliance, until they could be more fully enformed concerning Chriſtian liberty.

V. 22. then pleaſed it the Apoſtles, &c.] Here was a holy, and no leſſe happy unity: here neither John, Andrew, or any of the Apoſtles, contradicted; but, as the matter was referred, and judged, ſo all reſted ſatisfied, and the people modeſtly conſented. So Clemens Romanus (who lived in this time, Phil. 4. 3.) ſpeaking of Ordinations by the Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſours, intimateth that it was done συνευδοκησάσης τῆς ἐκκλησίας πάσης the whole Church thereto willingly conſenting.

to ſend choſen men] That the adverſaries at Antioch might not caluminate Paul and Barnabas, as diſſenters from the reſt of the Apoſtles, they ſend with them Barſabas and Silas, chief among the brethren at Jeruſalem, to teſtifie that they were of the ſame judgement with Paul and Barnabas

V. 23. and wrote letters, &c.] This they did, that by the teſtimony of the commiſſioners, and the letters of the counſel the falſe Apoſtles might be ſilenced, and the believers confirmed in the truth and unity of their profeſſion.

V. 24. which went from us] They went out from us, they were not of us: ſee 1 John 2. 19. It is a miſchievous artifice of Satan, to divide Chrſtians: he knows where there is holy unity, there God is and therefore he can never prevail: therefore he laboureth to have a party in us, againſt us: he can never ſo dangerouſly wound Religion, as by the ſeeming religious, therefore raiſeth he up men among our ſelves to ſpeak perverſe things. See chap. 20. 30.

ſubverting your ſouls] ἀνασκευάζοντες, It cometh from the word among other things ſignifying to demoliſh and caſt down: fitly here uſed, ſeeing that the falſe Apoſtles by their ſuperſtructions, or laying other foundations for ſalvation, beſides the free mercy of God in Chriſt, deſtroyed ſouls: he builds to ruine, who builds his ſalvation on any meanes, but the ſole merits of Chriſt; other foundation can no man lay, than that which is laid, which is Chriſt Jeſus. See 1 Cor. 3. 11, 12. Epheſ. 2. 20. Gal. 1. 8. he ſubverteth and caſteth down, who buildeth not on Chriſt alone.

to whom we gave no ſuch command] Thus pull they off the vizards of thoſe pretenders to the authority of the Apoſtles, and poſſibly commiſſion from them ſo to teach; whereas indeed they taught that which raſed the foundation of the truth of the Goſpel: for the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, and the righteouſneſſe of the law, grace, and merit, legal ceremonies intimating an expectation of Chriſt to come, and Chriſtian liberty, declaring and profeſſing a diſcharge from the duties of the ceremonial law, and the curſe of the moral, by Chriſt already come are utterly incompatible. See Rom. 9 30, 31. Rom. 10. 3. 5, 6. Rom. 4. 4 5. Gal. 2. 2. & 5. 2. 3. therefore the Apoſtles in this firſt council, thus ſeriouſly diſavow that doctrine which teacheth to mingle the legal ceremonies, and the obſervation thereof with the goſpel.

V. 25. it ſeemed good unto us, &c.] All the true members of Chriſt agree in the fundamentals of Religion (though there ſometimes fall out varieties of judgements and differences in things ſubordinate) becauſe the Spirit of God is ever with them, uniting them, if not with infallibility, as here, yet with a ſufficient meaſure of grace: compare verſe 28, 39. and ſee Mat. 28. 20.

tp ſend choſen men] Such as are fit to interpoſe, and be imployed in this ſo weighty a buſineſſe.

with our beloved Barnabas and Paul] This they oppoſe to the calumnies of thoſe falſe Apoſtles whereby they vilified Paul and Barnabas: and for their confirmation who were ſtumbled thereat; hereby they declare their conſent with Paul and Barnabas, commending them for their ſingular zeal in that they had ventured their lives for the truth and teſtimony of the Lord Jeſus; daring and ſuffering for the name of Chriſt is commendable. See 1 Pet. 4 14. 16. it is the cauſe, not the puniſhment which makes the Martyr.

V. 27. We have therefore ſent Judas and Silas] They expreſſe their names, to acquaint the Church of Antioch with them. See on verſe 22. this Silas proved an excellent aſſiſtant to Paul in preaching the Goſpel, and perſecutions for the ſame endured, verſe 40.

V. 28. It ſeemed good to the holy Ghoſt, &c.] Herein they render a reaſon of their decree concerning the cauſes of juſtification; becauſe ſo it pleaſed the holy Ghoſt, whoſe truth and guidance they followed. This they ſay, leſt the Antiochians ſhould think this decree humane, they cited their authority, as if they had ſaid, we have determined as we were guided by the Spirit of God: in that they ſay (and to us) appeareth the authority of the faithful Miniſters in controverſies of faith. Rom. 1. 5. Mal. 2. 7.

neceſſary things] Neceſſary is not here to be referred to the ceremonies themſelves here mentioned; but to the preſent occaſion and perſons, whoſe unity and ſalvation was neceſſarily to be advanced by all means: it was therefore an accidental and temporary neceſſity: laws concerning things ſimply neceſſary, ought to be perpetual; ſo was not this: for when this tumultuous diſſention was over, and the brethren better enformed, Paul ſheweth that nothing is unclean, which God hath made for mans uſe. See 1 Cor. 8. 8. & 10. 19 1 Tim 4. 4. Tit 1. 15.

V 29. that they abſtain from meats, &c.] This did they, that they might hold the unity in the faith of Chriſt, between the believing Jews and new converted Gentiles: in things of their own nature indifferent (ſuch as were the three firſt things here prohibited for the time) we ought to hold charity, and by no means to break the ſacred band of unity, in things which God neither commandeth nor forbiddeth, we ought to have a tender care, firſt of the Churches unity, and next of their conſciences, who are infirm brethren. See Col. 3. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Rom. 15. 2. Rom. 14. 1. &c.

and from fornication] This part of the moral Law (which is indiſpenſable, and continually, and univerſally binding) is here inſerted for the Gentiles ſake, who before their converſion were ſhameleſly given to fornication, and all uncleanneſſe of luſt.

V. 30. when they were diſmiſſed] From the councill at Jeruſalem.

gathered the multitude] Though the determination in controverſies of faith, be properly in men of learning and integrity of life, yet all having equal intereſt in the common ſalvation, there was good reaſon why the whole multitude of believers ſhould be acquainted with (and their conſent had to) all the proceedings and the iſſue thereof.

V. 31. they rejoyced, &c.] As the truly religious cannot chuſe but be grieved at the diviſions of that body; whereof they are members; ſo muſt it be great joy to ſee all ſweetly compoſed to Gods honour: nor could there be any more comfortable news, than their aſſurance by the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt, and the Apoſtles of Chriſt, that they are freely juſtified by faith in him, without the works of the law; for therein men have peace with God. See Rom. 5. 1.

conſolation] Or exhortation.

V. 32. being Prophets alſo] See 1 Cor. 14. 29, 32. & 12. 18. Eph. 4. 11. that is, men of ſingular gifts in teaching, and interpreting Scriptures. See 1 Cor. 14. 3.

V. 33. let go in peace] With good love and bleſſing of the brethren.

V. 34. it pleaſed Silas to abide] They were diſmiſſed by the Church at Antioch, at their pleaſure to depart, and return to the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, but Silas to do that Church more ſervice, abode there a longer time.

V. 35. with many others alſo] Without emulation they united in the work of Chriſt, as they who truly zealed Gods honour, not their own, this ſheweth their happy conſent in preaching the Goſpel, and that in the abſence of teachers, the Church was ſupplied with other, ſo that Paul and Barnabas reſolving to viſit other places, left not that deſtitute.

V. 36. let us go again and viſit, &c.] Here was Pauls diligence, not onely to plant, but alſo to water: it was not enough once to preach the goſpel to them, but in regard of mens frailties, it ought to be cheriſhed and fomented with new exhortations and conſolations: the rather, becauſe Satan (the envious man) is ever ready to caſt in his tares, whereſoever the ſervants of God have ſowed the good wheat. See Mat. 13.

V. 37. to take with them John] Whoſe ſirname was Mark, chap. 12. 25. See chap. 13. 13.

V. 38. and went not with them to the work] That is, to that miniſtration aſſigned them, chap. 13. 2. it ſeemeth that it was no ſmall ſcandal that he deſerted them at Pamphilia, that Paul ſo ſtrictly ſtood upon it, that he would not have him admitted into the ſociety of this preſent viſitation of the Churches: ſo dangerous a thing it is for him to look back, that hath once put his hand to the plow. See Luke 9. 62.

V. 39. the contention was ſo ſharp] Such as prevailed to embittering their mindes, ſo that Barnabas went away with John to his own countrey Cyprus, Chapter 4, So miſchievouſly vigilant is Satan to take all occaſions of dividing good men: he is contented and well pleaſed with the confederacies and combinations of the wicked, for that is the ſtrength of his kingdom; he envieth only the unity of the religious: the more cautious ought good men to be, leſt they be embarked in contentions.

V. 40. Paul choſe Silas] Though they differed about Iohn, v. 38. 39. yet neither forſook his office and miniſtery: this ſtorm divided them in their perſons, not in their faith: and by the providence of God to the Churches good, for their confirmation and further edification in the faith of Chriſt.

V. 41. confirming the churches] Bringing to their mindes that which they had formerly taught, and further inſtructing them, as need required. Thus the invincible goodneſſe of God bringeth good out of evill: (their diviſion was evil, but the edifying of the Churches) good.

V. 13. prayer was wont to be made] It appeareth not who they were, who here prayed; but is it probable, that the Jews and Proſelytes there prayed for fear of the infidels, not daring ſo to do elſewhere; and here it ſeemeth was a private Oratory or Chappel: for ſo the word προσευχὴ here uſed, doth alſo here ſignify, as well as the action of prayer there performed: and ſo the Syriac expreſſeth it, we went out of the city by the river ſide, becauſe there was to be ſeen, בית צלותא an houſe of prayer.

V. 14. of the city of Thyatira] Mentioned alſo, Plin. lib. 5. cap. 30. a city of Aſia, Ierom de loc. Heb. Act. here dwelt Lydia, that devout ſervant of God, of this city. See Revel. 1. 11. & 2. 18. 24.

whoſe heart the Lord] God who elected her to ſalvation, made the means thereto effectual, by preparing her heart and affections to receive the goſpel: where God, who hath the key of David opens not, there the goſpel, (though never ſo powerfully preached) is hid, and nothing affecteth the ſtupid drouzy hearer: ſee 2 Cor. 4. 4. ſee here chap. 13. 48.

V. 15. and her houſhold] Gods covenant is with us and our children, Gen. 17. 9. 10. and therefore the ſeal thereof ought ſo to be: whole families were baptized, whereof children were commonly a part: if any ſay there were no children in Lydias, and the Goalers houſhold, or other like families, we require their proof: if any deſire our proof (that children ought to be baptized, who are born of believing parents) by ſome expreſſe place of Scripture; we that are in 1600 years poſſeſſion and preſcription, more reaſonably, require them to prove by any expreſs place of Scripture that children were not baptized by the Apoſtles (when they baptized houſholds, and nations, as they were commanded, Mat. 28. 19.) or ought not to be, by us.

V. 16. a ſpirit] This was the Spirit of Satan, who would teſtifie the truth, that he might diſcredit the truth of the Goſpel, and bring it into ſome ſuſpect. See Mark 1. 25. 34.

V. 17. theſe are the ſervants of the moſt High] When he ſpeaketh a lie he ſpeaketh of his own; here he ſpake truth, that he might make the hearers jealous of the truth of that which ſo impure a ſpirit profeſſed: ſome do good in ſhew, that they may thereby be enabled to do reall miſchief. V. 25. prayed and ſang prayſes unto God] Satans purpoſe was to make them blaſpheme; or to deſert or ſuſpect their cauſe and calling into Macedon as inauſpicious: but the more they are afflicted the more they rejoyce and praiſe the Lord. and the priſoners heard them] They did not pray as the Phariſees, ambitious of the praiſes of men, but to teſtifie the confidence they had in a good cauſe, and in a good conſcience.

V. 26. ſuddenly there was a great earth-quake, &c.] Thus God aſſured them that their prayers were heard. See Chap. 4. 31. he could without an earthquake have delivered them, as Chap. 12. 10. but thus the Lord of the creatures would manifeſt his power and preſcence, leſt any ſhould think that they had by ſome endeavours attempted to break priſon, or that it had been onely ſome fortuitous eſcape: and thus he would be manifeſt to poſterities, that the ſighing of his priſoners cometh before him who can at his pleaſure deliver thoſe who are appointed to die. See Pſalm 34. 16. 19. Pſalm 145. 18.

V. 27. would have killed himſelf] Fearing that he muſt needs ſuffer for the eſcape of his priſoners; for (had he been enformed of all that now happened) to a man unacquainted with the power and providence of God, it might ſeem a ridiculous plea, to ſay, that the priſon doors opened themſelves, and that all his priſoners bands fell off: here we may ſee the miſerable reſolutions and comforts of the unregenerate in afflictions.

V. 28. Do thy ſelf no harm, &c.] Hereby it may appear that theſe ſervants of God were not ſo ſolicitous for their own lives and liberties, as for the propagation of the goſpel, and mens ſalvation: otherwiſe being looſe, and the doors all open, they could have been ſilent; and they might eaſily have eſcaped: but they being enformed by the ſpirit that God therefore awaked the keeper, that he might be converted and ſaved; Paul and Silas ſtart not, neither tempted they God, or loſt the uſe of the miracle by their ſtay; it being the main end of all this; that God might appear on the part of that religion, which the world then ſo much condemned, and that this keeper and his family might be ſaved.

V. 29. called for a light] Poſſibly to be brought into the place where the priſoners were; for priſons uſually have light burning in ſome of their watches all night; and thereby he might ſee, or finde that the priſon doors were open, verſe 27.

he ſprang in] εἰσεπήδησε, he leaped in (or came ſpeedily in among them, as one that leaped) to ſee if the priſoners were all there. So εἰσπηδάω is interpreted, ſaltu irruo, &c. εἰσεπήδησαν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, Demoſt. he leaped or ruſhed into the houſe.

came trembling and fell down, &c.] He that a little before confidently put their feet into the ſtocks, now cometh trembling to their feet: mark how behooffull it is for ſome men to be humbled with fear and affliction: how ſecurely before this hour would he have deſpiſed all that ever Paul and Silas could have ſaid to him? this ſhort fear hath made him docible: you may perceive the reaſon why God ſo often exerciſeth his dear children with fears: but why (may ſome ſay) did not Paul ond Sylas reprove him, and take him up from their feet, as Peter did Cornelius, chap. 10. 26. becauſe they knew this man did it not to adore them, but for preſent fear of Gods judgements to humble himſelf: And indeed it was a Roman faſhion of begging pardon to fall at his feet of whom they entreated it: had here been any thing prejudicall to Gods honour, Paul would not have forgotten his former zeal among the Lyſtrians, chapter 14. 14. &c.

V. 30. and brought them out] Out of the inner priſon, verſe 24. into ſome more convenient room; poſſibly into his own lodgings, as is after expreſſed, verſe 34.

What muſt I do to be ſaved?] Some being ſtartled with fear and ſenſe of afflictions return to their former purpoſes more obſtinately. See Exod. 7. 3. Mat. 28. 5, 11, 15. but he ſo profited by his fear; that he deſired to be enformed, what he muſt do to be ſaved, as Chapter 2. 37. this was Gods free mercy, (Rom. 9. 15.) for Paul had not yet preached Chriſt unto him ſince his impriſonment.

V. 31. believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt] This brief anſwer containeth the ſum of the Goſpel offering us ſalvation, and all bleſſedneſſe in Chriſt apprehended by faith.

V. 32. and they ſpeak unto him the word of God, &c.] More largly expounding that which they propoſed in brief.

to all that were in the houſe] So, proved it an happy affliction to thoſe priſoners alſo, who by this means came to faith and ſalvation.

V. 33. took them in the ſame hour of the night] See what admirable changes God can ſuddenly work: but now this keeper would have deſtroyed himſelf; preſently he humbly beggeth information how he might be ſaved; which having received; he delayeth not to ſhew his thankfulneſſe. See alſo Gen. 40. 23. and 41. 9. &c. Eſther 6. 1, 2, 3. faith cannot be unfruitfull of good works.

was baptized, he and all his] See on verſe 15. this care of his family is exemplary. See Chap. 10. 7, 24. 48. See on verſe 15.

V. 34. he had brought them into his houſe] Into his own lodgings, where his ſelf and family kept: ſee the admirable change of him and his in one night, now he obſerveth not the governours charge concerning the cloſe and ſafe impriſonment of Paul and Silas, but uſeth them with all humanity: now he waſheth their ſtripes, or wounds received by thoſe ſtripes. They that have true faith, and aſſurance in their intereſt in Chriſt, will obey God in being charitable, rather than men who commend them to be cruel.

he ſet meat before them] τράπεζαν, a table: τράπεζα is here put to ſignify a table furniſhed with meat (as among many Greek authors) the 70. uſe it. Dan. 1. 13, 15. τῶν ἐσθιόντων τράπεζαν —that eat the portion of the kings meat, Pſalm 78. 20. can he give bread alſo, can he provide τράπεζαν τῷ λαῷ αὐτοῦ, a table for his people, Hebrew שאר fleſh for his people. So Pſalm 23. 5. Pſalm 69. 22. &c. Paul and Silas were faſting, and not a little tyred with watching, ſtripes, and injurious uſage; therefore, though about midnight, the converted keeper ſet before them ſuch food as he had ready in his houſe, to refreſh them: no hour is unſeaſonable to feed the hungry or to do works of charity, thus faith worketh by love and charity. See Gal. 5. 6.

and rejoyced believing, &c.] They rejoyced in the faith of God, the Syriac hath it: it is true which Ambroſe ſaith, l. 5. ep. 18. nullus major dolor quam is qui peccati mucrone vulnerat conſcientiam, there is no greater ſorrow, than that which with the ſword of ſinne woundeth the conſcience; therefore the ſinner feeling a ſweet calm within him, in peace of conſcience by his juſtification by faith, (Rom. 5. 1.) muſt needs rejoyce in ſpirit: here was now no exaction of fees, imperious and cruell uſage of the priſoners, after the keeper once believed in Chriſt, but the true fruits of charity, and ſo true joy to him and his whole family what joy or peace of conſcience others are like to have at laſt, may not obſcurely be gathered from Chriſts words, Matthew 25. 43, 45. who ſpeaking of the form of judgement to come, among other arguments of condemnation receiteth this, I was ſick, and in priſon, and ye viſited me not; in as much as ye did it not to one of the leaſt of theſe, ye did it not to me: where note, Firſt that Chriſt taketh ſome things on his own account, as done to his own perſon, which are done to his elect. Secondly, that if neglecting to viſit, relieve, and comfort the impriſoned, be a juſt cauſe of damnation; then moſt ſad and fearful muſt be the condition of thoſe keepers, who as much as they could, have taken away the relief and comfort of their priſoners, by unreaſonable exactions, and hard uſage of them. But they have warrant and cuſtom for that they do: that indeed might poſſibly ſecure them from men here, but who can give them indemnity from the ſentence of Chriſt already foretold them? Doth any of them ſo much love his own ſoul, as to cry with this happy convert, verſe 30. what muſt I do to be ſaved? you ſee what followeth, verſe 31. but leſt thy fruitleſs faith ſhould at laſt fail thee, go learn of Zache, Luke 19. 8. to reſtore the damage, that Jeſus may ſay to thy conſcience, This day is ſalvation come to this houſe.

V. 35. and when it was day] Remembring, and poſſibly being terrified with the earth-quake.

ſent the Sergeants] Syr. duces geſtantes virgas, according to the Greek, ῥαβδοῦχοι: ſo called of the ſtaves or rods which they carried. Some ſay that theſe were meſſengers, known by their ſtaff of office which they were to carry, as apparitors to cite, and bear out proceſſe of judges and magiſtrates: and that the Lictores were diſtinguiſhed from theſe, by the axes and rods which they carried.

V. 36. Keeper of the priſon told this ſaying] Being glad for their enlargement, he cheerfully brought them news of this new clemency.

V. 37. but Paul ſaid unto them] That is, unto the Sergeants.

uncondemned] ἀκατακρίτους as they ſay, indictâ cauſâ, without cauſe alleadged; without any legal tryal, or hearing of us: Syr. inſontes, guiltleſſe men.

being Romans] Not becauſe he was born at Rome, or of Roman parents (he was an Hebrew, born at Tarſus) but becauſe the citizens thereof were by their priviledge free men of Rome; and ſo by their Valerian Law might not be bound, and by their Semponian Law, they might not be beaten or executed without the Romans conſent: thus Paul pleaded his priviledge for the defence of the goſpel, leſt the word of God ſhould be deſpiſed with their perſons.

V. 28. they feared when] Becauſe the puniſhment was great for any man that injured a citizen or free man of Rome.

V. 39. and they came and beſought them] This can God do for all his ſervants, who have been diſgracefully and deſpitefully uſed: in this entreating and leading them out of priſon, they ſufficiently confeſſe their precipitate fury in abuſing them who were innocent: this was for fear of the Romans, leſt they ſhould puniſh their city, or them for violating their priviledges; therefore they deſire them to depart from them.

V. 40. and entred into the houſe of Lydia] Verſe 14. doubtleſſe to confirm them in the faith which they had preached to them, and probably they would have ſtayed longer, but that the imperious and armed entreaty of the wicked Magiſtrates awed them: Lydia and hers hearing of their marvellous deliverance, could not but be comforted, and confirmed in the truth: and though Paul now left them, yet he after viſiteth the Philippians with an Epiſtle to contain and confirm them in the faith.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. A*mphipolis*] A city of Macedonia, now called Chryſopolis: there was another of the ſame name in Syria, ſaith Jerom de loc. Hebr. Act.

Apollonia] Another city in Macedonia: there is alſo another of the ſame name in Africa, which was called Pentapolis. Jerom q. ſupr.

Theſſalonica] A chief city of Macedonia: ſo called of Philips victory over the Theſſalonians: to the Church hereof the Apoſtle wrote two Epiſtles.

V. 2. as his manner was] He was conſtant in preaching the truth of Chriſt, and the adverſaries were conſtant in oppoſing it: by that which men uſe to do, you may know to which party they belong.

went in unto them] Into their ſynagogue: he was none of them who crept into houſes, to lead captive ſilly women, 2 Tim. 3. 2. &c. truth ſeeks no corners, the good ſeed is ſowed in the day time, but the tars while men ſlept, Mat. 10. 25. truth knoweth it ſelf a ſtranger on earth; and that it eaſily findes enemies; the kinred, ſeat, hope, favour and dignity thereof are in heaven: onely it rejoyceth in this one thing; as Tertullian Apol. cap. 1. ſaith, ne ignota damnetur, leſt it be condemned unknown: therefore edito gaudet & aperto, it joyeth to be publickely ſeen: dum conventicula ſibi diverſa conſtituunt, veritatis caput, atque originem reliquerunt, Cyprian. de ſimpl. prælat. while men appoint them divers conventicles, they left the author and fountain of truth.

out of the Scriptures] This ſheweth whence all ſound knowledge of God and religion muſt be drived: in things humane, human reaſons have place; but in matters of religion, onely the word of God (without traditions of men) muſt determine ſo as that in that we muſt reſt. Faith can be grounded on nothing but infallible truth; and that can be found onely in the word of God, in which there can be no falſhood, becauſe God, the author thereof, 2 Tim. 3. 16. cannot lie, 1 Tit. 1. 1. Well ſaid Ambroſe in his anſwer to Valentinian the Emperour, lib. 5. ep. 31, Cœli myſterium doceat me Deus ipſe qui condidit, non homo qui ſeipſum ignoravit: Cui magis de Deo, quam Deo credam? let God his ſelf teach me the myſtery of heaven, who made heaven, not man who knoweth not himſelf; concerning God, whom ſhall I rather believe than God himſelfe?

V. 3. opening and alledging] That is, as the Syriac hath it, expounding and ſhewing: indeed παρατιθέμενος, imports a making things as maniteſt, as that which is ſet before our eyes. The ſum of his ſermon was, that Chriſt for our redemtion ought ſo to die, and riſe again (Rom. 4. 25.) and that this Jeſus (whom Paul preached) is indeed the Chriſt and long expected Meſſias.

V. 4. conſorted with Paul] προσεκληρώθησαν, as it were choſen by lot, they joyned: it importeth a near and firme conjunction, the Syriac interpreteth it, they adheared to Paul and Silas: ſo that hence it appeareth that their reaſoning in the Jews Synagogue was not without good effect: ſome of the Jews believed, and many of the Grecians, this word importeth not a cold aſſent to the truth which they heard, but alſo a ſerious affection to the ſame, and the Chriſtian party that they might be further enformed and confirmed a wavering ſuſpence, and lukewarme newtrality of profeſſours, much diſadvantageth the cauſe of religion.

devout Greeks] Chap. 11. 20.

V. 5. which believed not] See Chap. 14. 2. becauſe they believed not the goſpel, they envied the proſperity and propagation thereof; and were moved with zeal to defend the ceremonial rights, in which they had been brought up: the word ζηλόω here uſed, ſignifieth ſometimes zeal to good, ſometimes to evil, as here; ſo Acts 7. 9. that is, envy.

certain lewd fellowes] τῶν ἀγοραίων τινάς, &c. idle fellows, who having no employment at home, uſe to walk lazily up and down markets and publick places; the dregges of cities, mercenary, worthleſſe burdens of the earth; commonly watching opportunities of moving ſedition, in hope of finding ſome advantages in change.

the houſe of Jaſon] Who was Paul and Silas hoſt, whom Paul mentioneth, Rom. 16. 21.

ſought to bring them out] To bring out Paul and Silas, that they might ſtone them.

V. 6. they drew Jaſon] In an illegal and tumultuous way violently pulled him out of his houſe, as a delinquent; as if hoſpitality, and harbouring the ſervants of Chriſt had been a ſinne.

and certain brethren] Some other believers. See verſe 4. who it ſeemed had but newly embraced the Goſpell among them.

theſe have turned the world upſide down] Or, who have ſtirred up the world to inſurrection and ſedition: a grievous crime of Chriſtians, had it been true; but being falſe, the greater was the accuſers ſinne who charged them with ſuch untruth: So odious is ſinne, that the very wicked are aſhamed of it, which is the reaſon why they commonly call others by names proper to themſelves, that they may tranſmit unto, or charge their ſins upon others. (See chap. 24. 5. Geneſ. 3. 12, 13. 1 Sam. 15. 15. 21. 1 Kings 18. 17.) they would, the guilt alſo, if they could; ſo in the Primitive Church, what ever calamity came upon the people, or common weal, it was preſently imputed to the Chriſtians.

are come hither alſo] Meaning, they are ill-affected to the ſtate, and trouble this city as they have done others.

V. 7 whom Jaſon hath received] He hath harboured them: ſee on verſe 6.

contrary to the decrees of Cæſar] An odious crime, but impudedently caſt on Chriſtians: Paul and Silas endeavoured to advance the ſpiritual kingdom of Chriſt, without any injury to the Roman Empire; which the Jews well knew, but caſt this aſperſion upon them, onely to render them odious to the people: therefore they pretended Cæſars right, that they might abuſe the decrees of Cæſar, to the deſtruction of Gods ſervants: the ancient Chriſtians were no diſturbers of States: rogamus Auguſte, non pugnamus, ſaid Ambroſe lib.* 5. epeſt. 23. ad Marcellin, we entreat, O Cæſar, we fight not; therefore Theodocius had rather to binde men to him, religione quam timore, with religion rather than fear, Ambroſ. de exit. Theodoſ. orat. the Chriſtian (ſaid Tertullian. ad ſcap. cap. 2.) is no mans enemy, much leſſe the Emperours, whom knowing to be appointed of God, he muſt needs, love, reverence, honour and wiſh ſafe—— therefore ſaith the ſame, we honour the Emperour ſo far as it is lawful for us, and expedtint for him, ut hominem à Deo ſecundum--- & ſolo Deo minorem as a man next unto God--and leſſe than God only, they prayed for the Emperours---long life, proſperous reign, valiant arms, faithful Senate, or Counſel, good people, and a quiet world : ib. Apol. cap. 30. yet theſe men could never be ſecure from calumny, as if they had been enemies to peace.

V. 8. They troubled the people, &c.] This people not knowing the buſineſſe, and hearing ſomething pretended againſt the Roman ſtate (having formerly ſmarted under their power) were troubled, for fear they might again deal ſeverely with them as diſturbers of peace; and probably the Roman commanders there being, might alſo be troubled at the appearance, or fear of ſome inſurrection.

V. 9. When they had taken ſecurity of Jaſon] λαβόντες τὸ ἱκανὸν, Syr. and had taken ſureties : that is, bail, for their appearance. So Budæus interpreth it, cum ſatis accepiſſent, ab Jaſone, & ab aliis judicio ſiſtendi ſponſionis, &c. here they being partly ſatisfied with their anſwer (as is moſt probable) and a legal ſecurity taken, they appeaſe the people.

V. 10. Berea] Another City of Macedonia : hither they ſent Paul and Silas, that they might keep them from the rage of the Jews, and reſerve them to the greater good of the Church.

went into the Synagogue] Here was his invincible love towards the Jews: after ſo many violent outrages of theirs againſt his life, he ceaſeth not to venture again for their ſalvation. See Rom. 9. 2, 3.

V. 11. Theſe were more noble] That is, than the Teſſalonian Jews, for this τῶν ἐν Θεσσαλονίκῃ, is ellipticall : than thoſe (Jews) in Theſſalonica : which their dayly ſearching of the Scriptures confirmes, the Jews had the writings of the Prophets, but rarely the Gentiles before their converſion : ſee verſe 13.

they received the word] That is, the Goſpel of Chriſt preached unto them, which they of Theſſalonica rejected and perſecuted, but theſe cheerfully and readily embraced: herein they were more excellent than others. See 1 Theſ. 2. 13.

ſearched the Scriptures dayly, &c.] For they teſtifie of Chriſt. John 5. 39 there Chriſt is learned ; there ſhineth an heavenly light, which like that Eaſtern ſtar. (Mat. 2. 2. &c.) leads the wiſe men to Chriſt : theſe Bereans diligence, is exemplary to us.

V. 12. Therefore many of them believed] By the teſtimony of Scriptures, and example of other believers, the Spirit of God working thereon.

V. 13 When the Jews of Theſſalonica, &c.] Theſe unbelievers being of reſtleſſe and implacable malice, envied thoſe who believed, therefore came they over to Berea; to hinder the preaching of the Goſpel there, by ſtirring up new troubles. See 2 Theſ. 1. 5. &c.

V. 14 to go as it were to ſea] To take ſhipping as if he meant to go quite away out of thoſe parts; which they did, that the Jews might give over their purſuit.

but Silas and Timotheus abode, &c.] They being not ſo much known nor maliced as Paul, ſtayed a little while, further to edifie the believers there.

V. 15. to Athens] A City and famous Univerſity of Greece: ſo did the providence of God bring to paſſe, that Satans malitious endeavours to ſuppreſſe the Goſpel, cauſed it more to ſpread abroad; as here it did, at Athens, the Greece of Greece. See Atlas. min G. Mercat. in Achaia.

V. 16. His ſpirit was ſtirred in him] παρωξύνετο--was embittered in him. So chap. 15. 39. ἐγένετο οὖν παροξυσμὸς --- ὠτρύνετο incitabatur, Oecumen. in loc.---was ſtirred up. So bitterneſſe of Spirit moved him, that he could not bear it, but brake out into reproof.

V. 17. with the devout perſons] With the Proſelytes. Syr. with them that feared God. See chap. 13. 43.

V. 18. Epicureans] A ſect of Philoſophers, as alſo were the Stoicks, of the errours of the Epicureans. See Epiphan. hæreſ. 6. Gent. hæreſ. ord. 8. of the Stoicks, ſee Epiphan. hæreſ. 5. D. Laert. lib. 10. ib. lib. 7. zenon,

V. 19. Areopagus] Or Mars-hill, it was the higheſt court in Athens, a court where the Judges, called Areopagites, ſate concerning the higheſt titles and cauſes, ſpecially religion : hither they brought Paul as a violater of their religion, to be judged, as Socrates was, for that he denyed their Idols to be gods, and becauſe he would, as they ſaid, bring in ἕτερα καινὰ δαιμόνια, other new gods. D. Laert. l. 2. Socrat.

what this new doctrine, &c.] Thus godleſſe men think of truth: whereas truth is more ancient than any errour : the goſpel was in the old teſtament, as the wheat in the blade, in time, and by degrees ripening, and ſhewing it ſelf. Heatheniſh ſuperſtitions are but imitations of Gods truth and holy worſhip, inventions of Satan to beguile ignorant ſoules with ſhewes of truth.

V. 20. Thou bringeſt certain ſtrange things, &c.] It is ſtrange to them who were aliens from the covenant of God: this they would know, to ſatisfie their own curioſity.

V. 21 either to tell or hear] This is the fruit of idleneſſe, and levity of miſgoverned minds. See 1 Tim. 5. 13. theſe two things go together, inquiſitiveneſſe, and talkativeneſſe : the Grecian Hiſtories ſhew the diſpoſition of this people : the meaneſt mechanick among them, would be medling and diſcourſing of State-matters; inſomuch as in that dangerous liberty of tongues, that republique (though the Miſtris of knowledge to all Greece) could never be well or long ſetled, nor free from tumults, and dangerous concuſſions of ſtate, ſo diſcompoſing and disjoynting the members thereof, that they were long before they could grow together again, recover their ancient ſtrength, or be free from ſome miſchievous gangrens, untill they loſt themſelves and all Greece with them : ſuch popular liberty, being a dangerous ſympton, of a diſaffected Common-wealth, it were to be wiſhed, that thoſe, who ſit at the helm, would ſeriouſly, and timely conſider how this diſeaſe hath crept upon us, now ſome years together, leſt once ---flouriſhing England come to the like miſery.

and ſaid, ye men of Athens] So was he ready to give account of the hope which was in him. See 1 Pet. 3. 15.

too ſuperſtitious] δεισιδαιμονεστέρους : the word is uſed ſomtimes in the good part; but here, as commonly, in the evil : ſo Clem Alexandr. adm. ad Gent. &c. δεισιδαίμων, is metuens numen, or a ſuperſtitious man : one who by fear, is driven to believe a deity, or worſhippeth for fear, as the ſuperſtitious uſually do. Lactantius deſcribeth ſuch to be, qui ſuperſtitem memoriam defunctorum colunt, &c. who worſhip the images of their Anceſtors, as their penates, and houſhold gods : they who deviſed to themſelves new rites of adoring the dead (in ſtead of God) whom they imagined to be received into heaven and Deified, lib. 4. cap. 28. and alſo they who worſhipped many, or any falſe God, he had excellently well ſaid before, l. 2. c. 18. that ſuch had not the reaſon of men left in them; and that there is no doubt, but that, Religio nulla eſt, ubicunque ſimulachrum eſt, there is no religion, where there is an image.

V. 23. your devotions] σεβάσματα; your adorations (of σεβάζομαι, to adore with religious worſhip. Budæus) or the gods which ye worſhip : the Syriac give it בית דחלתכון beth dachalothcun : the houſe of your religions ; your idol temple.

TO THE UNKNOWN GOD] Syriac דאלהא גניזא daloho genizo ; of or to the hidden God : he dwelleth in the thick darkneſſe, 1 Kings 8. 12 Hebrew גנז ganaz, is texit, velavit, &c. the ſame which ἀποκρύπτω with the Greeks : God is indeed, as Lactantius ſaith, lib. 1. cap. 8. inexcogitabilis, ineffabilis, & nulli alio ſatis notus quam ſibi ; incomprehenſible, eneffable, not very much known to any but himſelf : Some heathen authours mention this altar, as Pauſanlis Attic. Laert. in Epimenid, Lucian. Philopatride : but ſomething differing, in their relation of the inſcription, and occaſion of the ſame: Oecumenius ſaith, that the whole inſcription was, Θεοῖς Ἀσίας, καὶ Εὐρώπης, καὶ Λιβύης, Θεῷ ἀγνώστῳ καὶ ξένῳ, to the gods of Aſia, Europe and Lybia, to the unknown and ſtrange God : hereby Paul taketh occaſion to bring them to the true God, whom yet they knew not.

V. 24. God that made the world] Chap. 7. 48. The Apoſtle here teacheth them, who that God was, whom they worſhipped under the notion of UNKOWN; whom he deſcribes by his effects, and works of creation, and preſervation of of the world, concerning the incomprehenſible eſſence of God, though before an auditory of Philoſophers, he ſaid nothing, only by his work of creation and providence, he ſheweth which is indeed the true and onely God : in theſe words he refuteth the fooliſh tenet of Epicures affirming the world to be eternal. See in verſe 26.

V. 25. with mens hands] His worſhip conſiſteth not in things external, humane traditions, or the works of mens hands, idols, images, &c. but in ſiprit and truth (See John 4. 24.) according to the holy preſcript of his own word : he is independently and ſelf-bleſſed, wanting nothing of ours (Pſalm 50. 8.) he gives all creatures what they have and are : when he bleſſeth us with ability to give (which is acceptable ſervice to him. Phil. 4. 18. Hebr. 13. 16.) and rewardeth that which we do herein, in faith and obedience to him, he onely crowneth his own graces in us: but here he intendeth not theſe things, but external ceremonies &c.

V. 26. hath made of one blood] Of one Adam : herein he admoniſheth the Athenians to conſider the end for which God gave them life and being : it is a brutiſh ſtupor, not to minde why God made us reaſonable creatures.

determined the time before] Job 7. 1. & 14. 5, 6. For the birth and life of every man, as alſo the places of their habitations : this he ſaith to confute the Epicures, who denyed Gods providence, dreaming that all things were made by a fortuitous concourſe of their imaginary Atomi : (Clem. Alexandrinus ſtrom. lib. 1. Greg. Nazianzen orat. 33. fine. Epiphanius hæreſ. 6. Athanaſ. de incarn. verb. Auguſtin de C. D. lib. 6. cap. 5. &c.) God in his eternal counſel ordained all theſe things, and changes which we ſee in their appointed time: he divideth the earth to the ſons of men, and his providence governeth all things, which his wiſdom not onely foreſaw, but diſpoſed of. See Pſal. 115. 3.

V. 27. that they ſhould ſeek the Lord] It is not as Anaxagoras ſaid, man was born to ſee the ſun and the heavens (Lactant. l. 3. c. 9.) but to ſeek, know, and ſerve the Lord their Maker : he not onely gave us life, but alſo means by which we may come to know him, in the great volume of nature, and the book of grace, the holy Scripture.

if happily they might feel after him] ψηλαφήσειαν αὐτὸν might feel and finde, he intimates that God, though he be incorporeal, yet in his works which are corporeal and obvious to ſenſe, ſo complieth with their infirmity, as that he ſetteth himſelf before them (as Oecumenius ſaith) ὥσπερ ἄν εἰς μέσον τι ψηλαφώμενον) as it were ſomething palpable: the Syriack hath it, that they might finde him by his creatures: in them indeed, that which may be known of him, as his wiſdome, power, and goodneſſe, may and do evidently appear. Romans 1: 20.

not farre from every one of us] We are not to ſeek the knowledge of God in things farre remote from us; we need not go out of our ſelves to finde him; he filleth all things. Jer. 23. 24. indeed the carnal eye cannot ſee him, nor the ear heare him: lo he goeth by me, and I ſee him not. Job 9. 11. yet the effects of his preſent goodneſſe, are obvious to every ſenſe. See Auguſtin. Paulinæ. ep. 112. cap. 11.

V. 28. in him we live, &c.] That is, by his power, by which he continually preſerveth the creature in his being. Col 1. 17. Hebr. 1. 3.

your own Poets have ſaid] As Aratus a Greek; this he citeth, not to derive any proof from his authority, who was an heathen, and alien, but to ſhame the Athenians, with whom he had now to do. See alſo 1 Cor. 15. 33. Tit. 1. 12.

V. 29. we ought not to think] Eſa. 40. 18. from Aratus teſtimony he inferreth, that the worſhip of Idols is impious vanity; how fooliſh and irrational is it for man, the image of God, to adore the image and work of man? and what madneſſe is it for a man to think that any can make the image of an infinite, incomprehenſible God, when he well knows that the moſt curious artificer can neither draw the picture of a ſoule, nor carve it's image.

V. 30. times of this ignorance] Chap. 14. 16.

God winked at] ὑπεριδὼν ὁ Θεὸς, may here ſignifie the ſame which ἀμελεῖν Hebr. 8. 9. not to regard, or to contemn, contray to ἐπιβλέπειν. Luke 1. 48. God did not manifeſt himſelf unto them, as unto the Jewes. Pſal. 147. 19, 20. and this ſheweth Gods patience, in that he did not preſently deſtroy them, not their impunity for the life to come: herein he prepoſſeſſeth an objection vvhich they might poſſibly have made: if the religion which we profeſſe, be falſe and erroneous; why did God ſuffer the world ſo long to erre: he ſaith God bare with that in his long-ſuffering; but now he requireth you to repent: be not you ſo curious to examine what became of others before you, as careful for your own ſalvation; the onely means whereto, is now preſented you: that was a ſevere judgement, when God gave you up to your own luſts, and blindneſſe of mind (as Rom. 1. 24. Heb. 8. 9.) this is a gracious mercy which he offereth you in the Goſpel and covenant of grace.

but now he commandeth all men] Now he cauſeth the Goſpel to be preached to all nations, to draw them from their horrible ſins: and now if they refuſe to do the known will of their Maſter, they muſt expect more ſevere judgements.

V. 31. righteouſneſſe] ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ in juſtice and equity: as 2 Cor. 5. 10. he mentioneth the judgement to come, to terrifie the Epicures, that they might no longer beguile their own ſouls, in hope of future impunity. See Pſal. 96. 13. & 9. 8, 9 by that man whom he hath ordained] Rom. 2. 16. Chriſt Jeſus: poſſibly Paul nameth his humanity, in reſpect of the Gentiles ignorance of the myſtery of the bleſſed Trinity, and Chriſts incarnation: and leſt they ſhould ſo miſtake that ſacred myſtery, as thereby to confirme their opinion concerning plurality of gods.

given aſſurance] Or offered faith; the meaning is, that God confirmed and declared, as it were by a moſt evident teſtimony, that Chriſt ſhould judge the world, in raiſing him from the dead; wherein he was with power, declared to be the Son of God. Rom. 1. 4.

V. 32. Some mocked] Some were like ſtony ground, ſome like thorny, and ſome like the good. Matth. 13. they who taſted the truth and mercy of God therein, deſired to hear more. See Chap. 13. 42.

V. 33. So Paul departed] He diſmiſſed his auditors, having performed his part in ſowing the ſeed of the Goſpel among them.

V. 34. certain men clave unto him] To wit, thoſe whoſe hearts God had opened, ſo that the word might be a ſavour of life unto them.

Dionyſius the Areopagite] A Senatour or Judge in that court of Mars-hill in Athens, whom Luke names, becauſe he was no vulgar auditor, but an eminent man, and of great authority with the Athenians.

Damaris] It ſeemeth that ſhe was ſome honourable woman. See verſe 11.

Pontus] A Province in Aſia.

Claudius] The Emperour of Rome.

tent-makers] Their trade was to make tents of skins, then much in uſe in thoſe hot countries

V, 4 a Greek] See chap. 11. 20.

V. 6. when Silas and Timotheus were come] See chap. 16. 1. &c. and 17. 15. we here read the proceeding of Paul in preaching the Goſpel at Corinth, accommodating his doctrine to their capacity, of which he ſeemeth to ſpeak, 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. but after the coming of Silas and Timotheus from Macedon unto him, as he had ordered, chap. 17. 15. he began to be fervent in the cauſe of Chriſt, declaring him to be τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν, that Chriſt Jeſus, promiſed by the Prophets.

was preſſed in ſpirit] He had an extraordinary and vehement motion of the ſpirit, by a divine inſpiration, to teſtifie to the Jewes, that Jeſus was that Chriſt, the Meſſias, whom they ſo long expected.

V. 6. he ſhook his raiment] Mat. 10. 14. and chap. 13. 51.

your blood be upon your own heads] This is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking. So Joſh. 2. 19. דמו בראשו damo berosho Gre. ἔνοχος ἑαυτῷ ἔσται; he ſhall be guilty to himſelf: that is, of his own deſtruction. So 2 Sam. 1. 16. thy blood ſhall be upon thine own head. So the Jemes cried, Mat. 27. 25. his blood be upon our heads, &c. that is, the guilt and puniſhment thereof; this phraſe ſeemeth taken from the Jewes cuſtome of laying their hands on the head of the guilty perſons by which they intimated, that the witneſſes laid that crime, concerning vvhich they teſtified, on the head, or to the charge of the perſon accuſed, and ſo devoted him to puniſhment; as their ſacrifices vvere deſtinated to death, by the laying the ſacrificers hand on the head of the beaſt to be offered: See Levit. 1. 4. & 3. 2. Exod. 29. 10. So that blood is ſaid to be laid on the head, vvhen one is guilty of the ſin vvhich deſerveth death: the ſenſe of Pauls ſpeech is, be you, or you are guilty of your ovvn deſtructions.

I am clean, &c.] καθαρὸς ἐγὼ that is, ἀθῷος, innocent guiltleſſe; or ἀναίτιος; unblameable, not in the fault: οὐκ ἐκοινώνησα τοῦ κακοῦ: I have no ſhare in this evill: it is none of my fault, if ye periſh.

henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles] This he ſaid, that emulation of the Gentiles might incite them to believe: but their obſtinacy made an evill uſe of every thing, and ſo rendred them incurable. chap. 13. 46,

V. 7. named Juſtus] This vvas a Proſelyte: the Syryack calleth him טטוס Titus; vvhether Juſtus vvere here a ſirname; as, chap. 1. 23. and Col. 4. 11. it is uncertain, the vulgar readeth Titi Juſti.

one that feared God] So chap. 10. 2. Cornelius was ſaid to be a devout man, and one that feared God: a religious and good man.

V. 8. and Criſpus a chief ruler] See 1 Cor. 1. 14. ἀρχισυνάγωγος a chief, or one of the chief rulers of the ſynagogue, for verſe 17. Soſthenes is mentioned (as his colleague, or one in the ſame office) a chief ruler of the ſynagogue. See on Mark 5. 22. Mat 9. 18. and on Luke 13. 14.

V. 9. be not afraid, but ſpeak, &c.] Be not afraid to ſpeak boldly: becauſe the ingratitude and perverſeneſſe of hearers, often diſcourageth Miniſters, thus God animateth them to their duty. See Iſai. 58. 1. Jer. 1. 17, 18, 19. Ezek 3. 4, 5, 8, 9, 11. we may not, for fear of the invincible malice of ſome, neglect the ſalvation of others. See chap. 20. 27.

V. 10. for I am with thee] I will take thy part and aſſiſt thee. See Mat. 28. Rom. 8. 31. however God often permitteth his Miniſters to the violence of enemies, yet he is with them in life and death; yea, then moſt, when they are moſt deſtitue of mans aſſiſtance. See 2 Tim. 4. 16, 17, 18. but here God promiſed a more evident and peculiar protection to Paul, by making void all the miſchievous endeavours of the adverſaries.

I have much people in this city] This is a ſecond argument, whereby he encourageth Paul to ſpeak confidently: there were many in Corinth whom God had ordained to ſalvation, ſo that his labour ſhould be bleſſed with happy ſucceſſe: here is an argument of induſtry and patience to Miniſters: God hath his Elect, whom in his appointed time he will effectually call to Chriſt by the word preached, though he ſuffer them for a ſeaſon to lie like the pure wheat among the periſhing chaffe.

V. 11. continued there] ἐκάθισε he ſate there, that is, at Corinth. So the Syriack giveth it by יתב which ſignifieth, he ſate, remained, or dwelt of the Hebrew ישב often uſed to the ſame purpoſe.

a year and ſix monthes] So full of labour and difficulty was the planting of Churches, that Paul, ſo extraordinarily gifted, was ſo long in this one, yet had he aſſiſtants. See 1 Cor. 2. 3. 1 Cor. 3. 10.

V. 12. Gallio was Deputy] Affliction commonly followeth preaching of the Goſpel: malice is reſtleſſe as the devil, whoſe influence it is: the Jewes, as it ſeems by the change of their Deputy, were animated to attempt againſt Paul; hoping that a new Judge would favour them againſt the Chriſtians.

of Achaia] Gallio is called proconſul, or Deputy Conſul of Achaia, that is of all Greece, of which Achaia was but a part: So Suidas interpreteth Ἀχαΐα, ἡ Ἑλλάς: Achaia, that is Greece: So the Romans (ſaith he) ſeem to call Achaia, Greece; tranſferring the name of the then chief and ruling part therof, to the whole conquered nation: ſo ſay it was becauſe they ſubdued the reſt of the Grecians through the ayd of the Achaians Pauſanias; &c, Sure it is that Greece was made a Conſulare Province: ſome write that Gallio obtained this Deputyſhip of Claudius the Roman Emperour, by the favour of Nero, Claudius adopted ſon.

with one accord] So unanimous, and induſtrious are the wicked to do miſchief: it is a wretched ſhame for Chriſtians to divide, when Satans kingdome can be of one conſent.

V. 13. contrary to the law] They mean the law of Moſes; according to which the Romans had permitted them to live: this they ſaid, not being able to look to the end of the Law Chriſt Jeſus. 2 Cor. 3. 13. Now however the Romans favoured neither the religion of Jewes nor Chriſtians, yet for as much as innovations in religion, are often the cauſes of dangerous confuſions of States, all ſuch changes were ſuſpected, and odious to the Romans, ſo that they made ſevere decrees againſt the authours thereof,

V. 14. if it were a matter of wrong] Between party and party: it is as if he ſaid; I will meddle onely with civill government, and not with your religion.

V. 15. and names] The profane man thought the Jews worſhipped one name, and the Chriſtians another, as the hathens, who upon the matter, adored bare names, and fancies of men.

V. 16. drave them from the judgement ſeat] He ſuperſeded the cauſe, and therefore would not have them ſtay there longer to trouble the court, with controverſies (as he thought) unneceſſary.

V. 17. the Greeks] The Grecians which were not converted: the Syriack readeth it, the profane.

none of thoſe things] Neither for that which concerned religion, to defend Gods ſervants: nor for the ſtates intereſt, to maintain peace, and defend the oppreſſed.

V. 18. having ſhorn] As Nazarites did at the end of their vow, Numb. 6. 18. the meaning is, that Paul ſhore his head. (See chap. 21. 24) not as ſome others think, that this is to be underſtood of Aquila and Priſcila.

in Cenchrea] A port of the Corinthians.

V. 19. came to Epheſus] A city of Ionia, and Metropolis or chief city of Aſia the leſſe.

reaſoned with the Jewes] So zealous was he ſtill for their ſalvation, ſo often did he expoſe his life for them.

V. 20. he conſented not] Not that he was not willing to ſpend his time, and do his uttermoſt endeavour for their ſalvation who were willing to hear; for he ventured often to preach to the obſtinate, and he promiſed to come again unto them; but it ſeemeth ſome ſecret inſtinct of Gods ſpirit now led him to Jeruſalem.

V. 21. keep this feaſt] Not that he now obſerved dayes, or the antiquated ceremonies of the law (See Gal. 4. 10.) but becauſe he might in that ſolemnity, and concourſe of people, more advance the Goſpel.

if God will] 1 Cor. 4. 19. Jam 4. 15.

V. 22. Ceſarea] Called Ceſarea Stratonis a port by which they went to Jeruſalem; ſome ſay built by Herod.

V. 23. Galatia, and Phrygia] Chap. 16. 6. Galatia, or Gallo grecia; ſo named of the Galli, qui Graeis, mixti, olim loca ea coluere. Atlas min. Amſter. 1634 pag 600. cap. 20) The Gaules and French, who mixed with Grecians anciently inhabited thoſe places.

V. 24. a certain Jew] 1 Cor. 1. 12.

named Apollos] See 1 Cor. 3. 6. and 1 Cor. 4 6. he was born at Alexandria, a city in Egypt.

an eloquent man] Though the Kingdom of God be not in word, but in power. 1 Cor 4. 20. nor eloquence of ſpeech, or the enticing words of mans wiſdom, but in the evidence of the ſpirit. 1 Cor. 2. 1. 4. yet is eloquence uſed, to the ſetting forth of the truth of God, and edification of his Church, as an Egyptian jewel to adorne the tabernacle, and here commended in Apollos, by the holy Ghoſt, whoſe gift it is: Lactantius noted well that the Phyloſophers, Oratours, and Poets, were therefore very pernicious, in that they eaſily enſnared incautious mindes: ſuavitate ſermonis, with ſweetneſſe of ſpeech; therefore his advice is, even in delivering the truth of Chriſt, to ſweeten the ſpeech for the winning of them to Chriſt, who will neither hear nor read any thing, niſi expolitum, ac diſertum, except it be poliſhed, and eloquent; and where nemo rem veritate ponderat, ſed ornatu, lib. 5. cap. 1. no man valueth the matter by the truth, but politure and trimme thereof.

mighty in the Scriptures,] Much verſed and learned in them, which enabled him to convince the adverſaries. Titus 1. 9. Syriack, argutus erat in Scripturis: this is added that none might think it to be the vain and frothy eloquence of profane men: it was a divine and powerfull eloquence.

V. 25. inſtructed in the way of the Lord] κατηχημένος, inſtructed vivâ voce, The Syriack hath it, he was taught. Some interpret, he was initiated, &c. See Luke 1. 4. the word ſignifieth one that is entred into religion, or catechized, as thoſe who were taught the rudiments and principles thereof.

fervent in ſpirit] Zealous to teach and to winne men to Chriſt: See Rom. 12. 11. 1 Kings 19. 14. Zeale is the life of religion, without which it is inactive (See Rev. 3. 15, 16.) but it muſt be zeale with the true knowledge of God. See Rom. 10. 2. 2. Acts 21, 20. and 22. 3, Tit. 2. 14. Rev. 3. 19.

taught diligently] His zeale and diligence is here commendable, though he had not yet much knowledge of the doctrine of the Goſpel, as appeareth by the next clauſe: however, he well uſed his talent, being faithful in a little.

the baptiſme of John] That is the doctrine of John, which we may not underſtand as if John were the authour thereof, or as it were different from the doctrine of Chriſt and his Apoſtles (for he preached repentance, and faith in Chriſt for remiſſion of ſinnes, and ſalvation, which they alſo preached) but becauſe John was between the Prophets and Chriſt, whoſe way he was to prepare; the myſteries of ſalvation were not ſo clearly manifeſted; as afterward by Chriſt himſelf and his Apoſtles: John taught the rudiments, as his hearers were capable, but the Apoſtles themſelves could not underſtand ſome things often taught by Chriſt, untill they received, the holy Ghoſt, to lead them into all truth: therefore though Apollos were inſtructed in the way of the Lord, having learned that Chriſt was the only redeemer of man, yet he was yet ignorant of many things appertaining to the manner of our redemption, and the kingdom of Chriſt, which he afterward more fully learned and happily taught.

V. 26. they took him unto them nnd expounded] If Priſcilla, the woman here mentioned, contributed ought to this work, it was where her husband, Apollos, and her ſelfe were private: ſuch inſtruction Paul commendeth in Timothies grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunice, of whom (moſt likely) he had learned the holy Scriptures. (See 2 Tim. 1. 5. and 3. 15.) though otherwiſe in the Church, (or other place made publick by the company) he ſuffered not a woman to teach, but to be in ſilence. See 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12. poſſibly the man and wife hearing Apollos, both joyned in the invitation of him unto them, but that Aquila performed the part of interpretation, and inſtruction in the way of God, though it be attributed to both, becauſe both equally affected it; there is no patronage here for that late revived practice of the old exploded hereſie of the Pepulians, or Quintilians, who as Auguſtine Tom. 6. de hereſ. ſaith mulieres ſacerdotio honorant, they honour women with Prieſt-hood. We may more ſafely ſay that the moſt excellent of meer men know not all; and that thoſe who are inferiour in gifts may adde ſomething to them.

the way f God] The doctrine of the Goſpel.

V. 27. to paſſe to Achaia] See verſe 12. why he would go thither is not here expreſſed, but certainly it was to advance the Goſpel there.

the brethren wrote] Letters of recommendation for him who was not much know to the Churches.

helped them much] Confirming them who beleeved, and refuting the adverſaries through the grace of God thereto enabling him.

V, 28. That Jeſus was Chriſt] The Jews had no controverſie with Chriſtians concerning a Chriſt to come; the whole diſpute was, whether Jeſus the Sonne of Mary were he; this now Apollos proved by Scriptures accommodated to him: and thus Apollos watered, 2 Cor. 3. 6. herein the Scripture is ſufficient to accompliſh and make the man of God abſolute, 2 Tim. 3. 16. we cannot learned Chriſt in any humane traditions, or inventions of men: the ſun can be diſcerned by no light but his own, becauſe that excells all other worldly lights: neither can Chriſt the ſun of righteouſneſſe be known by any, but his own light, which ſhineth in the Scriptures: theſe teſtifie of him, and diſcover him unto us. Iohn 5. 39.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſe 1. T*Hrough the upper coaſts*] In the upper parts of Aſia, are Phrygia, Galatia, Lydia, Livonia, Ionia, in which was Epheſus.

V. 2. have ye received, &c,] They are demanded concerning the viſible gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, as ſpeaking tongues, healing, &c. Which then flouriſhed in the Church, though they were not then common to all that believed, and were baptized, as in this their anſwer may appear.

whether there be any Holy Ghoſt) Or whether the Holy Ghoſt be (as John 7. 39.) they meant whether there be any ſuch gifts of the holy Ghoſt, given to any: they anſwered according to Pauls queſtion; which being concerning the gifts and graces (not the infinite and eternal eſſence of the deity) they reply according to the ſame. (See chap. 8. 16.) for it were very abſurd to ſay that they had not heard of the holy Ghoſt being baptized of Johns Diſciples, John ſeeing him deſcending on Chriſt in his Baptiſme, in a viſible form. Mat. 3. John 1. concerning this, neither did the Apoſtle ask, nor they anſwer, but concerning thoſe gifts which then flouriſhed in the Church, of which they ſaid, they had not heard.

V. 3. unto what then were ye baptized ?] That is, what religion, what doctrine profeſſed you, in your baptiſme? or the queſtion was not here, of baptizing, but de primordiis concerning their beginning, and conſtitution of the Church of Epheſus, where appeared not yet any publick form of a Church in diſcipline and other Eccleſiaſtical rites, and conventions: ſo that he enquireth, how they were grounded, whether by impoſition of hands, or the gifts of the holy Ghoſt, whereby it might appear, that they were divinely called, as the gifts of tongues, propheſie; &c.

unto Johns Baptiſme] That is, we profeſſed the ſame doctrine, which John Baptiſt taught: and we received baptiſme, as a ſeal of our profeſſing the ſame, and of our dedication unto Chriſt.

V. 4. John verily baptized] Mat 3. 11. as if he ſaid, the miniſtery of John was not to gather diſciples to himſelf, but that he might prepare and remit them to Chriſt, that they might in him only, expect and obtain remiſſion of ſins and ſalvation.

that is, on Chriſt Jeſus] Theophylact on Luke 24. expreſſeth that well; as not excluding the other perſons of the holy Trinity, but in contradiſtinction to the Jewiſh baptizings or waſhings; that was ſaith he πνευματικὸν οὐκ Ἰουδαϊκὸν, ſpiritual, not Judaicall. See on chap. 2. 38. and on 18. 48.

V. 5. When they heard this] That is, when they heard the doctrine of John, they were baptized by ſome of Johns diſciples who had ſo preached unto them the doctrine of repentance, and ſalvation by Chriſt: not that Paul did rebaptize them: for otherwiſe it would follow, that Chriſt whom John baptized, and we, are not baptized with the ſame Baptiſme: whereas he bare the ſame circumciſion with the Jewes, and the ſame baptiſme with us Gentiles. that he might declare himſelfe the Saviour of both. So that theſe words (when they heard this) relate not unto the words of Paul, but unto their hearing of Johns doctrine: and therefore Paul is not ſaid to have baptized them, but to have laid his hands on them: that is a poſture and action of confirmation, not initiation, and baptizing, verſe 6. againſt rebaptizing them who were baptized by hereticks (except of thoſe who raiſed the foundation of faith, and uſed not the Catholick form of baptiſme) See the Councel of Carthage, 1 Anno 258. and the other Councells concerning the ſame. *Severin. V. 6. Layd his hands upon them] Chap. 6. 6. & 8. 17. he layd his hands upon them for confirmation, we read not that he rebaptized them.

they ſpake with tongues] Chap. 2. 4. & 10. 46. That, is, they ſpake divers languages, which before they knew not.

and propheſied) By a divine and evident inſpiration, they preached and expounded the word of God as able Miniſters of Chriſt. See 1 Cor. 11. 4. & 14. 1.

V. 8. the kingdom of God] See on chap. 1. 3. and on 20. 25. that is, concerning the myſteries of ſalvation comprehended in the Goſpel; the Jews dreamed of a political kingdom of the Meſſias, which they ſuppoſed ſhould be in ceremoniall rites, but Paul declared that it ſhould be a ſpiritual kingdom; as Rom. 14. 17.

V. 9. and ſpake evill of that way] As chap. 18. 26. of that doctrine of the Goſpel.

and ſeparated the Diſciples] This warranteth not ſeparation from a true Church, or for any defects therein leſſe than fundamentall: it is true that when the nations are drunken with the cups of Babyloniſh fornication, then the Lord calleth from heaven, come out of her my people, &c. (Revel. 17. 2. and 18. 4. See Epheſ. 5. 7, 11, 2 Theſ 3. 14. 2 Cor. 6. 14, 15. Tit. 3. 10.) and that in caſe of ſcandal, we muſt not company with the incorrigible wicked: but here we ſee, though Paul withdrew the weak Diſciples from the blaſphemers of Chriſtianity and the Goſpel, yet he made no ſchiſmes nor yet deſerted the cauſe, for which he daily diſputed with the adverſaries.

one Tyrannus] This ſeemeth to have been ſome Phyloſopher, or publick profeſſour of Rhetorick, converted by Paul: Syr. in the ſchoole of a certain man whoſe name was Tyrannus.

V. 10. by the ſpace of two yeares] This commendeth Pauls great diligence for the planting of the Goſpel.

ſo that all they which dwelt in Aſia, &c.] This was that admirable door, which Paul ſaid was opened unto him, 1 Cor. 16. 9, not that all the people, but that all the Chriſtians of Aſia heard him, the ſweet ſavour and report of the Goſpel ſpreading it ſelf abroad (like that odour of the precious oyntment, which filled the houſe. John 12. 3.) into all parts round about.

V. 11. ſpeciall miracles] Great miracles, whereby he confirmed the authority of Pauls Apoſtleſhip, and miniſtery.

V. 12. handkerchiefs] This maketh nothing for the ſuperſtitious uſe of reliques: Gods providence did this that by ſuch cures, he might prepare the abſent, and thoſe who had never ſeen the face of Paul, to a reverend eſteem, and opinion of the Goſpel and truth of Chriſt, in whoſe name they were ſo cured, and alſo, that in theſe meanes, ſo ſlender and improbable of themſelves, the power of Jeſus healing them might the more clearly appear.

and the diſeaſes departed from them] As Mat. 8. 15. Luke 4. 39. John 4. 52. the diſeaſes left them, that is, they were freed from their diſeaſes, and the unclean Spirits departed from them, being forced ſo to do by the power of Chriſt.

V. 13. Exorciſts] Syr. Jewes who wandred about, and adjured devils or conjured devils: theſe poſſibly, out of a fooliſh and impious emulation of the Apoſtles caſting out devils, practiced ſuch things, intending if they could have effected anything herein, to have made men believe, that the like miracles done by the Apoſtles, were but magical exorciſmes, concerning exorciſts, and exorciſmes, yet in uſe in the Church of Rome, ſee *Durand. rational. V. 14. Seven Sons of one Sheva] He mentioneth theſe for the greater evidence of the hiſtory. theſe were eminent perſons (ſons of one of the chief Prieſts) who with falſe miracles, and abuſe of the ſacred name of Chriſt to their own ſecular gaines, endeavoured to confirm their impious ſuperſtitions, and to render the doctrine of the Goſpel ſuſpected.

V. 15. But who are ye?] What are you that I ſhould obey you? God commandeth me, Jeſus (whom Paul preacheth) commandeth me; but do not I know that you have no ſuch commiſſion? no power to caſt me out?

V. 16. leapt on them] The poſſeſſed man fell violently upon them, and by the force of the evill ſpirit in him, maſtered them, tearing their cloaths, and wounding them: ſometimes the devill willingly co-operateth with the conjurers, and witches, ſuffering himſelf to be commanded, and poſſibly, driven out alſo (probably the Hebrews might conſider this in their calling a witch, the miſtris of a devill. So 1 Sam. 28. 7. they call the witch of Endor בעלת-אוב behalath ob, dominam Pythonis, a Pythoniſſe, one having a familiar ſpirit. Chalde, one who can draw out a devill; this he doth where he can entice men or women to confederate with him for miſchief, and hold them, and others by them, in ſuperſtition: but here he had ſome other end, and

God would thus defeat their miſchievous practiſes: making all ſerve to the further advancement of the Goſpel which Paul preached.

V. 17 fear fell on them all] Herein appeareth the fruit of this divine revenge on them who impiouſly prophaned the holy name of Jeſus: firſt that by their example, others feared to contemn that doctrine, the patronage whereof God ſo ſeverely undertook: ſecondly in that all turned to the magnifying the ſacred name of Jeſus, the rumour of this accident making all afraid, not onely to blaſpheme it as ſome of the Jewes did, but even to take it in their prophane mouthes, to abuſe, as theſe Sonnes of Sheva did.

V. 18. and confeſſed] Terrified with this judgement on others, the remorſe of their own conſciences, and deſiring ſome remedy, and comfort, they publickly confeſſed their errours, and deteſted thoſe their ſins. See Mat. 3. 6.

V. 19. Curious arts] That is Magick, as the Syriack expreſſed it divinations by judicial aſtrology, &c.

fifty thouſand pieces of ſilver] Or, fifty thouſand pence, which the word alſo ſignifieth: what this cometh to of our Sterling money is not agreed on by the writers, but the leaſt eſtimate, bringeth it about, eight hundred pounds.

V. 20. So mightily grew, &c.] See chap. 12. 24. κατὰ κράτος, vehemently with great power, as the Syriack hath it, intimating a powerful courſe of the word, caſting down the kingdom of ſin and Satan: ſo doth κράτος ſignifie victory alſo: the ſumme is, that theſe ſuperſtitious and impious things being taken away, the word of God ſo much prevailed in the affections and lives of men to faith and obedience, that many were daily added to the Church of Chriſt.

in Aſia for a ſeaſon] That is, in Epheſus, which is in Aſia.

V. 23. the ſame time] When Paul was preparing to go from Epheſus, and thought all things well compoſed, upon a ſodain Satan raiſed an unexpected ſtorm.

about that way] About the way of God. Syr. That is, concerning the Goſpel, and truth of God which Paul preached.

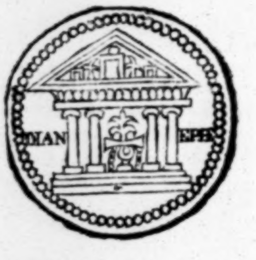
V. 24. Silver ſhrines] ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς. Silver temples, as the Syriack interpreteth, which were made in ſome ſuch like form.



Concerning the deſtruction of that ſame magnificent Idoll Temple of Diana at Epheſus, you may read in the ſtory of Eroſtratus. Plin. lib. 36. cap. 14. The ſilver ſhrins, or medals of ſilver with the form of their Idol Diana's Temple, impreſſed or wrought thereon, Demetrius ſold to them who came to Epheſus either of ſuperſtition to worſhip, or curioſity to ſee the magnificent ſtructure of that temple.

V. 25. Whom he called together] When he ſaw the eſteem of this temple leſſen by the light of the Goſpel, and ſo his trade growing dead, he called together all the artificers, whoſe living depended on that ſuperſtition, and made a ſeditious ſpeech to them.

by this craft we have our wealth] This is all our trade: a dangerous argument to carnal men, whoſe wealth is the God they adore: ſuch men will eaſily be perſwaded for their private ends, to trouble the peace of a Church or State, and to defend their gains though never ſo impious with tumult and blood.

V. 26. this Paul hath perſwaded, &c.] He truly confeſſeth the ſtate of the cauſe: Paul had ſhewed them that they were no Gods which are made with hands; yet Demetrius wickledly endeavoureth to ſuppreſſe that truth: this blindneſſe putteth him and his fellows precipitately on to violent tumults.

V. 27. not onely our craft] This our manufacture our making medals, is in danger to be reproved as impious and unprofitable.

but alſo the temple] It is a rare impiety of the vulgar which borroweth no pretence from religion to countenance it ſelf withall: and medling with Religion without ſome private intereſts, is as rare in carnal men, if Pauls preaching had nothing hindered Demetrius and his fellows profits, he would hardly have ſtirred out of dores about it.

whom all Aſia and the world worſhippeth] To the argument of profit, and pretended Religion, he added another reaſon, from the magnificence of the Temple, and greatneſſe of their Idol Diana; now he inforces another leading motive, from univerſality, and conſent of worſhippers.

V. 28. They were full of wrath] This argument of profit, worketh ſtrongly on worldly mens affections: therefore now guided by paſſion and hearing the cauſe of the impaire and decay of their trade; they never examine the truth and effects of the Goſpel, but put it to popularity, and tumultuous out-cries.

great is Diana of the Epheſians] They feigned Diana to be Jupiters daughter, and their tutelary goddeſſe, in this fantaſtick opinion, they cry up her imaginary greatneſſe, and their ſuppoſed intereſt, and thereby unanimouſly and publickly profeſs themſelves defenders of that their ſuperſtition, with their uttermoſt power.

V. 29. the whole city was filled] Such unconſiderable ſparks fomented by the breath of an inconſtant vulgar oft-times break out into outragious flames; when yet the cauſe of the impious tumult, is rumour of people ignorant of what they do, and deſire of change. See Numb. 26. 1. 2 Sam. 15. 6. 11. 13.

Gaius and Ariſtarchus] See on Rom. 16. 23. Coloſ. 4, 10. herein they bewray their diffidence as to the truth and juſtice of their cauſe, who durſt not put it to the teſt of any principles of truth or good reaſon, but uſed violence, and injurious treating of the ſervants of Chriſt, dragging them into the theatre; without any legal examination of the cauſe.

the theatre] A publick place, to which the cuſtom was to reſort in any trouble, or buſineſſe about the common-wealth.

V. 30. ſuffered him not] This was their care of his ſafety, who better knew the diſpoſition of that people, it is an example to hearers, to love and preſerve their Miniſters. See chap. 17. 10

V. 31. Chief of Aſia] Ἀσιαρχῶν. Syr. primores Aſiæ: this was Gods providence over Paul, to ſtirre up ſome chief men in this ſo great a danger to countenance and favour him, theſe ſend to him to deſire him, not to venture himſelf to an enraged multitude.

V. 32. the aſſembly was confuſed] This company is here called ἐκκλησία: the Syr. giveth it well, turba quæ erant in theatro; the multitude of the Epheſians now aſſembled in the theatre: this convention was very confuſed, ſome crying one thing, and ſome another.

the more part knew not wherefore] The people like great waters are eaſily enraged, but ſeldome well enformed, why: falſe rumours fill their ears, and ungoverned paſſion their hearts with ſodain and vehement deſire of ſome new unconſidered undertakings; the end whereof they neither prudently foreſee, nor cautiouſly examine.

V. 33. the Jewes putting him foreward] It ſeemeth that the heathens of Epheſus were equally enraged againſt the Jewes and Chriſtians; and that the Jewes put him on, to juſtifie their nation and religion, that they might caſt all the occaſion of this diſcontent and tumult, on the Chriſtians.

beckened with, &c.] See on chap. 12. 17. Gre. κατασείσας τὴν χεῖρα ſhaking his hand, by which they that ſpake in publick ſeemed to deſire ſilence, that they might be heard; according to which the vulgar, Vatablus, &c. give it, manu ſilentio poſtulato, having required ſilence by his hand.

V. 34. That he was a Jew] They knew that the Jewes worſhipped not their Idol, therefore would not hear him.

all with one voyce] So many wicked men can Satan unite in miſchief: conſent and unanimity of multitudes is no univerſal and certain mark of truth.

Cryed out] The word here uſed is of Κράζω, to yaull, or cry out, κράζειν or κρώζειν, is ſpoken of Crowes who in great flocks cry altogether, hence is this expreſſion accommodated to the diſturbed multitude.

V. 35. what man is there that knoweth not] To appeaſe this tumult, he taketh it for granted, that their religion was ſo publickly known to the world, that there need no tumult or out-cries to profeſſe the ſame: probably he underſtood Demetrius malice, and hypocriſie, in that under pretence of zeale to their religion, he had abuſed the whole city, by his ſtirring up this tumult, all being but to maintain the gain of his ſelf and fellow artificers: this ſore, which moſt of the people knew not, he in his way prudently diſſembled, magnifying with them the feigned god which they worſhipped, that he might thereby attain his purpoſe, which was to appeaſe the preſent tumult. This ſpeech of the Town-Clerk ſavoureth only of carnal wiſdom, whatever was pretended here contributeth no patronage to true religion.

a worſhipper of, &c.] νεωκόρος, is that which the Latines called ædituus, the Temple keeper. He that hath charge of the Church. It is interpreted by Suidas, ὁ τὸν νεὼν κοσμῶν καὶ εὐτρεπίζων, one that adorneth and prepareth the Temple. His meaning is, that Epheſus was ſo eſtabliſhed in their Religion and worſhip of Diana their ſuppoſed tutelary goddeſs, that there was no ſuch cauſe of fear as Demetrius ſuggeſted, that they ſhould be perſwaded to forſake their religion for any other.

which fell down from Jupiter] Which deſcended from Heaven, the Syriac hath it. Concerning Canetias the maker of this Idol, ſee Plin. l.16. c. 40. But their covetous Prieſts perſwaded them, that it came down, or was ſent down from Heaven; the like fictions had other Heathens concerning the Palladium of Troy, and the Ancile of Rome, concerning this Epheſian Idol you may ſee more, ſaid Διοπετής.

V. 36. theſe things cannot be ſpoken againſt] Suidas ſaith, ἀναντίῤῥητον (the word here uſed) is ἀντιλογίαν μὴ δεχόμενον, that which admitteth no contradiction; a certain and doubtleſs thing So pronounceth he concerning their vain ſuperſtition, grounded on lying Fables, impious preſcription, and raſh conſent of multitudes; whereas it is neither in time, multitude, or power of Men, to make falſehood truth.

ye ought to be quiet] Or appeaſed.

V. 37. are neither robbers of Churches, &c.] That ſaid he truely (would we could ſay as much of our Impropriators) but though he thus ſaid to appeaſe the tumult, yet the Doctrine which Paul preached, is unconſiſtent with Idols.

V. 38. the Law is open] Or the Court-dayes are kept. The Law is the beſt appeaſer of tumults; and Juſtice the ſecureſt Bond of Peace, the Nerves and Sinewes of all Commonwealths, without which the people muſt needs periſh, if by no other means in ſelf-deſtruction: it is that ſame, ſalſedo combinans, without which, all bodies compounded, end in preſent diſſolution.

deputies] That is, Judges appointed to determine perſonall controverſies.

V. 39. in a lawfull aſſembly] Or ordinary Courts, or courſe of Juſtice (the ſacred Patron of right and propriety) not in unlawful tumults.

V. 40. in danger to be called in queſtion for, &c.] Being under the Roman ſtate, the City was in danger to be fined or otherwayes puniſhed, for that cauſeleſs uproar, the Romane Law was, that all factious and ſeditious perſons under their government ſhould loſe their liberties, and Roman freedoms, ſo that this ſober man blamed Demetrius and his fellows for troubling the people.

V. 41. be diſmiſſed the Aſſembly] Perſwading them every man peaceably to repair home to his own houſe. So God uſed the carnal wiſedome and eloquence of this Heathen to the preſervation of his ſervants. This example is not unworthy of prudent Chriſtians in authority: to eſtabliſh Law, and Juſtice (without which no ſociety of man can flouriſh or indeed ſubſiſt) to preſerve publick Peace, and to appeaſe all popular and unlawfull out-rages.

Firſt hereby we exerciſe Body and Soul in Gods ſervice. Secondly, They ſtir up our own devotion and others, where they are preſent. Thirdly, thus we teſtifie the performance of our duty to God before men: as lifting up the hands is a ſigne of confidence to be heard, ſo is the bending of our knees of humility,which two are the wings of faithful Prayer. V. 2. Phenicia] Chapter 11, 19. See Plin. lib. 36.cap. 26. init.

V. 3. at Tyre] Which was the Metropolis of Phenicia.

V. 4. that he ſhould not goe up] That is, they propheſied of his danger, if he went up; that they did by the Spirit of Propheſie; but through humane affection they diſſwaded him from going, ſo this croſſeth not that which is ſaid, Chapter, 20.22.

V. 5. they all brought us on our way] This was their love to him that taught them, and a good Teſtimony of their ſincerity, who thus honoured him whom the World generally contemned and perſecuted. See Galathians, 4. 14. 2 Timothy, 1.15.

we kneeled down on the ſhore] See c.20.36. c. 7.60. Probably, they prayed, as for the happy ſucceſs of the Goſpel to Gods glory, the encreaſe of the Church, and the Kingdome of Chriſt, and thoſe things which concerned their bodies and ſouls in general; ſo for Paul and thoſe with him,and their good voyage in particular.

V. 6. they returned home again] Every one to his own affairs and calling.

which was one of the ſeven] c. 6. 5.

V. 9. which did Propheſie] That is, by the inſtinct of Spirit, tell things to come, not ſpeake in the Church, as Teachers, that is prohibited, 1 Corinthians, 14. 34. 1 Timothy, 2. 12.

V. 10. named Agabus] See c. 11. 28.

V. 11. binde the man that oweth this girdle] The effect ſee verſe 33. This ſaid he, not ſo much for Pauls ſake,as for others. Paul was not ignorant that bonds and afflictions abode him, c. 20. 23. but hereby his conſtancy to teſtifie the truth of Chriſt appeared, to the great confirmation of the believers. In taking Pauls girdle he imitated the Prophets, who uſed to repreſent that which they foretold, by certain ſignes. See Iſaia, 20. 2. Jer.27.2.Ezekiel 12.3. Jeremia.32.28.which manner the falſe Prophets alſo took up. 1 Kings 21. 11. Jer.28. 10, 11. In that he alledgeth the dictate of Gods Spirit, it ſheweth that the ſufferings of Gods children, are neither fortuitous, nor in the power of perſecutors, but in Gods providence. See John 19. 11.

V. 12. beſought him not to goe]Out of their affection to him, and grief to loſe ſo excellent a light, they importune him with tears,to forbear going to Jeruſalem.

V. 13. to break mine heart] Meaninng that it was bitterneſs of heart to him, to ſee them afflicted with grief for him, who was reſolved, come life, come death, to be obedient to the guidance of Gods holy ſpirit.

v.14. we ceaſed, ſaying, the will of the Lord,&c.] When they ſaw he would not be perſwaded, they committed him to God who was able to preſerve him: this reſolution is the onely means to bridle extravagant affections, when we can patiently ſubmit our ſelves, our deſires, and counſels to the will of God, in aſſurance of his mercy, who is able to make all things work together for good, to them that love him, Rom. 8. See Matt.26 39.42.

V. 15. took up our carriages, and went, &c.] ἀποσκευασάμενοι, putting up our carriages and neceſſaries. That which the Latines gave by convaſo, or colligo neceſſaria ad iter, the Greeks expreſſed by σκευάζομαι, in the active ſignification; and ἀποσκευάζω —— vaſa aufero. Suidas interpreteth ἀποσκευὴ —— ἡ τῶν ἐπιτηδείων κομιδὴ —— carriage of neceſſaries for a voyage. So the Syriac here giveth it prepared our ſelves, putting all neceſſaries to carry with them. It ſheweth Pauls admirable conſtancy, thus meeting with his foreſeen afflictions, for the teſtimony of the Goſpel; and that they who had diſſwaded him from going up, did not therein ſo much regard their own intereſt as the Churches loſſe; for they would alſo ſhare with him, ſeeing he would needs goe. True Faith is not daunted by the Croſſe, but reſolutely followes Gods calling.

V. 16. with whom we ſhould lodge] Meaning at Jeruſalem, where now at the great ſolemnity of the feaſt of Pentecoſt lodgings uſed to be very ſcarce.

V. 17. received us gladly] Chearfully and lovingly entertained us; for albeit they had heard many reports concerning him, which the enemies had injuriouſly caſt forth to cauſe the brethren to ſuſpect and avoid him, yet would they not for ſuch rumours conmdemne him, or exclude him from their ſocietie.

V. 18. with us unto James] Chapter, 15. 13. It ſeemeth he was aſſigned to ſtay at Jeruſalem, whereunto many Believers reſorting, it was neceſſary, that one of the Apoſtles ſhould reſide there, to adviſe thoſe Chriſtians, who upon any emergent Controverſies, ſhould repaire thither; in which Caſe, it ſeemeth the Elders were called together.

V. 19. what things God had wrought] Which he did not in oſtentation of his own excellency, who elſewhere ſaith he was the leaſt of the Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 15. 9. but to ſet out the goodneſſe of God in his reception of the Gentiles, and mercy ſhewed divers wayes to them.

V. 20. Thouſands] μυριάδες, myriads, or ten thouſands, He meaneth a great number, He defineth it not.

all zealous of the Law] He meaneth the major part of them were zealous (though without knowledge Romans, 10. 2. Gal 1.14) they were tenacious of legal Ceremonies, in which they had been bred.

V. 21. to forſake Moſes] which was an odious and falſe aſperſion: for the Doctrine of the Goſpel which Paul preached, was according to Moſes teſtimony of Chriſt: onely he taught, how we muſt paſs from ſhadowes and repreſentations to the ſubſtance which was in Chriſt. the end of the Law, (ſee Gal. 5.1.) and how they muſt uſe all thoſe things indifferently in wiſedome and charity, as knowing our freedome in Chriſt. See Chapter,16.3.and 18 18.,Gal.2 3. Romans 14. 13.15.19.21. 1 Cor.8.13.

V. 22. the multitude muſt needs come together] That is, it will be known that thou art here, and the unbelievers will perſecute thee, as an enemy to their Law.

V. 23. we have foure men] Faithfull brethren, who had a Vow, as Chapter, 18.18. Thus would they make preſent uſe of theſe mens legall Obligations, in the knowledge of Chriſtian liberty, for the advancement of the Goſpel; and indeed, the end of this Ceremony was thankſgiving, which is nothing contrary to Chriſtian Religion, but well agreeing with it.

V. 24. them take] The meaning is, for as much as thou didſt ſhear thy head at Cenchrea, Chap. 18. 18. according to thy vow of a Nazarite, ſhew (now thou art at Jeruſalem) the accompliſhment thereof, by joyning in the charge with theſe four men, offering according to the Law on that behalfe, by which it may appeare that thou art not a deſpiſer of the Law of Moſes.

ſhave their heads] Numb. 6.18, Chap. 18. 18 which (ſaith a learned Authour) the Hebrewes call, the ſhaving of purity, (or for cleanneſſe) —— this ſhaving was in thankfulneſſe, to ſignifie that he had the perfection of his Nazariteſhip from God; and therefore burned his hair under his ſacrifice —— to ſignifie the end of his vow performed acceptable to God in Chriſt, and preſented unto him by the Spirit, which is like unto fire, Matt.3.11.

V. 25. we have written] Chapter, 15. 20. as if they had ſaid, as concerning the Gentiles, they are to obſerve onely the morall Law, not the Ceremoniall, concerning the Jewes, we are ſo farre indulgent, as we may by any means bring them to Chriſt, in whom they ſhall better underſtand their liberty, and learn to leave off theſe beggarly and antiquated rudiments.

V. 26. then Paul tooke the men] Obtemperating to the advice of James, and the reſt of the brethren, and to ſhew publickly that he was no enemy of the Law.

to ſignifie the accompliſhment] The day on which the vow of a Nazarite did end, he was by the Law to offer certain ſacrifices, Numb. 6.13.and therefore it was neceſſary to acquaint the Prieſt herewith.

V. 27. ſeven dayes were ended] That is, a week after that Paul had performed this Ceremony: or the laſt of the ſeven weeks.

the Jewes which were of Aſia] Who dwelling in Aſia, had former conteſts with him there: theſe blood-hounds never give over their chaſe, ſo long as they could purſue him.

V. 28. againſt the People and the Law] Thus falſly do they calumniate him, who indeed taught them the true end and uſe of the Law.

Greeks alſo into the Temple] Meaning, that he had brought the uncircumciſed beyond the court of the Gentiles, which was death to do.

V. 29. Trophimus an Epheſian] See Chap. 20 4.

and they ſuppoſed] The wicked are full of jealouſie, and therefore conclude, that muſt bee ſo, which they once dream of.

V. 30. the City was moved] So eaſily are multitudes engaged in ſacred quarrels.

V. 31. chief Captain] See on John 18. 12. The Romane Tribune, who was in the nature of a Colonel, and had Centurions, or Captains of hundreds in his regiment, he had the command of the ſouldiers, and therefore the addreſſe was made to him in this tumult: they purpoſed to kill Paul; and draging him out of the Temple, forthwith the doors were ſhut, leſt they ſhould defile the Temple with blood; they thought it great impietie to ſtain the pavements of the Temple, but none to defile their ſouls with the guilt of blood: but God provided a timely reſcue.

V. 32. left beating of Paul] For feare of the Roman power which came to keep peace: for the Iewes had not power of life and death permitted them by the Romans: the feare of men awed theſe perſecutors, whom neither feare of God, reſpect of religion, reverence of the Temple, nor regard of man could reſtrain; which ſufficiently demonſtrateth that malice, not zeal ſet them on to theſe outrages.

V. 33. to be bound with two chains] Poſſibly he took him for the Author of this tumult. See Chap. 23. 27. here appeareth Gods providence reſcuing Paul by his hands who had no ſuch intention.

and what he had done] However he bound him, yet had he ſo much juſtice, as not to condemn him unheard: poſſibly, he neither being acquainted with Paul, nor the cauſe of the tumult; and ſeeing the people ſo generally violent againſt him, might ſuſpect him to be ſome great malefactor or dangerous perſon; therefore he commanded him to be bound, that he might appeaſe the preſent rage of the multitude, who ſeeing him ſo bound, might ſuppoſe that he was reſerved to ſome capitall puniſhment.

V. 34. could not know the certainty] In ſeditious tumults nothing is certainly underſtood, where all is acted by affection, not by reaſon; violence, not equity.

into the Caſtle] Which joyned to the Temple, that he might ſhut out the multitude, and underſtand the truth of the matter.

V. 35. he was born of the ſouldiers] Whether by the throng, the people preſſing on, or taken up by the ſouldiers, to ſecure him from their fury, is not expreſſed; the Syriac ſeemeth to underſtand this latter: there was little favour intended him by them, who reſerved him (as probably they conceived) to puniſhment.

V. 36. away with him] See Luke 23. 18. John 19. 15. αἶρε αὐτόν, that is, kill him: ſo Budæus among other ſignifications interpreteth αἴρω, de medio tollo. So they cried againſt Chriſt.

V. 37. may I ſpeake, &c.] εἰ ἔξεστί μοι, if it be lawfulll; It is a Greek manner of ſpeaking, to crave leave to ſpeak, or act: he deſireth liberty to anſwer for himſelf, that being cleared, he might ſuffer no ſcandall to reſt upon Gods Word and Truth, which he preached; and alſo to ſhew his invincible zea for the ſalvation of his kinſ-men according to the fleſh: amidſt theſe hideous ſtorms, their raging malice againſt his life; in chains, clamours and votes preſently to murder him among armed troops apprehending him, he taketh care for their edification and ſalvation, being deſirous to ſpeak that he might clear his innecency, and ſatisfie them.

V. 38. art not thou that Egyptian Specified, chap. 5. 36. of whom Joſephus antiq. lib. 20. cap. 11. & de bel. Iud. lib. 2. cap. 12. he enquireth of an Egyptian who in Tiberius Cæſars reign, made an inſurrection, and after many of his followers were ſlain, eſcaped away.

that were murderers] σικαρίων, this was a word borrowed from the Latines, ſignifying men ready to murder; it ſeems they were ſo named of a ſhort weapon which they did wear, called ſica, a puniard, skein, pocket dagger, or ſtellato, of the Chaldee word סכן ſachin, a knife, or the Hebr. שכן ſachan, Prov. 23. 2. Gr. μάχαιράν, thy knife; Gen. 22. 10. Abraham took המאכלת, τὴν μάχαιραν, Chald. סכינא his knife. See of theſe Joſeph. Ant. Iud. lib. 20.

V. 39. of Tarſus] Chap. 9. 32. See Joſeph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 11. it was the Metropolis of Cilicia: it is now called Hama, G. Mercat. Atl. min. Aſia min.

in the Hebrew tongue] Whether in the pure Hebrew tongue (in uſe before their captivity, but in and before Chriſts time becoming a dead tongue) or in the Syriack, it is not certain: for that was called the Hebrew, both in reſpect of the derivation thereof from the Hebrew, and for as much as it was then the mother tongue of them who were Hebrews.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſe 1. BRethren and Fathers] Thus he inſinuateth to gain attention, wherein he reſpecteth the Honour which God had given them, not what they now deſerved.

V. in the Hebrew, &c.] Chap. 21. 40.

they kept the more ſilence] Our mother Tongue moſt affecteth us; therefore, he that could ſpeake all Tongues, uſed his own.

V. 3. at the feet of Gamaliel] Meaning that he was a continual and diligent hearer of that grave Doctor of the Law, Gamaliel, he alludeth to the poſture of teachers ſtanding in high places, and auditors ſitting below them. See Deut. 33. 3. Luke 10. 39.

according to the perfect manner] Syr. perfectly taught in the Law of the fathers: which relateth not to the Ceremonial law, as if he had attributed perfection to that which made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did. See Heb. 7. 11. 19. it relateth to Pauls inſtruction, as if he had ſaid, I was perfectly taught.

zealous towards God] I did as ſeriouſly and heartily endeavour to ſerve God, as any of you now do in that way. Se Philip. 3. 6.

V. 4. I perſecuted] See chap. 9. 1 &c. 1 Tim. 1. 13. &c. I was as violent againſt all Chriſtians, as you now are.

V. 5. as alſo the high prieſt, &c.] The things which I ſpeak are well known to the high prieſt himſelf, and all the chief of the Sanhedrim.

unto the brethren] Of the Synagogue of the Jewes at Damaſcus.

to be puniſhed] To be beaten or impriſoned. See on chapter 9. 2.

V. 6. come nigh unto Damaſcus] See this whole paſſage, chap. 6, 1, 2, &c.

V. 9. they heard not the voyce] Chap. 9. 7. it is ſaid they heard, τῆς φωνῆς, a voyce: that is the voyce of Saul ſpeaking to one whom they ſaw not; they heard not the voyce of Chriſt: ſome think they heard onely a confuſed ſound (that they might perceive it was from heaven) as the people did, John 12. 29. when ſome ſaid it thundred, ſome ſaid an Angel ſpake, but underſtood not what was ſaid.

V. 10. what ſhall I do] Chap. 9. 6.

V. 11. for the glory of that light] Which ſtrook him blinde for a time. He that had brought ſervants and others to aſſiſt him in carrying away the ſervants of Chriſt from Damaſcus bound to Jeruſalem, is fain to uſe their help in leading him blinde into Damaſcus: thus God made him an example both of his juſtice, puniſhing him, and of his mercy, converting him.

V. 12. a devout man &c.] εὐσεβὴς, a pious or juſt man according to the Law: as all the Jews which knew him could teſtifie.

according to the Law] Which he inferreth to ſhew them that the goſplel was not contrary to, nor deſtructive of the law, but only the accompliſhment thereof: for, a man zealous of, and learned in the law, by Gods appointment, perſwaded him to embrace the goſpel. Thus he ſpeaketh of Ananias, to diſtinguiſh him who was a believing Jew, from a proſelyte or pious Gentile.

V. 13. came unto me] See Chap. 9, 17.

V. 14. the God of our fathers, &c.] No words ſounded ſo well in the eares of a Jew, as theſe of which that nation often boaſted. See John 8. 41. but hereby Paul proveth his purpoſe; that he was no Apoſtate from the God of Abraham, or his holy worſhip; but he ſtill adored, and ſerved the ſame God, as he had learned in the Law, under whoſe ſhadowes was veiled all that which more clearly ſhined in the Goſpel.

hath choſen thee] προεχειρίσατό σε, hath deſigned or appointed thee, as chap. 26. 16. אקימך Syr. akimach, conſtituit te, ordained and made thee ready to his hand; πρόχειρος, that is ſaith Suidas, ὁ ἕτοιμος, one fitted, furniſhed, and prepared to ſome action.

and ſee that juſt one] That is Chriſt, whom all the Patriarcks, Prophets, and believers, before his coming deſired to ſee: Mat. 13. 17. Luke 2. 29. See 1 Cor. 9. 1. and 15. 8. he ſaw Chriſt, either in ſome ſupernatural gifts, a rapt into heaven, or ſome apprehenſible repreſentation, as chap. 7. 55.

V. 15. thou ſhalt be a witneſſe] God doth not fit men with extraordinary knovvledge for their ovvn ſakes onely, but as finally to his ovvn glory, ſo in that vvhich is ſubordinate thereto, for others good: as trees bear not fruit for themſelves, fountains run not for themſelves, the ſun ſhineth not for himſelf, but for others good: that good is beſt vvhich is moſt communicable. You vvho have attained this honour of Chriſts diſciples (Luke 24. 48. Acts 1. 8. John 1. 7.) live not to your ſelves, but to the teſtimony of Gods truth, and others good, by communicating to them that vvhich you have heard and ſeen of Chriſt.

what thou haſt ſeen] That is, not only this precedent apparition, but principally in that viſion deſcribed, 2 Cor. 12. 2. Theſe things he ſpecifieth, not that his commiſſion ſhould be, onely to preach thus much and no more than now he heard and ſaw, but becauſe he might hereby gain belief to thoſe things which ſhould be revealed to him, and which he ſhould preach concerning the myſteries of ſalvation by Chriſt, in that he might truly avow his calling to that change by Chriſt, and that he was an ear-witneſſe and an eye-witneſſe, of theſe things: therefore not only now, but alſo again before King Agrippa, chap. 26. 12. &c. and ſo in his Epiſtle, 1 Cor. 9. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 8. he mentioneth the ſame, V, 16. why tarryeſt thou?] Theſe vvere Ananias vvords to Saul, exhorting him to be baptized: we may ſuppoſe that he did further inſtruct him in the doctrine of the Goſpel, by larger diſcourſes, which Luke for brevity ſake here omitteth.

waſh away thy ſinnes] Chap. 2. 38. by the Spirit of God giving the inward effect of baptiſme by the application of the blood and merits of Chriſt, by purifying of thy ſoul by faith, regeneration, and newneſſe of life. This ſheweth the effect of baptiſme; not that the water hath this power, but the blood of Chriſt thereby repreſented, 1 John 1. 7. yet we muſt know, that God propoſeth not bare and fallacious ſignes in the Sacraments, but accompanieth his ordinance with the power of the holy Ghoſt, making them effectuall for that which he promiſeth and propoſeth therein, which is remiſſion of ſins.

V. 17. I was in a trance] The circumſtances of the time, place, and extaſie, ſhew that God appeared to him, and aſſigned him to his office: whether this was that rapt, 2 Cor. 12. 4. it is uncertain.

V. 18. and ſaw him] Saw him in that trance, verſe 17. the appearance of the Lord ſo ſpeaking to me.

V. 19. Lord they know that I am impriſoned] This intimateth Pauls unwillingneſſe to have preached to the Gentiles, and the condition of carnall reaſon, ever oppoſing the motions of Gods Spirit, by objecting vain excuſes againſt his commands. See Exod. 3. 11. and 4. 10. Acts 10. 14. Jonah 4. 1 Some interpret this, (they know) as relating to the Jewes; and that Paul here intimated his hope rather of doing good at Jeruſalem, where they knew how zealous he had been of the law, than of going to the Gentiles: which being admitted there appeareth no reaſon, but that we may ſay, that others out of Jeruſalem, yea and the Gentiles alſo might heare theſe things of him; and that Paul reſpected that which God had before ſaid to Ananias concerning him, chap. 9. 15. he is a choſen veſſell unto me, to beare my name before the Gentiles, &c. which doubtleſſe Ananias would not conceale from him: ſo that he may here intimate an improbability of his reception among the Gentiles, who would alſo be afraid of him, as he was chap. 9. 13. all concludeth his declining his miſſion to the Gentiles, and Gods expreſſe command for the ſame.

V. 20. and when the blood of thy Martyr Stephen] Martyr is a Greek word ſignifying a witneſſe: and is in a peculiar manner uſed to import him, who in his conſtant profeſſion, in grievous puniſhment, or violent death, giveth teſtimony to the truth of the Goſpel.

V. 21. depart, for I will ſend thee hence, &c.] God preſſed his own command, which, againſt all vain pretences of man to the contray, muſt be obeyed: He doth not here promiſe ſucceſs among the Gentiles, but expreſly ſendeth him to them; becauſe he will have us learn to lay by all our owne counſels, and ſimply and readily obey him in his commands.

V. 22. and then lift up their voyces, &c.] They could not endure to hear of his going to the Gentiles, therefore here they interrupt him with tumultuous clamours: ſo proud a confidence had they of themſelves, as that they were impatient that God ſhould beſtow his own favours upon any but themſelves, and yet themſelves refuſed them: we ſhall not be grieved to have ſinners partners with us in repentance, and mercy, if we belong to Chriſt, who for the redemption of his, refuſed not to be crucified between theeves and malefactors.

V. 23. caſt off their clothes] To prepare themſelves to doe violence.

threw duſt in the air] This is a deſcription of a ſeditious, and enraged multitude.

V. 24. by ſcourging] To compell him to confeſſe ſomething

V. 25. A Roman] That is, which is a free man of Rome; not there borne, but by priviledge of that City where he was borne, that is, Tarſus (Chapter 16. 37.) where was a Roman colony.

V. 26. When the Centurion heard it] He being doubtfull what to doe herein, acquainteth his Colonel: that he might receive further order from him. (See on John 18. 12.) the reaſon why they would either ſo ſoon believe Paul, or did ſo much ſtartle at the naming of the Roman priviledge, was becauſe it was death for any man to plead it falſely, and very criminal for any in publick authority to violate it.

V. 27. Art thou a Roman?] S. Luke ſetteth down but the abridgement of the things: ſo that it is likely that Paul made it ſufficiently appear to him, that he was thus priviledged, before he looſed him.

V. 28 I was free-born] The Colonel ſaith, he purchaſed πολλοῦ κεφαλαίου, it is an Hebraiſme: they put ראש roſh, an head, inſtead of ſumme, as Exodus 30. 12. Numb. 4. 2. take ראש 70. τὸ κεφάλαιον, the ſumme: So Budæus ſheweth that among other things, κεφάλαιον ſignifieth a ſumme of money: the Syriack בכספא סגיאא bechesp̄a ſaggia with much ſilver, much money; he ſaith, he bought τὴν πολιτείαν, that is, jus civitatis, the freedom of the City (of Rome) which Paul had freely being a native of Tarſus; for it was the Roman cuſtome to priviledge ſome Cities who had well deſerved of them in the wars or other weighty affairs aſſiſting them.

V. 29. examined him] Or tortured him; they who were appointed to examine him by tormenting him to make him confeſs ſomething againſt himſelf.

chief captain alſo was afraid] In reſpect of the ſevere puniſhments appointed to any that did abuſe a free-man of Rome, he feared being called in queſtion for this buſineſſe.

V. 30. would have known the certainty] Being ignorant of the Jewiſh Religion, he referreth him to their council, but probably he would gladly have found ſome fault in Paul worthy of bonds, that he might have excuſed his own fault in binding and ſcourging him.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſe 1. IN all good conſcience] 2 Tim. 1. 3 this ſaid he to meet with their calumnies who accuſed him of profanation: not that he was free from all ſin, (See Rom 7. 23.) but to ſhew that they injuriouſly accuſed him of contempt of Gods Law, or profanation of the Temple.

V. 2. the high Prieſt] So the Surrogates were alſo called. See on Luke 3. 2. and poſſibly this was no more: He commanded him to be ſmitten, becauſe he conceived that Pauls profeſſion of good conſcience obliquely taxed his judges, and accuſers as if they had evil conſciences, in as much as they perſecuted him.

V. 3. thou whited wall] Falſe Hypocrite. See Ezek. 13. 10. Matt. 23. 27.

contrary to the Law] Levit. 19. 35. Deut. 25. 1, 2. beareſt thou the perſon of a Judge pretending to do juſtice, and openly tranſgreſſeſt the Law, by injuring the innocent, and uncondemned? God will once revenge this.

V. 4 Revileſt thou Gods High Prieſt] Theſe Paraſites, to ingratiate with Ananias, ſeem zealous of his Honour, taxing Pauls juſt reproof, but cannot or will not underſtand the High Prieſts injuſtice and Hypocroſie; this they diſſemble, and cenſure Pauls juſt liberty of ſpeaking, as he was more than a private man, but ſee not the unjuſt liberty which the Prieſt took to injure the Apoſtle.

V. 5. I wiſt not brethren] I knew him not to be a lawfull High Prieſt, who thus violateth the Law; and indeed he was but an uſurper. See Joſephus antiq. l. 20. cap. 3 5. Chr. Helvic. Theat. Anno Chriſti 46. ſome think that Paul having now of long time been a ſtranger at Jeruſalem, did not know the High prieſt or Surrogate: others thinke he ſpake ironically; as if he had ſaid, I could not perceive by this deportment that he was an High-Prieſt: ſure it is that he did but juſtly reprove the tyranny of an unjuſt Judge.

thou ſhalt not ſpeak evil] Exod. 22. 28.

V. 6. I am a Phariſee] Phil. 3. 5. Which he ſpake not to get favour of the Phariſes, or to approve all their traditions, but out of a prudent policy to ſet diviſion among them, for his better eſcape.

of the hope, &c.] Chap. 24. 21. Not but that there were more points in queſtion, but becauſe for this chiefly the Sadduces hated and perſecuted him.

V. 7. there aroſe a diſſention, &c.] God by dividing theſe enemies, provided for Pauls ſafety: they differing in their tenets, would not agree to condemn him, as otherwiſe they intended: the unity and conſpiracy of the wicked; cannot be laſting: for God infatuateth their counſels: and divideth them, that they may not be ſo miſchievous as thy deſire, and otherwiſe would be.

V. 8. for the Sadduces] Matt. 22. 23. Mark 12. 18 Seeing the writings of Moſes which they received, ſo expreſly ſpeak of Angels it is probable that they did not abſolutely deny them, but poſſibly might think them to be but a tranſitory apparition, created of God, onely to ſignifie his pleaſure to men; or to execute ſome commands, and ſo to diſſolve and ceaſe again: whereas the Phariſees acknowledge both, that is, the reſurrection from the dead, and the real ſubſiſtence of Angels and Spirits, in the ſtate of ſeparation.

V. 9. but if a ſpirit, or, &c.] If he have had any divine or extraordinary revelation.

V. 10. when there aroſe great diſſention] When they grew hot in their conteſt, and poſſibly were falling from words to blows; then the Captain reſcued Paul, to prevent violence and more tumult.

V. 11. the Lord ſtood by him] In a viſion to comfort and encourage him.

V. 12 banded together] ποιήσαντες συστροφὴν making a combination. So Chapter 19. 40. whereby we may give account τῆς συστροφῆς ταύτης of this concourſe, Hujus conſpirata coitionis, Budæus. He ſheweth that it cometh from the word which ſignifieth, agmen cogere, & factionem ciere, to gather a company together, and ſtir up a faction againſt ſome others. So Suidas interpreteth συστροφή, ἡ ὁμόνοια, καὶ ἡ ἐπὶ κακῷ συμφωνία, a conſent and agreement, to doe ſome miſchiefe.

under a curſe] With an Oath of execration; as wiſhing, that ſuch or ſuch a plague or miſchief might befall them, if they did not that which they had combined in, ἀναθεματίσαι ἑαυτοὺς extremis diris & execrationibus devovere. So Budæus ſaith, the Apoſtle calleth ἀναθέματα, Quaſi quorum caput devotum inferis eſt. See Matthew, 26. 74. Romanes, 9. 3.

V. 13. more than fourty] This ſheweth how great a party Satan hath ever ready to oppoſe the Goſpel, and how prone men are to combine for any miſchief.

V. 14. to the chief Prieſts] Being confident of their aſſiſtance, otherwiſe they might have expected ſharp reproof, and diſcovery of their intended murder, had their Prieſts been any better than impious murderers their ſelves: for ſuch are they, who having power, hinder not murder what they can.

we have bound our ſelves under a great curſe] ἀναθέματι ἀνεθεματίσαμεν ——it is an uſuall Hebraiſm ——with a curſe we have curſed, that is, grievouſly curſed, or bound our ſelves with direfull curſes; that they would eat nothing untill they had killed Paul, was their agreement and condition; the curſe was the bond, whereby they obliged themſelves: this ſheweth their rage and bloody minds, more ſoliciteous for others deſtruction, than their own ſafety: had they well conſidered, they might eaſily have known that many accidents, which they could not foreſee, might hinder their endeavour and fruſtrate their deſign.

V. 15. ye with the council] That is, with the conſent, or in the name of the Council, whoſe minds it ſeems they knew were bent to joyn with them to deſtroy Paul: the moſt pernicious impiety loveth the vail of publique authority; and Satan never did more miſchief than by gaining Councils to his party.

ſignifie to the chief captain, that he bring down, &c.] Signifie the cauſe or end of your requeſt, (for they had no power to command the Captain) that ye would enquire ſomething more perfectly;&c. thus they would carry on their deſign, under pretence of Juſtice and Religion.

are all ready to kill him] Here appeareth unto how deſperate a condition Religion was now come among them, when bloody conſpirators durſt come to the chief Prieſts, not onely to acquaint them with a deſign ſo miſchievous, but alſo to implore their aſſiſtance, therein.

V. 16. when Pauls ſiſters ſon heard, &c.] God ſuffereth the wicked to plot, and to be near the execution, and then defeateth their counſels. There is no wiſedome againſt God. See Prov. 21.30. Iſa.8.10.and 33.9. 10,11. Eſter 9.1,&c.Acts 12.6. 1 Sam.20. 35.

V. 17. called one of the Centurians] That is, as the Syriack interpreteth שדר ſhaddar, ſending he called; he ſent to intreat that he might ſpeake with him; and that he would do ſo much as bring the young man to Lyſias, their chiefe Commander. So Verſe 18. and prayed me to bring, &c.

V. 18. Paul the priſoner] ὁ δέσμιος,&c. Paul who is bound, for they uſed to put bonds on priſoners.

V. 19. went with him aſide] Suppoſing he had ſome ſecret to impart unto him, as indeed he had; in both theſe Commanders we have an example of courteſie: in the one readily bringing the young man to be heard; in the other, as readily giving him audience and diſpatch: in both of Gods good providence enclining their hearts to the preſervation of the Apoſtle.

V. 20. the Jewes have agreed] That is, ſome of them, or the chief of them, have conſpired; Syriacke, have conſulted.

V. 21. but do not thou yield unto them] I beſeech thee let them not by any pretences, or perſwaſions prevail with thee; μὴ πεισθῇς, be not thou perſwaded by them: ſo the word is uſed, c.21.14.

for there lye in wait] Herein he ſheweth the conſpiracy of the Jews, the ground and cauſe of his requeſt.

now are they ready. looking for a promiſe from thee] Epecting what anſwer thou wilt make them.

V. 22. ſee thou tell no man] Which charge he might give him in reſpect of his own purpoſe, leſt the matter being revealed the enraged Jewes ſhould attempt ſome other miſchief: or in reſpect of the ſafety of the young man, upon whom probably they would turn their malice, becauſe he defeated their plot on Paul.

V. 23. called unto him] Knowing the malice of that Nation, and their implacable fury ſhewed in former actions, he eaſily believed the young mans relation, and provided accordingly.

and ſpear-men two hundred] δεξιολάβους ſuch as held and carried javelins or darts in their right hands, and were of life-guards to Princes or Commanders; δεξιολάβος is ſtipator, qui alicui latus munit, Jo. Drus. Suidas interpreteth it by πλευροφύλαξ, a keeper or garder of a ſide. The Syriack here Praphraſeth, qui mittentes jaculantur dextra, or ſpiculatores à dextra, as reading δεξιοβόλους, dart-men.

V. 24. and bring him ſafe to Fœlix] Leſt the Jewes ſhould way-lay and murder him: thus God accompliſheth his Will in the preſervation of his ſervants; many times by their hands, who intend onely their own ends.

V. 25. a letter after this manner] Either in this form, or the Contents thereof were as followeth.

V. 26. ſendeth greeting] Wiſheth much health and happineſſe; or as the Syriac, Peace, So the Greeks uſed χαίρειν, to greet or ſalute, as Suidas noteth in the beginning of their Epiſtles. Some wrote εὖ πράττειν, or εὖ διάγειν to the ſame purpoſe, well to doe, or well to live. This worldly-wiſe man, adoring the riſing Sun, giveth this unworthy Fœlix, the title of Moſt excellent Governour; whereas he was indeed, but an obſcure fellow thus advanced (by the abuſed favour of Claudius Cæſar) to great wealth and honour. Paul giveth the ſame to Feſtus, c. 26. 25. in order to Gods command for honouring ſuperiours, Prov. 24.21.

V. 27. this man was taken of the Jewes] This he writeth in favour of Paul, who being by priviledge a Romane, was illegally and evilly intreated of the Jewes: God guideth the tongues and pens of unbelievers to the advantage of his.

with an army] That is, a party, or ſome companies of ſouldiers, c.21. 32.

V. 28. and when I would have known the cauſe] He concealeth what he firſt did to Paul, and poſſibly touched in conſcience, laboured to make him amends, or at leaſt to free himſelf from blame and danger, for ſo uſing an uncondemned Roman See c. 22.29.

I brought him forth into their council] Who were to judge concerning matters of Religion, See c. 22.30.

V. to be accuſed of queſtions of their Law] Matters cnocerning the Jewiſh Religion.

worthy of death or bonds] Nothing but that which was worthy of favour; but he writeth according to the ſenſe of the Romans; as if he had ſaid, nothing by our Laws and imperial conſtitutions criminal.

V. 30. that the Jewes laid wait, &c.] This probably he writeth as to condemne the Jews tumuluous practiſes, illegal and miſchievous conventions againſt Pauls life, and the Empires peace; ſo alſo to give account of his intention in ſending him with ſuch a guard to Fœlix.

V. 31. brought him by night] To avoid all further inſurrections, and attempts, which the Jews would probably have made in Jeruſalem.

to Antipatris] A City in the tribe of Manaſſeh, between Jeruſalem and Ceſarea, formerly called Capharſarama, or Capharſalama (Adricom. ter. ſanct. Manaſ. 8.) Herod building or repairing it, called it by his father Antipaters name, Jerome de loc. Hebr. Act. See 1 Mac. 7.

V. 32. they left the horſemen to go with him] Probably they were ſo commanded to do by their Colonel Lyſias. And Paul was at that diſtance from Jeruſalem, ſecure from the preſent, purſuit of his enemies.

V. 33. to Ceſarea] See on Matt. 16. 13.and Jer. de loc. heb act.

V. 34. of what Province he was] By this name, the Romans called ſome countries by them ſubdued, and this was a common cuſtome of examination of ſtrangers, to ask, what countrey-men, or whence they were. See 2 Sam 1. 13. John 19 9. Probably Fœlix did it, that he might be ſatisfied whether Paul belonged to his juriſdiction.

Of Cilicia] chap. 6 9

V. 35. when thy Accuſers are alſo come] Leſt the Jewes ſhould complain of an undue courſe of Juſtice, that they had not audience: Theſe very Heathens knew it was not juſt to judge, before both parties Complainant and Defendant were lawfully heard: if it be enough to accuſe, who ſhall be innocent? and if it be enough to deny, who would be guilty?

in Herods judgement-hall] Or, Herods Palace, Pretory, or place which he built, or appointed to keep Courts, and hear cauſes in: a fair priſon, if any could be ſo.

deſcended] From Jeruſalem to Ceſarea: Mark how induſtrious and unwearied miſchief is; the High-Prieſt and Elders with Tertullus in purſuance of their malicious deſigne: from Ieruſalem to Cæſarea, and that ſpeedily travel they would ſpare no pains, nor looſe any time: it were happy if men would be thus minded for good.

with the elders] Theſe came to countenance the Jews cauſe againſt Paul with ſhew of great reverence, but indeed; as Ambroſe ſaid to Valentinian the Emperour ep 5. 31. non annorum canicies eſt laudenda ſed morum, it is probable that all theſe came downe, as to accuſe Paul, ſo principally to prevent their own danger: for underſtanding that Lyſias had ſent away Paul, and written Letters concerning the buſineſſe, they might well fear ſome informations againſt themſelves who had been ſo tumultuous.

a certain orator] An Advocate, or Lawyer.

V. 2. by thee we enjoy] To gain favour againſt Paul this flatterer thus begins with applauding Fœlix, vvhereas Hiſtories ſhew, how cruelly and impiouſly he behaved himſelf againſt their Nation.

V. 3. moſt noble Fœlix] Fœlix was of obſcure parentage, but Claudius Cæſar promoted him to honours; he had by his diligence ſuppreſſed the ſedition under Eleazarus: otherwiſe, he was covetous and a cruell man. See Ioſephus Ant. Jud. l. 20. c. 11. & de bel. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. See alſo on Chapter, 23.26.

V. 4. that I be not further tedious] He intimateth that he would not long detain him from other his weighty affairs; Greek ἐγκόπτω, which among other things, ſignifieth to hinder ones courſe or affairs, (1 Theſſalonians 2. 18. Galatians 5. 7. Romans 5. 22.) as here it might have been by a tedious diſcourſe. Syr. ne autem fatigemus te multis: but leſt we ſhould weary thee with many words.

V. 5. a peſtilent fellow] λοιμὸν, a plague. As the Latines put ſcelus in the abſtract, pro ſcelerato, wickedneſſe for a vvicked fellovv.

ſect of the Nazarens] αἱρέσεως, of the hereſie: this name they gave the Chriſtians in thoſe dayes, from Jeſus of Nazareth, according to vvhich they called him in contempt Jeſus of Nazareth, from the City where he was brought up ; afterward it was peculiarly attributed to the ſect of Heretickes, of which Epiph. hær. 29. See on c. 26. 5. See on verſe 14. of this Chapter.

a mover of ſedition]This aſperſion he caſt on Paul, probably becauſe he knew how odious ſedition was to the Romans, who being conquerors of Judæa, and many other Nations, were very ſolicitous to hold that which they had gotten with much charge,hazard, and effuſion of blood.

V. 6. profane the temple] c. 21.28.

according to our Law]That is, to examine the quality of the offence, which the Romans permitted them to do; but not to execute ſentence of death.

V. 7. chief captain Lyſias] The Colonel Lyſias. This they object as a ſecret accuſation of Lyſias, in hope to ballance his information hereby, intimating that he reſtrained them of that liberty contrary to the Roman grant.

V. 8. accuſe him] That is, Paul.

V. 9. ſaying, that theſe things were ſo] Theſe falſe witneſſes were ready to avow and confirm Tertullus lie.

V. 10. a judge] A Governour. Therefore thou art experienced in their cuſtomes, and canſt more equally and readily judge.

V. 11. yet but twelve] Meaning, he wanted not time, had he been ſo minded to ſtir up ſedition : ſeven dayes were ſpent in the performance of that Ceremony, which he uudertooke, that he might gain the weaker Jews to Chriſt, and five were ſpent ſince.

V. 12. diſputing with any man] Though he might lawfully have ſpoken in the temple, as being an Apoſtle of Chriſt the Lord of the temple; yet he denieth that he then and there uſed any ſuch liberty.

V. 13. neither can they prove the things] being falſe calumnies: Greek, οὔτε παραστῆσαι δύνανται—— neither can they ſet before you, as a thing evident, or to be confirmed by any certain arguments, as Act, 1,3. Syr. neither have they ability ut probent coram te, to prove or make appeare to, or before thee,&c.

V. 14. which they call hereſie] Or a ſect, as verſe 5. the Scribes and Phariſees called the Doctrine of Chriſt ſo in the worſt acceptation, as the enemies thereof ſtill doe ; this word, αἱρεσις was ſome times taken in the good part,as Chapter 26.5. Some mens miſunderſtanding prejudiceth not truth.

believing all things which are written in the law,&c.] herein he ſheweth his conſent with the Church of God:and that chriſtians have the ſame faith which the Patriarchs and Prophets had. See 1 Cor.10.1,2,&c.

V. 15. which they themſelves alſo allow] That is, the more prudent party, the Phariſees : the Sadduces denyed it.

juſt and unjuſt] Dan.12.2.John 5,28, 29.for we muſt all appear before the judgement ſeat of Chriſt,&c. 2 Cor.5.10. this one Article of his faith he mentioneth as the principal ground of faith and obedience, which he elſewhere more largely expreſſeth, 1 Cor. 15,13,&c.

V. 16. a conſcience void of offence] Becauſe I know I muſt ſtand before Gods Tribunal, I alwayes endeavour to keep a good conſcience, without which no man truely believeth, 1 Tim.1.19.

V. 17. after many years] It was a long time ſince he had been at J*eruſalem* : he came but ſeldome to J*eruſalem*, which will appear, if we conſider that which his ſelf writeth.Gal.2.1. and therewith, this ſacred Hiſtory ; wherein we read of Pauls aſcending to Ieruſalem, onely foure times : Firſt,Acts 9.26,&c. Gal.1. 18. Secondly, when he brought relief to the brethren, Acts 11.30.and 12.25. between theſe his comings they reckon eleaven years : Thirdly, Acts 15. 1, &c. the fourth going up, we reade of Acts 21.17. now the fourteen yeares mentioned Gal. 2. 1. muſt be reckoned from his converſion to the ſecond going up to J*eruſalem.*

V.18.whereupon]Upon bringing the bringing up of relief from Antioch the brethren which dwelt in J*udæa*,c.11, 29.30. certain J*ews*] c.21.27.

V.19.who ought to have,&c.]For his preſent accuſers ſpake but by here-ſay,or that which themſelves invented to hurt and diſadvantage him : as if he had ſaid ; if there had been any ſuch thing whereof they accuſe me ; or if any man could affirm ſuch things againſt me;why are they not here preſent? why appeare they not againſt me.

V. 20. while I ſtood before the council] That is, at Ieruſalem. let them ſay, if any can, what evil they found in me then, cap.23.9.

V. 21. touching the reſurrection] c. 23.6. I then ſaid in my defence, of the hope and reſurrection of the dead, I am called in queſtion ; whereupon aroſe contention between the Sadduces,and Phariſees, that was their fault not mine.

V. 22. having more perfect knowledge of that way] Syr.becauſe he plainly knew that way : becauſe he perceived that the Jewes had of malice accuſed him : well knowing their qualities, and how falſely and frivolouſly they had calumuiated him, loading him with foul words, not matters.

V. 23. let him have liberty] Let him not be kept cloſe priſoner,but under a Keeper with ſome chain on him. See c. 26.29. and 28.20.though he acquitted him from all crimes, yet he detaineth him to gratifie the Jews,or expecting a bribe, Chryſ.

V. 24. Druſilla] This was Agrippa's ſiſter,a vitious woman, See J*oſeph.Ant.Jud.l.*20.*c.*5.

V. 25. Fœlix trembled] Out of horrour of conſcience, being a wicked man.

V. 26. that money ſhould have been given him]Either he ſuppoſed Paul to be no vulgar man whom the Jews ſo violently proſecuted,but of ſome great concealed eſtate,(knowing that theſe ſtorms of envy rarely trouble the low ſhrubs)or that his friends and Diſciples would have redeemed him with ſome conſiderable bribe.Here is an example of a marcenary and corrupt Judge who will be hired to do Juſtice.

V. 27. to ſhew the Jews a pleaſure] To do the Jews ſome pleaſure,and after the many injuries he had done them, to pacifie them, that they might not follow him with complaints. He was careful to pleaſe the Jewes, though with diſpleaſing God, becauſe he loved himſelf, not God, nor good men.

CHAP. XXV.

Verſe 1. W*Hen Feſtus was come into the Province*] After Fœlix was removed from that government, and Portius Feſtus made Preſident of Iudæa, reduced into the form of a Province by the Romans.

V. 2. informed him againſt Paul]Being thus precipitated by the ſpirit of Satan to perſecute the Goſpel, they could not reſt; and the leading actors were they who ſhould have protected and taught the truth : ſo dangerous is the corruption of thoſe who are in authority.

V. 3. and deſired favour againſt him] To wit, againſt Paul ; that he would ſend for him to J*eruſalem*, that they might kill him by the way.

V. 4. that Paul ſhould be kept] Probably, Fœlix had informed him of the Jews malice and deſign againſt Paul; certainly, this was Gods providence ſo to preſerve him.

V. 5. are able] That can conveniently come.

if there be any wickedneſſe in him] ἄτοπον here (as Luke 23. 41.) importeth not ſome fooliſh or abſurd thing, but ſomething wickedly done. So 2 Theſſ. 3. 2. So the Syriac expreſſeth it by סכלו ſachlu, ſin, wickedneſs, Matt.18.35. Indeed all vvickedneſs is folly : the Hebrevvs vvell expreſſed it, as Joſh 7.15. becauſe he hath wrought נבלה nebala, folly (that is, wickedneſſe) in Iſrael. 70. ἀνόμημα ἐν Ἰσραήλ. See Judges 20.10. 2 Sam.13.12.Iob 42.8.

V. 6. more than ten dayes] Syr. eight or ten dayes. Some Greek copies have οὐ πλείους ἢ δέκα not more than ten,&c.

V. 7. many and grievous complaints,&c.] αἰτιάματα,criminations, or enditements : this is the condition of Gods ſervants, to be loaded vvith calumnies and ſlanders. See 2 Cor. 6. 4,8. yet happy are they in their innocency, vvhile their enemies make themſelves ſo much the more unhappy, by hovv much more they belie them, and are injurious to them : See Matthevv,5.11,12.

V. 8. neither againſt the Law of the Iews] Neither againſt the Lavv of God profeſſed by the Jevvs,nor againſt the Temple (though they charged him vvith the profanation thereof ;) neither againſt Cæſar,had he practiſed any thing.

V. 9. to do the Jews a pleaſure] To gain the peoples good word, and opinion of him.

V. 10. where I ought to be judged] Doubting the ſincerity of the Judge, whoſe warping towards popularity he poſſibly perceived, and alſo the wait-laying of the Jews.

V. 11. I refuſe not to die] As if he had ſaid, I beg no favour.

no man may deliver me] No man juſtly can.

I appeal unto Cæſar] Syr. protectiones Cæſaris appello, I appeal to Cæſars protections. I require to be judged by Cæſar himſelf. Thus claimeth he his Roman priviledge.

V. 12. with the council] Without whoſe conſent he could do nothing.

V. 13. king Agrippa, Son of Herod Agrippa, whoſe death is mentioned, Chapter 12. See Ioſeph.Antiq.l. 18.11. & lib. 19, Chapter 5.

and Bernice] Siſter to the ſame Agrippa, with whom, he lived in publicke infamy, and vehement ſuſpition of inceſt.

V. 14. Feſtus declared Pauls cauſe] Poſſibly, diſcourſing of many things, at laſt he fell on Pauls buſineſs : how ever, Gods providence ſo diſpoſed it for Pauls deliverance from the Jewes : he will never be wanting to his ; where it ſhall make for his honour and their good, he will raiſe up ſome Feſtus to declare the oppreſſed mans cauſe. See Geneſis 41.9, &c. 1 Sam. 18. 3. &c, 1 Sam.19.2. &c.

V. 15. to have judgement againſt him] δίκην. Syr. that I would judge him. The word ſignifieth, an action entred, or to be entred into a Court of Juſtice: ſo they ſaid, δίκην ἐπάγειν Budæus. Which the Latins expreſſed by, dicam impingere,ſcribere, or diem dicere, that is, deferre, criminis poſtulare, to implead or to indite one of ſome crime; or to enter an action againſt one, that they may have judgement againſt the impleaded. Sometimes it ſignified the penalty or puniſhment; the proceed and reſult of the judgement. Likely enough, here they deſired to have him condemned, indictâ causâ, without hearing the cauſe, as they had done againſt Chriſt, and that might be the cauſe of Feſtus's reply,verſe 16. concerning the Romane cuſtome.

V. 16. To deliver any man to die] χαρίζεσθαι ſignifieth to give freely,without cauſe or merit:he means for any mans pleaſure, or favor to execute men without lawful hearing of both parties, he is an unjuſt Judge, who giveth (though the moſt juſt) ſentence, before a legall hearing; the Heathens gave leave even to the ſacrilegious, traiterous,witches, or any malefactors to defend themſelves in judgement, nec prædamnari quemquam incognitâ cauſâ licet.&c. Lactant. l.5.c. 1. neither may any man be condemned before his cauſe is known:See Deut.13,14, 15. and 17. 4. Deuteronomy, 19. 18. yet ſuch hath ever been the Devils malice againſt the ſervants of Chriſt, to thruſt on impious Judges to condemn them without hearing them; becauſe he knows the power of truth;if that come to be ſcanned, his kingdom ſalleth: ſee John 7.51.

V. 17. without any delay] He commendeth his own juſtice herein: long-delayed juſtice often proveth more heavy, than ſpeedy injuſtice.

on the judgement-ſeat] Where they uſed to hear the weighty matters.

V. 18. no accuſation of ſuch things] They accuſed him of ſedition, but he took it for a meer calumny; becauſe they alleaged, but convinced not: objected much, but proved nothing.

V. 19. of their own ſuperſtition] See on Capter 17.22. Syr. concerning their religion; ſo prophanely did Heathens think and ſpeak of true Religion.

of one Jeſus] By this it appeareth how little Pauls preaching had wrought upon Feſtus; and that many things were controverted between Paul and the Jews,which Luke, for brevity ſake omitted.See 1 Cor.1.23.

V. 20. Becauſe I doubted,&c.] Or, I was doubtful to enquire hereof: this was his pretence; but the truth was, he would fain get favour with the Jewes, verſe 9. here be bewrayeth his own injuſtice: for why did not he acquit him, againſt whom nothing was proved?

V. 21. to the hearing of Auguſtus] Or, to the judgement.

Auguſtus] Nero was at that time Emperor of Rome, but for the Honour of their former Emperour Auguſtus, they ſtiled his ſucceſſours after his name.

V. 22. I would alſo hear the man,] So Herod deſired to ſee Chriſt, Luke 23. 8. (and to heare John Baptiſt, Mark 6. 20.) not to be converted, but to ſatisfie his owne curioſity: Agrippa being born and bred among the Jews, had, doubtleſs heard of Chriſtian Religion, and perhaps of Paul alſo: therefore he might happily deſire to ſee and hear him. See here the providence of God: by all theſe injuries, accuſations, layings of wait, as Chryſoſtome noteth, Paul becometh λαμπρότερος, more eminent: but for ſuch his ſufferings, none of theſe Princes would have vouchſafed him audience with ſo much ſilence and patience.

V. 23. into the place of hearing] εἰς τὸ ἀκροατήριον, into the place of audience, or hearing cauſes. Syriak, into the houſe of Judgement; this being publicke, hither came Agrippa, and Bernice with great pomp, that is, in a Princely manner, and great ſtate.

V. 24. See this man] Thus God pleaſeth to ſuffer his dear children to be made a ſpectacle unto the world,to men and Angels, See 1 Cor.4.9.

V. 25. That he had committed nothing] Thus the more malitious the Jews were in accuſing *Paul,*the more (by Gods providence) was he juſtified by his Judges. See Chapter. 23. 29. and 24. 24. Truth and innocency ſhine more clearly by their oppoſition.

V. 26. unto my Lord] Unto Cæſar, whoſe Deputy I am in this place: this high Title, *Aguſtus, Tiberius,*and ſome others, would not have given unto themſelves or any man; it being, what they thought too great, and ſomething newer than the Roman Empire: but, as, אדני *adoni,*was a civil Title among the Hebrews, Gen.32. 18, &c. and κύριος among the Greeks, ſo became Dominus to be among the Latines.

V. 27. It ſeemeth to me unreaſonable,&c.]All this made for Pauls juſtification, and the Jews juſt blame, that the Judge openly profeſſed, that (notwithſtanding,their turbulent clamours, and frequent calumnies there appeared no crime of Pauls whereof the Deputy could enform Cæſar, he thought it unreaſonable to ſend any priſoner under the general notion of a Delinquent, vvhereas, no particular thereof could be proved againſt him.

CHAP. XXVI.

Verſe 1. PAul ſtretcheth forth the hand]This vvas with them an uſual geſture of thoſe vvho began to ſpeak in publike.See Prov.1.24.Iſa.65.2.

V. 2. I think my ſelf happy]I take it for my advantage, that I may now ſpeak before thee,who knoweſt the Law and the Scriptures;and art therefore a more competent Judge, than he that is a ſtranger to all.

V. 3. I beſeech thee to hear me patiently] As he commended his knowledge; ſo he entreateth his patience; they that know moſt, ought to be moſt attentive,where matters of Religion are controverted,impatience in heariug matters of ſo high concernment, concludeth ignorance, or impiety.

V. 4. my manner of life] Becauſe the calumnies caſt on him by the Jewes, might otherwiſe have prejudiced the cauſe of Chriſt, he firſt waſheth them off, by appealing to his accuſers own conſciences; who knew his converſation from his youth up.

V. 5. Sect] Here αἵρεσις is taken in good part, or at leaſt according to the vulgar opinion,and ſuppoſition of his adverſaries, as it The had ſaid,he Jewes their ſelves account the ſect of Phariſees to be the moſt holy and religious;and they well know that I was trained up in the ſame, and zealouſly profeſſed the ſame;therefore ought they not to reprove my former courſe of life; if they will be conſtant to their principles: he calleth it ἀκριβεστάτην, αἵρεσιν the ſtraiteſt: or moſt exquiſite or exact ſect:there were then three ſects among the Jews. Phariſees,Sadduces and Eſſenes: See *Ioſ.Antiq.l.*18. *c.*2. Epipha adverſ. hæreſ. l. 1,*hær.*16.1.2. ib.hær. 14. *ib.hær.*10. *D.Godwin.Moſes & Aaron. l.*1.*c.*10.11,12 theſe were the principall, and among them the ſect of Phariſees was the moſt ſtrict. The Syr. here interpreteth αἵρεσιν, the principal Doctrine of the Phariſees.

V. 6. of the promiſe]Concernning the Meſſias,and his kingdom, and life eternal by him, in whom all the true worſhippers of God among the Jews believed and repoſed all their confidence: hereby he obliquely taxeth the vain and prepoſterous perſwaſion of the Jewes pretending to the covenant of God with them and their fathers, and the promiſes, and yet obſtinately rejecting Chriſt whom God promiſed to ſend them, and in whom alone all the promiſes of God for their eternal happineſſe were grounded and ratified to all true believers.

V. 7. twelve tribes] Meaning the remnant of the twelve Tribes, as they returned from the Captivity, 2 King. 17.6.

ſerving God] According to the Diſcipline of the Law.

V. 8. Why ſhould it be thought incredible] He that gave life and being, to that which before, was not, cannot he reſtore life to the dead? idoneus eſt reficere, qui fecit; Tertul. He is beſt able to repair us who made us, and indeed we may behold a continual reſurrection (*Clem. Roman. ad.Cor. ep.*1.) In the ſeveral creatures; from the death —— like winters unto the life of ſpring, the ſeveral ſeeds buried under the winter clods, ariſe up in their ſeverall kindes much more glorious, See 1 Cronicles,15.37,38.

V. 9. verily I thought with my ſelf] He prepoſſeſſeth an objection: ſome might ſay,were you brought up a Phariſee? you never learned of them to believe, that Jeſus was the Meſſias: true indeed (ſaith he) I was an adverſary to Chriſtians,as much as any of them;and thought my ſelf bound in conſcience to endeavour their ſuppreſſion; neither did any man perſwade me to the contrary, but God revealed to me from Heaven, the truth of Chriſt, and diverted my courſe: therefore here he inſerteth the Hiſtory of his admirable converſion.

V. 10. which thing,&c.]Chap.8.3.

V. 11. Compelled them] Either he effected this by the cruelty he uſed,or gave them occaſion ſo to doe by his own example, 1 Tim.1.13.

V. 12. as I went to Damaſcus]Chap.9.2.

V. 13. at midday] This he ſaith to declare, that it was no dream, fantaſie, or viſion of the night; but the certain knowledge,of waking and attentive minds.

V. 14. I heard a voyce] Chap.9.4.

V. 15. who art thou Lord?] chap. 9. 5.

V. 16. but riſe,&c.] chap.9. 6.

V. 17. from the people] Of the Jewes, they ſhall ingratefully handle thee (as mad-men uſe their Phyſitians) but I will deliver thee.

V. 18. to open their eyes] This is attributed unto Miniſters, as inſtruments and ordinary means, the effect vvhereof is onely in the Spirit of God, vvorking thereon. See 1, Cor. 3. 5.6.

V. 19. The heavenly viſion] Gal.1.16.17.

V. 20. unto them of Damaſcus]Chap.9.20.

V. 21. about to kill me] Chap.21.27,28,&c.

V. 22. ob-

V. 22. obtained help of God] God aſſiſting me, it were high ingratitude not to do this work cheerfully, and to live to him, by whom I live and am preſerved.

witneſſing both to ſmall and great] To all ſorts of hearers, noble and obſcure, without exception of perſons. So Rev. 13. 16. Revel. 19. 18. ſo the Hebrewes uſed to ſpeak, as we read. 1 Sam. 30. 19. מן-הקטן ועד-הגדול min hakkaton vehad haggadol, from the little one, and unto the great one, by which Paul intimateth here to Agrippa, that the things which he ſpake as much concerned the King in his own perſon, as the pooreſt hearer: the Goſpel is a general doctrine, which Chriſt would have communicated to all ſorts of people. See Pſal. 49. 1, 2. Mat.28. 19 Mark 16. 15. See Rom. 1. 14. for all are one in Chriſt. See 1 Cor. 12. 13. Gal. 3. 28. Col. 3. 11.

the Prophets and Moſes] Whoſe general authority the Jewes durſt not deny. And this he conſtantly affirmeth, that all might underſtand that he taught no other doctrine than that which Moſes and the Prophets taught from the beginning; ſo far was he from innovation.

V. 23. Chriſt ſhould ſuffer] That Chriſt ſhould not be a temporal king, as the Jewes dreamed, but a ſpiritual and eternal; redeeming and ſaving us, by ſuffering that which was due to us.

the firſt] As head of his Church, to give them a ſpiritual life. 1 Cor. 15. 20. Col. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 5. Firſt as the authour of life, not the firſt in time; for ſome were raiſed from the dead before he died.

ſhew light] The knowledge of the Goſpel. Luke 2. 32. Matthew 4. 16.

unto the people] meaning the Jewes.

V. 24. with a loud voyce] Chryſoſtome underſtandeth this as an effect of Feſtus's anger.

Paul thou art beſide thy ſelfe] μαίνῃ, Thou art diſtracted, or mad. Here note the prophane cenſure of carnal men, concerning the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation by Chriſt. See 2 Kings 9. 11. ſee on Mark 3. 21.

much learning doth make thee mad] Thou over-ſtudieſt thy ſelf; or medleſt with matters too deep for thy apprehenſion, ſuch eſtimates do the ignorant ſet on knowledge: ſo do they blaſphemouſly conceive the Goſpel to be the fooliſhneſſe of preaching. 1 Cor. 1. 18. It ſeemeth ſo to them that periſh: to them that ſhall be ſaved, it is the power and wiſdom of God, ſee Rom. 1. 16. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. it is a dangerous ſymptom to diſtaſt the Goſpel of Chriſt.

V. 25. I am not mad, moſt noble Feſtus] Paul is not tranſported with anger for Feſtus cenſure of him; but being more ſolicitous to free them, by whom he was bound, from the bonds of ſin and Satan, than himſelf from their chains, he replyeth meekly, and as it became him to ſpeak to a Governour: though Feſtus were unworthy, yet for Gods ordinance ſake, and leſt the cauſe of religion might otherwiſe have ſuffered, he regardeth him: neither was Paul ſo much careful for the defence of his own reputation (See 1 Cor. 4. 3. 2 Cor. 5. 13.) as for the truth of God, which indeed is of the higheſt and moſt ſerious concernment: it is truly the greateſt madneſſe of the world, wittingly and willingly to neglect that, in which is our eternal weal or woe: a ſoft anſwer turneth away wrath, Prov. 15. 1. meekneſſe and patience of teachers much advanceth the truth of Chriſt. See 2 Tim 2. 24, 25, 26. ſo it is in any weighty undertaking, to be maſter of ones ſelf, ſubject onely to right reaſon, not to diſturbed affections.

V. 26. For the King knoweth] Being a Jew, and alwayes converſant in Judea, he might know the propheſies, and thoſe things which were there done and ſuffered by Chriſt in his life, death, and reſurrection.

V. 27. that thou believeſt] Meaning, that the King was perſwaded of the the truth of thoſe things which were written by the Prophets.

V. 28. almoſt] ἐν ὀλίγῳ in a little, or within a little: this he ſpeaketh being forced to acknowledge the power of the Goſpel, which ſecular reſpects would not ſuffer to be fruitfull in him.

V. 29. both almoſt] As verſe 28.

altogether] ἐν πολλῷ, in much, in every thing which concerneth the accompliſhment of a true Chriſtian. Almoſt perſwaded to be a Chriſtian, is no better than to be a luke-warme Laodicean, Rev. 3. 16, or an Iſraelite halting between God and Baal, 1 Kings 18. 21. God will admit no partners in his ſervice: either thou muſt be entirely and altogether his, or thou art not his at all.

except theſe bonds] He attemperateth his ſpeech to them, who yet knew not that bonds, and ſuffering for the truth of Chriſt, was an high honour, whereof elſewhere he glorieth and rejoyceth, Epheſ. 6. 20. 2 Tim 2. 9. See alſo chap. 5. 41. The Romans uſed thus to produce their priſoners with a ſouldier guardian, and ſome chain on the priſoner, chap. 28. 20. 2 Tim. 1. 16.

V. 30, the King roſe up] Having diſmiſſed the company who attended or came to hear; the King, Preſident, and Bernice, with many others, depart nothing better than they came hither. So goeth the black-Moor into the Bath, coming out from waſhing, of the ſame complexion: they whoſe hearts are filled with love of the world, and ſecular buſineſſes, impatiently hear the Goſpel; it is preſently tedious to them.

V. 31. nothing worthy of death] Thus the very heathen Judges ſtill acquitted him in their opinions, to the condemnation of the malicious Jewes. As alſo of themſelves, who finding in all their examinations that he was innocent, yet to pleaſe impious men, would not acquit and deliver him. Judges ought to take heed what they do, for they judge not for man, but for the Lord. ---- 2 Chron. 19. 6.

V. 32. then Agrippa ſaid] Agrippa (of their governours moſt verſed in theſe things) alſo juſtifies Paul: what got the Jewes by their travel and importunity, but their own juſt condemnation, in the manifeſtation of Pauls innocency? the enemies of the goſpel and of the Miniſters thereof, do but juſtifie, and (to the ſervants of Chriſt undoubted advantage) honour them the more.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verſe 1. P*Aul and certain other priſoners*) Thus do the ſaints ſhare with the wicked in things ſecular and external. God the righteous judge will at laſt ſet them in conditions very different, Mat. 25. 34, 41, 46. Luke 16. 25.

a centurion] A Captain of an hundred foot-men.

Auguſtus band] The band or cohort was the tenth part of a Roman legion: and theſe bands or cohorts were of ſeveral numbers, names, and uſes: the firſt, wherein the ſtandard was, conſiſted of 1105 footmen, and 132. horſemen, &c. they uſed to have a Pretorian band, or cohort, to guard the Magiſtrate or Governour in his Province; this here mentioned, ſeems to be ſuch as Auguſtus appointed to ſome the like offices, See Vegetius de re militar. lib. 2. cap. 7.

V. 2. Adramyttium] A famous city and port of Myſia, Plin. lib 5. cap. 30. it was formerly called Pedaſus. Myſia was by the Helleſpont near Troas, Ger. Mercat. Atl. Aſia min.

Ariſtarchus] It ſeemeth he onely and Luke accompanied Paul in this journey, of all his diſciples.

V. 3. at Sidon] A city of Phœnicia: in times paſt it was a frontier town of the Canaanites to the North-ward, near the mount Libanus. Jerome de locis Heb. Act.

courteouſly entreated Paul] χρησάμενος, the word now uſed, is a particip. aor. 1. med. of χράω, commodo, commodato, do; to lend, as Luke 11. 5. to accommodate or to profit, to do good or pleaſure to; Syr. uſus eſt Centurio benevolentia erga Paulum: upon the matter the ſame, which he courteouſly entreated Paul. Thus God raiſed up friends to the afflicted, for he is with them according to his promiſe. See chap. 7. 9, 10. Hebr. 13. 5, 6. Joſh. 1. 5.

of Lyſia] A province of Aſia. Jerome. de loc. Hebr. Act. Pliny ſaith it had once ſixty towns, lib. 5. cap. 27.

V. 6, of Alexandria] A city of Egypt, which was anciently called No, Jer 46. 25. &c. between Egypt and Africa, where the Evangeliſt Mark was buried. Jerom. de loc. Hebr. Act. and de ſcriptor. eccl G. Mercator. Atl. ſaith, it was in times paſt a noble and beautiful city, built by Alexander the great, in the bottome of the ſtraights, or end of the Mediterrane ſea. The Turks now call it Scanderia

V 7. ſlowly many dayes] The winde being againſt them, as verſe 4. or very bare.

Gnidus] A little Iſland over againſt Caria,

Crete] Since named Candie: it is a Grecian Iſland, once abounding in wealth, and glorious for the number of an hundred towns. Jerom. de loc. Hebr. Act. See G. Mercat. Atl. Creta, & Plin. lib. 4. cap. 12.

Salmone] This was an eaſtern promontory, or high cliffe of Crete. See Strab. l. 2.

V. 8. the fair havens] It ſeemeth ſo called of the ſafety and commodiouſneſſe of the haven, or road; as we call a road of ours, the Downs.

Laſea] A ſea-town and city of Crete, Jerom. de loc. Hebr. Act.

V. 9. the faſt was] He reckoneth the time of the year, after the cuſtome of the Jewes, which the Syriack expreſſeth, the faſt which the Jewes were wont to obſerve: hereof ſee Levit. 16. 29. and 23. 27. Numb. 29. 7. this was about October: ſo that Paul adviſed them to winter there, rather than to put to ſea in the deep of winter, then at hand; wherein (as Vegetius noteth de re militar. l. 4. c. 39.) there is little light, and tedious nights, thick clouds, dark weather, rages of winde, and ſtorms, hindring travel by ſea and land: the heathen ſaid well, καιρὸς δ' ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἄριστος. Heſiod. op. & di. opportunity is beſt in all things.

V. 10. hurt and &c.] μετ' ὕβρεως, with injury: the interpreter of the Syriack giveth it, with trouble.

but alſo of our lives] With much danger of our lives: it had been with loſſe of their lives, had not God (as Oecumenius ſaith) for Pauls ſake preſerved all the reſt. τῶν ψυχῶν ἡμῶν, of our ſoules, that is, a Metonomie of the efficient for the effect, uſuall among the Hebrewes.

V. 11. the centurion believed the maſter] Not knowing Paul to be inſpired by the holy Ghoſt, but conceiving him to be no ſea-man, he believed the maſter of the ſhip in his own faculty; alſo the haven was not commodious: this man had at leaſt ſome appearance of reaſon for this his beliefe; what reaſon have they, who in danger of their ſouls ſhipwrack, will moſt believe them who have leaſt skill and experience in preaching the word for ſaving of ſouls?

V. 12. Phenice] A port in Crete, not Phenicea a region in Syria.

V. 13. looſing thence] Weighing anchor, and ſeeing ſail thence, ἄραντες, ἆσσον παρελέγοντο, the word ἆσσον is not here a name of a place; but is put for ἐγγὺς or πλησίον; near, or nearer: as if he ſaid cloſe aboard the ſhore of Crete, or Candie. See chap. 20. 13, 14.

they ſayled] παρελέγοντο, which the Latines give, legebant, or praterlegebant, Virg. Æni. 3. Littoraque Epiri legimus, it hath many ſignifications, as Lyranus noteth in this Diſtich.

Fur aurum, virgo flores, mare navita, libros Clericus; æquivocè ſingula quiſque legit. In the Dialect of Engliſh marriners, they went cloſe aboard the ſhore.

V. 14. there aroſe] Or beat.

againſt it] Againſt Crete, ſo that it carried them off to ſea from Crete (which was now a wind-ward ſhore) to Melita, which is between Africa and Sicilie.

Euroclydon] A North-eaſt winde, furious and ſtormy, uſual about thoſe places, in the beginning of winter: ſome call it, the Sea-mans plague.

V. 15. when the ſhip was caught] With this ſudden ſtorme, ſo they (not having time to take in their ſails) were in danger of over ſetting, could not bear up into the wind] A ſhip is ſaid ἀντοφθαλμεῖν τῷ ἀνέμῳ, to wreſtle with the winde (ſay the interpreters) which muſt needs be when ſhe hath the winde againſt her, ſo that her prow muſt encounter with adverſe billowes, and head-ſeas, or meet the ſea right a head; ſome think the original of the phraſe was from that part of the prow which was called ὀφθαλμὸς, an eye: we have in uſe with us, to make up into the eye of the winde, (which here is ἀντοφθαλμεῖν) by divers tacks, and making ſundry boards, to turn to the winde-ward: that is, by ſtanding ſometimes one way, and ſometimes another, for the gaining a place to winde-ward; which here this ſhip could not do the violence of the ſtorm and great head-ſeas driving them ſtill to the lee-ward, and hindring her way.

we let her drive] A ſhip is ſaid to drive, when the anchor cannot hold her, but that ſhe falleth away with the winde or tyde. So alſo when a ſhip is at hull, or a trie, that is, hath taken in all her ſails, and tyed down the helm to the lee-ſide of the ſhip, going as winde and tide carry her: we ſay ſhe drives, &c. or is a drift to lee-ward.

V. 16. Clauda] A little Iſland. Plinie lib. 4. cap. 12. calleth it Gaudos: Ptolome and others Claudos.

to come by the boat] To recover, take up, or ſave the boat.

V. 17. under-girding the ſhip] This under-girding is by truſſes, which are ropes made faſt to the yards; uſed either to binde faſt the yard to the maſt, when the ſhip rowles a hull, or at an anchor, or to hale down the yards in a guſt or ſtorm.

into the quick-ſands] Certain vaſt banks or mountains of ſands in the ſea, which ſwallow up ſhips that ſtick faſt and ſit upon them a little time; and ſo will the Goodwin ſands, &c.

V. 18. they lightened the ſhip] By caſting the goods overboard.

V. 19. the tackling of the ſhip] The Greek word σκευὴ, ſignifieth ſtore, munition and neceſſary furniture; and proviſion for ſhips. So Jon. 1. 5. they caſt over-board את הכלים eth hachalim: their inſtruments or furniture, 70. ἐκβολὴν ἐποιήσαντο τῶν σκευῶν; the very word here uſed: So Syr, interpret. vaſa ipſius navis, &c. See 2 Kings 11. 8, 11.

V. 20. all hope that we ſhould be ſaved] Meaning in reſpect of ſecond cauſes, and mans reaſon; κατὰ τὴν φύσιν, as Oecumenius ſpeaks, it muſt have been ſo in the courſe of nature, that they had periſhed.

V. 21. have gained this harm] That is, prevented it; as the Syr. interpreteth it, avoyded it; in the concluſion, it will ever appear a Gain to hearken to Chriſts Miniſters.

V. 22. of any mans life] Ψυχῆς: ſoul, for life, as verſe 10. with ſuch admirable confidence in the truth of God, who had revealed this unto him, verſe 24. he comforteth them, leſt in deſpair of life they ſhould neglect the means of their preſervation.

but of the ſhip] This he declareth to them, that when they ſaw all this truly come to paſſe, they might have the more reverend eſteem of the goſpel which he preached, and for which he now ſuffered.

V. 23. the Angel of God] Whom he ſent to comfort and aſſure me; leſt they ſhould think he vainly promiſed them ſecurity, he confirmeth that which he ſaid by alleadging a divine authority.

whom I ſerve] He profeſſeth to profane men, that he ſerved God, who who was able to deliver and would deliver him and them: they knew that he was now in bonds for his religions ſake: now hearing that God had a care of him, ſent his Angel to him, and after ſeeing that he and themſelves were according to his word delivered from the (otherwiſe inevitable) danger, they might eaſily gather, that God juſtified his religion, and that Paul ſerved the true God.

V. 24 God hath given thee all them that ſail with thee] Or given thee as a favour. So the Greek κεχάρισταί σοι ſignifieth, freely to give, as Rom. 8. 32. Gal 3. 18. Phil. 1. 29 Acts 3. 14. 1 Cor. 2. 12. Thou haſt prayed for them, I have heard thee, and will for thy ſake, ſave their lives. So God heard Lot for Zoar. Gen. 19. 19, &c. God preſerveth the wicked from temporal deſtruction, for the righteous ſake, who are among them, and intercede for them.

V. 25. for I believed God] I am confident out of good experience, that God will certainly perform his promiſe.

V. 26. we muſt be caſt] That they might not doubt of the truth of Gods promiſe, he foretelleth them, the manner and means by which they ſhall be preſerved: thus it will fall out that we ſhall be caſt upon an Iſland: this he telleth them that they might aſcribe their delivery to God, not chance; ſo the ancient Prophets were wont to foretell certain ſignes of things by them ſpoken, which ſhould come to paſſe, that they whom it concerned might know that God had ſpoken by them, and would certainly bring it to paſſe. See 1 Sam. 10. 2. &c.

V. 27. in the Adria, &c.] In the Adriatick ſea which divideth Italy from Dalmatia, and reacheth up to Venice.

V. 28. and ſounded] To finde the depth of the waters by caſting out a plumet of lead faſtened to a line many fathoms long

V. 29. out of the ſterne] Or hinder part of the ſhip, to ſtay the courſe or way of the ſhip, leſt falling upon ſome coaſt in the dark, in their ſhip-wrack they ſhould all have been caſt away.

V. 30. out of the fore-ſhip] The prow, or foremoſt part of the ſhip.

V. 31. except theſe abide in the ſhip] Now becauſe the will of God, or his power to ſave, or the effect of his promiſe depended on ſecond cauſes; but becauſe he that had ordained the end, ordained the means alſo; and that he would not have them tempt God, by dividing that which he had united.

V. 32. Cut off the ropes] The Centurion and ſouldiers follovving Pauls counſell, cut off all hope of the ſea-mens going avvay from the ſhip, and deſerting them; they cut the boat-rope, and let her drive avvay.

V. 33. continued faſting] He meaneth, they eat no ſet meals; or ſo little in their perpetual danger and fear of being caſt avvay, that it vvas in a manner, a faſting.

V. 34. hair fall from the head] By this Hebrevv phraſe is meant, that they ſhould all come ſafe and ſound aſhore (See 1 Sam. 14. 45. 1 King 1. 52. Mat. 10. 30.) vvithout the loſſe of a man.

V. 35. he took bread and gave thanks] Not only praying God to give a bleſſing, and to ſanctify thoſe creatures to their nouriſhment; to preſent their thanks to him for the ſame, and to acknowledge his good providence in beſtowing them upon them; but alſo for their preſervation from the great danger which they had run: and exhorting them to refreſh themſelves, in confidence of Gods future providence according to his word, he ſheweth them his own example; we muſt not in dangers and afflictions, meaſure our condition by preſent ſenſe, but conſider Gods power, and promiſes to deliver us; it is an happy teaching, where Miniſters own actions, exemplifie their doctrine.

V. 36. all of good cheer, &c.] So great a comfort and bleſſing is one, or a few good men in a company: while they were all ſafe, and out of fear, Paul lay a board like a poor deſpiſed priſoner, but now in the danger God maketh him the onely counſeller, and comforter of all the company; common dangers; and afflictions, make the Saints more evidently ſhine.

V. 37. two hundred threeſcore and ſixteen, &c.] This ſetteth off the good providence of God, that of ſo many men, none periſhed in their tumultuous ſwimming aſhore: it muſt teach men in midſt of dangers to caſt themſelves upon the providence of God.

V. 38. they lightened the ſhip] By caſting her lading over-board: they reſolved with the Phyloſopher in the like caſe, better theſe periſh for us, than with us

V. 39. they knew not the land] They could keep no good reckoning, by reaſon of the violent ſtorm, dark weather, variable ſets of tydes, and poſſibly many ſhifts of windes: ſo diſcovering the land, knew not where they were.

to truſt in the ſhip] They would there run her aſhore, that they might ſave their lives, by getting aſhore upon ſome plancks or broken pieces of timber, or otherwiſe.

V. 40. taken up the anchors] Or cut the cables, (to which the anchors were faſtened) in the hawſe: for in a ſtorm, and ſuch wrought ſeas, they could not weigh anchor: Syr. ופסקו vapeſaku, and they cut off the anchors; the ſame word is given verſe 20. all hope that we ſhould be ſaved אתפסק ethpeſeck was cut off; Greek περιῃρεῖτο, was taken away.

looſed the rudder-bands] The rudder, is that piece of timber, which hanging at the ſtern-poſt of the ſhip, is as a bridle to direct the courſe; this they had bound when they would drive (verſe 15.) or let the ſhip go whither winde and tyde would carry her; but now, becauſe they would have it to direct the ſhip, that they might with the beſt advantage for their lives, run her aſhore, they looſe it again.

and hoiſed up the main ſail] Which before they had ſtrucken, by reaſon of the violence of the ſtorm; now they hoiſe it, that the ſhip might feele the winde, and work for their running aſhore.

V 41. broken with the violence, &c.] So that nothing now remained, but that every one ſhould ſhift for his life, and ſwimme aſhore: thus God ſhewed his delivering power in extream hazards.

V. 42. the ſouldiers counſel was to kill, &c.] They ſhew their cruell ingratitude to Paul, who had comforted them, and for whoſe ſake their lives were ſaved: this hath been the common lot of the Prophets, Apoſtles, Miniſters, and generally the ſaints of God: let it trouble no good man to receive evill for the good he hath done, it is a vulgar diſeaſe; let them know that when men requite evill for good, that yet their labour is with the Lord. See Luke 14. 13, 14.

V. 43. But the Centurion willing to ſave Paul] God put into his heart, to defeat this more than barbarous counſel of ſouldiers: thus God ſaveth Paul by the Centurion, who was preſerved for Pauls ſake: piety never dyeth unrewarded: it is an happy thing to do all the good we can; here again mark the preſent benefit which the other priſoners had for Pauls ſake: it is a ſufficient motive to make men ambitious of the acquaintance and ſociety of Gods children.

caſt themſelves firſt into the ſea] That they might be the more helpful to get the reſt aſhore; alſo to avoyd the danger of one drovvning another, if the multitude ſhould all have leaped over-board together.

V. 44. ſome on boards, &c.] Who could not ſvvimme vvithout, they eſcaped all ſafe] Thus God ever fulfilleth his promiſes: thus his goodneſſe overcometh mans malice and impious counſels; reſerving the vvicked to other times, vvhoſe unbeliefe and ingratefull cruelty, willing to ſhed blood deſerved that they ſhould never have come to ſhore again: The long-ſuffer- and goodneſſe of God ſhould lead men to repentance, and teach them Davids uſe of Gods favours. Pſal. 107. 15. Oh that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſſe, &c.

V. 2. barbarous people] They were ſo called who ſpake neither Greek nor Latine and were more rudely bred, or of fierce and evill manners, uncivill, ungodly, immane and cruel. Cic. ad Q. fr. l. 1. quod ſi te ſors Afris, aut Hiſpanis, aut Gallis præfeciſſet, immanibus ac barbaris nationibus: ſo Virg. barbarus has ſegites? See 1 Cor. 14. 11.

ſhewed us no little kindneſſe] φιλανθρωπίαν humanity: So Suidas interpreter giveth φιλανθρωπηθεὶς humaniter exceptus: and Budæus φιλανθρωπευόμενος, in comitatem benignitatemque compoſitus: Some deſpiſe the needy and calamitous, adding affliction to affliction, but theſe men (eſteemed barbarous) were more humane to thoſe who had loſt ſhip and goods in the ſea: Chriſtians ſhould not be aſhamed to imitate their mercy, but to come ſhort of it. See Heb. 13. 3. it is no more honour to thoſe who are barbarous to be called humane, than diſhonour to the humane to be called barbarous: it is leſſe evill to be ſtiled evill, than to be ſo: be better than thy name, ſhew thy ſelf good indeed, and thou mayeſt ſecurely deſpiſe fame. See James 2. 16.

V. 3. a viper out of the heat] Thus God pleaſed by a new miracle to confirm Pauls authority, thereby to prepare the barbarous to receive the Goſpel.

V. 4. a murderer] This was raſh judgement; according to the common cuſtom of the world; who uſually account the afflicted vvicked; this principle ſticketh faſt in the conſciences of the moſt barbarous, that there is a divine providence vvhich juſtly puniſheth the vvicked and injurious, becauſe therefore murder is a chief crime, they conclude that he vvas a murderer, vvhom ſo eminent a revenge follovved.

yet vengeance ſuffereth not to live] Vengeance they took to be a goddeſſe, named Δίκη; the ſame vvith Nemeſis, vvhich they called τῶν ἀλαζόνων τιμωρὸν, the revenger of the proud Suid. Νέμεσις.

V. 5. ſhook off the beaſt, &c.] That is the viper; vvhich hung on his hand: the Phyſitians called all ſuch creatures vvhich leave their venome in a vvound vvhich they bite or ſting θηρία, ſpecially the viper.

felt no harm) The povver of God, the Lord of nature and all creatures, reſtraining the venome; ſo that it could not hurt Paul: here Chriſts promiſe to believers in the Primitive Church, Mark 16. 18. vvas fulfilled in Paul.

V. 6. ſwollen and fallen down dead] So deadly is their poyſon, ſpecially in thoſe hot countreys, that it preſently invades the heart and vital parts, and thoſe that are bitten preſently die: the more evident was the miracle in Pauls preſervation.

V. 7, Publius] By this name he ſeemed to be a Roman, and that he entertaining the Centurion, Paul and his company were invited with him: thus God hath every where a care of his.

V. 8. prayed and layed his hands on him] Praying, he ſhewed that not his power, but Gods, reſtored this man: laying on his hands was a form of bleſſing, hoſpitality is commended by many examples. V. 9. others alſo came and were healed] For very probably the fame hereof quickly ſpread about the Iſland. But why did not he who ſhook off the viper, and cured diſeaſes, ſhake off his own bonds? we muſt know that Paul was not the authour, but miniſter in the miracle; acting onely where, when, how, and on whom the Spirit of God would: and miracles were not wrought for the eaſe of their perſons, who did them, ſo much as for the confirmation of their miniſtery; for which God ſometimes miraculouſly delivered them, chap. 5. 19 chap. 12. 7. ſometimes he left them in bonds, where thoſe bonds might advance the Goſpel Phil. 1. 12.

V. 10. laded us with ſuch things, &c.] Furniſhed them with victuals, and other neceſſaries; this was their gratitude toward Paul, for the great benefits which they had received by his curing their ſick: they much honoured him, and accommodated him and thoſe that were with him, with neceſſaries for their voyage: and this was a fruit of their faith.

V. 11. whoſe ſigne was] Such as ſhips uſually have whereby they may be the better known, and according to which ſometimes they are named, and their bills of lading, or other commiſſions to them appertaining are formed.

V. 14. we found brethren] Whether theſe brethren were Chriſtians before Paul came to them or not, ſeemeth not manifeſt, for the Jewes though not yet converted, are elſewhere ſtiled brethren, that is, kinſmen according to the fleſh--Iſraelites, Rom. 9. 3. 4. (ſee alſo Acts 7. 1. & 22. 1. & 23. 1 &c.) ſo here v. 17. Paul calleth them brethren, who yet v. 22 naming Chriſtianity a Sect, every where ſpoken againſt, ſeem, not to have then been acquainted with the moſt wholeſom and comfortable myſteries thereof, concerning which they deſired to be enformed by Paul; neither ſeemeth it probable that the faith (if it had been received in Italy, ſo near Rome as was Puteoli) ſhould not by ſome means have been propagated to the Jewes at Rome.

V. 15 Appii forum] A market town upon a long high-way, to the ſea-ward, which Appius cauſed his ſouldiers to make good; by the which there ſtood three taverns, about a dayes journey from Rome.

V. 16. the Centurion] Or governour of the pretory or Judgement-hall.

ſuffered to dwell] Paul was not put into the common priſon; which favour God gave him for his comfort, and the advancement of the Goſpel.

V. 17. Paul called the chief of the Jewes] Who dwelt then at Rome; here again appeared the conſtant love of Paul to Iſrael; who, notwithſtanding their many grievous injuries done him, would yet again adventure to preach Chriſt unto them, that they might be ſaved.

V. 18. when

V. 18. when they had examined, &c.[That is, when the Roman Deputies and Governours of Judea had examined Paul : thus he endeavoureth to preſent the truth unto them, and for their better reception of himſelf, and it, to prevent the prejudicate opinion concerning his own perſon, leſt that ſhould diſadvantage the Goſpel.

V. 20. for the hope] That is, for Jeſus Chriſt his cauſe, whom they had long looked for, and who had now ſhewed himſelf their Redeemer, in whom only the Iſrael of God, that is, all true beleevers (Rom. 2. 29. Gal. 3. 7. 9.) repoſe all their hope and confidence of ſalvation. See chap. 4. 12,

V. 21 we neither received letters, &c.] The high prieſts had little hope that they could reach him there at Rome, therefore probably they were ſilent.

every where it is ſpoken againſt] By the governours and people, Jewes and Gentiles: here appeareth the truth and power of God, in the propagation of that Goſpel, which had the multitude, power, authority and wiſdom; yea, and the ſeeming ſanctity of the world, every where againſt it: what natural man would not at leaſt have ſuſpected that which all condemned? that muſt therefore be the truth of God, which ſo much, ſo univerſally, ſo conſtantly flouriſheth in ſpite of men.

V. 23. kingdom of God] That the kingdom ſpoken of by the Prophets, now was offered unto them by Chriſt. Which Paul, by competent and ſufficient arguments cited out of Moſes and the Prophets, declared and proved unto them:

V. 25. when they agreed not, &c.] Here is the fruit of diſſention, but accidental to the Goſpel, which cauſeth not, but ſheweth the ſecret wickedneſſe of mens hearts, as the ſun, ſheweth, but cauſeth not the diverſities of colours which ly concealed and undiſtinct in the dark. See Luke 2. 34. Mat. 10. 34. John 10 19.

V. 31. preaching the kingdom of God] That is, as the Syr. hath it, concerning the kingdom of God: and how we are intereſſed therein by the free grace and mercy of God in Chriſt Jeſus; in whom we receive remiſſion of ſins, regeneration, reconciliation, adoption of ſons, faith, ſanctification, patience; perſeverance, obſignation and ſealing up to redemption; and ſhall have the end of our hopes, the ſalvation of our bodies and ſouls in his kingdom of glory.

with all confidence, no man forbidding him] Not becauſe the Jewes had loſt their malice, but becauſe God who ſhut the greedy lyons mouthes: Dan. 6 had now ſhut theirs: and he who brought out Iſrael from the incenſed Egypt, in ſuch a calm, that not a dog moved his tongue againſt them, now at preſent gave Paul freedome from the ſtrife of tongues: well might he ſay, the word of God is not bound. 2 Tim. 2. 9. if thou ſhouldeſt endeavour to binde up the ſun-beames, or ſilence the whiſpering windes, thou couldeſt not prevaile; nor can any creature, againſt that ſpirit of God which breaths when, and where it liſt. John 3. 8.

Now unto the King Eternall, Immortall, Inviſible, the onely wiſe God, be honour and glory for ever and ever; to his Church peace, truth, and ſalvation, to all Eternity, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord and onely Saviour. AMEN.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. PAul,] Paul the holy Apoſtle, who wrote this Epiſtle and the reſt, either had two names given him formerly, (at his circumciſion) Saul and Paul, as the firſt Evangeliſt in order, had two names, Matthew and Levi, which the words of Saint Luke (Act. 13. 9.) ſeem to import; (Saul which alſo is called Paul) or, after his ſeparation to the work of the miniſtery, and his converting Paul the proconſul, his former name Saul was changed into Paul, either by the proconſul Sergius Paulus, who graced him with the name of his illuſtrious Family among the Romanes, as Titus did Joſephus the Jew with the name of Flavius; or by himſelf in memory of that great work God wrought by him, as well in the converſion of the proconſul, as the confuſion of Elymas the Sorcerer: ſo Saint Auguſtine and St. Jerome, Victoriæ erexit vexillum ut Paulus diceretur è Saulo.

Servant] The word is not here taken as oppoſed to a free man, but ſignifieth a miniſter, or a man wholly addicted to Chriſts ſervice, whoſe ſervice is perfect freedome: in which ſenſe Moſes (Deut. 34. 5.) and Joſhua (Chap. 24. 29.) and David (Pſal. 18. 1.) and other holy men are called the ſervants of the Lord.

called] He expreſſeth here his calling, partly becauſe it was extraordinary; not of man, nor by man, but immediately by Jeſus Chriſt (Gal. 1. 1.) partly to ſhew the Romanes preſently in the beginning that what he wrote to them in this Epiſtle was done according to the duty of his calling, and that he had good warrant and commiſſion for it.

Apoſtle] The word Apoſtle is derived from ἀποστέλλω, and ſignifieth a Legat or Ambaſſadour of Chriſt ſent to declare the Goſpel to all nations, and ſuch an one was Saint Paul, who had a generall Commiſſion to preach both to Jew and Gentile, though ſpecially by the appointment of God with the conſent of both parties the Goſpel of the uncircumciſion was committed to Paul, as the Goſpel of circumciſion to Peter, Gal. 2. 7.

ſeparated] See Acts 13. 2. Or, ſet apart for. From his mothers wombe in Gods appointment (Gal. 1. 15.); but actually ſet apart by the command of the holy Ghoſt to preach the Goſpel among the Gentiles (Act. 13. 2.) In the word ſeparate he ſeemeth to allude to the name of Phariſee, which ſignifieth a man ſeparate; of which Sect he was before his converſion: and hereby he implyeth that he is ſtill a ſeparated man, but to a better purpoſe, namely to the preaching of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

V. 2. promiſed] Or, foreſhewed. Shewed before in the types of the Law, and promiſed before in the words of the Prophets which were ſince the world began.

V. 3. made] See Gal. 4. 4. In regard of his humane nature, which is a true creature aſſumed by the Sonne of God in the unity of his perſon. He uſeth the word made here and Gal. 4. 4. rather than born, to intimate his miraculous incarnation whereby he took fleſh of a pure virgin.

ſeed] That is, of the ſubſtance of the Virgin Mary, who was of Davids poſteritie.

fleſh] That is, his humane nature (Joh. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 16.) fleſh being a part, is by a Synecdoche taken for the whole man.

V. 4. declared] Gr. determined. Not made the Son of God as he was truly made the ſon of man; but declared to be the Son of God. The word in the originall ſignifieth more than a bare declaration, namely, a declaration by a ſolemn ſentence, or definitive judgement, Pſal. 2. 7. I will declare the decree: the Lord hath ſaid unto me, Thou art my Son.

with power] Gr. in power.

ſpirit] That is, according to his Divine nature called Spirit. 1 Tim. 1. 16. Heb. 9. 14.

holineſs] Or ſanctification; that is, holy in himſelf, and maketh us holy by his merit and virtue. Heb. 2. 11.

reſurrection from the dead] Gr. reſurrection of the dead. The Godhead was formerly veiled under the infirmity of the fleſh, but in the reſurrection, and after, it was manifeſted in Chriſt in the glory of divine power, and by effects moſt admirable. 2 Cor. 13. 4.

V. 5. grace and apoſtleſhip] Either he uſeth here a figure, ἓν διὰ δυοῖν, and meaneth the grace and eminent gift of being an Apoſtle: or by grace he meaneth the favour of God, and pardon for his former offence in perſecuting the Church, or ſupernaturall gifts to qualifie him for an Apoſtle, or grace for his own converſion and Apoſtleſhip for the converſion of others.

for obedience to the faith] Or, to the obedience of faith. To bring the Gentiles to the obedience of Chriſt and faith, Act. 26. 16. or to make the Gentiles to ſubmit by faith to receive the Goſpel, whereby Chriſt raigneth over men. Act. 6. 7.

name] That his name might be known and glorified by them; or for him in his name, by his authoritie and commiſſion.

V. 6. called] Outwardly by the Word, and inwardly by the Spirit: for in the next verſe he calleth them the beloved of God; and afterwards Saints.

V. 7. Grace to you, and peace] Either by Grace he underſtands all ſpirituall and ſupernaturall; and by Peace, all temporall bleſſings, agreable to the ſignification of the Hebrew Shalom; which implies happineſs, or proſperous ſucceſs in all things: or by Grace, Gods free-will and favour; and by Peace, the fruit and enjoying of the ſame; which brings peace of conſcience, termed Chriſts peace, Joh. 16. 33. and peace with God, Rom. 5. 1.

V. 8. for you all] Gr. Tec. Or, concerning you all.

whole world] That is, ſpread and made known to the Churches of the world: A figurative expreſſion, yet thus farre it hath ground in the letter; that there was a reſort to Rome from all parts of the world, and every one might relate of it in his own countrey.

V. 9. With my ſpirit] Or, in my ſpirit. That is, from my heart and inward affection; or in my ſpirit, that is, in my ſoul, which is as the ſpirituall temple, wherein God is worſhiped, and ſerved by the faithfull.

that] Or, how.

V. 10. will of God] This he addeth, for that in the publiſhing of the Goſpel, he ſtill followed the order which God preſcribed him by his Spirit.

V. 12. comforted] Or, admoniſhed. as Heb. 12. 5. For the Greek beareth both alike, and though Paul were never ſo excellent, yet he might be inſtructed, or at leaſt admoniſhed by the Church: for the Angels themſelves received more particular knowledge by the Church of the manifold wiſdome of God; Epheſ.3.10. 1 Pet.1.12.

with you] Or, in you.

V. 13. but was] Or, and was.

let hitherto] Sometimes by accidentall difficulties, ſometimes by the expreſs commandement of God, Act.16.7.

fruit among you] Or, in you. Of my miniſtery and calling to be an Apoſtle of Chriſt among the Gentiles to convert them unto him; or at leaſt to confirme them more and more in their faith; or that I might make my miniſtery to fructifie among you Romanes to the advancement of the glory of Chriſt, and ſalvation of his Church.

among] Or, in.

V. 14. I am debter] That is, obliged by my Apoſtolicall charge to ſeek the ſalvation of All, and to communicate the talent unto them, which I received from God to that purpoſe, to the utmoſt of my power, without diſtinction of either nation, or condition of men, 1 Cor. 9. 16,17.

V. 16. aſhamed] I am not fainthearted; I do not ſeek to withdraw my ſelfe or ſhrink back from the publiſhing of the Goſpel, as men are wont to do in things whereof they are aſhamed.

power of God] That is, the only and moſt effectual means to ſave men by faith in Chriſt ſet forth in the ſame; whereas man of his own nature was voyd of ſtrength thereunto, Rom.5. 6. and the law was weak through the fleſh, Rom.8.3. 1 Cor.1.14,24.

Jew firſt] As unto that nation to which it was requiſite the Goſpel ſhould be firſt preached, Act.13.46.

to the Greek] This word Greek is ſometimes ſet in Saint Paul againſt the word Jew, ſo it ſignifies the Gentiles in generall, the greater part whereof and the neereſt and beſt known to the Jews were in thoſe dayes Grecians both by nation and language: ſometimes as it is ſet againſt the word Barbarian, Coloſſ.3.11. and ſo it ſignifieth the civiller and learneder ſort of Greeks; and in this ſenſe Athens was termed ἑλλὰς ἑλλάδος, that is, the Greece of Greece.

V. 17. righteouſneſs of God] Of Chriſt given to us by God, and received by faith; or it is called the righteouſneſs of God, becauſe God ordained his Sonne true God, to fulfill and procure the ſame, imparting it of meer grace to his elect; and receiving it for their abſolution: for this is that everlaſting righteouſneſs which is able to ſubſiſt before Gods judgement, Dan. 9. 24. Or laſtly, becauſe it is the accompliſhment of all his promiſes; for ſo is the righteouſneſs of God ſometimes taken for his faithfulneſs and mercy, Rom.3. 26.

from faith to faith] Or, out of faith to faith.

faith to faith] That is, from one degree to another, ſo that according as faith doth more and more encreaſe and get ſtrength, the more likewiſe it is aſſured of that righteouſneſs: or the revelation of the righteouſneſs is received by a continual act of faith which muſt never ceaſe till it arrive to its accompliſhment, to wit, in the life eternall, Pſal.84. 7.

The juſt ſhall live by faith] Or, the juſt by faith ſhall live. See Hab. 2. 4. Gal.3.11. Heb. 10. 38. Either the juſt ſhall live by his faith; or he that is juſt by faith ſhall live; which well agrees with the Hebrew, Hab. 2. 4. and likewiſe with the principall drift of the Apoſtle. Here he proveth that man obtaineth life and ſalvation by the Goſpel; foraſmuch as the Goſpel offereth unto us the onely cauſe of life; namely the true righteouſneſs, which is that of Chriſt imputed to man by grace, and embraced of him by a lively faith, whereunto the allegation out of Habakuk is pertinent: for the Prophet attributing unto faith the obtaining and poſſeſſing ſpirituall life, doth conſequently attribute unto the ſame the meanes of getting that righteouſneſs which is the onely cauſe of life, Galat. 3. 26.

V. 18. ungodlineſs and unrighteouſneſs] Under ungodlineſs are comprehended all ſinnes repugnant to the firſt Table; under unrighteouſneſs all ſinnes againſt the ſecond Table.

who hold] The Greek word ſignifieth a forcible holding; and we may render it an enſlaving the truth by their perverſeneſs and malice; whereby ſhe is ſo let and hindered that ſhe cannot exerciſe her command over their actions.

the truth] By truth, he meaneth all the light which is left in man ſince the fall; eſpecially thoſe common notions of God, his nature, power and will, imprinted in man by nature; as alſo the knowledge of morall good and evill.

in unrighteouſneſs] That is, unjuſtly ſmothering the truth; or that do contrary to all juſtice and equitie, which requireth that we give unto God that belongeth unto him. And they may be ſaid truely to withhold the truth in unrighteouſneſs, who ſuppreſs it, forcing their own minds as knowing better than they do, like Medea in the Poet, Video meliora proboque, Deteriora ſequor.

V. 19. manifeſt in them] Or, to them. That is, in the inwards of their mind or conſcience; or elſe in them, that is, among them; namely, their wiſe and learned ones, who did leave a number of clear and judicious Eſſayes and Sentences hereof in their writings, although they did contrary to the ſame.

hath ſhewed] Partly by the light of nature in their conſciences, partly by the conſideration of the creature of God, whereby his attributes are evidently notified, and after a ſort taſted and felt, Pſal. 34.8. Pſal.19.2. Pſal.148. 4,5,6. Act.14.17. Act.17.27.

V. 20. ſo that they are] Or, that they may be.

without excuſe] The Apoſtles meaning is not, that God gave them that knowledge to that end and purpoſe to make them unexcuſable: for they might catch even at that for an excuſe: neither doth he intimate that they being led by that divine light of nature might thereby come into favour with God, but that their own reaſon did condemn them of wickedneſs both againſt God and men: Or, he ſo farre revealed the truth unto them that they cannot be excuſed, viz. before the righteous judgement of God, as if they had not known that which either they did, or might have known.

V. 21. as God] As it belonged to the divine Majeſtie, according to that very knowledge they had of him.

vain] By the curioſitie of their conceits, being fallen off to vaine apprehenſions of God, and of his worſhip, which they framed not according to the knowledge they had of God; but ſutable to the diſpoſitions of their perverted minds, in deviſing ſo many ſtrange and different worſhips; and in ſetting up ſo many fabulous and idle deities, whereby the knowledge of God became ſtill more and more obſcured.

imaginations] Or, diſputes, or reaſonings.

darkened] Epheſ. 4. 18.

V. 22. Profeſſing] He ſpeaketh of the Philoſophers and Wiſards among the heathen, who carried a ſemblance of wiſdome in their diſcourſes, and ſeemed to be much better minded than others; but yet did ſtill follow the perverſeneſs and vanitie of others.

V. 23. And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God, &c. Pſal.106. 20. Ezek.8.10.

V. 24. Wherefore] The contempt of Religion is the fountain of all miſchief.

God] For their ſuperſtitions, and the diſhonour they offered to him, he abandoned them, and did not bridle their ſwarving deſires; but let them have their full ſwinge: and moreover by his juſt judgement more and more deprived them of thoſe gifts of nature which they abuſed and ſlighted.

gave them up] As a juſt Judge, leaving them over to Satan who tempted and led them to all iniquitie: as they diſhonoured God by their Idolatrie; ſo God made them ignominious; delivering them up to the unclean ſpirit and their own naturall corruption.

uncleanneſs] Idolatrie being ſpirituall uncleanneſs, is commonly followed with corporall; as you ſhall ſee theſe two ſinnes joyned together, Numb. 25. 1,2. Revel. 17. 1,2,10. As on the contrary, religious Kings, as namely Aſa, reformed both theſe abominations together, 1 Kings 15. taking away both the Idols, and male ſtews.

through the luſts] Or, in the luſts.

between themſelves] Or, in themſelves.

V. 25. more than the Creator] Or, beſides. For though they ſometimes worſhipped the true Creator, yet their idolatrous worſhip of the creature farre exceeded it. Or, more than, in this place is not taken comparatively, but excluſively; as when Chriſt ſaith in the parable, The publican went home rather juſtified, than the phariſee: the meaning is, he went home juſtified, and not the other: ſo the Apoſtles meaning in this place ſeemes to be, They worſhipped the creature, and not the Creator: at the leaſt the major part did ſo, if not all.

V. 26. vile affections] That is, diſhonourable: for as we are exhorted, 1 Theſſ.4. 4,5 to poſſeſſe our veſſels in honour; that is, to keep our bodies from all uncleanneſs: ſo on the contrary, thoſe that give themſelves unto uncleannes, diſhonour both themſelves and their bodies; eſpecially thoſe who are active and paſſive in ſuch filthineſs as the Apoſtle afterwards inſtanceth in.

againſt] Or, beſide.

V. 27. And likewiſe alſo the men, &c.] Gen.19.5. Lev.18.22.

V. 28. to retain] Or, to acknowledge.

a reprobate minde] Or, a minde void of judgement. Into a perverſe and froward minde, whereby it cometh to paſſe that the light of conſcience being once put out, and having almoſt no more remorſe of ſinne, men runne headlong into all kinde of miſchief. The word in the Originall ἀδόκιμος, may be taken either actively or paſſively; actively, for a mind which diſapproveth all good courſes, or doth not prove or try good or bad; nor put difference between that which is vile, and that which is honourable; or paſſively, for a minde diſallowed of God: and ſo in this ſenſe it is a metaphor taken from Goldſmiths trying metals, and making choice of that which is good and precious, and rejecting and reprobating that which is vile.

V. 29. unrighteouſneſs, &c.] The Apoſtle here reckoneth divers kinds of vices; not that every man is ſubject to all theſe, but ſome men to all of them, and all to ſome of them: and therefore that none may ſtand upon his innocencie before God, but that all need, and muſt flie to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt.

envie, murder] In the Originall there is an elegant Paronomaſia, as in the verſ. following; which as it ſheweth the lawfull uſe of rhetoricall figures in Sermons & holy diſcourſes; ſo the very affinitie of the words may give us occaſion to conſider how eaſie it is to fall from one of theſe vices to the other; for he that is ἀσύνετος, that is, underſtandeth not the nature and conditions of covenants, will ſoon be ἀσυνθέτος, that is, a covenant-beaker: and he that is tranſported with envie, hath for the moſt part his feet ſwift to ſhed blood: as Cain firſt was guiltie of φθόνος, that is, envie, and after of φόνος, murder: firſt he envied his brother Abel, and after ſlew him, Gal.5.21.

malignitie] Or, ill conditions. That is, an evill diſpoſition; ſuch a perverſitie of minde and nature as is apt to conſtrue all things to the worſt.

V. 30. haters of God] Or, hated of God. The word in the Original, θεοστυγής, may indifferently be rendred haters of God, or hatefull to God, and hated of him; yet ſeeing the Apoſtle here rehearſeth the moſt hainous and raigning ſinnes among the Gentiles, the former ſignification ſeemeth beſt to fit the text. Pſal.81.15.

deſpightfull] Gr. injurious.

V. 31. without naturall affection] Or, unſociable The Greek word implyeth properly the affection and love which is between parents and children; and the ſinne here taxed by the Apoſtle, did likewiſe reign among the Gentiles, who ſacrificed in ſome places their aged parents, and ſometimes their children unto their Idols; expoſed them to ruine, and deſtroyed them, though not guiltie of any capitall crime. 2 Tim.3.3.

implacable] Or, truce-breakers.

V. 32. have pleaſure in them] Or, conſent with them. Approve and commend them, Pſal.10. 3. Pſal. 49. 18. This is even the higheſt pitch of wickedneſs, not only to do evill, but alſo to take delight in ſeeing it committed by others: ſuch come neare the malignitie of the devil, who takes pleaſure in evill, becauſe evill, and inſtigateth others to the like without any bait of a falſe ſeeming good, or ſenſual pleaſure, which in other ſinnes blindeth men, and allureth them to the commiſſion thereof.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. T*Herefore thou*] Or, Wherefore thou. He convinceth them which would ſeeme to be exempt out of the number of other mens faults, and ſaith, that they are leaſt of all to be excuſed; for if they were well and narrowly ſearched, as God ſurely will ſearch them, they themſelves will be found guilty in thoſe things which they reprehend and puniſh in others: ſo that in condemning others, they pronounce ſentence againſt themſelves.

that judgeſt] That doſt check, correct and puniſh others. Here the Apoſtle taxeth ſuch among the Gentiles, as either were lawgivers and Judges among them; or led a more ſtrict and auſtere life than the reſt, as ſome of the Philoſophers did; whereby they ſeemed to judge and condemn the practice of others, when as yet they were inwardly full of hatred, envie, arrogancy, &c. and committed the ſame ſinnes in ſecret, when they thought they could hide them from the eye of man: all theſe mens ſeeming wiſdome and juſtice ſerves but to condemn them; and therefore though they thought themſelves exempted from the ordinary ſort of men, yet they are in the ſame, or a worſe condition, with them: and if they will be ſaved, muſt have recourſe to the only righteouſneſs of the Goſpel, ſeeing that their own is nothing but a vizard or falſe ſhew.

for wherein thou judgeſt another, &c.] Matth.7.2.

V. 2. we are ſure] Gr. we know.

truth] That is, uprightly and juſtly; not according to the outward appearance, but as things are indeed. God regardeth not the outward ſhew and profeſſion of leading a virtuous and commendable life, but ſtrictly examineth the heart and the thoughts, words and works, proceeding from thence. Joh.7.24. Luk. 16.15.

V. 4. deſpiſeſt thou] Haſt no care at all to employ the ſame to the right and proper uſe, which is to give thee ſpace of repentance, and afford thee many inducements thereunto; but contrarily thou doſt profane them, and draweſt occaſions from them to ſtrengthen thy ſelf in evil, as if thou ſhouldeſt never be puniſhed, becauſe God hath ſo long tolerated thee.

riches] That is, the multiplicity and variety of Gods outward bleſſings. A phraſe uſed by the heathen alſo, as we may ſee in Simplicius his Diſputation de bono & malo. ὁ πλοῦτος τῆς τοῦ παράγοντος ἀγαθότητος. Here the Apoſtle eſpecially argueth againſt thoſe who were of opinion, that their caſe ſtood not ill with God, foraſmuch as God bleſſed them many wayes in this world, and gave them abundance of wealth and honour, as he did to the Romanes above other people, who had the command over all nations.

repentance] Sith the Apoſtle ſpeaketh as yet of men under the law of nature, without the light of the word of God, and the efficacy of the ſpirit of regeneration, amongſt whom there could be no true or ſaving converſion unto God: it ſeemeth that repentance here ſignifieth only an outward forbearing of groſſer ſinnes, and changing their vitious courſes into ſuch as were morally honeſt and commendable. Or it may be meant alſo of true repentance: For the favours of God allure men to their dutie to God; Hoſ.11.4.

V. 5. treaſureſt up] See Jam.5.3. Heapeſt up Gods judgements upon thee in manner of a treaſure, which increaſeth ſtill by daily addition.

wrath] That is, puniſhment, which ſhall be at the laſt day inflicted to the full.

day] and the day of. The laſt day, when God ſhall reveale and judge the ſinnes of all men, even thoſe which are moſt ſecret, 2 Theſſ.1.7,8. Rev.20. 12,13.

revelation] Gr. Tec. the retribution.

V. 6. who will render, &c.] Pſal.62.12. Matth. 16. 27. Revel. 22.12.

V. 7. by patient continuance] Gr. according to patient continuance. That is, perſeverance with an equall and conſtant tenour of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe according to the commandment, Deut. 27.26.

glory] Which followeth good works: which he layeth not out before us, as though there were any that could attain to ſalvation by his own ſtrength; but by laying this condition of ſalvation before us, which no man can performe, to bring men to Chriſt, who alone juſtifieth beleevers, as he himſelfe concludeth, Chap.2. 21, 22. following.

V. 8. contentious] Gr. them of contentiouſneſs. Kicking and ſtriving againſt the righteouſneſs of God, Hoſ.4. 4. chiefly by alledging and objecting their own righteouſneſs, and outward obſerving of diſcipline, which is uſuall with hypocrites.

truth] The light and knowledge of morall good imprinted in their ſoules by nature, Rom.1. 18,19.

indignation, and wrath] Gr. Tec. wrath and indignation.

V. 9. Tribulation] Or, affliction.

doth evil] Gr. worketh out evil.

Jew firſt] Though God inflicteth puniſhment indifferently upon all tranſgreſſors, without diſtinction either of nation or perſon: yet for all that the judgement of God begins at his own houſe; and thoſe that have had more knowledge and do not accordingly, ſhall receive the heavier puniſhment: Amos 3.2. Luk.12.47. Matth.11.22, 1 Pet.4.17.

Gentile] Or, Greek.

V. 10. peace] By peace he meaneth according to the Hebrew ſignification of the word, happineſs, health, and ſalvation, worketh good] Or, doth good.

Gentile] Gr. Greek.

V. 11. there is no reſpect, &c.] Deut. 10. 17. 2 Chron.19.7. Job 34. 19. Act. 10, 34. Gal. 2. 6. Epheſ. 6. 9. Coloſſ. 3. 25. 1 Pet.1.17.

reſpect of perſons] That is, he regardeth not the qualitie or outward condition; he meaſureth not men by their countrey, nation, power, riches, or honour; either to receive them, or to caſt them away. The Greek word ſignifieth as well countenance, as perſon, and the ſenſe comes all to one; for by countenance we are to underſtand the outward appearance of men in the world, or thoſe things by which men are outwardly valued and eſteemed: Acts 10. 34. 1 Sam. 16.7.

V. 12. periſh without law] Be judged and condemned by the teſtimony of their own conſcience.

V. 13. not the hearers, &c.] Matth.7.21. Jam.1.22.

hearers] Not thoſe who only know the law, and boaſt of it, and fulfill it not. For as much then as the law cannot bring ſalvation to man by the knowledge and profeſſion of it, as the Jews do beleeve; and none among them can be found who liveth anſwerable to his knowledge: it followeth that the Jews are comprehended in the ſame malediction with the Gentiles, and have as much need to ſeek to Chriſt for righteouſneſs as they.

juſtified] Shall be pronounced juſt before Gods judgement ſeat, which is true indeed if any ſuch could be found that had fulfilled the law; but ſeeing Abraham himſelf was not juſtified by the law, but by faith; it followeth that no man can be juſtified by works.

V. 24. not the law] That is, the written law; for they have the law of nature imprinted in their ſouls.

things contained in the law] Gr. the things of the law. To wit, to reſtrain the outward man, and ſtirre up in him a deſire of virtue and morall honeſty, and preſcribe and follow ſome things which God commands in his law.

law unto themſelves] In commanding or forbidding that which the law of God commands and forbids.

V. 15. their conſcience alſo bearing witneſs] Or, the conſcience witneſſing with them. Becauſe the conſcience is nothing elſe but the correſpondencie of the ſpirit of man unto the law, to bind or looſe him; to accuſe or excuſe him; to condemne or abſolve him; therefore ſince the Gentiles have a conſcience, they muſt have a law alſo.

their thoughts] Or, their reaſonings. Chap.1.21.

the mean while, &c.] Or, between themſelves.

V. 16. when God] Gr. Tec. in which God.

my goſpell] As my doctrine witneſſeth, which I am appointed to preach. From this text of Saint Paul it ſeemed that the ancients tearmed the writings of Saint Paul by the name of his Goſpel: as namely, Clemens in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians: Take bleſſed Pauls Epiſtle into your hands; mark what he writeth in the beginning of his Goſpel: τί πρῶτον ὑμῖν ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἔγραψε.

V. 17. Behold, thou] Gr. Tec. But if thou. From hence forward ward the Apoſtle deales eſpecially againſt the Jews that boaſted ſtill of their off-ſpring, their knowledge of the law of God, their circumciſion, and other outward advantages whereon they relyed; and proveth that they are no more to be juſtified by theſe before God, then the Gentiles are by the law of nature.

mak'ſt thy boaſt of God] Or, glorieſt in God.

V. 18. approveſt the things that are more excellent] Or, trieſt the things that differ. Or indifferent: that is, thou art able to judge what things are commanded, what things are forbidden, or what is truly good, which thou art to follow, in ſtead of that falſe good which carnall reaſon or ſenſe doth preſent unto thee, Phil. 1. 10.

inſtructed out of the law] Gr. catechiſed out of. Luk 1. 4. Gal. 6. 6. Word for word according to the Greek; catechiſed from a child; carefully taught and tutored.

V. 19. guide of the blinde] Wiſe men onely in Scripture are termed Seers, פקח (Exod. 23. 8. The gift blindeth the wiſe, (Hebrew) the Seers) all fooles are blinde.

V. 20. babes] Thoſe that have little or no knowledge, like children, Matth. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 13. 11. In this ſenſe the word is alſo taken by the heathen, as in that proverbiall ſpeech delivered by Heſiod. παθὼν δέ τε νήπιος ἔγνω.

forme of knowledge] The way to teach and informe others in the knowledge of the truth; for the word in the originall is not μορφὴ but μόρφωσις, which ſignifieth a pattern to work by; or a perfect frame; not onely of what belongeth unto the true ſervice of God in it ſelf, but likewiſe of all that which we comprehend and judge of it in our ſelves; it may be rendered a ſet manner or modell of knowledge.

V. 21. doſt thou ſteal] That is, by ſubtile and ſiniſter wayes and practiſes draw the goods of others unto thy ſelf; which the Jews were ever much taxed withall, and ſtill are at this day.

V. 22. commit ſacriledge] Some here make a queſtion, why the Apoſtle changeth the word, and ſaith not as before; Thou which ſaiſt a man ſhall not ſteal, doſt thou ſteal? Thou which ſaiſt a man ſhall not commit adultery, doſt thou commit adultery? So here, thou which abhorreſt idols, doſt thou commit idolatry? he ſaith not ſo, but, Doſt thou commit ſacriledge? varying the crime: Hereunto a double anſwer may be given; firſt, that the Apoſtle uſeth an aggravation, as if he ſhould ſay, Thou which abhorreſt idols, doſt thou commit a worſe ſin, to wit, ſacriledge? Secondly, it may be anſwered, That idolatry is ſpirituall ſacriledge, becauſe it robbeth God of his honour; for if by the imperiall law in the Code, titulo de crimine ſacrilegii, it is defined ſacriledge, Imperatori eripere quod ejus eſt, to take away from the Emperour any thing that is his; it ought to be much more accounted ſacriledge to take away from God that which is his.

V. 23. breaking] Gr. tranſgreſſing.

among the Gentiles] Or, in the Gentiles.

through you] For you ſake, by your ſins and the ſins of your forefathers.

as it is written] Iſa. 52. 5. Ezek. 36. 20, 23.

V. 25. keep the law] Gr. do the law.

breaker] Gr. tranſgreſſer.

V. 26. righteouſneſſe of the law] Gr. righteous ordinances of the law.

counted for circumciſion] Shal not the uncircumciſed be in as good ſtate as if he were circumciſed? Not that the Apoſtle doth abſolutely reject circumciſion before it was aboliſhed, but he here dealeth with the Jews that followed the doctrine of the Phariſees, and placed their righteouſneſſe in keeping the outward and ceremonial worſhip of God; otherwiſe circumciſion was a ſigne and ſeal of the juſtification by faith, Rom. 4. 11. and was fulfilled, and conſequently aboliſhed by Chriſt, together with other ceremonies and ſhadows.

V. 27. fulfill the law] He ſpeaketh not as if there were any that had fulfilled in all reſpects, for that is expreſſely denyed, Rom. 3. 9 but this he ſaith to convince the Jews, that they muſt as well as the Gentiles ſeeke for righteouſneſſe out of themſelves, in Chriſt, who alone hath fulfilled the law.

V. 28. outwardly] Gr. openly.

outward in the fleſh] Gr. openly in the fleſh.

V. 29. inwardly] Gr. in ſecret.

not the letter] In any outward ſigne or ceremony, which are like unto ſome writing or picture, without any power, life, or motion, Rom. 7. 6. 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7.

not of men, but of God] That is, hath not its originall from the abilities or works of men, but from God, who wrought the ſame in them by his Spirit, Rom. 9. 16. 1 Cor. 3. 7. 2 Cor. 4. 6. or which hath the approbation, not of man, but of God, 2 Cor. 10. 18.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. A*Dvantage*] Since both Jew and Gentile lie both under the ſame malediction, and the Jew in regard of his greater knowledge and outward profeſſion of obſerving the law, if he fail in the practiſe thereof, (as he proved in the former Chapter, the beſt of them do) is like to receive more and ſmarter ſtripes, what benefit or preferment hath the Jew above the Gentile?

profit] If ſo be that there is no vertue in it, for want of the perfect obſervation of the law, whereof Circumciſion was but a holy ſigne.

V. 2. chiefly] Or, firſt.

chiefly] Foraſmuch as the Jews have received of old the promiſes of God in Chriſt, whereof the Circumciſion was a Seal, according to the true order of God, Rom. 1. 11. They had the firſt offer: and this is the chiefeſt and foundation of all other advantages, which the Apoſtle doth ſet forth more at large, Chap. 9. 4. Epheſ. 1. 11, 12.

Oracles of God] The inſtruments, deeds, and evidences of the covenant, contained in the writings of Moſes and the Prophets, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. Acts 7. 38. The oracles of God were committed to the Jews, that is, intruſted as a pawn or precious pledge, which they have kept and preſerved for the whole Church; and in this regard St. Auguſtine and others of the Fathers terme the Jews Scriniarios Chriſtianorum, the Regiſters or Record-keepers of the Chriſtians; for they, diſperſed among all nations, bear as it were before them the Scriptures, thoſe glaſſes whereby we Chriſtians clearly ſee the right way to heaven, and their manifold errours and wanderings.

V. 3. faith of God, &c.] That is, if any do ſay that this advantage was loſt by the unbelief of a great part of the people; the anſwer is, That the faithfulneſſe of God and his promiſes and covenants were ſtill verified and performed in his elect, in whoſe behalf they were made, notwithſtanding their manifold defects, which God alwayes ſupplyeth by his grace and mercy, and thereby his glory was the more illuſtrated.

V. 4. God forbid] Gr. be it not, or, farre be it from us ſo to think or ſay.

yea, let] Or, but let.

let God be true] That is, be confeſſed and acknowledged true in maintaining of his covenant, and fulfilling his promiſe, notwithſtanding the unbelief of ſome, and the unworthineſſe of all.

every man a lyar] Pſal. 116. 11.

That thou mighteſt be juſtified in thy ſayings] Pſal. 51. 4.

juſtified] Acknowledged to be righteous and faithfull.

overcome] That is, found ſo clear, and without blemiſh in thy judgements, that all mouthes ſhall be ſtopped, Pſal. 107. 42. David breakes out into this confeſſion upon the conſideration of his ſinne againſt God, and the promiſe of forgiveneſſe which Nathan had declared unto him.

judged] Or, judgeſt. The Greek bears it either way, but the Hebrew Text requires the active rather, which alſo doth better agree with the ſcope of Paul; which is to ſhew, that God remaineth pure and righteous ſtill in judging, that is, in puniſhing the ſinnes of men in the children of diſobedience, according to their deſerts, as alſo in pardoning according to his promiſe; which is likewiſe an act of Gods juſtice, though it be done in mercy, Matth. 12. 20. and the truth of God in keeping his promiſes, is alſo expreſly called juſtice and righteouſneſſe, in Scriptures. Pſal. 143. 10. 1 Joh. 1. 9.

V. 5. taketh vengeance] Gr. who inferreth or inflicteth anger.

ſpeak as a man] I ſpeak not theſe words in mine own perſon, as though I thought ſo; but this is the talk of mans wiſdom, which is not ſubject to the will of God.

V. 6. God forbid] See Verſ. 4.

How ſhall God] How is it poſſible that there ſhould be iniquity in God, the Soveraign Judge of all the world; whoſe will is the abſolute rule of Juſtice?

V. 7. through my lye] Or, in my lye.

V. 8. not rather] The Apoſtle anſwereth to the former objection by way of diſdain: as if he ſhould ſay, Why, if this objection were of any force, might not as well the profane wretch break out into this extremity of impudence, why then let him lay up as much matter of glory as may be by the boundleſſe multitude of all manner of wickedneſſe? But there is not that deſperate ſoul in the world that dares go thus farre; for the conſcience of the moſt wicked, dictateth unto them, that they ſhall be judged according to the manifeſt and publique law of God, as the rule and ſquare of all their actions, and not according to his ſecret providence, which ordaineth the permiſſion of ſin it ſelf for certain ends, but much different from thoſe of men.

damnation is juſt] By theſe words the Apoſtle ſheweth, that he is ſo farre from approving of ſuch conſequences as were made by profane ſlanderers of the truth of God, mentioned verſ. 7, 8. that he threateneth them with the judgement of God, that make them.

V. 9. No in no wiſe] Gr. not altogether.

proved] Gr. charged.

under ſinne] Guiltie of ſinne, under the power and penalty of ſinne.

V. 10. written] By all theſe places the Apoſtle proveth, that not onely the Gentiles, but the Jews alſo are unrighteous in themſelves before God; moſt of them ſpeak of the unregenerate among the people of the Jews, among whom there was alwayes a very great number; and therefore theſe reproofs of the prophets were ſtill in force, and the Apoſtle makes uſe of them; to ſhew, that without the grace of God, and the ſpeciall working of the Spirit, all are lyable to them.

There is none righteous, no not one] Pſal. 14. 1, 2, 3.

V. 11. there is none that ſeeketh after God] Pſal. 53. 2.

ſeeketh after God] Or, ſeeketh out God.

V. 12. become unprofitable] Unfit to do any good, like rotten and unſavory things that are caſt out of dores. The Prophet takes his ſimilitude from corrupted wines, or meats putrified and unſavory, good for nothing.

good] Gr. goodneſſe.

V. 13. Their throat is an open ſepulchre, &c.] Pſal.5.9.

the poiſon of aſps is under their lips] Pſal.140 3.

V. 14. Whoſe mouth is full of curſing and bitterneſſe] Pſal.10.7.

V. 15. Their feet are ſwift to ſhed blood] Prov.1.16. Iſa.59.7,8.

V. 16. Deſtruction] Or, contrition, according to the Greek; that is, breaking all to pieces; the word deſtruction is not here taken paſſively, but actively, for that deſtruction they bring upon others.

V. 17. way of peace] To live quietly themſelves, and to let others live quietly by them; they know not how to lead an innocent and peaceable life.

V. 18. There is no fear of God before their eyes] Pſal.36.1.

fear of God] The fear of God is the ground and fountain of all other vertues, with the want whereof the Apoſtle concludeth, not as if the vices above mentioned did alwayes break out with like force in all naturall men, but becauſe the corrupt fountain of all theſe is within them, and that ſome of them are ever ro be diſcerned in their life and converſation. See Gen.20.11. Mal.3.5.

V. 19. under the law] Under the ſpeciall juriſdiction of it, or under that outward covenant, whereof the law was as it were the contract or condition to be performed on their parts. Theſe words are uſed by the Apoſtle, to ſhew, that he chargeth theſe points home upon the Jews; and them eſpecially, becauſe God ſpeaketh to them directly and immediately in his word by the prophets.

mouth may be ſtopped] That is, ſilenced. Theſe things I propound after this manner, that not only the Gentiles, but the Jews alſo, a nation ſo much priviledged by God above others, might humble themſelves in the confeſſion of their ſinnes, and in the acknowledgement, that all the good that is in them dependeth on the ſole mercy of God.

guilty before God] Or, ſubiect to the judgement of God.

V. 20. Therefore by the deeds] Becauſe man is utterly diſabled by ſinne to fulfill the law, either naturall or written, it can neither be a ground of hope, nor argument unto him, either of righteouſneſſe or of life: all the efficacie which it hath, is to diſcover unto him his iniquity, and without Gods mercy in Chriſt, to ſeal up his condemnation, Gal.2.16.

no fleſh] Fleſh is here taken for man, as in many other places; and furthermore hath her greater emphaſis; for it is, put to ſhew the contrariety betwixt God and man; as if you would ſay, Man who is nothing but a piece of fleſh, defiled with ſin, and God who is a pure Spirit, and moſt perfect in himſelf.

juſtified] That is, abſolved before the judgement ſeat of God, and acquitted from ſinne and damnation, and ſo to be accounted righteous; ſo the word is taken, Job.9.20. Rom.8.33,34. Gal.2.16,17. It cannot be here taken for making juſt, by infuſing righteouſneſſe or holineſſe; for there would be then no ſenſe nor truth in the words, if we thus interpret them, no fleſh can have righteouſneſſe infuſed into it before God.

in his ſight] Here is a ſecret ſetting of the righteouſneſs which is before men, be they never ſo juſt, againſt the righteouſneſs which can ſtand before God: now there is no righteouſneſs can ſtand before God, but the righteouſneſs of Chriſt onely.

V. 21. But now] After the coming of Chriſt, God hath clearly revealed the true righteonſneſs, which he hath appointed and given unto man for his juſtification, according to the doctrine of all the prophets, viz. that of Chriſt, imputed to all that receive it by a lively faith, without any conſideration of the works of the law (in the point of juſtification) either naturall or written, and without any difference of nations, be they Jews or Gentiles.

V. 22. faith of Jeſus Chriſt] Gr. Tec. in Jeſus Chriſt. Which we yeeld to Jeſus Chriſt, or which faith reſteth upon him.

difference] Gr. diſtinction.

V. 23. all have ſinned] The remedy is common to all indifferently, becauſe on the other ſide the malady of ſinne is common unto all.

come ſhort] The Greek word ſignifieth properly to remain behind, or to come too ſhort of getting ſomething, as the prize in running of races; ſo likewiſe do all men come ſhort, that ſeek to obtain everlaſting life by their works.

glory of God] By the glory of God is meant that mark which we all ſhoot at, that is, everlaſting life; which ſtandeth in this, that we are made partakers of the glory of God. Or, by the glory of God, is meant his image after which we were created, for ſo the word glory ſeemeth to be taken, 1 Cor.11.7.

V. 24. juſtified] From thenceforward the Apoſtle deſcribeth all the cauſes, and the proprieties of juſtification revealed unto us in the Goſpel; the firſt and ſupreme cauſe is the undeſerved grace and favour of God; the moving and meritorious cauſe is redemption and reconciliation purchaſed by Chriſt; the inſtrumentall cauſe whereby the ſame is imputed, is faith in the blood of Chriſt; the finall is the glory of God in the declaration of his righteouſneſs and faithfulneſs; the property is, that all humane boaſting is excluded by it.

freely] Of his free gift and meer liberality.

through] Or, by.

redemption] The word is ſometime taken in a larger ſenſe for all manner of deliverance, but here it doth properly imply ſuch a deliverance as is brought to paſſe by purchaſing or paying of a ranſome, according as Chriſt himſelf ſpeaketh, Matth. 20.28. 1 Cor.7.23. 1 Pet.1.18.

V. 25. ſet forth] Or, fore-ordained. Firſt, in the eternall counſell, and after in the execution of the ſame in the fulneſs of time; and laſtly, by preaching of the goſpel, 2 Tim. 1.9,10,11. 1 Pet.1.20,21,22.

propitiation] Or, propitiatory, placatory or mercy ſeat: for the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to the mercy-ſeat or propitiatory made of pure gold, which covered the ark of the covenant, in which the tables of the law lay, which is called ἱλαστήριον, (the word here uſed) Heb. 9.5. and it was a type of Chriſt, who by his puritie and obedience covereth our tranſgreſſions of the law, from the ſight of God, and reconcileth us to him.

in his blood] The name of blood calleth us back to the figure of the old ſacrifices, the truth and ſubſtance whereof is in Chriſt.

for] Or, by.

remiſſion] Or, paſſing over.

that are paſt] Of thoſe ſinnes that were committed when we were his enemies.

through the forbearance] Gr. in the forbearance. Through his patient & ſuffering nature; or, word for word according to the Greek, in the forbearance or the time of his patience; that is, when God did ſhew forth his goodneſs in ſuſpending his judgements upon the world, not ſuffering them to periſh for their ſinnes, although he had not as yet fully opened the treaſure of his grace for an abſolute pardon, the clear manifeſtation whereof he reſerved for the time of the Goſpel, Rom.16.24,26.

V. 26. at this time] Or, in this preſent ſeaſon.

that he might be juſt] That all might learn to acknowledge and approve this new way of proceeding of the juſtice of God in juſtifying him that is a ſinner in himſelf, by faith in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. Or, the word juſt is here taken for true and faithfull, or, him who obſerveth ſtrict juſtice, who would not juſtifie man by any means, but by full payment and ſatisfaction.

which believeth in Jeſus] Gr. which is of the faith of Jeſus. In the Greek, word for word, juſtifying him who is of the faith of Jeſus; that is, who is of that number who renounce all confidence in their own works, and ſeek life and ſalvation by faith in Jeſus.

V. 27. boaſting] Who is he that can or dare boaſt of juſtification before God by his own righteouſneſs? 1 Cor.1.31. Eph.2.9.

law of faith] That is, the precept or doctrine of faith, which, according to the Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, is called a law, Eſa.2.5. Or by that new order or covenant of God which doth ſtrip man of all worth and righteouſneſs of his own, and cloath him by grace with that of Chriſt.

V. 28. conclude] Gr. collect; or, gather by argument.

deeds of the law] Or, works of the law. Not onely ſuch as were done before his converſion, but after the ſame alſo, as is proved by the Apoſtle in the next Chapter, by the example of Abraham and David.

V. 29. God of the Jews onely] God is ſaid to be their God in the Scripture phraſe, who are in covenant with him; whom he dearly loveth and tendereth.

V. 30. which] Or, who.

circumciſion] That is rhe circumciſed Jews: as likewiſe by uncircumciſion he meaneth the uncircumciſed Gentiles.

by faith] Or, of faith.

by faith] According to the originall: Of faith, or, out of faith. The Apoſtle ſeems to diſtinguiſh of theſe two kindes of expreſſions, Of faith, and, Through faith; attributing the former to the Jews, the latter to the Gentiles; the former to the Jews, in whom, though they were adorned with many good qualities and graces above the Gentiles, yet God had onely regard to their faith, and out of that conſideration received them to mercy; the latter, to the Gentiles, who through faith paſſed as it were into a new ſpirituall eſtate.

V. 31. void] Do we utterly caſſate the law, and make it of no force or validity?

we ſtabliſh the law] Gr. Tec. we make it valid and ſufficient. In the edition of Tecla it is ἱκανοῦμεν, that is, we make the law ſufficient and effectuall to that end for which it was given: but if we read ἱστῶμεν, that is, we confirme and eſtabliſh the law; then the meaning is, we demonſtrate by the goſpel how firme and irrevocable it is, ſeeing God made Chriſt under the law, to make ſatisfaction to the law to redeem man; & by his fulfilling the law, to purchaſe to him a right to the life it promiſeth; Matth.5.17,18. Gal.4.4. Moreover, God doth ſo renew thoſe that are juſtified by him, through the Spirit, that they endeavour to regulate their life according to all Gods commandments, Rom.8.1,2,3. Not that thereby they may be juſtified before God, but partly to performe their duty, and to teſtifie their thankfulneſs unto him for this his ineſtimable benefit, and partly to be themſelves more and more aſſured of their juſtification in ſuch ſort as the Apoſtle after declareth, Chap.6,7,8.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſ. 1. W*Hat ſhall we ſay then*] That is, Seeing then that al men are under condemnation and cannot be juſtified, but by faith without works, Rom.3.28. it followeth that Abraham himſelf, the father and chief of all thoſe that enter into the covenant of grace, was not juſtified in any other manner. For although he did ſo much excell his progenie, yet he did not obtain life and glory by his own works, and that therefore his children cannot claime more advantage than he.

as pertaining to the fleſh] Theſe words may be either referred to father, or to found: if to father, the meaning is, what did Abraham the father of us Jews according to the fleſh finde? if they be referred to the later word, found, the meaning is, what found he according to the fleſh, that is, according to his works that are ſeen outwardly, as the verſe following doth declare, and the word fleſh is alſo ſo taken, Phil.3. 4.

found] Got, or obtained, as the word is taken, Hoſea 12.8. and Matth. 11.29.

V. 2. if Abraham] The reaſon ſtands thus, if Abrabam had obtained any thing by way of juſtification by his own works, he ſhould have had ſomewhat whereof to glory before God: but he hath nothing, for the juſtification by faith which he obtained, verſ.7. doth ſtrip men of all ſelf-glory, Rom.3.27.

V.3. Abraham beleeved God] See Gen.15.6. Gal.3.6. Jam.2.23. that is, the promiſe of God to be his ſhield, and great reward, and to give him an heir of his own body, Gen.15. 4,5. and to multiplie his ſeed, whereby not onely his numerous poſteritie is to be underſtood according to the fleſh, but chiefly Chriſt his Sonne, in whom all generations of the earth were to be bleſſed: ſee hereafter, Verſ.11,12, 13. Gal.3.16.

V. 4. Now] Or, but.

to him that worketh] In opinion or hope to obtain or merit juſtification by his work: or to him that worketh, that is, goeth about this way of works, and grounds himſelf thereon, and expects thereby the reward of life promiſed in the Law.

not reckoned of grace] Or, according to favour. In caſe he ſhould have fulfilled the condition propounded of perfect obedience.

but of debt] Not indeed of an abſolute merit, & as a naturall equivalence, which can never be between God and man, nor betwixt the work and the reward: becauſe there is no proportion at all, neither in the perſons, nor in the actions: but onely by virtue of that voluntary covenant of God, Do this and thou ſhalt live.

V. 5. worketh not] That is, who not able to fulfill the condition of works, nor grounding himſelf thereon, taketh the other way to be ſaved, viz. that of faith in the mercy of God towards ſinners, whereby righteouſneſs is beſtowed upon him, and he clothed therewith, and by virtue of the ſame abſolved from ſinne and condemnation.

juſtifieth the ungodly] That maketh him who is wicked in himſelf, juſt in Chriſt.

his faith] Not conſidered in it ſelf as a work, but in its relation to Chriſt, and as an act of receiving him, and lively applying him to himſelf, according as eating nouriſheth, that is, the meat eaten, Eſa. 55.1. Rom.5.18,19. 1 Cor.1.3.

for] Or, to.

V. 7. Saying, Bleſſed] See Pſal.32.1. In the beginning of the 32. Pſalm: the argument which the Apoſtle draws from thence is undeniable. For, he that is juſtified by his works, the ſame hath no need at all of any pardon of ſinne to make him thereby bleſſed; and he who prayeth that God would not impute his ſinne unto him, the ſame prayeth withall, that God would impute unto him the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, in regard theſe two cannot be ſeparated in the judgement of God. See Rom.3.24. and 5.19. Eph.1.7.

V.9. Cometh this bleſſedneſs] This pronouncing or making bleſſed. Wherby it appears that the word, to pronounce bleſſed, and to make bleſſed, is taken by David for one and the ſame thing, and the reaſon is, that the ground and foundation of our bleſſedneſs lyeth in the forgiveneſs of our ſinnes, and the imputation of Chirſts righteouſneſs.

ſign of circumciſion] Gr. Tec. he received circumciſion, the ſeale. That is, circumciſion which is a ſign, as we ſay, the Sacrament of Baptiſme, for, Baptiſme which is a Sacrament.

a ſeal] Circumciſion was called before a ſign in reſpect of the outward ceremony, now S. Paul ſheweth the force and ſubſtance of that ſign, that is, to what end it is uſed; that is, not onely to ſignifie, but alſo to ſeal the righteouſneſs of faith: whereby we come to poſſeſs Chriſt himſelf: for the holy Ghoſt worketh that inwardly and indeed, which the Sacrament, being joyned with the word, doth outwardly repreſent.

might be the father] God was pleaſed ſo to diſpoſe both of the ſign and the time with Abraham, to ſhew that the Gentiles as well as the Jews are to be reputed true children of Abraham, and compriſed in the covenant made with him and his poſterity, ſo they followed his faith; whether they were circumciſed, as during the time of the ceremonial law they were to be according to Gods order, or not circumciſed, to wit, after that God in ſtead of that had inſtituted another Sacrament, to wit, Baptiſme.

V. 13. heire of the world] That all the nations of the world ſhould be his children. Or, by the world, may be underſtood, the land of Canaan; a moſt renowned and fruitfull part of the world. Or, the words may carry this ſenſe, that he ſhould be reſtored as a ſon of God into the ſame condition and degree which Adam had before his fall, to be Lord over all the creatures, which was figured out to Abraham by the poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan, promiſed to him and his poſterity, and is performed in part by the juſt and comfortable enjoying of the creature, which God doth give unto his children as members of Chriſt, but it ſhall be perfectly accompliſhed in the kingdome of heaven. See the 1 Cor.3.22,23. 1 Tim.4.3. Heb.1.2.

through the law] For works that he had done. Or, upon the condition that he ſhould fulfill the law.

V. 14. of the law] If they be heirs, which fulfill the law.

V. 15. Becauſe the law] It is cleare that theſe two means of getting righteouſneſs cannot conſiſt together; the law being altogether rigorous and requiring perfect obedience, or denouncing death and damnation to the tranſgreſſours: the promiſe on the other ſide is of grace and reconciliation, and acceptation of the will for the deed.

worketh wrath] Or, worketh out. That is, manifeſteth the wrath of God againſt the tranſgreſſion thereof, and bindeth over the ſinner thereunto, and aggravateth ſinnes through the perverſeneſs of mans nature, Rom.7.8.

for where no law is, there is no tranſgreſſion] Gr. Tec. but if there be no law. as Chap.5.13. 1 Joh.3. 4.

V. 16. Therefore it is of faith] Since the firſt way of obtaining life by the law which God hath propoſed unto man, was by ſinne not onely made unprofitable, but hurtfull and pernicious, there muſt of neceſſity recourſe be had unto the other, which is by faith; faith being the only virtue that can in this caſe ſtand with the free grace of God, in as much as faith doth not work by procuring and meriting, but meerely by receiving what is given and beſtowed upon, Joh.1.12.

be ſure] Or, firme. That is, grounded upon God and his immutable good pleaſure, and on the perfect and everlaſting righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and not upon the variable and inconſtant obedience of man, Ezek.16.61. Rom.9.11. and 11.19.

all the ſeed] Or, the whole ſeed.

V. 17. I have made thee a father] See Gen.17.6. Not of thoſe only that ſhould iſſue from him according to the fleſh, but alſo of thoſe among all nations that by faith ſhould be adopted and received into his ſpiritual family.

before him] Or, like unto him. That is, God, that is, by a ſpiritual kindred, which hath place before God, and maketh us acceptable to him, or according to a ſpiritual and divine fatherhood gained by faith, according to which God is able to make a child of Abraham when he pleaſeth, Matth.3.9. even as of nothing he hath created all things and raiſeth the dead: and after this fatherhood, he judgeth which are the true children of Abraham, that he approveth, wheras according to mans judgement none but the Jews could be counted ſuch. If we read like unto him, then the meaning may be this, that as God is a Father, not only in regard of thoſe which are already, but even of all ſuch whom he ſhall create anew by his omnipotent word; ſo Abraham in ſome conformity thereunto hath been the adopting father of the Gentiles, though as yet deſtitute of all ſpirituall life and faculties, requiſite for the being of ſuch his children, Epheſ. 2. 12. Laſtly, if we reade the words (with ſome) before that he beleeved, which the Greeke will hardly brooke, then the meaning is, before the time that he beleeved, God made him, that is, deſigned him to be the father of many nations: and this the Apoſtle addeth, that Gods promiſe dependeth not upon Abrahams belief; as likewiſe, Rom.9. he proveth that the election of God depended not upon foreſeen works, becauſe before the children were born or had done good or evil, it was ſaid, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger.

calleth thoſe things] Maketh them to be by his word, and as it were calleth them to come forth and appear for that end to which he hath ordained them, as he did in the creation of all things, ſaying, Let there be light, &c. and in the miraculous raiſing from the dead; Damſell I ſay unto thee, ariſe; and, Lazarus come forth, &c.

V. 18. againſt hope] Or, beſides. Beſides or above all cauſes, arguments and appearances of naturall hope, ſuch as carnall reaſon and underſtanding could afford.

in hope] Grounded upon the truth and power of God.

So ſhall thy ſeed be] See Gen.15.5.

V.19. he conſidered not] Not as thereby to be weakened in his confidence, for otherwayes he had indeed objected his and Sarahs age. Gen.17.17. but howſoever he reſted not upon the order of nature, according to which all hope of iſſue was taken from him; for true faith doth overcome all apprehenſions of mans own diſabilitie, by a lively perſwaſion of the truth of Gods promiſes.

now dead] Voyd of ſtrength and unmeet to get children; howſoever God afterward renewed ſtrength and vigour in that kinde, Pſal.103.5. See Gen.25. 2,3.

V.20. ſtaggered not] Or, doubted not of.

giving glory] Acknowledged and praiſed God as moſt gracious and true, and of infinite power to overcome all naturall difficulties, and performe what he had promiſed, though never ſo contrary to the courſe of nature.

V. 21. what he had promiſed] Or, what was promiſed.

V. 22. for] Or, to.

V. 24. if we beleeve] Or, beleeving.

V. 25. our offences] Gr. fallings, or faults. To pay the ranſome for our ſins.

our juſtification] God having declared by raiſing him from the dead, that he hath accepted of the death of his Son, as of a ſufficient ranſome for our ſinnes: for if Chriſt had remained ſtill under the power of death, his ſatisfaction could not have been perfect, neither could he have applyed the virtue thereof to us. We may alſo conceive Chriſts reſurrection to be our juſtification after this manner. Chriſt was our true pledge, he therefore after he had ſatisfied for us by his death, returning unto life, gives us a cleare evidence, and affords us a ſure argument that God was fully reconciled and life purchaſed for us. Which aſſurance we could not have had, if Chriſt our pledge had ſtill remained under the power of death, foraſmuch as his continuance in his payment would ever have argued the imperfection of it. See 1 Cor. 15. 17.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. Therefore being] Another argument taken from the effect. We are juſtified by that which truly appeaſeth our conſcience before God, but faith in Chriſt doth appeaſe our conſcience and not the Law, as was before proved, therefore by faith we are juſtified and not by the Law.

peace with God] That is, reconciliation to him, whereby our conſciences are quieted, out of a true ſenſe & apprehenſion of his favour.

V. 2. By whom alſo we have acceſs] See Epheſ. 2. 18.

by faith] Gr. Tec. in faith. Whereas quietnes of conſcience is attributed to faith, it is to be referred to Chriſt originally, who is the giver of faith it ſelf, and in whom faith it ſelf is effectuall, grounding it ſelf upon him.

grace] Gr. Tec. this joy.

wherein we ſtand] By which grace, that is, by which gracious love and good will: or that ſtate whereunto we are graciouſly taken.

rejoyce] Gr. glory.

hope of the glory] Here he preventeth an objection which might be made againſt him, by thoſe who beholding the daily miſeries and calamities of the Church, might thinke that the Chriſtians dreame when they glory of their felicitie: to whom the Apoſtle anſwereth, that their felicitie is laid up under hope in another place, which hope is ſo certaine and ſure, that they do no leſſe rejoyce for that happineſs, than if they did preſently enjoy it.

V. 3. tribulations] Or, afflictions.

knowing] See Jam. 1. 3.

tribulation] Or, affliction.

worketh patience] Gr. worketh out. Tribulation accuſtometh us to patience, and patience aſſureth us by experience of the goodnes of God, and this experience confirmeth and faſtneth our hope which never deceiveth us. When the Apoſtle ſaith, tribulation worketh patience, we are not ſo to underſtand him, that of it ſelf and its own nature it doth ſo, for it produceth a contrary effect in the wicked, but it doth ſo as it is ſanctified to us by the Spirit, out of the conſideration of Gods will, and our conformitie thereby to Chriſt. Rom. 8. 29.

V. 4. experience] Gr. proof or triall. In Greek δοκιμὴν, proof or triall, either of Gods favour to us, and the comforts of his ſpirit, or of our faith, which being much more precious than gold that is tried by the fire, is thereby found unto praiſe and honour, 1 Petr. 1. 7.

experience] Gr. proofe or tryall.

V. 5. The love of God] Not whereby we love him, but wherewith he loveth us. And this affords great comforts in adverſitie, that our peace, or quietneſs of conſcience be not troubled; for he that ſo loved them that were of no worth, and while they were yet in their ſinnes, that he died for them, how can he neglect them being now ſanctified and living in him?

ſhed abroad] Or, hath been ſhed. The ſenſe and feeling thereof is ſhed abroad in our hearts, for we have a ſenſible feeling that we are beloved of God, and we taſte and ſee how good and gracious the Lord is, Pſal. 34. 8.

V. 6. in due time] Or, according to the time, or ſeaſon. To wit, when the fulneſs of time came, Gal. 4. 4. which was the fitteſt and moſt convenient time, and therefore is termed here καιρὸς, and 2 Cor. 6. 2. the accepted time.

V. 7. yet peradventure for a good man] Some will have theſe words to be read with an interrogative point, and render them thus; ſcarce will one die for a righteous man, for even for a good man will any man eaſily undertake to die? but if the words be to be read without an interrogative point, then the Apoſtles meaning is, that though it may be ſome may be found ſo couragious and kind as to undertake ſuch a taske, as to die for another, be he never ſo good a man, yet it is a thing very rare, and that ſeldome happeneth.

V. 8. yet ſinners] In the ſtate of ſinne, or, while ſinne reigned in us, and we were wholly under the power of ſinne. For otherwayes we are ſtill ſinners. For if we ſay, that we have no ſinne, we deceive our ſelves, and there is no truth in us, 1 Joh. 1. 8. Yet we are not in the Apoſtles ſenſe in this place ſinners, or ſo reputed, becauſe our ſinnes are forgiven us, and ſinne hath not now dominion over us; becauſe we are not under the law, but under grace, Rom. 6. 14. 1 Joh. 3. 8, 9.

V. 9. from wrath through him] Some tranſlate the words, from that wrath; and the originall will beare it, for it is ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς, If we like of that tranſlation, the meaning is, à futura ira, from wrath to come, Matth. 3. 7. But if there be not an emphaſis in the article τῆς, then wrath is to be taken more generally; for the puniſhments of ſinne as well in this life, as in the life to come; which are the effects of Gods wrath.

V. 11. joy in God] Gr. glorying in God.

through] Or, by.

atonement] Or, reconciliation.

V. 12. Wherefore as] Here is the generall concluſion of the precedent diſcourſe, concerning juſtification by faith; wherein the Apoſtle, briefly reſuming what he had ſaid, doth withall lay down the ground of it; which is, that God of his good pleaſure hath appointed Chriſt to be the head of grace, and the fountain of juſtice and life to all his elect; by the imputation of whoſe righteouſneſs they are reſtored to the favour of God, and conſequently ſanctified and glorified; in like manner as Adam was made the head and root by nature of all mankinde; whence by his ſinne imputed to all his poſteritie, they became all under the curſe of God; were deprived of originall righteouſneſs, corrupted through their whole nature, and ſubject to death eternall.

by one man] Viz. Adam and Eve comprehended together in one; as they two were one fleſh, and the common ſtock of all mankinde, Epheſ. 5. 31. 1 Tim. 2. 14.

ſinne] By ſinne, is meant that diſeaſe which is ours by inheritance, and men commonly call originall ſinne, for ſo he uſeth to call that ſinne in the ſingular number; whereas when he ſpeaketh of the fruits thereof, he uſeth the plurall number, calling them ſinnes.

paſſed upon all men] Or, paſſed over to all.

for that] Or, in whom.

for that all have ſinned] Gr. had ſinned. Or, in whom, for the præpoſition ἐπὶ is taken for in, in divers other places, as Mark 2. 4. Joh. 9. 17, &c. And ſo the word in, is uſed alſo by Saint Paul, treating of the ſame matter, 1 Cor. 15. 22. as in Adam all die; or elſe the words are to be tranſlated, foraſmuch, or for that, all have ſinned; and all comes to the ſame ſenſe: for all that die, have not committed actuall ſinnes in themſelves; as it is plain in ſome infants, that die before they come to the uſe of reaſon, and therefore can be ſaid no otherwayes to have ſinned, than in this one man in whoſe loynes they were, as Levi is ſaid to have paid tithes, being in the loynes of Abraham, Heb. 7. 9.

is not imputed] Gr. Tec. was not counted. Where there is no law made, no man is puniſhed, as faulty and guilty. If we admit of the tranſlation according to Tecl. edition, ſinne was not imputed, till the law was given, then the Apoſtles meaning according to the interpretation of the Greek fathers, is, οὐχ ὁμοίως ἐλογίζετο, that is, was not imputed in ſuch ſort; becauſe there was no puniſhment ſet upon particular ſinnes; neither could the number and heinouſneſs of ſinnes be ſo exactly known.

there is no law] Gr. there being no law.

V. 14. Nevertheleſs] Gr. but.

is the figure] The firſt Adam, anſwereth the latter, who is Chriſt, as it is afterwards declared; Adam and Chriſt were like two roots or ſtocks, the one whereof, to wit, Adam, conveyed to his branches, ſinne and death; but Chriſt, to all that are engraffed in him, righteouſneſs and life.

V. 15. But not as the offence] Adam and Chriſt are compared together, in this reſpect, that both of them do give and yeeld to theirs, that which is their own: but herein they differ; that Adam by nature, hath ſpread his fault to the deſtruction of many, but Chriſts obedience hath by grace overflowed to many.

many be dead] The word many is oftentimes in Scripture taken for all; as Dan. 12. 2. Many that ſleep in the duſt ſhall awake, that is, all; and Rom. 8. 29. Firſt begotten among many brethren; and here verſ. 16. Of many offences to juſtification: for Chriſts bloud cleanſeth us from all our ſinnes, 1 Joh. 1. 9. and verſ. 19. By one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners, that is, all: ſo in this verſe, through the offence of one man, many be dead, all are become liable unto death.

much more] Gr. Tec. much more therefore.

V. 16. And not as it was by one] Here the Apoſtle ſets down a ſecond difference between Adam and Chriſt, that by Adams one offence, men were made guilty; but the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed unto us freely, doth not only abſolve us from that one fault, but from all other.

by one] Or, of one.

V. 17. if by one mans offence] Or, by one offence. The third difference is, that the righteouſneſs of Chriſt being imputed to us by grace, is of greater power to bring life, and that a glorious and eternall life, wherein we ſhall reign with Chriſt; than the offence of Adam was to make his poſterity liable unto death.

V. 18. by the offence of one] Or, by one offence.

judgement] that is, guilt.

by the righteouſneſs of one] Or, by one righteouſneſs. Gr. δικαίωμα. So Saint Paul ſtyleth the obedience of Chriſt, as having virtue in it to juſtifie others alſo, as the Greek word doth imply, and here it is ſet in oppoſition to the tranſgreſſion of Adam, where in likewiſe there was a power to involve others, and make them culpable and liable to condemnation.

upon all men] Either all ſorts of men indifferently, though not all univerſally; or to all that appertain to Chriſt and are engraffed unto him by faith.

juſtification of life] Not only, becauſe our ſinnes are forgiven us, but alſo, becauſe the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is imputed to us.

V. 19. by the obedience of one] The Apoſtle leaves out the word man in this member, either for brevities ſake; or, becauſe Chriſt was not a meer man, as Adam was, but Θεάνθρωπος God and man in one perſon.

V. 20. Moreover] Or, but.

that the offence might abound] Chryſoſtome and Oecumenius, and the Greek Fathers generally obſerve, that the conjunction ἵνα, ut, is not taken, αἰτιολογικῶς, cauſally, nor doth any way imply, that God gave his law to this end (See Rom. 1. 20.) that ſinne might abound, but rather to diminiſh it, and keep men from it; they therefore thus paraphraſe the words; By the coming in of the law, ſo it fell out, that ſinne abounded through the corruption of mans nature, and per accidens not according to Gods intention. Others who take the conjunction cauſally make this ſenſe: that the law came in through Gods appointment to improve the benefit of Chriſt, and make it much more glorious by the manifeſtation and declaration, how farre ſinne had abounded, that is, the law entred, that the offence might appear much more to abound, for the greater illuſtration of Chriſts glory in taking it away.

grace did much more abound] Grace was powred ſo plentifully from heaven, that it did not only countervail ſinne, but above meaſure paſſed it.

V. 21. reigned] See on Chap. 6. 21.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. WHat ſhall we ſay then] Here the Apoſtle paſſeth from juſtification to ſanctification, making his way by ſolving an objection framed after this manner, becauſe where ſinne aboundeth there grace more abounded, ſhall we from thence lewdly conclude, that we ought therefore ſtill to abide in the ſtate of ſin and corruption, and let the reines looſe to all manner of wickedneſs, that grace may ſtill more and more abound? ſhall we like the Spider, ſuck poiſon from the ſweeteſt flower of paradiſe, the doctrine of free juſtification? God forbid.

Shall we continue] Gr. Tec. Let us continue.

in ſinne] That is, in that corruption, for though the guiltineſs of ſinne be not imputed unto us, yet the corruption remaineth ſtill in us, the which ſanctification, that follows juſtification, killeth by little and little.

V. 2. God forbid] Gr. Be it not, or, by no meanes. See Chap. 3. 4.

How ſhall we] The benefits of juſtification and ſanctification are alwayes joyned together inſeparably, and both of them proceed from Chriſt by the grace of God: Now ſanctification is the aboliſhing of ſinne, that is, of our naturall corruption, into whoſe place ſucceedeth the cleerneſs and pureneſſe of nature reformed.

that are dead] They are ſaid by Paul to be dead to ſinne, which are in ſuch ſort made partakers of the virtue of Chriſt, that naturall corruption is dead in them; that is, the force of it is taken away ſo, that it bringeth not forth its bitter fruits: and on the other ſide, they are ſaid to live to ſinne, which are in the fleſh; that is, whom the Spirit of God hath not delivered from the ſlavery of this corruption of nature.

V. 3. Know ye not] There are three parts of ſanctification; to wit, the death of the old man, or ſinne, his buriall, and the reſurrection of the new man; derived from the virtue of the death, buriall & reſurrection of Chriſt; of which benefits our baptiſme is a Signe & Pledge.

that ſo many of us, &c.] Gal. 3. 27.

into Jeſus Chriſt] That is, by Baptiſme are ingraffed into him, that growing up in one with him, we ſhould receive his ſtrength to conquer the power of ſin in us.

baptized into his death] That is, that we ſhould be partakers not only of the merit of his death in our juſtification, but alſo of the efficacie of his death, in the mortifying our fleſhly members.

V. 4. are] Gr. were.

buried with him by baptiſme] See Coloſſ. 2. 12. In this phraſe the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to the ancient manner of Baptiſme, which was to dip the parties baptized, and as it were to bury them under the water for a while, and then to draw them out of it, and lift them up, to repreſent the burial of our old man, and our reſurrection to newneſs of life.

by the glory of the father] That is, by the glorious power of the father, as Lazarus was raiſed, Joh. 11. 40. Or elſe the præpoſition διὰ, is put for πρὸς; as likewiſe 2 Pet. 1. 3. he that called us διὰ, by glory, that is, πρὸς, to glory and virtue; and ſo ſome tranſlate it here, raiſed from the dead to the glory of the father; that Chriſt himſelf being diſcharged of his infirmitie and weakneſs might live in glory with God for ever.

V. 5. planted together] By this elegant ſimilitude the Apoſtle repreſenteth unto us, That as Plants engraffed, receive moiſture, and juyce from the Stock, whereby they ſprout out and bear fruit; ſo we receive vigour from Chriſt, whereby we live ſpiritually, and bear the fruit of good works: and as a Plant that is ſet in the earth lyeth as dead and unmoveable for a time, but after ſprings up and flouriſheth; ſo Chriſts body lay dead for a while in the grave, but ſprung up and reflouriſhed in his reſurrection: and we alſo when we are baptized, are buried as it were in the water for a time, but after are raiſed up to newneſſe of life.

likeneſs of his death] In ſo much as by the meanes of the ſtrength which cometh from him to us, we ſo die to ſinne as he is dead.

likeneſs of his reſurrection] That is, as he aroſe from the dead to a new and heavenly life, ſo we riſe from dead works to walke in newneſs of life.

V. 6. old man] All our whole nature, as we are conceived and born into this world with ſinne, which is called old, partly by comparing that old Adam with Chriſt, and partly in reſpect of the deformitie of our corrupt nature, and the diſability to do any good. It is called our old man, becauſe it ſets on work all the faculties of our minde, and members of our body, as if it were our very ſelves, and becauſe as the Greek fathers note, ὡς ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἢ μᾶλλον στέργομεν καὶ περιεχόμεθα, becauſe we make much of it and love it as our ſelves, or more than our ſelves.

crucified with him] Our corrupt nature is attributed to Chriſt, not in deed, but by imputation. The Apoſtle ſaith, our old man is crucified, becauſe through the merits of Chriſt crucified, we obtain the holy Spirit, which crucifieth our old man; for Chriſt by his death hath merited to us, and for us, not only remiſſion of ſinnes, but alſo the ſpirit of regeneration, whereby our corrupt affections are mortified, and we renewed in the ſpirit of our mindes.

body of ſinne] That naughtineſs which ſticketh faſt to us, and is as neer unto us as our fleſh; or he termeth it the body of ſinne, becauſe it hath a reall ſubſiſtence in us of it ſelf, as if it were a body; or thirdly, becauſe this corruption is not in one part or member, but diffuſed through the whole; neither is it ſeen and deſcryed in the breach of one commandement, but of all, making a kinde of body of wickedneſs conſiſting of many parts.

might be deſtroyed] Gr. Tec. ſhould be deſtroyed.

not ſerve ſinne] That is, the end of our ſanctification, which we ſhoot at, and ſhall at length come unto, when God ſhall be all in all.

V. 7. freed] Gr. juſtified.

V. 8. now if] Or, but if.

V. 9. dieth no more] For he therefore died, that he might deſtroy death, both in himſelf and in his members.

V. 10. he died unto ſinne] He died unto ſinne, not in regard of himſelf, for he knew no ſinne, but as charged with the ſinnes of the elect, and in the name of his Church, that he might expiate and take away the ſinnes of all that beleeve in him.

liveth unto God] That is, with God, or, To the glory of God, or in the ſenſe our Saviour ſaith, Luk. 20. 38. that Abraham, & Iſaac, & all the faithfull live To God; that is, though they appear not to live to men, yet they live to God; that is, in his account, and before him.

V. 11. reckon] Or, account.

V. 12. Let not ſinne] He taketh ſinne, either indefinitely for any ſinne, or for ſinne which is the genus to originall and actuall; or he taketh it, according to S. Auſtines interpretation, lib. de nup. & concupiſ. for concupiſcence or the originall corruption that is in us, which (ſaith he) is called ſinne, quia à peccato facta eſt, ſicut vocatur lingua locutio quam facit lingua, manus vocatur ſcriptura quam facit manus; becauſe it is the iſſue or off-ſpring of ſinne, to wit, the ſinne of Adam; as our ſpeech is called our tongue, becauſe the tongue uttereth it; and our writing is called our hand, becauſe our hand maketh or draweth it: Howbeit we muſt not ſo underſtand S. Auſtins words, as if it were only in that reſpect called ſinne; for it is all three, both the daughter of ſinne, and mother of ſinne, & ſinne it ſelf; the daughter or effect of Adams ſinne in us, the mother of all actuall ſinnes, and formally ſinne it ſelf, becauſe repugnant to the law, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not luſt.

reigne] By reigning S. Paul meaneth that ſoveraigne or high rule which no man ſtriveth againſt, or if any do, it is in vain: or, Let not ſinne reign, that is, not have the upper hand of the motions of Gods Spirit within you, Rom. 8. 13, 14. Galat. 5. 16, 17, 18.

in your mortall body] This is not ſaid, as if evill luſts were in the body alone, or as if they had the originall only from it, and not from the ſoul; for Chriſt teacheth the contrary, Matth. 15. 19, 20. but becauſe theſe evill luſts do moſt of all ſhew and manifeſt themſelves in and through the body, Gal. 5. 19. Or, the words may bear this interpretation, Let not ſinne reign in your mortall body, that is, while you live this bodily life here, which being ſubject unto death, it appeareth thereby, that there are ſome remnants of ſinne yet behind to be ſtriven againſt, that we may mortifie and deſtroy them more and more.

V. 15. yeeld] Or, offer up.

as inſtruments] Gr. as arms, or weapons. He fitly compareth our members, that is, parts of our body, and faculties of our minde, either to ſuch tools as artificers work withal, or weapons wherewith ſouldiers fight; for as thoſe, ſo theſe may be uſed well or ill. For example, with the ſame hand one man giveth an alms, and another ſtealeth; with the ſame tongue one bleſſeth, and another curſeth.

yeeld]

inſtruments] Gr. arms, or weapons.

V. 14. For ſin ſhall not have dominion, &c.] He granteth that ſin is not yet ſo dead in us, that it is utterly extinct, but he promiſeth victory unto them that contend manfully againſt it, becauſe we have grace given us, which worketh in us ſo effectually, that the law is not now to us the power and inſtrument of ſin, but the rule of righteouſneſs.

V. 15. under the law] To be under the law and under ſin, ſignifieth all one in reſpect of them which are not ſanctified; as on the contrary, to be under grace and righteouſneſs, agreeth to them that are regenerate. Now theſe are contrary, ſo that one cannot agree with the other, therefore let righteouſneſs expel ſin.

V. 16. to whom you yeeld your ſelves, &c.] See John 8. 34. 2 Pet. 2. 19.

V. 17. form of doctrine] Gr. mould. The word in the Original ſignifieth moſt properly a pattern or mould, and the Apoſtle would have us thereby to underſtand that the doctrine of the Goſpel is ſuch a pattern or mould which we are caſt into, that we may be formed and faſhioned like unto it.

which was delivered you] Gr. whereto ye were delivered.

V. 18. of righteouſneſs] Gr. to righteouſneſs.

V. 20. from righteouſneſs] Gr. to righteouſneſs.

V. 21. What fruit had ye then] The Apoſtle in this verſe deterreth from ſin by a threefold argument, drawn from the three parts of time, paſt, preſent, and to come. Sin for the time paſt hath proved unfruitful; (What fruit had ye then;) for the time preſent ſhameful; (whereof ye are now aſhamed;) for the time to come pernicious and deadly, (for the end of theſe things is death.)

end] Or, reward.

V. 22. unto holineſs] Or, unto ſanctification.

end] Or, reward.

V. 23. For the wages of ſin is death] That is, the reward due unto ſin. The compariſon is taken from Souldiers in war, who at the end of their ſervice, receive their pay or ſtipend. By death we are to underſtand, not onely temporal, but eternal, death; as appeareth by the oppoſition that it hath here to eternal life.

but the gift of God] Or, free gift. By the gift here many underſtand the gift of ſanctification or righteouſneſs, which is ſet againſt ſin in the other member, and they ſay, the Apoſtle affirmeth this gift to be eternal life, becauſe it bringeth or hath for its end eternal life: but it may be referred to eternal life it ſelf, which is here termed, not the wages of righteouſneſs, but the free gift of grace; as St. Auguſtine acutely obſerveth, lib. de grat. & lib. arbit. cap. 9. The Apoſtle, ſaith he, might have ſaid, The wages of righteouſneſs is eternal life: but he altered the phraſe of ſet purpoſe, and choſe rather to ſay, The gift of God is eternal life; ut hinc intelligeremus non pro meritis noſtris Deum nos, ſed pro ſua miſericordia vocare: unde dicitur in Pſalmo, Coronat te in miſeratione: that we might from this change of the phraſe learn that God calleth us not to eternal life for our merits, but for his mercies ſake; whence it is ſaid in the Pſalms, He crowneth thee in mercy and compaſſion.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. K*Now ye not*] By propounding the ſimilitude of marriage, he compareth the ſtate of man both in ſin and after regeneration together: the law of matrimony, ſaith he, is this, that ſo long as the husband liveth, the marriage abideth in force; but if he be dead, the woman may marry again.

over a man] He ſaith not over the husband, or over the wife, but τȣ̃ ἀνθρώπȣ, hominis, a word which ſignifieth either ſex, and may be applied to either; to teach us that both are ſubject to the law of wedlock while they live.

V. 2. the woman, &c.] 1 Cor. 7. 39.

V. 3. ſhe ſhall be] Gr. Tec. the wife or woman.

V. 4. Wherefore my brethren] Here he applieth the former ſimilitude; as it fareth with the wife whoſe husband is dead, and ſhe free to marry again, ſo it is with us; for now we are joyned to the Spirit, as it were to the ſecond husband, by whom we muſt bring forth new children: we are dead in reſpect of the firſt husband; but in reſpect of the latter, we are as it were raiſed from the dead.

dead to the law] We are not onely dead to the law, but the law alſo is dead unto us, becauſe it cannot thruſt out its ſting at us, either to curſe us, or to provoke us unto ſin; the law hath no more power over us than dead men in either of theſe reſpects.

body of Chriſt] In as much as his body was mortified and crucified for us; by which his mortification, he obtained to us remiſſion of ſins, and the holy Spirit; whereby our fleſh, or rather ſin dwelling in our fleſh is mortified in us.

forth fruit] He calleth the children which the wife beareth to her husband, fruit, Pſal. 127. 3. As in the ſalutation of the Angel, Chriſt is called the fruit of the Virgins womb: Bleſſed art thou, and bleſſed is the fruit of thy womb.

unto God] Which are acceptable unto God: or if by fruit he underſtandeth not children, as before, but good works; then to God is here underſtood, to the glory of God; as Matth. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in heaven. See Phil. 1. 11.

V. 5. were in the fleſh] When we were in the ſtate of the firſt marriage; which in the next verſe he calleth, The oldneſs of the letter; or by fleſh he meaneth the carnal obſervations of the law, concerning meats and drinks, and leproſie, and the like: or when we were in the fleſh, that is, when the fleſh was not mortified in us by the Spirit, but was yet lively and ſtrong in us, Chap. 8. 8.

by the law] He ſaith not, of the law, but by the law; becauſe the ſpring of ſin which dwelleth within us, takes occaſion to work thus in us by reaſon of the reſtraint that the law maketh: not that the fault is in the law, but in our ſelves.

V. 6. delivered] Or, looſed.

that being dead wherin we were held] Or, he being dead in whom we were held. The Greek Scholiaſt readeth ἀποθανόντες, we being dead to that which held us, to wit, the law, or ſin; from which we were freed by Chriſt. Others read ἀποθανόντος, it being dead; that is, the reigning power of the law and of ſin being aboliſhed in us; by the death and ſpirit of Chriſt, the reign of ſin being deſtroyed in true beleevers, there ceaſeth withal that accidental effect of the law, which is to provoke and ſtir up the malignitie of ſin in us. Or he being dead, that is, the old man, of whom he ſpeaketh in the former Chapter, verſ. 6. Our old man is crucified with him, that the body of ſin might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin: and this ſenſe is very agreeable to the main ſcope of the Apoſtle.

in newneſs of ſpirit] As becometh them which after the death of their old husband are joyned to the Spirit, as whom the Spirit hath made new men; Or in newneſs of the ſpirit, that is, in true holineſs, whereunto we were renewed in the ſpirit of our minds by the preaching of the Goſpel, which is called the miniſtration of righteouſneſs, and of the ſpirit, 2 Cor. 3. 8, 9. Epheſ. 4. 23. Whereas the law wrought nothing elſe but that it ſhewed man his duty, as a writing or picture, without imparting unto him any lively or efficacious abilitie to perform: wherefore alſo that old means of attaining righteouſneſs and holineſs is now aboliſhed, as of it ſelf unprofitable and impotent.

oldneſs of the letter] Either by the letter he meaneth the law in reſpect of that old condition. For before that our will be framed by the holy Ghoſt, the law ſpeaketh unto us but as to deaf men, and therefore it is dumb and dead to us as touching the fulfilling thereof. And in the word oldneſs he inſinuateth alſo the aboliſhing thereof in regard of the unſufficiency thereof, Heb. 8. 13. Or by the oldneſs of the letter he underſtandeth the old corruption, which by the outward letter of the law is more and more ſtirred and provoked in us, in as much as the law though it condemned the ſinner, yet it affordeth no power at all to aboliſh or deſtroy ſin; in which regard it is called a killing letter, and the adminiſtration of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7.

V. 7. Is the law ſin] Becauſe he had ſaid before, verſ. 5. that the motions of ſin which were by the law had force in our members; leſt any ſhould miſtake his meaning and from thence infer that he condemned the law, as being a kind of factour for ſin; he opportunely here moveth a doubt after this manner; What then, is the law the cauſe of ſin? or are the law and ſin all one? or do they agree together? No, ſaith he, ſin is reproved and condemned by the law, but becauſe ſin cannot abide to be reproved, and was not in a manner felt until it was provoked, and ſtirred by the law, it taketh occaſion thereby to be more outragious, yet by no fault of the law.

not known luſt] Or, concupiſcence. By luſt, in this place he meaneth not evil luſts in particular, which flow from concupiſcence; but rather the corrupt fountain from which they ſpring: for the very heathen Philoſophers themſelves condemned wicked luſts and unclean deſires; but as for the fountain of them, they could not ſo much as ſuſpect it, and yet it is the very ſeat of that natural and unclean ſpot and filth.

Thou ſhalt not covet] Exod. 20. 17. Deut. 5. 21.

V. 8. Sin wrought in me concupiſcence] Theſe words ſeem to be contrary to the words of St. James; (Jam. 1. 15.) for Saint James ſaith, Luſt bringeth forth ſin, but Saint Paul here, that ſin brought forth, or wrought in him concupiſcence. But they may be eaſily reconciled: for they take not the words in the ſame ſenſe. For Saint Paul by ſin, as before hath been ſhewed, underſtandeth the corruption of our nature and proneneſs to ſin, which produceth in us actual luſts, called by him all kind of concupiſcence: but Saint James by luſt underſtandeth the pravity of our appetite, and by ſin outward actual ſins; in which ſenſe if we conſtrue their words, the Apoſtles are ſo far from contradicting one the other, that they both affirm the ſelf ſame thing though diverſly expreſſed.

was dead] Though ſin be in us, yet it is not known for ſin, neither doth it ſo terrifie the conſcience, nor ſtir up our natural concupiſcence, nor rage after ſuch ſort in our members, as after the law is known, and in theſe regards it is ſaid to be dead.

V. 9. For] Gr. But.

alive without the law] When I knew not the law, then methought I lived indeed; for my conſcience never troubled me, becauſe it knew not my malady: or while the law ſtood aloof off (χωρὶς often is ſo taken) and was not brought home to my conſcience, I thought my ſelf in a good condition.

I died] That is, I felt my conſcience deadly wounded, whereas before I was ſecure and thought my ſelf in a ſafe way, though I purſued my former luſts.

V. 12. holy, juſt, and good] Holy becauſe it teacheth holineſs, and forbiddeth all wickedneſs and uncleanneſs: juſt, becauſe it puniſheth all ſinful luſts: good, becauſe it was given to direct us into the paths of life. Or the Epithit holy, may have a reference to the ceremonial law; juſt, to the judicial; and good, to the moral.

made death to me] That is, the cauſe of death, to this the Apoſtle anſwereth, That the law is not the cauſe of death, but our corrupt nature being therewith not onely diſcovered, but alſo ſtirred up, and taking occaſion thereby to rebel. For the more things are forbidden our corrupt nature, the more it deſireth them; Nitimur in vetitum: and from hence cometh guiltineſs and occaſion of death, Prov. 9. 17.

God forbid] So Chap. 3. verſ. 4.

might become exceeding ſinful] That ſin might ſhew it ſelf to be ſin, and ſpit forth, as it were, all its venome; ἵνα δειχθῇ αὐτῆς ὁ πονηρὸς καὶ ἡ πᾶσα κακία.

V. 14. For we know] Hitherto the Apoſtle ſpake of the power of the law & ſin in corrupt & unregenerate man, as he alſo himſelf found it by his own experience in his former ſtate, verſ. 9. But now he proceedeth and ſpeaketh of himſelf as he was ſince his converſion, and declareth what power the remainder of ſin had over him ſtill after that now he was delivered from the dominion thereof.

the law is ſpiritual] Given by the Spirit, and requiring a ſpiritual and heavenly life and diſpoſition; but men ſuch as they be born, are bondſlaves of corruption.

But I am carnal] In part, in regard of the remainders of the fleſh that are in me: for that the regenerate alſo in reſpect of ſome weakneſs that is yet remaining in them may be called carnal, is evident, 1 Cor. 3. 4.

ſold under ſin] Not as a willing ſlave to obey and follow the deſire of ſin in all things, as it is ſaid of Ahab, 1 Kin. 21. 20. but as a Captive yet detained, though his ranſom be paid; as one that againſt his will and purpoſe is yet ſubject to the aſſaults and luſts of ſin, not being able wholly and entirely to rid himſelf of them, although he do vehemently reſiſt them, and often ſubdue them by the Spirit of God that is within him, Gal. 5. 17, 18.

V. 15. I allow not] Gr. know not. My actions anſwer not every way, nay, they are contrary to my will, therefore by the conſent of my will to the law and repugnancy of my actions thereunto it appeareth evidently, that the law and a right ruled will do perſwade one thing, but corruption, which hath her ſeat alſo in the regenerate, another thing.

What I would] It is to be noted that the ſelf ſame man is ſaid to will and not to will in divers reſpects; to wit, he is ſaid to will in that, that he is regenerated by grace, and not to will, ſo far as he is not regenerated; but ſuch as he was born of his parents: howbeit, becauſe the part which is regenerated at length becometh conqueror, therefore St. Paul ſuſtaining the part of the regenerated, ſpeaketh in ſuch ſort, as if the corruption which ſinneth willingly were ſomething without a man, although afterwards he granteth that this evil is in his fleſh, or in his members. See 1 John 3. 6, 9.

V. 17. no more I, but ſin] That natural corruption which cleaveth faſt even to them that are regenerated, and is not quite conquered. He ſpeaketh this for the comfort of himſelf and others who groan under the ſervitude of their natural corruption, and that he would infer is this, that he ſtandeth not in fear to be rejected of God for theſe remains of ſin in him; becauſe God judgeth of his children that are thus divided between fleſh and ſpirit, according to the better and ſounder part, which is that of the ſpirit as moſt prevailing within them, and unto which they do moſt heartily and willingly adhere, which hath likewiſe a ſubſiſtence and root of permanent life; and not according to the fleſh, which they renounce and reſiſt, and which by little and little decaies in them, and in the end is reduced to nothing.

that dwelleth in me] That is, as yet remaineth in me, but diſarmed of that mortal ſting of condemnation, by Chriſt: as alſo of its power and dominion, by his ſpirit; being now no more but a trouble to the faithful, Heb. 12. 1. Therefore theſe three things ought to be well diſtinguiſhed, the dominion of ſin, the habitation, and the combat: the firſt is aboliſhed in true beleevers, the other two remain yet for their exerciſe and humiliation.

V. 18. dwelleth no good thing] He denieth good to dwell in us, but affirmeth ſin to dwell in our fleſh, becauſe we ſin continually, and thereby contract an habit which hath a permanent abode in the ſoul.

V. 20. do it] Or, perform it.

V. 21. I find then a law] Here followeth the concluſion of the Apoſtles diſcourſe, which is this; that as the law of God exhorteth to goodneſs, ſo doth the law of ſin; that is, the corruption wherein we were born, forcibly inclines us to wickedneſs: but the ſpirit, that is, our mind, in that, that it is regenerate, conſenteth to the law of God; but the fleſh, that is, the whole natural man, is a bondſlave to the law of ſin; therefore wickedneſs and death are not of the law, but of that corruption which ſo reigneth in them which are not ſo regenerated, that they neither will nor do good, but will and do evil continually; but in the regenerate though it reigneth not, yet it abideth and ſtriveth againſt the ſpirit or law of the mind, ſo that they can neither do ſo well as they would, nor be ſo void of ſin as they deſire, Gal. 5. 17.

V. 22. I delight in] Gr. I am delighted with.

after the inward man] The inward man and the new man are all one, and are anſwerable and ſet up contrary to the old man; neither doth this inward man ſignifie mans mind and reaſon, and the old man the powers that are under them; but by the inward man is meant whatſoever is either without or within man, from top to toe, ſo long as that man is not born anew by the grace of God.

V. 23. the law of my mind] Mind is not here taken for the underſtanding part of the ſoul, as it is naturally in us from our birth: but for the whole ſoul of man, as it is renewed by the Spirit of God. Ratio recta eſt ratio lumine Spiritûs ſancti directa.

V. 24. O wretched man] It is a miſerable thing to be yet in part ſubject to ſin, and to be wearied with continual conflicts; but we muſt cry to the Lord, who will by death it ſelf at length make us abſolute conquerours, as we are already conquerours in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 37.

Who ſhall deliver me] That is, O that I were out of this animale and earthly life; wherein I muſt ſuffer ſin yet to remain with me, by which I am ſubject ſtill to the neceſſity of death! O that I were tranſlated once into the glorious liberty of the Saints of God, in the happy life to come! Rom. 8. 21. Phil. 1. 23.

from the body of this death] Or, from this body of death. That is, from theſe carnal luſts which are a death unto me, or threaten my ſpiritual death. Or, by this body we may underſtand the remainders of ſin and of the old man, which are here called the body of death, as Rom. 6. 6. the body of ſin (ſee there the note.) Or elſe by the body of death is here meant our mortal body ſubject to death by reaſon of ſin, Rom. 8. 10. in as much as we ſhall never be perfectly delivered from theſe remainders of ſin, and our captivity under it, till we ſhall have laid down this mortal body of ours.

V. 25. I thank God] That he hath delivered me from the curſe of the law, and the dominion of ſin; and hath promiſed alſo perfectly to free me from all the power of ſin by tranſlating me into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God.

I my ſelf] The Apoſtle ranketh himſelf among them that groan under the yoke of ſinful corruption: for as Saint Jerome, and Saint Auguſtine doth teſtifie againſt the Pelagian Hereticks; this is the true perfection of them that are born anew, that they are ſenſible of their infirmities and corruptions, and confeſs as well in truth as humility that they are imperfect.

ſerve the law of God; but with the fleſh, the law of ſin] How may this be that the Apoſtle ſhould ſerve the law of God and the law of ſin; ſith no man can ſerve two contrary maſters? I anſwer, that we muſt diſtinguiſh either of faculties, ſo far forth as renewed, or not; or of times. The Apoſtle doth not ſay that in the ſame part, or with the ſame faculty as renewed, he ſerveth the law of God, and the law of ſin; as namely, that in or with the mind as renewed, he ſerveth the law of God and ſin; but that in or with the one as renewed, he ſerveth the law of God, but in or with the other as not renewed the law of ſin. Neither doth he ſay that at the ſame time he ſerveth both the law of God and the Law of ſin: but that though ordinarily, and for the moſt part he ſerveth the law of God; yet that ſometimes through the ſtrength of corruption he is as it were enforced againſt his will, to ſerve the law of ſin.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. THere is therefore] A concluſion of all the former diſputation from verſ. 16. Chap. 1. to this place; ſeeing that we being juſtified by faith in Chriſt, do obtain remiſſion of ſins, and imputation of righteouſneſs, and are alſo ſanctified by the Spirit: it followeth from hence that they that are engraffed into Chriſt by faith are out of all danger of condemnation.

Who walk not] The fruits of the Spirit, or effects of ſanctification, which is begun in us, do not engraffe us into Chriſt, but declare that we are engraffed into him.

after the fleſh] By the fleſh he underſtandeth the carnal ſtate of ſin and corruption, in which all men are born, and naturally follow before they are regenerated by grace; and thoſe are ſaid here not to walk after the fleſh who follow not the fleſh for their guide: for he is not ſaid to live after the fleſh that hath the holy Ghoſt for his guide, though ſometimes he ſtep awry.

V. 2. For the law] That is, the power and authority of the ſpirit which is ſet in oppoſition to the tyranny of ſin. Here the Apoſtle preventeth an objection, ſeeing that the virtue of the ſpirit, that is in us, is ſo weake; how may we gather thereby that there is no condemnation to them who have received that virtue? becauſe, ſaith he, that virtue of the quickning ſpirit which is ſo weak in us, is moſt perfect and mighty in Chriſt, and being imputed to us which beleeve, cauſeth us to be ſo accounted of as though there were no reliques of corruption and death in us.

Spirit of life] That is, the Spirit which mortifieth the old man, and quickneth the new man, whereby thoſe who are regenerated lead a new and ſpirituall life.

in Chriſt Jeſus] That is, which is perfectly and abſolute in Chriſt, and reſides in him as the head, and from him hath influx to all the members. This ſpirit is as a law commanding us, and appointing what we ought to do, and how to carry our ſelves thorough our whole life.

from the law of ſinne and death] There is in the words a figure like that, pateris libavit & auro, id eſt, pateris aureis: ſo here, the law of ſinne and death, that is, a ſinne bringing death and killing the ſoul: and as before he termed the power of the ſpirit the law of the ſpirit; ſo here he calleth the power of ſinne the law of ſinne; becauſe like a law it commands evill actions, and ruleth in the children of diſobedience.

V. 3 For what the law could doe] He uſeth no argument here but expoundeth the myſtery of ſanctification, which is wrought in us: for becauſe, ſaith he, that the virtue of the law was not ſuch by reaſon of the corruption of our nature, that it could make man pure, perfect, and free; and for that it rather kindled the fiery malady of ſinne, than put it out, and extinguiſhed it: therefore God clothed his Son with fleſh like to our ſinfull fleſh, wherein he utterly aboliſhed our corruption, that being accounted thoroughly pure and without fault in him, apprehended and laid hold on by faith, we might be found to have fully that ſingular perfection, which the law requireth; and therefore that there might be no condemnation in or to us.

in that is was weak] Not of it ſelf, but through our fault.

through the fleſh] Or, by. In men not born anew by the Spirit, whoſe diſeaſe the law pointed at; but neither did, nor could heal.

in the likeneſs of ſinnefull fleſh] Gr. fleſh of ſinne. Chriſt tooke our nature upon him with all our naturall affections; yet without ſinne: and therefore the Apoſtle here ſaith, God ſent his Son in the likeneſs of ſinſull fleſh, not in the likeneſs of fleſh, as if he had not taken true fleſh upon him; but in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh: thus acutely Saint Auguſtine alſo diſtinguiſheth: Non in ſimilitudine carnis, quaſi caro non eſſet caro, ſed in ſimilitudine carnis peccati, quia caro erat, ſed peccati caro non erat.

for ſinne] Or, by a ſacrifice for ſinne. Either there is an Ellipſis, and the word θυσία is to be underſtood, as it is in the Tranſlation of the Seventy, Luk. 4.5. and alſo in Saint Paul, Heb. 10. 6. καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας οὐκ εὐδόκησας, for in ſin thou hadſt no pleaſure: that is, in ſacrifices for ſinne thou hadſt no pleaſure: and then the meaning is evidently this; God aboliſhed, and utterly deſtroyed ſinne in the fleſh by the expiatory ſacrifice for ſinne, which Chriſt offered upon the Croſſe. Or we are thus to render the words, for ſinne, he condemned ſinne in the fleſh; that is, he condemned our ſinne in the fleſh of his Son: of ſin; viz. of that capitall crime: that it was the meritorious cauſe of the death of Chriſt who was moſt innocent. Or becauſe it had wrought death in man by that which was good, and by occaſion of the law became above meaſure ſinnefull, Rom. 7. 13.

in the fleſh] Or, of fleſh.

V. 4. righteouſneſs of the law] The very ſubſtance of the law of God might be fulfilled, or that ſame righteouſneſs which the law requireth, that we may be found juſt before God. For if with our juſtification from ſin there be joyned that active obedience of Chriſt which is imputed to us, we are juſt before God according to that perfect form which the law requireth.

V. 5. they that are after the fleſh] They that are in their carnall ſtate of ſin and corruption, which we drew from the loines of our firſt parents: or they that are led by the fleſh, and follow it in the luſts thereof.

V. 6. to be carnally minded is death] Gr. the minding of the fleſh, or the wiſedome of the fleſh. The word in the originall is, φρόνημα which ſometimes is rendred the deſire, or affection; ſometimes mind or meaning; ſometimes wiſedome: and in all theſe ſenſes that which the Apoſtle here calleth φρόνημα σαρκὸς, is death; that is, tendeth to death, or bringeth death: as on the contrary, the deſire, affections, and wiſedome of the ſpirit are life, and peace; that is, tend to life, and procure our peace.

to be ſpiritually minded] Gr. the minding of the ſpirit, or, wiſedome of the ſpirit.

V. 7. the carnall mind is enmitie againſt God] Gr. the minding of the fleſh, or, wiſedome of the fleſh.

V. 8. they that are in the fleſh] The Apoſtle here by this phraſe meaneth not thoſe that are married, as Siricius the Pope abſurdly interpreted this Scripture, and wreſted it to the diſparagement of holy wedlock in the Clergie: nor doth hee thereby underſtand all that are clothed with fleſh: for then no men upon earth ſhould pleaſe God; but to be in the fleſh, and to be after the fleſh, and to war, and walke after the fleſh, ſignifie one and the ſame thing; to remain ſtill in our carnall eſtate, and to be led by the motions and luſts of the fleſh. Thoſe that are ſo led, till God give them a better guide, and deliver them out of their corrupt eſtate by nature, cannot pleaſe God.

Now if] Gr. But if.

V. 10. if Chriſt be in you] He confirmeth the faithfull againſt the reliques of fleſh and ſinne, granting that they are yet (as appeareth by the corruption which is in them) touching one of their parts which he calleth the body, an impure lump, which is not yet purged from earthly filthineſs and death: but therewithall willing them to doubt nothing of the happy ſucceſs of this combate, becauſe that even this little ſparke of the Spirit, that is, of the grace of regeneration, which appeareth to be in them by the fruits of righteouſneſs, is the ſeed of life, 1 Joh. 3. 9.

becauſe of ſinne] Gr. for ſinne.

becauſe of righteouſneſs] Gr. for righteouſneſs.

V. 11. ſhall quicken your mortall bodies] He ſpeaketh either of the reſurrection from death, or regeneration. For although the work of the Spirit quickning us be principally wrought and felt in our ſoul, yet the virtue of it is derived alſo into our body, as the inſtrument of our ſoul. Therefore the Apoſtle exhorteth, Chap. 12. verſ. 1. That we give up our bodies as a living ſacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God. Chap. 6. verſ. 12.

by his Spirit] Or, becauſe of his Spirit.

V. 12. We are debters] Here followeth an exhortation to ſubdue the fleſh daily more and more, by the virtue of the Spirit of regeneration; becauſe, ſaith he, you are debters unto God forſomuch as you have received ſo many benefits from him.

V. 15. ye have not received the ſpirit of bondage] He declareth and expoundeth by the way in theſe two verſes; by what right this ſtyle to be called children of God, is given to beleevers: becauſe, ſaith he, they have received the grace of the Goſpel; wherein God ſheweth himſelf not as before in publiſhing of the law terrible and fearfull, but a moſt benigne and loving Father in Chriſt: ſo that with great boldneſs we call him Father, the holy Ghoſt ſealing this adoption in our hearts by faith. By the ſpirit of bondage he meaneth the operation of the Spirit of God by the law, which doth caſt down and affright the hearts of men by the dreadfull threatnings againſt tranſgreſſors; as we ſee in the Iſraelites when God did proclaime the Law of the Tenne Commandements in their hearing upon the Mount, Exod. 20. 19. which the Apoſtle hath an eye unto here, as likewiſe Heb. 12. 18, 19.

The ſpirit of adoption] Gal. 4. 6. By the ſpirit of adoption, he underſtandeth the gracious operation of the holy Ghoſt by the preaching of the Goſpel, which quickens the hearts of true beleevers, and aſſureth them of their adoption.

whereby we cry] Gr. in whom, or, in that we cry. With an holy boldneſs, ſweetly and tenderly calling on our heavenly Father, and importuning him as his children.

Abba, Father] Abba ſignifieth Father in the Syriack tongue, and the Apoſtle kept it of purpoſe, it being a word implying much tenderneſs and affection; it being alſo uſed by children almoſt in all languages, when they begin to ſpeak: and he joyneth here the word, πατὴρ, father, unto it, not onely to explain the former word, but alſo the better to expreſs the eager and earneſt and vehement deſire and affection of the faithfull in their calling upon God, as Chriſt himſelf redoubled the word Father to the ſame purpoſe, Mark. 14. 36. he ſaid Abba, Father, &c. and on the Croſſe likewiſe, he doubled the words, My God, my God. The Syriack interpreter tranſlateth Abba, our Father, and a learned interpreter truly noteth, that ſometimes the Article ὁ which is here prefixed to Father, hath the power and ſignification of an affixe, and if it be ſo, then it ſhould ſeeme the Apoſtle here alludeth to our compellation of God in the Lords Prayer, Our Father, &c.

V. 16. beareth witneſs with our ſpirit] The holy Ghoſt doth not onely ſtirre us up to call upon God as our Father, but doth alſo ſeal unto our hearts, that we are truly his children: thus the ſpirit teſtifieth to our ſpirit; (as ſome render the words) but if we tranſlate them, beareth witneſs with our ſpirit; the meaning is, that the Spirit witneſſeth together with our own ſpirit, which doth likewiſe help to bear witneſs by obſerving the proper marks of Gods adoption, which our ſpirit findeth in our ſelves by the Spirit of God. This witneſs though it be not alwaies alike evident and powerfull in true beleevers, yet it doth oftentimes manifeſt it ſelf, even when they are in their loweſt eſtate and greateſt extremity.

V. 17. then heires] Partakers of our fathers goods, and having a right to his kingdome, and that freely, becauſe we are his children by adoption and grace.

if ſo be that we ſuffer with him] Now Saint Paul teacheth, by what way the ſonnes of God come to that felicity, to wit, by the croſſe, as Chriſt himſelf did, and therewithall openeth unto them three fountains of comfort: the firſt, that we have Chriſt a companion and fellow of our afflictions: the ſecond, that we ſhall be his fellows alſo, and co-heirs with him in everlaſting glory: the third, that this glory we look for, doth a thouſand parts ſurmount the miſery of our preſent affliction.

V. 18. For I reckon.] Gr. Tec. but I reckon or count.

that the ſufferings of this preſent time] Word for word, according to the Greek, of this new ſeaſon. Whereby the Apoſtle intimates two things: firſt, that our tribulations and afflictions laſt but for a νῦν, that is, a moment in compariſon: ſecondly, that now, that is, this preſent life is the proper ſeaſon and opportune time, to lay out for a crown of celeſtiall glory.

are not worthy to be compared] Holdeth no proportion or correſpondency with the reward, neither in reſpect of the dignity and worth, nor in reſpect of the time: and if the ſufferings of Martyrs fall thus ſhort, how much more the beſt actions of Saints?

with the glory] Gr. are not worthy to the glory.

ſhall be revealed in us] It is now partly in us, but hid, and therefore he ſaith, ſhall be revealed. For now our life is hid with Chriſt in God, but when Chriſt who is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall we alſo appear with him in glory.

V. 19. Earneſt expectation of the creature] Gr. the looking out, or, putting forth of the head. By the creature, he underſtandeth the world; and the ſingular number which he uſeth, implyeth the unitie thereof: and the doctrine which he delivereth from this verſe to the 23. concerning the world is, that as the world was not at the beginning in that ſtate which now it is, but by the ſin of man came to be ſubject to a flitting and vaniſhing eſtate; ſo it ſhall at length be reſtored with the elect, to a more ſtable and glorious eſtate.

manifeſtation of the ſonnes of God] The word manifeſtation is not here taken actively, but paſſively, that is, the creature waiteth for the time when the ſons of God ſhall be manifeſted: and their glorious and happy eſtate, to which thoſe words of Saint John have a reference, 1 Joh. 3. 2. Behold, now we are the ſonnes of God, & it doth not yet appear, what we ſhall be, but we know when he ſhall appear we ſhall be like him.

V. 20. Not willingly, but by reaſon of him] Not by their naturall inclination, but in obedience to the Creators command, whom it pleaſed to ſhew by their fickle eſtate, how greatly he was diſpleaſed with man for his diſobedience.

ſubjected the ſame in hope] Or, upon hope. That which before he called the expectation, he here termeth the hope, for hope is an earneſt expectation of a thing, and it is ſo called in this place, for that God had promiſed an univerſall deliverance of the creature from the corruption and abuſe of man, which the angels and bleſſed ſouls do long for, Revel. 6. 10. and the reſt of the creatures ſeeme to have a naturall inſtinct or inclination thereunto, which in the next verſe ſave one, is by a metaphor called a groaning, and travelling in pain. The ground of this hope or expectation of the creature is, that having by reaſon of the fall of man ſuffered for part of his malediction, when it ſhall come to paſſe at the laſt day, that man ſhall be compleatly reſtored to grace again, then all the ſteps and traces of that malediction ſhall be utterly raſed out of the world, as is declared, Eſa. 51. 16. & 65. 17. & 66. 22.

V. 21. delivered from the bondage of corruption] Shal be ſubject no more to any ſuch alteration or corruption as now it is; much leſſe to ſerve for the object and inſtrument of ſinne: but according to every ones degree and nature, ſhall partake of the glorious eſtate of the children of God; and be fully delivered from all vanity and evils.

into the glorious liberty] Gr. into the liberty of the glory.

V. 22. For we know] Gr. Tec. but, or, now we know.

the whole creation] Or, every creature.

travelleth in pain] This elegant metaphor expreſſeth, not only the exceeding ſorrow of the creature, but the fruit alſo that followeth after it. For albeit the world doth ſeem for the preſent to be even at the height of its ſplendor and beauty, yet there lies that evil upon it which doth preſſe it down, and ſinke it into perdition, and that is ſin, whereof it doth ſtrive and ſtruggle to the utmoſt to eaſe and diſburden it ſelfe, as it were, much like unto a woman in travell.

V. 23. And] Gr. but.

not only they, but our ſelves alſo] If the reſt of the world looke for a reſtoring, and groan as it were for it, and that not in vain, let us not think much alſo to ſigh and groane, but groane out of hope, becauſe we are more certainly perſwaded of redemption to come, for as much as we have the firſt fruits of the Spirit.

firſt fruits of the Spirit] That is, the firſt degree of regeneration and of the gifts of the Spirit, which is conferred upon us in this life, for a pledge of the whole crop as it were, which we ſhall receive in the life to come, 2 Cor. 1. 22. Epheſ. 1. 14.

groan within our ſelves] Even from the bottome of our heart. That which the world doth by a ſecret inſtinct without ſenſe and diſcourſe; we the faithfull do by a certain knowledge, and well grounded judgment, ſighing and groaning for anguiſh under the heavy burden of ſinne that lies upon us, and for the vehement and ardent deſire of our full and finall deliverance.

waiting for the adoption] That is, the full manifeſtation and effect of our adoption, the poſſeſſion and fruition of the inheritance which is promiſed to us in our adoption.

redemption of our body] See Luk. 21. 28. That is, the freedome thereof, not only from the miſeries which they are ſubject unto in this life, but alſo from the power of death and corruption: and in this ſenſe our Saviour taketh the word redemption in thoſe his gracious and comfortable ſpeeches to the faithfull, when he treateth of the diſſolution of the world. When theſe things come to paſſe, lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh; Luk. 24. 28.

V. 24. For we are ſaved by hope] Hope is neceſſarily joyned with faith. Seeing then that we beleeve thoſe things which we are not yet in poſſeſſion of, and hope expecteth not the thing that is preſent but future, we muſt therefore patiently wait for that which we beleeve ſhall come to paſſe.

But hope that is ſeene, is not hope] As the object of faith is often termed faith; ſo here by a metonymy, the object of hope is termed hope: hope, that is, the thing hoped for, the poſſeſſion of our heavenly inheritance, Coloſſ. 1. 5.

V. 26. Likewiſe the Spirit] There is no cauſe why we ſhould faint under the burden of affliction, ſeeing that prayer miniſtreth unto us a preſent and moſt ſure helpe which cannot be fruſtrate, ſeeing it proceeds from the Spirit of God which dwelleth in us.

helpeth] The Greek word, συναντιλαμβάνεται, doth properly imply ſuch a help, as when another man of ſtrength and abilitie ſteppeth in to ſuſtain the burden that lyeth upon our ſhoulders, ſetting his ſhoulders under it, to lift up and bear part of it with us.

our infirmities] Gr. Tec. infirmitie. Which we are yet ſubject unto; eſpecially under the croſſe, and in afflictions, both in regard of our ſpirit which is apt to murmure, as we ſee in Job and David, and of our fleſh alſo which is moſt tender and fraile. If we reade according to Tecl. edition, infirmitie in the ſingular number, then the meaning ſeemeth to be this, the Spirit helpeth our weakneſs and inability to pray as we ought, aſſiſting us by his holy inſpiration, both with powerfull and effectuall words, and ſighes and groans alſo that cannot be expreſſed.

maketh interceſſion] Provoketh us to prayers, and telleth us as it were within, what we ſhall ſay, and how we ſhall groane. The Son doth properly make interceſſion for us, who is our Advocate with the Father, 1 Joh. 2. 11. yet by a figure, the holy Ghoſt is ſaid to make interceſſion for us alſo; becauſe he rowſeth and ſtirreth us up to prayer, and prompteth, as it were, our leſſon unto us, how we ought to pray in all our neceſſities, Joh. 16. 13. Gal. 4. 6.

with groanings which cannot be uttered] That is, whoſe fervencie, force and efficacie proceeding from the ſupernaturall motion of the Spirit none is able to conceive or expreſs. Others read [without ſpeaking] that is, whoſe virtue and excellency doth not conſiſt in the number and flouriſh of words, as the prayers of hypocrites, Matt. 6. 7. but in moſt lively feelings, pangs and prickings of the ſpirit.

V. 27. And he] Gr. But he.

minde of the ſpirit] Or, meaning. That is, what ſobs and ſighes proceed from the inſtinct of the ſpirit, and what the ſpirit meaneth by thoſe ſighes and groanes.

becauſe] Or, that.

for the ſaints] Though the remaines of ſinne cleave ſo faſt to the beſt of Gods children, that they cannot utterly ſhake them off; yet they are here termed Saints, partly in regard of their ſincere and unfained deſire of ſanctity, and earneſt ſtriving for it; partly in regard of Gods gracious acceptance, who taketh the will for the deed, & out of his infinite mercy in Chriſt, accounteth them for Saints, by not imputing their ſinnes unto them. Rev. 8. 3. Pſal. 32. 1. See Rom. 1. 7.

according to the will of God] That is, praying for ſuch things, and in ſuch a manner as God requireth and alloweth. 1 Joh. 5. 14.

V. 28. And we] Gr. But we.

know] That we are not afflicted either by chance, or to our harm, but by Gods providence for our great profit, who as he choſe us from the beginning, ſo that he predeſtinated us to be made like to the image of his Son, and therefore will bring us in his time, being called and juſtified, to glory by the croſſe. Heb. 12. 10.

that all things work together for good] Gr. Tec. that God worketh, or maketh all things work together for good.

according to his purpoſe] Or, decree. He calleth that purpoſe which God hath appointed from everlaſting with himſelf, according to his good will and pleaſure. Matth. 11. 26. Epheſ. 1. 11. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

V. 29. For whom] Here he proveth by a Sorites or golden chaine, the glorification of Gods children, no link whereof can be unlincked, becauſe the faſtning thereof is the work of Gods omnipotence.

he did foreknow] For his own, as the word is taken, Joh. 10. 14. 27. thoſe whom he marked out as it were out of all other men in the world: and ſet his affection upon. Pſal. 1. 6. Jer. 1. 5. Matth. 7. 23.

he alſo did predeſtinate] Ordained to conformitie, both in grace and glory, with his Son their head, not only in their ſufferings, but alſo in their ſanctification and glorification.

that he might be the firſt-born] Intending that his own Son ſhould have many adopted brethren, of whom he might be the head, as the firſt-born was wont to be in all families. Coloſſ. 1. 15. 18.

V. 30. Moreover] Gr. But, or, And.

them he alſo called] To the obedience of faith, by the outward preaching of the Word, and the inward and effectuall operation of the Spirit.

them he alſo glorified] That is, will certainly and infallibly glorifie them; the cauſe, ground, and pledge whereof is, the glorification of Chriſt our head already obtained.

V. 31. What ſhall we then ſay] We have no cauſe to fear that God will not give us whatſoever is profitable for us, ſeeing that he hath not ſpared his own Son to ſave us.

V. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge] A moſt comfortable concluſion of the whole ſecond part of the Epiſtle, that is, of the Treatiſe of juſtification. There are no accuſers that we have need to be afraid of before God, ſeeing that God himſelf abſolveth us as juſt, and therefore much leſſe need we fear damnation, ſeeing that we reſt upon the death, and reſurrection, and the Almighty power of Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore what can there be of ſo great moment in this life, or of ſo great force and power, that might affright us, as though we might fall from the love of God wherewith he loveth us in Chriſt? Surely nothing, ſeeing that it is in it ſelf moſt conſtant and ſure, and alſo to us, being confirmed by ſtedfaſt faith.

V. 34. Chriſt that died] Gr. Tec. Chriſt Jeſus that died.

V. 35. tribulation] Or, affliction.

V. 36. For thy ſake, &c.] Pſal.44.22.

for the ſlaughter] Gr. of the ſlaughter.

V. 37. Nay in all] Gr. But, or, Nevertheleſs in all.

V. 38. nor Angels, &c.] Under the name of Angels he alſo comprehendeth Archangels; and by principalities and powers, thoſe that are in the higheſt places of authoritie, and have greateſt power upon earth, as Kings in peace, and Commanders in war.

from the love of God] The words may bear either of theſe conſtructions; Nothing can ſeparate us from the love which God beareth to us, or we bear to him in Chriſt Jeſus: but this latter ſeemeth better to agree with the Antecedents, For thy ſake are we killed, &c.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. I Say the truth] Becauſe the Apoſtle purpoſeth to ſpeak much of the caſting off of the Jews, he uſeth an inſinuation, declaring by a double, or rather triple oath, his great deſire of their ſalvation, and his ſingular love towards them; and withall he freely granteth them all their true prerogatives.

in Chriſt, &c.] Entering into a profound diſcourſe, hard to be beleeved by fleſh and blood, that he might gain the more credit to the enſuing doctrine, and the proteſtation of his ſincere affection to his country-men, he produceth three witneſſes beyond exception, Chriſt, the holy Ghoſt, and his own Conſcience.

V. 2. continuall ſorrow in my heart] For the incredulity of the Jews his kinſmen, and their rejection.

V. 3. Myſelf were accurſed] Or, ſeparated. Theſe words admit of a double interpretation; either that ſuch was his love to his brethren, that he deſired, if it had been poſſible, and it might have ſtood with the good will of God, to have redeemed the caſting away of the Iſraelites, with the loſſe of his own ſoul for ever. A deſire utterly impoſſible indeed, and never to be accompliſhed and uſed by the Apoſtle; onely to witneſs his exceſſive love towards his brethren, and moſt fervent zeal for the glory of God, which he ſuppoſed would have been farre more illuſtrated by the ſaving of a whole Nation, than of one man. Or that here, by ἀνάθεμα, he means only to be excommunicated, and held as accurſed and execrable, and as ſuch exterminated and deprived of all communion with the Church; not as if the Apoſtle did wiſh to be hardened in heart againſt Chriſt, and ſevered from his love, for that can never be wiſhed by any pious man; but out of the overflowing of his love he wiſhed, that he himſelf might bear the puniſhment which they might expect from the righteous judgement of God for their hardneſs, ſo they might be freed from this hardneſs and accurſedneſs. The like we know Moſes did in the behalf of the Iſraelites, Exod.32.32.

my kinſmen according to the fleſh] Thoſe of mine own country and nation: withall inſinuating a double kindred, carnall and ſpirituall: by the carnall he was allyed only to the Jews, but by ſpirituall cognation, to all the houſhold of faith, conſiſting as well of Gentiles, as Jews.

V. 4. whom pertaineth the adoption] Gr. whoſe are the adoption. For God preferred the Iſraelites before all nations of the earth, and accounted them his peculiar people, and named them not onely his Children, but his Firſt-born, Exod.4.22. Iſrael is my ſon, my firſt-born, Jer.31.9.

and the glory] That is, the Ark of the Covenant, which was a viſible token of Gods preſence; ſo we read 1 Sam.4.21. The glory is departed from Iſrael, when the Ark was taken; and Pſalm.63.3. To ſee thy glory, as I have ſeen thee in the ſanctuary.

and the covenants] Or, teſtaments. The tables of the covenant. Epheſ.2.12.

and the giving of the law] The judiciall and morall.

and the ſervice of God] That is, the manner of his worſhip, preſcribed by the ceremoniall law.

and the promiſes] Made to Abraham and his poſteritie.

V. 5. God bleſſed for ever] A moſt evident teſtimony, and pregnant proof of Chriſts divinitie. Bluſh for ſhame, ſaith Oecumenius, and be confounded, O thou wretched miſcreant Arrius, when thou heareſt Chriſt glorified by the Apoſtle with the title of God, in the ſingular number: with the article ὁ, the God, or, onely God, and God over all, and bleſſed for ever.

V. 6. Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect] Gr. But it cannot be that the word of God hath failed.

are not all Iſrael, which are of Iſrael] That is, all are not that people of God to whom the promiſes were made, who deſcend from the loines of Jacob; for there are three ſorts of Iſraels: according to the fleſh onely; ſuch are the unbeleeving Jews: according to the ſpirit onely; ſuch are the faithfull among the Gentiles: according to the fleſh and ſpirit; ſuch was Jacob himſelf, and his beleeving poſterity.

V. 7. in Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called] See Gen.21.12. Iſaac ſhall be thy true and naturall ſon, and therefore heir of the bleſſing, although Iſhmael was born alſo of Abraham, and circumciſed before Iſaac.

V. 8. the children of the fleſh, &c.] Not all they who are carnally born of Abraham by the courſe of nature, are the children of God, to whom the promiſe of grace was made; but the children of promiſe, that is, thoſe who were born by virtue of the promiſe, thoſe who by Gods ſpeciall grace were adopted (as Iſaac by a ſpeciall and ſingular promiſe was begot by Abraham) they onely are accounted for that ſeed mentioned in the covenant, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed.

the children of the promiſe] See Gal.4.28.

V. 9. At this time, &c.] Or, ſeaſon. See Gen.8.10.

V. 11. For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evill] Namely, whereby they might be differenced one from the other; for otherwiſe they were already conceived in ſin, and living in their mothers womb, when the ſentence of God paſſed upon them; ſo that God had not regard unto faith in the one, or infidelity in the other, but that it was upon his own abſolute pleaſure, not upon any deſire, that God preferred the younger before the elder.

any good] Gr. Tec. good, or, that good.

purpoſe of God according to election] Or, the purpoſe according to the election of God.

might ſtand] Gr. might remain.

not of works] That is, not at all by obſerving any condition depending upon the will of man, which would have made the decree wavering and uncertain, ſeeing that man is ſo variable in all that he doth, or undertaketh.

but of him that calleth] Out of undeſerved grace and favour, and calleth not onely outwardly, but inwardly and effectually, to bring men to faith and goodneſs. Rom.8.28,30,31. 2 Tim.1.9.

The elder ſhall ſerve the younger] See Gen.25.23. This prophecie is not to be underſtood of any outward ſervice or dominion; for Eſau did not ſerve Jacob after that manner; at leaſt in his own perſon; but either it is to be underſtood of the poſterity of Jacob and Eſau, that the poſterity of the elder ſhould ſerve the poſterity of the younger, as they did alſo for a time; and for this the words of the Lord by Moſes, Gen.25.23. are expreſſe; Two nations are in thy womb, and two ſorts of people ſhall be ſeparated from thy bowels; and the one people ſhall be ſtronger than the other, and the elder ſhall ſerve the younger. Or elſe the prophecie is to be underſtood of the eternall and ſpirituall dominion which the children of God are to enjoy hereafter, whereof the inheritance and dominion in Canaan was a type, Hebr.11.15,16. We may alſo thus expound the words, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger, that is, he ſhall be deprived of his birth-right, in token that from him and his poſteritie ſhould be taken away alſo the part and claim of the bleſſed ſeed; and that he ſhould be no otherwiſe in the world, than as a ſervant in his fathers houſe, in compariſon, namely, of Jacob, who ſhall be his heir.

elder] Or, greater.

younger] Or, leſſer.

V. 13. As it is written] Foraſmuch as the word ſerving ſeemeth not to be clear enough to expreſs the election of Jacob and rejection of Eſau in the purpoſe of God, the Apoſtle brings in this other paſſage out of Malachi 1.2. for a declaration of the former; and proveth, that this ſame ſervitude or ſubjection of Eſau unto Jacob, was accompanied with Gods eternall and undeſerved love of Jacob, and with his juſt and righteous hatred of Eſau.

Jacob have I loved, &c.] Mal.1.2,3.

V. 14. God forbid] See Chap.3.4.
